Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations, the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

He Cares for Me.

Never a trial that he is not there,
Never a burden that he doth not bear;
Never a sorrow that he doth not share,
Moment by moment I'm under his care.

Never a heartache and never a groan,
Never a tear drop and never a moan,
Never a danger, but there on the throne,
Moment by moment he thinks of his own.

Never a weak one that he doth not help,
Moment by moment in woe or in weal,
Jesus my Savior abides with me still.

Moment by moment I'm kept in his love,
Moment by moment I've life from above;
Looking to Jesus till glory doth shine,
Moment by moment, O Lord, I am thine.

The Church of God.

Frequently the question is put to members of the household of faith, "What church do you belong to?" "What church" indicates that there is a number of bodies or organizations claiming the distinction "Church." Thus we have "Catholic Church, Episcopal Church, Methodist Church," and hundreds of other "churches." When it is replied to the foregoing inquiry, "I am a member of the Church of God," great amazement is manifested in word and mien, and it is proposed, "Why, are not all churches the Church of God?" This by no means follows. The term, "Church of God," indicates that God has a Church in the world, whose existence is to be sought, not in the mutual agreement of a company of men to set forth certain tenets and observe certain rules of their own creation, but in the will of God that there should be a Church. Let this be distinctly borne in mind. But it is well that we understand what is meant by the term "Church." It seems this has been derived from the Greek, in which it had the form, Kuriakon, meaning "a temple of God," from Kurikos, pertaining to a lord, or to our Lord Jesus Christ. So Webster. But this is not the word translated church in the Bible. Here we have the word Ekklesia, from which our adjective "ecclesiastical" is derived. Ekklesia is a compound word consisting of the preposition ek, denoting "out of," and the verb kaleoo, "to call." Ekklesia is given by Dr. Young as "that which is called out." This, then, being the literal meaning of the original term, we are in a position to investigate further. The term itself and its meaning embraces the following points:

1. A "call," or invitation.
2. This implies some one calling.
3. There is an object in this call.
4. There are means employed in issuing this call.
5. That "out of" which some are called.

With these things in view we can understand the meaning of church or Ekklesia. We shall take up the above points and deal with them.

First, this call, or invitation, or summons. Both Peter and Paul had this thought in mind when they gave expression to the following sentiments: "Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling (Gr. Klesis) and election sure." 2 Peter i. 11. "Wherefore, holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling (Klseos), consider the Apostle and High Priest of our profession, Christ Jesus." Heb. iii. 1. "I therefore, the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation (Klseos) wherewith ye are called." Eph. iv. 1. These will suffice to show that there is a calling about which the above points cluster.

Second, this call issues from Some one, and this is God. Paul urges Timothy to be "a partaker of the afflictions of the gospel according to the power of God; who (that is, God) hath saved us and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace." 2 Tim. i. 9. The same truth is thus set forth in 1 Thes. iv. 7, "For God hath not called us unto uncleanness, but unto holiness." Here it is evident, a That "That God hath called us," Phil. i. 27. It is no doubt with this b This call was "not unto uncleanness," but in view that some have rendered Ekklesia "assembly," or "congregation."

c "Unto holiness."

This leads to another remark, viz. this: There can be no Ekklesia unless God calls. This is why that which was called with God's calling is termed "Ekklesia of God."

Third, as it is God who calls, he has an object in this calling. The Apostle addressed this admonition to the [illegible] worthy of God, who hath called you for (Gr. eis—for) his kingdom and glory." 1 Thes. ii. 12. And in his second letter he reminds them that God had chosen them unto "salvation through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth; whereunto he called you.....to the obtaining of the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ." 2 Thes. ii. 14.

Fourth, the means employed by God to bring this invitation to the knowledge of those for whom the "kingdom" was designed. This, also, is set forth in Scripture language. Will the reader carefully look over the Scripture just mentioned. "Whereunto he called you by our gospel to the obtaining of the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ." What is this "gospel?" Glad tidings. "Tidings" to be "glad" must make those who hear them "glad." What is this "gospel?" It is "the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ." 2 Thes. i. 8. And because of him, is the gospel he preached and authorized others to proclaim. It is "the gospel of the kingdom." Matt. iv. 23; Luke viii. 1. Which he said should be "preached in all the world for a witness," Matt. xxiv. 14. It is "the gospel" he commanded his disciples to preach. Luke ix. 2, 6. It is the same which he commanded to be preached to every creature. Mark xvi. 16. Which Philip preached at Samaria, Acts viii. 12. Which Paul presented to the Ephesians. Acts xx. 24, 25. It is that which he "expounded and testified" at Rome. Acts xxviii. 23, 31. It is the message which promises a kingdom to those who love God. Jas. ii. 5. The kingdom which is to be manifested at the appearing of Jesus Christ. 2 Tim. iv. 1; Matt. xxv. 31. The kingdom which the God of heaven will set up (on the earth) under the whole heaven. Dan. ii. 44; vii. 27; Rev. v. 10. The kingdom in which the overcomers are to reign with Christ. Rev. iii. 21; 2 Tim. ii. 12; Matt. xix. 28. Into which kingdom disciples (learners, persons now under discipline) are to enter through much tribulation. Acts xiv. 22; 2 Thes. i. 5. A kingdom in which the saints, having been made immortal, will be beyond the reach of sin, sickness and death. 1 Cor. xv. 50 52; Luke xx. 34-36; Phil. iii. 20, 21. In order to an entrance into this kingdom those who have been called by the gospel, are to add to their faith all the virtues belonging to the candidates for the kingdom, in this way making their calling and election sure, so being assured of an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. 2 Pet. i. 5-11. They are to "walk worthy," that they may be "counted worthy of the kingdom of God." Eph. iv. 1; 2 Thes. i. 5.

Fifth, they have been called out of darkness into light. 1 Pet. ii. 9. This "darkness" is intellectual and moral, and may be regarded under two aspects.

a When the light of the gospel shined in their hearts, it dispelled the ignorance existing in the minds of those persons as to the plan and purpose of God. They were made to see that by the gospel God designed to give the knowledge of his will concerning them. They were called out of this darkness into the light of the knowledge of God.

b But there is another view of this matter that we will consider. They were also "called out of" their former surroundings, away from former associations, in other words, they were by the gospel called out of the world, into fellowship with God and companionship with those of like precious faith. It may be said in this way they were called together in one common center, and their common faith constitutes "the faith of the gospel," be will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established. And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church; but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as a heathen man and a publican. Matt. xviii. 15-17. Another duty, obey the [illegible] of the land. Let every soul be [illegible] the higher powers for [illegible] power but of God. Rom. [illegible] but not to judge his doubtful thoughts. Rom. xiv. 1. Keep no company with any man that is called a brother, if he be a fornicator, or covetous, or an idolator, or a railer, or a drunkard, or an extortioner, with such an one, no not to eat. 1 Cor. v. 11. Do not go to law with a brother before the unjust. 1 Cor. vi. 1. Do not forsake the assembling of ourselves together as the manner of some is; but exhort one another; and so much the more as you see the day approaching. Heb. x. 25. Be not carried about with divers and strange doctrines. Heb. xiii. 19. And in conclusion will say, the Christian's duty is to avoid every appearance of evil, do not the works of the flesh, which are these, adultery, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like, for they that do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God. And it is the Christian's duty to make his election and calling such that he may inherit the kingdom of God.

Yours striving to do his duty.

The Coming One.

The faith and hope of the church is centered upon One who has been absent so long that many bearing the Christian name have abandoned the idea of his return to this world to reign in person on the throne of David.

A still larger number, while holding to the fact of a personal coming, postpone indefinitely the event by cherishing the hope of the world's evangelization and the introduction of a millennium of peace and righteousness before he comes.

His coming will alike take the professed Christian church and the world by surprise.

Those who labor for the world's conversion cannot look to the event as the "blessed hope" of the gospel; nor can theirs be the attitude of the early church, one of ardent longing for the event as the consummation of God's purpose toward his chosen ones. While much has been and is being written touching the premillennial coming of the Lord, by scholarly men in the popular churches, yet the absence of any allusion to the event by a great majority of those who stand as exponents of the common belief, is quite conspicuous. Or, if allusion is made to it, it is from the fact that in certain quarters some earnest souls inspired by the truth, are urging upon the attention of a slumbering and [illegible] world, the nearness of the

When these men of high sounding titles are provoked to express themselves it is in the language of scorn and ridicule; and they are likely to call those who insist on the nearness of the advent, "false prophets," when they have laid no claim to prophetic foresight, but have modestly and reasonably expounded the prophecies of those who had the prophetic gift in full measure.

Dishonest or blind, with the Bible in hand these men still hold and teach the doctrine of the world's conversion. They have had their attention called to the Scripture passages which plainly teach a condition of things utterly at variance with their notion, that the present agencies employed are amply adequate to the task in hand—the world's conversion prior to our Lord's personal coming. They read the historic parallel, which Christ himself drew, between the days immediately preceding the flood and those which will precede his future advent. They cannot avoid observing that the moral condition of the world as here set forth is the exact counterpart of that of Noah's day. As was the one, so will be the other. The sinful indulgence of the appetites and passions; the utter lack of faith in the message Noah proclaimed, and the evil purposes of the heart wrought out in overt acts filled the world of that day with violence. A similar condition is to characterize the closing days of the present dispensation.

This reference to the days of Noah, by the Great Teacher, as furnishing a parallel to the days preceding his coming follows the long prophetic chain of events reaching from near the day in which the prophecy was delivered down to the event of his coming in the clouds of heaven. There is no possibility of understanding the coming of this 24th Chapter of Matthew as meaning something else than his coming in proper person. So there is no ground for the application of the adage: "Honest men differ;" for the difference, at this point is between what these men think and what Jesus said. He said his coming would be as the days of Noah; that men will be eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, regardless of the higher obligations of Christian life; the evil servant saying in his heart: "My Lord delayeth his coming; and shall begin to smite his fellow servants, and to eat and drink with the drunken," vs. 48, 49. With the plain statement of our Lord before them; with clear intimations of declension and falling such that he may inherit of faith; waning of love; abounding of evil; with the clear prophetic light of Daniel and Paul and John revealing monstrous systems of evil filling the dispensation down to our Lord's coming, leaving no room for the world's conversion and a fancied millennium—with all this facing them on the inspired page how can they urge the claim of honesty? Blind they are because they choose to be. Blind from deceitful handling of the Word, a thing Paul and his fellow apostles would not do. 2 Cor. iv. 2.

To the comparatively few the coming of the Lord is the blessed hope. Around it clusters everything grand and glorious. With it are to come changes, to contemplate which by the eye of faith, awaken the most pleasing emotions. At that point in the unfolding of God's plan the highest and noblest and purest aspirations of the believing heart will meet their fulfillment.

"Jesus is coming, O beautiful thought;
Well may the soul unto rapture be wrought;
After the sorrow, the woe and the tears,
We shall be like him when Jesus appears."

There is still left something of the primitive faith, a faith like that of the importunate widow before the unjust judge, that persistently prays for "God's kingdom to come and his will to be done on earth as it is in heaven."

Come Lord Jesus, unbar the tomb;
And make the desert lands to bloom;
Cause the clang of war to cease;
Bring, O bring eternal peace.

The Christian Life.

The Christian's life in this world is a life of anticipation, of looking forward into the future. His present enjoyment is derived to a great degree from his thoughts of what awaits him in the future, "For the grace that is to be brought unto him at the revelation of Jesus Christ." 1 Peter i. 13.

He travels a rough and thorny way here, a pilgrim and a stranger, having many difficulties to surmount and trials to endure together with the scoffs and persecutions of the world, and if he had no hope of a better condition in the future he would be of all men most miserable. But the consideration of the glories that are reserved for him changes the whole aspect of his pilgrimage, causing him to rejoice in tribulation and glory in the cross of Christ, knowing that everything worketh together for his good, and that his light afflictions here, while he keeps looking into the eternal future, will work for him "a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

Nothing will be more sure to cause a person to backslide from God and become entangled in a yoke of bondage than to keep his eyes continually on the present with its trials, perplexities, poverty, persecutions, crosses and temptations, love of gold, silver and greenbacks. He will soon lose his zeal and earnestness in battling for the right, and becoming careless and indifferent he will be overcome by the enemy and borne along by the tide of sin to death.

On the other hand, there is no surer way for a Christian if he would be an overcomer, than to keep his mind and heart on the glories promised, and if he does this his heart or affections without doubt will be upon them too.

It is impossible to backslide while we by living faith keep our mind on what God has promised to give unto the faithful. This is what inspired the Apostle Paul to endure all the hardness which he encountered, "Forgetting those things which are behind and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize."

Again we read: "Unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation; and this hope we have as an anchor to the soul both sure and steadfast." It holds and keeps us amid all the storms that may beat against us while upon the sea of probation.

The perils thicken, the day of the Lord is nearing, our redemption is almost here, the prize will soon be obtained. Look not behind.....remember Lot's wife. Keep looking toward the promised land.

Yours, waiting for the soon coming King.

Obituary.

Our beloved daughter, Cora Cook, died Feb. 28, 1902, her age being twenty years, two months and fifteen days. She died of that most dreaded disease, consumption, after an illness of one year and ten months. She bore her suffering well, always hopeful of soon being better, until near the end. She said if it was the Lord's will for her to get well, she would, if not, nothing would do her any good. She often said she did not want to get well if it was not the Lord's will.

She has been interested in her soul salvation for some time, and had expressed herself several times, she would be immersed as soon as she was well. The good Lord has called her away and I know he does all things well. I know he will deal well by our dear daughter, for the Scripture teaches, he is love and has provided a loving Savior. She talked beautiful the day before she died, to her papa, brother and two sisters. She wanted them to lead a good Christian life, she expressed to one dear friend that she grieved to give up life for it would be so hard for papa and mamma. She thought of others always before herself. She was well qualified to go through life and would have been a great help to the family if she had lived. All of the neighbors and friends both far and near, did all for her that they could do, which we will all remember as long as we live with many thanks.

Yes, dear daughter, all thy troubles,
And thy trials now are o'er,
And we hope e'er long to greet thee,
On fair Canaan's happy shore.

Editor Restitution:

Enclosed please find money for renewal of my paper. This is surely a world of sorrow. We received a telegram yesterday of the death of our son-in-law in California. Death does its sad work now, but what a blessed hope is ours, that the time is coming when its work will be done, and in the good time that's coming we shall not know sorrow, but the tears will all be wiped away. Blessed time indeed.

Ever your Sister in Christ, waiting our coming King.

We need what is due us on subscriptions, and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor.

The one who will be found in trial capable of great acts of love, is ever the one who is considerate in small ones.

"Keep your heart full of generous emotions, and your head full of good thoughts; thus in heart and head there will be no room for evil. The heart and head thus occupied, the words and acts will be generous and beneficent."

Our readers will add to the first section of "Passing Events in the Light of Prophecy," the further news that has followed quickly after the Anglo-Japan agreement, in the announcement of an alliance between Russia and France, stating in decided terms that the interests of these two nations will be carefully looked after in the Chinese regions, and that interference with either will be met with prompt resistance. It is well to watch carefully all the moves that are made, for they are so many steps taken in the march of nations toward the day when a general breakup will make necessary the coming of the rightful King.

A Larger Audience

Assembled at the Church of the Blessed Hope on Sunday evening, March 16th, than it has been our privilege to address there for several years,—the occasion being a baptism of another into the sin-covering name, and an extra effort of the household to bring friends and acquaintances to hear the conditions of salvation set forth. And this gave us an opportunity to distribute considerable truth literature.

It was a joyful occasion to the bretbren and sisters to bury another with Christ so soon—two within a month, in these times of abounding iniquity, and in a vast city with snares set everywhere for the feet of the young. This lamb just added to the fold, Alberta Goss, is the daughter of our dear brother and sister Goss, and had been reared in the truth; we rejoice with them that their exhibition of the religion of Jesus induced her to decide like Ruth of old and say, "Thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God." That her confidence may be maintained to the end, and at last share the great salvation we pray.

Peace.

Says Jesus in John xvi. 33, in referring to the many ineffable words running through four chapters, "These things I have spoken unto you that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation; but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." What precious words these are to those who have undertaken to suffer with him. It matters not what vexatious trials in the world we may have,—peace in him is always possible,—providing, of course, our own misconduct has not been the cause of our tribulation. We mean by that, that a wrong-doing brother or sister of the Lord Jesus could not expect peace in him till wrong-doing has been forsaken, and forgiveness sought and found. 1 Peter ii. 20 makes this very clear: "For what glory is it, if, when ye be buffeted for your faults, ye take it patiently? But if, when ye do well, and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is acceptable with God,"—and he, we may be assured, will have peace in Christ, despite all the tribulation in the world. And to encourage us to follow his example and not revile again when reviled, he bids us be of good cheer because he has overcome the world. And in addition to this, we are able in concluding that in those trying times when we are buffetted for no wrong of our own, if we ask the Father's assistance in Jesus' name, Jesus will do as he promises in John xv. 26,—"At that day ye shall ask in my name, and I say unto you, that I will pray to the Father for you;" and this will enable us to overcome as he did, for the Father always hears him. See John xi. 42. We think, then, in the light of these Scriptures, that we who have undertaken to represent Christ in the world should accustom ourselves to unreasonableness and injustice, so that we be not caught unaware, and misrepresent him. We have not yet attained, we are sorry to say; but we are glad to be able to say we are following on, and far enough along to be able to say that when injustice and slights are patiently borne the heart is filled with marvelous peace. This is reward for well-doing as we go along, and should inspire more of the same spirit.

This Transitory State.

To man in his normal condition life is precious—life is sweet. It is even considered sweet when many bitters are mixed with it. All try to retain it,—none desire it to end. We wish to live our allotted time, and view the grave with something of a dread, while fully aware that in the common order of things our bed will have to be made in its darkness.

Our present experience is one of continuous change. Years come and go, and with them the friends we have loved so well. Our friends of to-day are not the friends of years ago. In the dim vista of life's changing scenes we see them coming forward in all their strength and beauty and sweetness, our companions for a little while and then we see them fade away,—others take their place, in their turn to pass away,—until now, many whose friendship once was ours exist but in our memory, the fading shadow of a bygone day. They came forth as a flower, but were cut down; they fled as a shadow, and continued not. The place that knew them then shall know them again no more forever. Their face once so familiar, is now hid in the darkness of night, and they sleep in the land of forgetfulness.

And so it is with those most dear to us. They too do not live for ever. Affection's tightening grip cannot keep them. They pass away, and in their turn will be where the wicked cease from troubling, and where the weary are at rest.

Looking at ourselves, we find we are poor, frail creatures of the dust;—at the best but a fleeing shadow, our life but as a vapor, a tale soon told. Our three score years and ten pass quickly by, and it will soon be our turn to sleep the sleep of death,—should the Lord much longer delay his coming.

Human existence, then, at the best is but an ephemeral affair. This is but a transitory state. A man is so vain, so unfixed, so perishing a creature that he cannot last long. He goes off and is forgotten, like a phantom, or a dream as when one awaketh.

But although this is a sad view of life, it is not from a love of dreariness we were impelled thus to contemplate the briefness of the span of human life, and the return of man to his native earth. It is well to so contemplate life at times, that we should bear in mind our frailty that we may be induced to search for the light that can alone guide us through the darkness of this valley of the shadow of death, and help us to lay hold of that strength which will bear us safely through the darkness of the grave into the glorious light of an everlasting day. This is the spirit's counsel. The words of divine wisdom are, "So teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom."

"Passing Events in the Light of Prophecy."

We compile the following from Glad Tidings:

The Anglo-Japanese agreement has received world-wide attention. It burst upon the world as a great surprise. It is almost universally recognized as far reaching in its extent. Its principal object is to "maintain the independence and territorial integrity of the Empire of China and the Empire of Korea, and to secure equal opportunities in those countries for the commerce and industry of all nations. It is thus intended to uphold the open door policy.

The Marquis of Landsdowne, the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, in defence of the agreement, in the House of Lords, said: "What do we see on all sides? We observe a tendency to ever-increasing naval and military armaments, involving ever-increasing burdens upon the people, for the defence of whose countries these armaments are accumulating. There is also this, that in these days war breaks out with a suddenness which was not the case in former days, when nations were not, as they are now, armed to the teeth, and ready to enter upon hostilities at any moment. When we consider these features of the international situation we ought to look at the matter strictly upon its merits, and not allow our judgment to be swayed by any musty formulas or old-fashioned superstition as to the desirability of pursuing a policy of isolation for this country.

The press at home and in the colonies is almost unanimous in its approval of the agreement.

The United States papers are generally favorable to it. The New York Post says: "It cannot be denied that the publication of the agreement is tantamount to serving notice on Russia. Britain is for a fair field and no favor in matters of trade, and that is our avowed policy in the Orient." The New York Tribune says, "The open door of China will hereafter have two mighty guards. The treaty will certainly be regarded with unalloyed satisfaction by the United States."

The Continental Press does not of course all speak with the same voice, but most of them admit the significance of the agreement. The Paris Temps says, "The agreement is the starting point, so to speak, of a new international era. A certain universal bearing is given to this diplomatic event at a time when the whole framework of the status quo was cracking and trembling. Europe and the whole world are on the eve of [illegible] combinations [illegible] equilibrium of the future depends."

The financial outlook of Turkey becoming more and more gloomy. Summing up the situation the Scotsman says:—"During the last few days advices have been coming from Constantinople in a broad stream referring to the impecunious state of the Turkish Imperial Treasury. The government has practically nothing of value to offer. It has already pledged about every tangible asset it ever possessed. It has hypothecated well-nigh every thing except the very atmosphere. Affairs have reached a critical condition, which will no longer permit of neglect." If this is a true picture Turkey is in a sad plight. The once great river Euphrates is almost dried up. Rev. xvi. 12. May it soon be entirely removed, to make way for the better state of things promised, after the turmoil among the nations is over.

The unrest on the continent is becoming very serious and is assuming alarming proportions.

In Barcelona, Spain, the ordinary life has been completely paralyzed. It is said that eighty thousand workers are out. Every day brings fresh news of fighting between the military and the rioters. Great efforts are being made to have a general strike [illegible] throughout Spain. The Telegraph thinks that there can be no longer a doubt that Spain is threatened with one of the most tragic catastrophies of our time. The strike is developing the character of armed anarchy."

The other great center of turmoil is Trieste, the chief harbor of Austria-Hungary. The strikers mustered in thousands and carried destruction before them. The police were powerless to stem the tide of riot, and the military were called out, the result being that many people were killed and wounded. The opinion is that both in Barcelona and Trieste the turmoil is the work of anarchists—the enemies of government in every shape and form.

There has also been a recrudescence of unrest in Russia, but the authorities are making strenuous efforts to suppress it.

Anarchism or Socialism is not to cure the world's evils. The divine remedy is the promised reign.

According to Reuter's correspondents at St. Novosti has been commenting on recent news from Kabul, which would seem to indicate political troubles in Afghanistan in the immediate future. That journal declares that neither Great Britain nor Russia can maintain an attitude of [illegible] ences in such an eventuality. [illegible] seen it expressed that since Russia appears to be check-mated by the Anglo-Japanese agreement, trouble may be looked for in Afghanistan.

Report of Work,

On March 8, 1902, Brother Conner began a series of meetings at our place, closing on the 14th. We can say that Brother Conner is a workman that needeth not to be ashamed.

Although it rained and was a stormy bad week and the roads very muddy, yet we had a good turnout of people to hear him, and we think much good was done. Five persons put on Christ by baptism, went down into the watery grave and came forth to walk in newness of life, and we hope and trust they will ever walk therein. We think that much of the prejudice that existed has been overcome, and all think him a good speaker.

We would say to any of the preaching brethren, if you happen to be passing near Ripley, Ill., call and see us.

Selected.

Bridget Kilroy.

We respectfully call the attention of the Rt. Rev. Henry C. Potter, bishop of the diocese of New York in the Protestant Episcopal Church: of the Rev. William Stephen Rainsford, rector of St. George's; of President Henry S. Pritchett, L. L. D., of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; of Professor William O. Atwater, Ph. D., of the Wesleyan University; of Professor Albert P. Matthews, of the University of Chicago, and of all others like-minded—we respectfully call the attention of these gentlemen to the tragic death of Bridget Kilroy, floor-scrubber and woman of general work, drunkard's wife and the mother of a drunkard's children, lying dead upon the floor of a basement tenement of the city of Boston on the morning of the Sabbath day, January 26, in the year of the Christ, 1902.

Gentlemen, upon various occasions [illegible] public addresses and in the public [illegible] dates more or less recent, you have given utterance to views concerning the saloon and concerning the use of alcoholic drinks, to which we have felt obliged to take exceptions, and the fallacies of which it has seemed to us necessary to point out. Concerning those views we raise no discussion at the present time. We will allow, formally, of course, and merely for the sake of argument, your contention. Let it be taken for granted that the Prohibitionist is a fraud and a hypocrite, as Bishop Potter has insisted; let it be accepted without disputation that the saloon is a beneficent institution and has come to stay, as Dr. Rainsford has told the public; let it be conceded that the encouragement of beer-drinking, taking place in certain of our institutions of learning, notably in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, arises from the best of motives; let it be accepted as scientific truth that alcohol is a food, valuable both in sickness and in health, as Dr. Atwater and his disciples contend; let all these things be granted upon your side of the contention, and in the face of them all, and in recognition of them all, we do you to wit the lot of Bridget Kilroy.

It was the saloon that killed Bridget Kilroy; it was the drink that choked out her life, pounded and kicked her body into a mass of wounds and bruises. The saloon, gentlemen, that you praise conditionally, it is true, but praise, none the less; the drink, gentlemen, that you defend, under limitations, of course, but defend none the less! The home of the Kilroys, bare, cheerless, poverty-stricken, a place of suffering and sorrow; a place where hungry children cried for food and little ones shivered for lack of clothing; a place where a husband and a father forgot his duty to his wife and children; where a despairing mother, in the last extremities of anguish, fought day by day to merely continue the torture of life for herself and her little ones—that home a fit place for the commission of such a crime; a place ready prepared, as it were, for such a scene of blood and violence—that home, gentlemen, was the product of the American saloon system, as clearly marked as such, as well recognized as such, as if the saloon's "hall mark" had been stamped upon it. It was not only a product of the saloon system, but it was merely one of the innumerable host of similar products, such as the saloon, to the knowledge of all men, constantly and unceasingly creates.

We call to your attention, further, gentlemen, that no other agency known to men creates such places. Not poverty alone, not ignorance alone, not wickedness alone, make a place so forsaken of God and man, so remote from heaven and the possibility of good, so circled by the devils and hell, as a drunkard's home. But the poverty, the ignorance and the wickedness of the saloon make such places by the uncounted thousands.

When Michael Kilroy reeled home in the early hours of the holy Sabbath of Sunday, January 26, in the Christian city of Boston, his pockets empty of the money that he had promised to his wife to buy the clothing for lack of which his children were freezing; when he answered her appeal for the fulfilment of his promise with a blow that knocked her to the floor; when he choked, with his fingers upon her throat, her appeal for mercy; when he kicked her with his heavy boots, and she about to become the mother of another child; when he sat for hours unmoved, listening to her moans and watching her sufferings: when he brutally mistreated the children who would have brought her help; when he struck away the water that her little daughter was lifting to her bloody, thirsting lips—it was drink, gentlemen—the drink that Professor Atwater tells us is food—the drink that you gentlemen recommend in "moderation," that made him do it; and neither in earth nor hell has any other agency been found, in the history of the whole human race, that tempted men to such deeds.

But drink, gentlemen, alcoholic drink, not other [illegible] made Michael Kilroy do that brutal, devilish deed, but has transformed uncounted thousands of men into fiends of the same character, and has driven them to deeds equally brutal. Drink, gentlemen, has inspired such tragedies so commonly and in such multitude, that the public scarcely pauses to notice their occurrence. Drink, gentlemen, is today preparing more men for just such deeds as that; and you know, and the world knows, that it will take boys from your churches, boys from your schools, aye, God pity you, perhaps boys from your home, and will make them into such brutes to work such fiendish crimes in future years on women who today are lovely and loving girls.

It is only twelve days before the butchery in that Boston tenement that Vincent Vincelsk came home drunk in Pittsburg and chopped his wife and little children to death with a rail-cutter. It was only thirteen days before that John Bissett, of Detroit, drunk, emptied his revolver into his wife's body and poured kerosene over her and stood with lighted match to make her a burnt offering to drink when the police broke in upon him. It was just one month and a day before that a father in Indiana came home drunk, sought to kill his wife with a hatchet and was shot dead by his son.

But why go on with such a list? The cases are innumerable; and before Michael Kilroy came home to kill Bridget, you and we and everybody in the whole land knew that some man, because of the drink traffic, would come home and kill his wife, and that the terrible procession of crime would keep right on.

Gentlemen, we bring no accusation against you: we question the motives of none of you; but, as if in the presence of the dead, before the intelligent people of the land, and before God in high heaven, we submit that amid the crying of the blood of Bridget Kilroy, as its voice rolls like thunder to the judgment seat of a just God, the naming of your names is heard.—The New Voice.

Are You Watching?

As the bridal hour draws nigh, she who is soon to be wed becomes thrilled with expectant watching. Every thought and faculty, in intense activity, is centered on him who is to come, and on the joyous event which will culminate at his advent. The betrothed one, who at such a time would become absorbed in other things and lose the attitude of watchful, eager expectancy, would be pronounced as unfitted and unworthy to celebrate the holy nuptials of the wedding hour. The Bridegroom, whose bride is the church, is absent, but may return at any moment to celebrate the marriage. If, then, the church abandon its posture of eager, yearning watchfulness, if it becomes indifferent to the advent of the Bridegroom and interested in the things that perish with the using, how shall it be able to exclaim with joy, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh!"

Simple Lessons Hard to Learn.

When John Newton was in his declining years he wrote:

"When I was young I was sure of many things. There are only two things of which I am sure now; one is that I am a miserable sinner, and the other that Christ is an all sufficient Savior. He is well taught who gets these two lessons."

Have you learned them? They are worth more than any other wisdom. There will come a time when they will be worth more to you than all the world's gold.

Those to whom we have sent letters telling about your accounts have not all made response as yet. Brother or Sister, we urge you to be sure and not neglect this matter longer. We want to pay our obligations—this is the reason why we ask you to give us what is due at once. If we could satisfy those we are under obligation to any other way we would not ask you, but as it is the only way we know of, we must hear from you to enable us to do so. We trust all will see the necessity of this and act NOW.

OUR LETTER DRAWER.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I feel it my duty to testify a word or two for my Savior, who has done so much for us. I praise his holy name day by day for the goodness he bestows upon us in health, strength and also that he ever brought me out of darkness and placed my feet into the marvelous truths of the glorious gospel of Jesus Christ, God's Holy Word. May we not doubt and do some. Some believe there is no God. Time and space are all we have. May we be rooted and grounded in the most holy faith, that nothing may be able to move us, and may we be ablent all times to give an answer for the hope that is within, with trembling and fear; for there is no other name given among men whereby we may be saved. Oh glorious hope, oh blessed promises these are to them that through patience and continuance in well-doing, seek for glory, honor, immortality; for who will harm us if we follow after that which is good; for we know that our works and labor of love will not be in vain in the Lord; for he has in store for us greater blessings than we can account for. Paul says, We should take heed lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God. May we grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord day by day. Looking unto Jesus who is the Author and Finisher of our faith. May we prove faithful to the end that we may be able to enter into that rest that remains to the people of God.

Anticipation.

Yes, 'tis a rough and thorny road,
That leads us to the saints' abode;
But when our Father's home we gain,
'Twill make amends for all our pains.

And though we feel our present grief,
In hope we find a sweet relief;
For hope anticipates the day,
When all our grief shall pass away.

And what is all we suffer now,
Or all we can endure below,
To that bright day when Christ shall come,
And take his weary pilgrims home.

Then let us tread without complaint,
The thorny road, and never faint;
Though now by weariness oppressed,
The end is everlasting rest.

Brother Underwood:

I do not want to be without The Restitution, for it gives me a great deal of joy and comfort to read the many words, "Spake often to one another;" whose names are written in the Lord's Book of remembrance, when he comes to make up his jewels.

Yours in hope of life eternal.

Poetry.

Now is the Time.

If we gain the heavenly portal
Pure at last,
All the seeming and the schooling
In the past,
Now's the time for victory,
Heed no more the selfish plea:
Be steadfast.

Then he'll trust us with his treasures,
Gems untold,
When no guile nor secret measures
We shall hold,
When our souls are pure and white
As the linen in the light
Of his fold.

Longs my soul to be made pure
In his sight,
Never to falter, but endure
In the fight.
Then he'll give us things most holy,
Cleansing blood, O make me lowly,
Free from blight!

Now is time to wake and pray.
See ye of mine,
Sleep not till another day,—
'Tis not thine,—
For the Lord has given us warning,
Haste to seek thy soul's adorning;
Rise and shine.

Genesis. Chap. 41.

1. And it came to pass two years of days afterward, that Pharaoo saw a dream-vision. He thought he was standing upon the bank of the river.

2. And lo, even as though they were coming up out of the river were seven cattle, good in appearance and choice in flesh, and they were pasturing on the marsh-grass;

3. And other seven cattle were going up after these out of the river ill-favored in appearance and thin in flesh, and they were feeding along side the cattle on the bank of the river.

4. And the seven ill-favored and thin in flesh cattle devoured the seven good in appearance and choice in flesh cattle: and Pharaoo awoke.

5. And he dreamed a second time; and lo, seven stalks choice and good came upon one root-stem.

6. And lo, seven thin and formless grew up after them.

7. And the seven thin and formless stalks devoured the seven choice and full stalks. And Pharaoo awoke and it was a dream-vision.

8. And it came to pass in the morning also that his soul was disturbed; and sending he summoned all the exegetes of Aiguptos and all the wise men thereof, and Pharaoo discoursed to them his dream-vision; and there was no one to tell it to Pharaoo.

9. And the chief-wine-pourer talked with Pharaoo, saying I am reminded today of my sin.

10. Pharaoo was wrathful with his house-servants and put us in prison of the chief magus both me and the chief food-provider.

11. And we both saw in one night a dream-vision, I and he; each one saw according to his dream-vision.

12. And there was with us there a young man, a Hebrew house servant of the chief-magus; and we discoursed to him, and he gave us the synesis (interpretation by comparison.)

13. And it came to pass even as he had syncretized it; in this wise did it take place; and I was restored to my authority and he was hung.

14. And Pharaoo sent and summoned Joseph, and they led him out of the walled place, and shaved him and changed his robe, and he came unto Pharaoo.

15. And Pharaoo said unto Jooseeph, I have seen a dream-vision, and there is no one to syncricize it; and I heard them saying about thee, that when thou hadst heard dream-visions thou didst syncricize them.

16. And Jooseeph answered Pharaoo and said, Without God will the instrumental salvation of Pharaoo not have been answered.

17. And Pharaoo talked to Jooseeph saying, In my sleep I thought I was standing beside the bank of the river.

18. And even as though out of the river there went up seven cattle good in appearance and choice in flesh, and they were pasturing on the marsh-grass.

19. And lo, seven other cattle inferior in appearance and thin in flesh, such inferior ones as I had not seen in all the land of Aiguptos.

20. And the seven inferior and thin cattle devoured the good and choice first cattle.

21. And they went into their bellies; and they did not clearly show that they had entered into their bellies; and their looks were inferior even as at first also. And I awoke and lay down to sleep.

22. And I saw again in my sleep, and as it were seven stalks went up on one root-stem full and good.

23. And other seven stalks thin and formless grew up next to them.

24. And the seven thin and formless stalks devoured the seven good and full stalks. Then I told the exegetes, and there was no one to tell it to me.

25. And Jooseeph said unto Pharaoo, The dream-vision of Pharaoo is one. God hath shown Pharaoo what he is doing.

26. The seven good cattle are seven years, and the seven good stalks are seven years: the dream-vision of Pharaoo is one.

27. And the seven thin cattle that go up after them are seven years; and the seven thin and formless stalks are seven years; there would be seven years of famine.

28. And the thing recounted which Pharaoo saw is that God hath shown Pharaoo what he is doing.

29. Lo, for seven years much prosperity is coming in all the land of Aiguptos.

30. And seven years of famine will come after these, and they will ignore the plenty that will be in all Aiguptos, and the famine will waste the land.

31. And the prosperity upon the land will not have been recognized because of the famine that will be after these years; for it will be very strong.

32. And concerning Pharaoo having had the dream-vision twice, it is because the oracular word from God will be true. And because God will be swift to do it.

33. Now then look up a man thoughtful and with understanding, and establish him over the land of Aiguptos.

34. And let Pharaoo appoint and establish local rulers over the land, and let them have all the generic products of the land of Aiguptos for the seven years of prosperity sent therefrom.

35. And let them gather together all the food products for the seven years next following these good ones: and let the grain be gathered together subject to the hand of Pharaoo and let the food products be kept guarded in the cities.

36. And the guarded food-products in the land will be for the seven years of famine, which will be in the land of Aiguptos, and the land will not be worn out with the famine.

37. And the word was pleasing in the sight of Pharaoo and in the sight of all his house-servants.

38. And Pharaoo said unto all his house-servants shall we find such a man, one who hath God's spirit in him?

39. And Pharaoo said unto Jooseeph, since God hath shown thee all these things, there is no man more thoughtful and with more understanding than thee.

40. Thou shalt be over my house, and all my laity shall hearken to thy mouth; only the throne will I hold over thee.

41. And Pharaoo said unto Jooseeph, Lo, I establish thee today over all the land of Aiguptos.

42. And Pharaoo took the fingering from off his hand and put it on the hand of Jooseeph, and clothed him with a fine linen under-garment, a flowing robe and put a golden collar around his neck.

43. And mounted him upon the second of his chariots, and a herald heralded it on before him; and he established him over all the land of Aiguptos.

44. And Pharaoo said unto Jooseeph two sons before the seven years of the famine came, whom Aseueth, the daughter of Petephres, priest of Heliopolis brought forth for him.

51. And Jooseeph called the name of the first born Manassee, because God caused me to ignore all my painful experiences and all those of my father.

52. And the name of the second he called Ephraim, because God hath increased my growth in a land of my humiliation.

53. And the seven years of the prosperity which occurred in the land of Aiguptos had passed.

54. And the seven years of the famine had begun to come, even as Jooseeph had said. And there occurred a famine in all the earth; and in all the land of Aiguptos there was food (lit. loaves of bread).

55. And all the land of Aiguptos hungered; and the laity (people of the king) cried unto Pharaoo for bread; and Pharaoo said unto all the Aiguptoi, Go your way unto Jooseeph, and whatever he shall have said unto you shall ye have done.

56. And the famine was over the face of all the earth; and Jooseeph opened up all the granaries and sold unto all the Aiguptoi. And all the countries came unto Jooseeph in Aiguptos to do their marketing. For the famine prevailed in all the earth (meaning the civilized earth of that day, since this was a so-called universal kingdom).

New Testament Lessons.

"That ye love one another, as I have loved you."

"This," Jesus says, "is my commandment, that ye love one another as I have loved you." Can we? Do we? Are we sure that we understand the full depth and meaning of these indescribably beautiful words? The sacrifice of life is involved, for Jesus laid down his life on our behalf and he says, "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

And this love was often exemplified, by the giving up of the lives of men and women, and even of children, for love of the brethren in the early days of Christianity, and on down through the dark ages, and past the times of the Reformation. I can recall such incidents and so can you. Some of these are very pathetic: the hidden congregation, and the watchman,—man or child,—cut pitilessly down because he refused to lead the way to the hiding-place of the worshipers. But we are not called now to die for love of each other, as Christians were in those trying days,—not in a literal sense, and yet, we are called to die, in a sense, just as real.

And if love, saved life, in the one case, so will it save life in a precious and more endearing sense in the other. We die to sin, and become alive to God, doing the things that God wants us to do, because thus only, can we best promote our own health, happiness and peace and so make ourselves, "living epistles" to the church, and also to the world.

To die this death; to put away all wrong and unloving thoughts, all malice and envy and hate, to show no irritation when surprised by an untoward accident; to be courteous; gentle and patient with feeble childhood's mistakes, takes a braver spirit, more earnest prayer, it seems to me, than it does to march to the martyr's stake. That death, is soon over: this, must last, until death, or until Jesus comes.

But oh, it is for love of the brethren that we sacrifice the loves and the hopes of the old life. It is that they may see, as in a glass the love of Jesus Christ for them, shining through us. And not only is it that these graces, but that others, by "seeing our good works, may be constrained to glorify our Father in heaven."

Not by going up to the little, white cabin on the hills in California, and telling the man who lay there, his hands stained with human blood, of the MAN who died for you and for me.

It means going to this dying man, day after day though met with nothing but oaths and curses, until at last he melts at the voice, the touch, the prayer of a little child and "grasps the strong hands."

It means forsaking home and friends and all that is dear, and at the risk of our lives, going into foreign lands to preach Jesus to those "who sit in darkness and in the shadow of death," in Cannibal islands, in China, in India, in Korea, in Afghanistan, and Persia and in the depths of Darkest Africa.

"Beloved, let us love one another." "For if we love one another the love of God is perfected in us."

Dwelling in love, our love is made perfect—that—"we may have confidence in the day of judgment."

S. ROXANA WINCE.

Letter to the Pastor of the Free Methodist Church.

Friend James:

You will recollect that at an interview at your house, the subject of Christ's answer to the thief on the cross came up; and you would not allow that it made any difference where the comma was placed; the thief went to heaven that day with Christ. Now my friend, if you will look at this subject without prejudice, you will see that your conclusions cannot be sustained. In the first place Paradise is not heaven; Paradise was not in existence on that day, is not now; and will not be in existence, until Christ comes and restores it; then the thief will be remembered and be with Jesus. In the second place, the thieves did not die that day, for the soldiers were commanded to break their legs to keep them from getting down, and going off during the night, as they were only tied with ropes. But when they came to Jesus they found him already dead, so they did not break his legs. See John xix. 36, "A bone of him shall not be broken." But his terrible agony by having nails driven through his hands and feet proved his death. The spear thrust in his side also helped to produce his death, and furthermore, from his side came out blood, and water. In this we see that water becomes the emblem of the blood of Christ to cleanse the penitent sinner from sin. See Acts ii. 38.

Again, you appear to be intent on going to heaven notwithstanding the words said, Matt. v. 5, "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth." But you in your desire for holiness, are willing to ignore the Savior's promise; and cast it behind your back. Have a care, my friend, lest you be found fighting against God. You will find at the judgment that your desire will appear against you. What do you expect to do in heaven whereby the glory of God shall be enhanced by your presence there? It seems to me that your desire to go to heaven is a result of supreme selfishness; but more especially as you are not invited to go there. The Savior has no use for you in heaven; but he has use for the meek of all ages in the earth. The earth is in degradation and ruin, caused by sin; and he wants the meek to assist in the great work of restoring it to a paradisaic state. See Rev. xi. 21, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne." Do you think you can do better in heaven than to occupy a seat with Christ on his throne in the restoration of Paradise? See also Rev. ii. 26, 27, "And he that overcometh and keepeth my works to the end, to him will I give power over the nations; and he shall rule them with a rod of iron." The nations are at war, fighting with each other, and inventing all manner of implements of destruction to kill, and destroy each other and their fellow nations.

See also Psa. cxlix. 4, "For the Lord taketh pleasure in his people; he will beautify the meek with salvation. Let the saints be joyful in glory; let them sing aloud upon their beds. Let the high praises of God be in their mouth, and a two-edged sword in their hand; to execute vengeance upon the heathen, and punishment upon the peoples. To bind their kings with chains, and their nobles with fetters of iron; to execute upon them the judgment written; this honor have all the saints. Praise ye the Lord. See also Psa. viii. 9; Isa. ii. 3, 4. Here we have a plain statement that nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. And instead of war mankind will be engaged in husbandry. But you, in your desire to go to heaven, are willing to forego the pleasure of a share in the promises of these Scriptures; but neither you nor any of your people will ever go to heaven.

But, suppose the righteous do go to heaven as soon as they die; how about Lazarus, the brother of Mary and Martha, who had been in heaven four days when the Savior unmercifully called him out and put him into his old clog of clay, to suffer on the temptations of sin, and perhaps make shipwreck of faith, and die and go to hell at last, thus proving that a man could have been in heaven and hell both. Ah, my friend, get out of that foolish, unscriptural aspiration, and take the Savior at his Word, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." But you will have no share in the above promises, for you ignore the promises of Christ to the meek; in your wild goose chase after an inheritance in heaven. But you are dreaming of bliss in heaven, because you have an immortal soul; and you must have some place for it when you die; but the statement of the serpent is just as false now as it was in the garden of Eden. That does not become truth, because it is believed by the majority of orthodox churches. But Paul says to Timothy, 2 Tim. iv. 2, "Preach the Word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke with all long-suffering and doctrine." 3 v. "For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts (desire for happiness) shall they heap to themselves teachers having itching ears." 4 ver. "And they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." The doctrine of the immortality of the soul is the very fable that Paul brings to view. But my dear friend, I exhort you to get out of it, and lead those under your care out of it before it is too late.

Yours in hope of having a seat with Christ on his throne. See Rev. iii. 21.

DANIEL HOWARD.

"Many Shall Run To and Fro."

Daniel informs us that at the time of the end, "Many shall run to and fro." Never before in the history of the race has there been such activity in the direction of travel as has been witnessed in the closing years of the nineteenth century. The steam engine and steam vessel has brought the whole world within reach of every nation. We see the fulfilment of Daniel's prophecy in the great number of people, who by using the railway trains, "run to and fro." During the year ending June 1, 1894, the combined railroad equipment of the United States carried 540,688,199 passengers. The aggregate mileage of the preceding year was 14,280,445,893. Average number of passengers in each train was 44. Just 37,663 locomotives, or 900 more than the previous year, were in service on June 30, 1900. The cars in use had increased in number by 74,922; that is, to 1,450,898. On June 30, 1900, the total amount of capital invested in railways had increased to the enormous figure of $11,401,034,960. Gross earnings from the operations of the railways covered by this capital for the year 1900 were $1,487,044,814, being $173,484,000 more than the preceding fiscal year. The operating expenses for the year were $901,482,511, the increase in this item being $104,459,512.

Dear reader, who, comprehending these figures in the light of divine prophecy, can contradict that the human race has reached its "time-of-the-end" period?

EUGENE R. WILLIAMS.

The Peace of the World.

Under the heading "America to save the Peace of the World," the Chicago Tribune of Mar. 24 publishes the following culled from the London dispatches:

Events in diplomatic circles indicate that the responsibility for maintaining the peace of the world may soon be thrown entirely upon the American and German governments.

It has been discovered that the Russo-French declaration regarding the Anglo-Japanese alliance has been followed by important negotiations. France and Russia have asked the other powers, including the United States, Germany, Austria, and Italy what will be their respective attitudes towards the new alliance.

The inquiry in at least two cases included the question whether neutrality will be maintained in case of war between Great Britain and Japan on the one hand and France and Russia on the other.

The British Foreign office, which is fully aware of these international inquiries, utterly discredits any belligerent significance. It is pointed out that it is the diplomatic custom to exchange notes between governments regarding the interpretation and effect of any important treaty.

There cannot be any doubt that Russia and France would be exceedingly pleased to obtain pledges of neutrality from America and Germany. The refusal of such a pledge by both countries would almost certainly prevent war. There is good reason to believe that Germany has already given such a refusal; in other words, the Kaiser insists he will retain complete liberty of action.

England is confident that the United States will take a similar attitude. She does not expect America to come to her assistance, but she does believe that the Washington government will do nothing to precipitate a conflict which might result in the destruction of American trade interests in the far East.

It is not going too far to say that a declaration at the present moment of American neutrality in case of war might precipitate that war. This is probably fully understood by the Washington government. Hence the confidence here that no such declaration will be forthcoming.

Last night's news from South Africa, which indicates that the Boers desire to negotiate for peace, has important bearings on the situation. If by any possibility Russia has belligerent designs she will either bring them quickly into action, before England can transfer her army from South Africa to India, or she will abandon them entirely.

Regarding the view of the outlook as seen by our government the dispatches from Washington are as follows:

In spite of the surface indications that peace in China and the preservation of the territorial integrity of that great empire seems assured through alliance of Great Britain and Japan and the joint declaration of Russia and France looking to the attainments of these ends, the diplomatic situation is regarded here with the greatest concern.

It is not going too far to say that the most recent advices foreshadow a crisis which will be fraught with danger to the whole world.

That Russia and France on the one hand and England and Japan on the other are preparing themselves to meet whatever may come is learned on authority so high and so thoroughly trustworthy that it cannot be susceptible of doubt.

Instead of clearing the situation the announcement of the English-Japanese alliance, and the joint declaration of Russia and France, have only served to increase the tension and make more uncertain the future of China, and for that matter the future of the great nations concerned.

Are Ministers Egotistical?

The assertion is sometimes made, that ministers, as a class, are egotistical, and a writer in the Christian Register (Boston, Jan. 16, 1902,) J. B. thinks that there is some truth in the charge. He says:

"The temptation is peculiar and most subtle in the case of the minister, because from time immemorial the priestly or clerical class has been regarded as sanctified and lifted above other classes by mere virtue of its more sacred calling. Now in these later days, when the world's semi-worship has been largely withdrawn from the minister in his purely representative capacity, he has been compelled to stand or fall as a man, appraised by inherent manly virtue alone. It has been a hard and slow and reluctant task for the clergyman to disabuse himself of the old notion of sacerdotal sanctity and to estimate himself and the homage due him purely on grounds of individual character and ability.

Another reason why the clergyman is peculiarly liable to the temptation of egotism is because his function is more or less paternal, advisory, and instructive. He is indeed like a shepherd in the midst of his flock. No figure so well expresses the hitherto accepted idea of the pastoral relation as this old, familiar Scriptural illustration.

The minister is always the central figure in his little world. The one to whom all look for advice, for assistance, for comfort, for inspiration, for enlightenment, instead of searching the Word for ourselves. It were strange, indeed, if a man habitually placed in such a position should not unconsciously yield to pleasing convictions of personal sufficiency, superiority and authority. A very great and well-balanced man, with the native modesty of true greatness might not entertain or yield to such feelings; but I submit that it would be almost beyond reason to expect the ordinary man, the man of ordinary calibre, to remain entirely unmoved and unspoiled by them.

We cannot conspire to set the average man on a pedestal, and then require him not to look down upon us."

The clergyman worshiper has for many years been largely in evidence in all Christian lands. It is this class that is chiefly responsible for the self complacency, the dictatorial spirit, professional mannerism and high self-esteem of far too many clergymen of only ordinary mental and Spiritual calibre.

He concludes as follows:

"The egotism of ministers will be abated, I think, in this very natural way; that whereas in the past they have been distinctly coddled into it, the future is going to subject them to a respectful but decided lack of class worship that will be most wholesome and corrective in its effect.

With the growth of intelligence, independence of thought, personal equipment and resource, self-command and self-understanding, the average church-going man and woman are going to be less childlessly dependent upon the minister than heretofore. The common people are going to try to understand some things themselves. There is going to be more and more stout, independent leaders among the flock. There is to be less timorous crowding about the shepherd's legs, less following and more leading, or at least progressing, pari passu.

The minister is presently to lose his immensely superior status of man-among-sheep, and become, as he ought, man-among-men, wiser, man-among men, it may be, but not so unnaturally dis-associated in status as to seem demi-god or superior being.

The worship of ministers is gradually dying out, gradually it may be, but surely, and with it must pass the clergyman's autocracy, his sense of superior importance and consequently his egotism.

The time is near when the average minister will be no more tempted to egotism than the average man in any profession."—Selected by Isaac McCurry, Sr.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

"They Shall Be Mine."

MAL. iii. 17.

"They shall be mine!" oh, lay them down to slumber,
Calm in the strong assurance that he gives;
He calls them by their names; he knows their number,
And they shall live as surely as he lives.

"They shall be mine!"—they as on earth we knew them—
The lips we kissed, the hands we loved to press;
Only a fuller life be circling through them,
Unfolding youth, unmanging holiness.

"They shall be mine!" Thought fails and feeling falters,
Striving to sound and fathom Love Divine.
All that we know—no time the promise alters—
All that we trust—our loved ones shall be thine.

Conversions under Apostolic Preaching. No. 3.

Cornelius and his party. Acts x. At this date 36 A. D., a new phase in Christianity begins. "The door of faith is opened to the Gentiles" and they are introduced into the church on a perfect equality with Jewish discipleship. Christianity is to become a world religion instead of being confined to one people. Prophecies of the old Scriptures had contemplated this change, and the time was here for its introduction. The prime mover in the work is not Paul, though pre-eminently the apostle to the Gentiles by special choice and qualification. There were good reasons why he was not employed to begin the work which he afterward entered on and prosecuted with so much zeal. "Peter the apostle" especially "to the circumcision" is the one. In the council at Jerusalem several years after he refers to this in the following words, "Men and brethren, ye know how that a good while ago God made choice among us, that the Gentiles by my mouth should hear the Word of the gospel, and believe." Acts xv. 7. Paul was feared and suspicioned by the disciples. For him to initiate the work of extension might have precipitated a schism in the church. The giving of the Word to Gentiles required preliminary steps falling in the domain of the supernatural. The national prejudices, the exclusiveness of Judaism were not laid aside by the Christian Jew. The admission of Gentiles into the church was a mystery to be cleared up, a problem to be solved by the highest authority. The principal subject of this interesting history is a Roman official of Cesarea, a commander of a hundred men styled the Italian band, or cohort, as distinguished from native soldiers quartered there. This man was a Jewish proselyte; perhaps "a proselyte of the gate" who had adopted the spirit and devotion of the Jewish faith without yoking himself with the law. Cornelius must have a vision, and Peter must fall into a trance. These are parts of the divine programme in bringing Gentiles into covenant relation. Cornelius' vision was was about the 9th hour, or 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and Peter's trance about the 6th hour or noon on the morrow after, 21 hours later. The angel seen in vision by Cornelius tells him to send men to Joppa to call for one Simon, whose surname is Peter; who lodgeth with one Simon a tanner, whose house is by the seaside; he shall tell thee what thou oughtest to do. The angel does not tell him. It does not pertain to his mission to give instruction touching the way of salvation. God's embassadors are men chosen and qualified for preaching the gospel. Into their hands God had committed the "word of reconciliation," and it remains in the hands of human agencies today to administer. Cornelius must know whether a Gentile, however pious and devout, is entitled to specific favor in the matter of a better knowledge of Jehovah's ways, an acquaintance with the new religion, a report of which had already come to his ears. Without that vision and the angel's instruction as to what steps to take he would have remained the same devout man and almsgiver, but ignorant of God's specific plan for saving men: and ignorant of an open door of faith to the Gentiles. Peter will tell him what he ought to do. But between Peter, in common with his fellow countrymen and the Judean Christians, and Gentiles there is a barrier, a middle wall of partition that must be broken down. To this end was his trance and what he saw. It is about noon, the deputation from Cesarea is approaching the place. Peter is on the housetop and very hungry, the midday meal is being prepared below. Peter went to pray but fell into a trance, and in this state saw heaven opened and certain vessels descending unto him, as it had been a great sheet, knit at the four corners, and let down to the earth; wherein were all manner of four-footed beasts of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air. And there came to him a voice, "Rise Peter, kill and eat." But Peter said, not so, Lord, for I have never eaten anything that is common or unclean. This mixed mass of animals and fowls of every unclean sort was not an inviting diet to one like Peter, educated by law to discriminate between clean and unclean animals. The voice spake unto him a second time, "What God hath cleansed that call not thou common." Thrice this was done and the vessel was received up again into heaven. While Peter was pondering the vision touching its meaning, the company from Cesarea had arrived at the gate and calling aloud they asked, is that Simon who was surnamed Peter lodging here? Peter is informed of the presence of the three men from Cesarea and advised to go down and go with them doubting nothing. The salutation through, Peter inquires concerning the object of their visit. They answer in a few words and to the point, in a manner to conciliate this Jewish apostle, and put him on good terms with them and the man they represented, if this were necessary. They set forth the character of the centurion and tell of the angel's words to him. They are careful to state that he was of good report among all the nation of the Jews. The racial and national prejudices and exclusiveness of the apostle are gone, and these Gentiles are invited in and lodged after the true Eastern style, until the next morning. It is presumable that the day of this meeting of the apostle and the deputation from Cesarea was the weekly Sabbath on which the apostle refused to travel. On the morrow Peter with six of his brethren went away in company with these men and by nightfall had put the greater part of the distance to their destination behind them. In the meantime Cornelius was busy making preparation for the meeting. He had called together his kinsmen and near friends, and when Peter and his company arrived about noon of the second day, he found many that had come together to hear the message of salvation from his lips. The mistake of Cornelius in paying undue homage to a man was promptly corrected, and Peter began his talk to the assembled company of anxious listeners. His first words are, "Ye know how that it is an unlawful thing for a man that is Jew to keep company, or come unto one of another nation; but God hath showed me that I should not call any man common or unclean." ver. 28. That vessel filled with animals and fowls so objectionable to a Jew had had the desired results. The meaning of the vision was plain. It signified "that the Gentiles should be fellow heirs, and of the same body, and partakers of his promise in Christ by the gospel." Eph. iii. 6. I once met a preacher who contended that Peter's vision was designed to show that all the unclean animals interdicted by the law were clean; that Israel's dietary was to be no longer restricted to certain animals, but that they could kill and eat all, bear and buzzard and what not. Peter did not so understand it. The vision of Cornelius was rehearsed in the presence of all. Peter has a good audience, anxious to learn the truth. Cornelius speaking for himself and those present says, "Now therefore are we all here present before God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God." As further proof of the great change wrought in the mind of the apostle are these words, "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respector of persons; but in every nation he that feareth him and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him." This broad view, this catholicity of faith found in Peter is destined to extend to all the Jewish Christian churches; but not without the exercise of wisdom and caution on the part of the apostles. Opposition to this would be met with, and strenuous efforts made to confine the new religion within the pale of Judaism.

PETER'S MESSAGE TO THESE GENTILES.

"The word which God sent unto the children of Israel, preaching peace by Jesus Christ; (he is Lord of all) that word I say, you know, which was published throughout all Judea, and began from Galilee after the baptism which John preached." The place where first preached was Galilee; the time just after John's preaching; the preachers, primarily Jesus followed by the twelve. The text above quoted reads, "Preaching peace by Jesus Christ." The effect of his preaching was peace or reconciliation. What he proclaimed was the gospel of the kingdom. John's preaching stopped when he was put in prison, and just after this Jesus began preaching in Galilee. The record reads, "Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom." Mark i. 14. There is no contradiction between what Peter said and the record by Mark. Of the twelve at the time when chosen it is written, "He sent them to preach the kingdom of God." Luke ix. 2. The gospel proclaimed to Israel beginning in Galilee and by Jesus himself; and throughout all Judea sounded by the great Teacher and his disciples was the same gospel. Peter preached to the Gentiles at Cesarea, the gospel of the kingdom, with the facts of his death and resurrection. No one who cares a fig for language need make a mistake as to what the gospel relates. The kingdom burdened every sermon delivered in the towns of Galilee and Judea, during our Lord's brief ministry of one year; and after his ascension, under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit apostles and evangelists echoed and re-echoed the same glad tidings, not alone within the narrow bounds of Galilee and Judea, but in "the regions beyond," and in all the world, as the great commission enjoined. The courtiers of Cesar heard and the dwellers in distant Spain and the still more distant isles of the west caught the sound from the lips of Paul, the great evangelist of the nations. While Peter was yet speaking and setting forth the claims of Christ "the Holy Spirit fell on all them that heard." Seeing this they of the circumcision, the six disciples who accompanied Peter from Joppa, "were astonished because that on the Gentiles also was poured out the gift of the Holy Spirit; for they heard them speak with tongues and magnify God." If any of the national feeling toward the Gentiles was still cherished by these six fellow disciples of Peter, what they heard was sufficient to convince them that "God had granted to the Gentiles repentance unto life." Acts xi. 18. The evidence of God's favor to the nations outside of Juda is overwhelming. "Then answered Peter, Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized, who have received the Holy Spirit as well as we." Some time after this when Peter had come to Jerusalem and his conduct toward the Gentiles being called in question by those of the circumcision, in rehearing the matter before them, referring to the outpouring of the Holy Spirit at Cesarea he said, "Then remembered I the Word of the Lord, how that he said, John indeed baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Spirit." "Immersed in water; immersed in Holy Spirit." Diaglott rendering. He is also reminded of the Pentecostal outpouring and says, "The Holy Spirit fell on them, as on us at the beginning." According to Peter it is a baptism in Holy Spirit in both cases—of the apostles back there; of Gentile believers at Cesarea. It is a miraculous sign in both cases. Plainly this on the very surface of the language. At the Pentecost it was the credential of the apostles, proof of Christ's resurrection, and this Spirit dictated the [illegible] thoughts of these same apostles. [illegible] that the truth, the converting power could reach the minds of the devout Jews out of every nation under heaven—reach them in the languages in which they spoke and thought. At Cesarea the Gentile believers spoke with tongues or in various languages, and this was indubitable proof that God was granting them all the Jewish disciple could lay claim to—remission of sins, eternal life and the kingdom, in a word joint-heirship with those belonging to the "commonwealth of Israel." With this miraculous proof of acceptance before them what ground had any Jewish disciple present to forbid the baptism of Cornelius and his company? Who could withstand God? for such, any opposing action or word would be. "And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord." Water was necessary in order to the obedience of faith, as in all other cases of conversion under the commission, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Let modern proclaimers of another gospel be warned, who presume to set aside water baptism on the ground that Paul says, "There is one baptism" concluding that baptism in or with Holy Spirit is the "one;" the one with which they know (?) they were baptized at a certain "great revival;" and this baptism of Cornelius and his party is brought forward as proof that men and women are today [illegible] with Holy Spirit when under [illegible] conviction and agonizing in prayer. What a delusion! Nothing modern is parallel to that case at Cesarea. There have been some very strange freaks and phenomena of the human mind which have been ascribed to the operations of the Holy Spirit whereas, in truth, they could be traced to the influence of mind upon mind in the sphere of natural law. Take the marvelous experiences occurring in connection with the preaching of Peter Cartwright, something less than a hundred years ago when what was supposed to be the Holy Spirit would seize men and women and prostrate them on the ground and make them cry for mercy; turning the camp-ground, which was quiet a short time before into Bedlam, confusion indescribable. Strong men outside the churned circle would start for the camp-meeting a horseback, resolved that the influence should not affect them; but coming near the grounds would, in spite of themselves, begin to feel a strange spell coming on them, and turning their horses would ride away swiftly, but would become so completely overpowered as to drop from their horses like dead men. There was nothing like this under apostolic preaching. All that is necessary to get up an exhibition of this kind is a magnetic preacher and an audience ignorant and superstitious.

Genesis. Chap. 42.

1. And when Jakoob became aware that there was buying going on in Algyptos, he said unto his sons, Why are ye taking things easy?

2. Lo, I have heard that there is grain in Algyptos; go down there and buy for us a little food, that we may live and not die.

3. And the ten brethren of Jooseph went down to buy grain from Algyptos.

4. But Benjamin, the brother of Jooseph, he did not send with his brethren; for said he perchance he might get sick.

5. And the sons of Israel went to market in the midst of those who were coming; for the famine was in the land of Chanaan.

6. And Jooseph was the ruler of the land; he was selling to all the laity of the land; and when the brethren of Jooseph had come they did homage to him on their face to the ground.

7. And when Jooseph saw his brethren he recognized them, and estranged himself from them, and talked harshly to them, and said unto them, Whence have ye come? And they said, From a land of Chanaan to market food supplies.

8. And Jooseph recognized his brethren, but they did not recognize him.

9. And Jooseph was reminded of his dream-visions, which he saw, and he said unto them, ye are spies, to examine the footprints of the land have ye come.

10. But they said, No, no, lord, to buy food-supplies have we thy house-servants come.

11. We are all sons of one man; men of peace are we; thy house-servants are not spies.

12. And he said unto them, no, no, but to see the foot-prints of the land have ye come.

13. And they said, Thy house-servants are twelve brothers in a land of Chanaan; and lo, the younger is with our father today, and the other doth not exist.

14. And Jooseph said unto them, This is what I've said to you, saying ye are spies.

15. In this way will ye show yourselves; by the health of Pharaoo ye shall not have gone hence unless your younger brother shall have come here.

16. Send one of your number and take your brother; and ye shall be led away until your words become manifest, whether ye are true or not; and if not by the health of Pharaoo surely ye are spies.

17. And he put them onward for three days.

18. And he said unto them on the third day, Do this and ye shall live; for I fear God.

19. If ye are men of peace, let one of your brethren be held back in prison, and do ye go and conduct the marketing for your food supply.

20. And lead your younger brother unto me, and your words will have been proved trustworthy; but if not ye shall be put to death; and they did in this wise.

21. And each one said to his brother, Yes, we are in acts of sin about our brother, because we disregarded the tribulation of his soul, when he besought us, and we did not hearken to him; and on his account hath this tribulation come upon us.

22. And Hroubeen answered and said unto them, Did I not talk to you saying, Do not wrong the boy, and ye did not hearken to me? And lo, his blood is being required.

23. And they did not know that Jooseph heard, for the interpreter was between them.

24. And turning away from them Jooseph lamented; and he returned again unto them, and spake unto them, and took Sumeoon away from them and bound him in their presence.

25. And Jooseph commanded to fill their earthen vessels with grain, and to give each one's money back into his sack and to give them provisions for their journey. And it occurred to them in this wise.

26. And putting their grain upon their asses they departed from there.

27. And when one of them had untied his pouch to give fodder to his asses where they had camped he saw also the bundle of his money and it was in the mouth of the pouch.

28. And he said to his brethren, My money hath been returned to me; and lo, this is it in my pouch. And his heart stood out, and they were all disturbed, saying to one another, What is this that God hath done unto us?

29. And they came to Jakoob, their father, in the land of Chanaan, and told him all that had occurred to them, saying.

30. The man, the lord of the land talked harshly to us, and put us in prison as spies spying out the land,

31. and we said to him, We are men of peace; we are not spies.

32. Twelve brethren are we, sons of our father, the one doth not exist, and the little one is with our father today in a land of Chanaan.

33. And he said unto us, the man, the lord of the land, In this way shall I know that ye are men of peace; leave one brother here with me, and taking the marketing of your food supply for your household, do ye depart.

34. And lead unto me your younger brother, and I shall know that ye are not spies; but that ye are men of peace; and your brother I will give back to you and ye shall do commerce with the land.

35. And it came to pass that in emptying their sacks, each one's bundle of money was also in his sack, and they saw the bundles of money they and their father, and were afraid.

36. And Jakoob their father said unto them, Yehave made me childless; Jooseph is not, Sumeoon is not, and will ye take Benjamin? And these things have come upon me.

37. And Hroubeen said unto their father, Kill my two sons, if I do not lead him unto thee.

38. And he said, My son shall not go down with you, because his brother is dead, and he alone is left, and it will come to pass that he will be taken sick on the journey ye are going, and ye will lead down my old age with sorrow to the grave (hades).

COMMENT.

The reader will observe that the vessels for the grain were earthen vessels "enclosed in sacks and to balance these on the asses they had "pouches" which hang on the other side and which contained "fodder" for the asses and possibly their own food and other supplies for their journey. This is not brought out in the C. V. or R. V. The "bundles of money" the reader will observe were put in the "pouches" and not in the sacks which contained "the earthen vessels."

R. V. translates "old-age" "gray hairs."

The gist of the story is fairly given in this chapter; but as the reader may see by comparison the text is not accurately followed, and a multitude of little things are omitted, changed or slurred over in the C. V. and R. V. as usual.

The man who can charm and gratify his club with the brilliance of his conversation and the keenness of his wit, but who never contributes any intellectual stimulus to his wife or children, ought to be sent to a penitentiary. The woman who wins eulogistic resolutions for her genius in decorating a church or bazaar, but whose own home exhibits not a single sign of her decorative gifts, ought to be set to scrubbing floors till she has learned a better way. The young man who expends so much politeness over somebody else's sister as to have none left for his own, will make that other girl as miserable some day as he now helps to make those who have to live with him. Shall I venture also to say that the young woman who has no ambition to be an angel in her own home, will never be made one anywhere else, not even by the endearing insistence with which some effusive young man calls her by that name?—*Dr. Chas. Jesus and the Mount of Olives.

Brethren and sisters,—when I went to my desk to prepare to obey the command to "Feed the Church of God which has been purchased with the precious blood of Christ,—I had an earnest desire to become more intimately acquainted with the purchaser. As you know,—perhaps, we lived in the South some 15 or more years,—beginning soon after the war which liberated the slaves,—and at times employed a number of the freed-men and women,—one family being with us nearly all the time we were there; we frequently heard them tell how anxious they were when put up at auction, for some good massa to buy them; and how indignant they felt when they were knocked down at a low price; and when a strange planter bought them, how they wondered what sort of a person he was, as if to read in advance, if possible, what the future had in store for them,—whether life would be tolerable, or

NOT WORTH LIVING.

Well, I thought of our once being slaves of sin,—that is, servants of sin, and the apostolic word occurred to me, "Do you not know, that to whom you present yourselves slaves for obedience, his servants you are, to whom you are obedient, whether of sin to death, or of obedience to righteousness." I then thought of our purchaser, and how differently we were situated. O, what a price he paid! He paid all he had! He gave himself for us!! How could we expect cruel treatment from him after that!! And then the apostolic Word again came to my relief: "He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him for us all, how shall he not with him, also freely give us all things?" Ah, could he consistently do anything else? It would be sinful to doubt him at any time,—how much more under such amazing circumstances. I had no doubts respecting the character of our purchaser. But still wanted to be more intimately and his acts of love, so in fact, I prepared this meal for myself, and the best I can do, is to invite you to share it with me, such as it is; the invitation is most cordial, I assure you. With a view to a more intimate acquaintance with Jesus, I invite attention to Luke xxii. 39, "And he went out to the Mount of Olives." Mountains are monuments erected by the God of nature. Like islands, they dwell apart,—and like them they furnish us a retreat once in awhile from the confusion, noise and bustle of the world of business. Many a meditative mind has found in their silence, leisure for the most continuous thought, and in their Patmos-like seclusion the brightest visions and largest projects have evolved; and by a sort of over-mastering attraction, they have drawn to themselves some of the most memorable incidents in human history. We do not wonder that excited fancy has sought for relics of the ark on

THE TOP OF ARARAT.

And in the grim solitude of Sinai it is solemn to remember, and easy to believe that Jehovah has spoken here. Elijah has made Carmel all his own as it were, and the death of Moses must ever give Pisgah a diadem. The words of Jesus seem still to linger among the hills of Galilee,—and the lilies there forbid us to have anxious thought about clothes to wear; and the twittering birds no thought for tomorrow. But though heavenly wisdom spake on the hills of Galilee, and excellent glory lighted up the top of Tabor, there is another height to which the disciples of Christ revert with fonder memory, and which they tread with softer step,—that mountain where beyond any spot in Palestine, where in the flesh of Jesus,—where he our great Intercessor was wont to pray,—where he wept over Jerusalem; on whose slopes he blessed the little apostolic band, and sent his message of mercy to mankind—the mountain at whose base lay Bethany and Gethsemane,—on whose sod his feet last stood, and where they will stand again in vastly different circumstances,—the Sabbatic, pensive and expectant Mount of Olives!"

It is around this monument I want all your thoughts to revolve at this service. To learn the mind which was in Christ, and so the mind which is in God, let us confine our view to that little spot and ponder those scenes in and those words in the Savior's ministry of which the theatre was Olivet. And while we do this partly to get materials for faith and hope and love, let us keep a special eye on the suppliant Savior. That we may intimately know and appreciate our Intercessor above, I think there is no way so excellent as to get acquainted with that same Jesus while here below.

The first thing Olivet reminds me of is the Savior's pity for his deluded and perishing countrymen,—"On a pleasant evening in spring, the Holy Land looked beautiful and the people appeared happy,—it was about the time for the blush of the pomegranate, and the tender scent of the fragrant vines, and the nestling doves in their murmuring joy, and no doubt the colts and lambs were full of their crazy gambols, and the people too felt the vernal glee. It was the paschal time, and the highways resounded with shouting pilgrims on their way to Jerusalem. From Hermon to Zion it was one long stream of music and merry hearts,—and even around the Man of Sorrows it looked like

A DAWN OF JOY.

The people at last seemed to guess his mission and suspect his destiny. They tore down the palm branches, and rent the welkin with the shouts, Hosannah to the Son of David; and thus were conducting him in triumph! But why this this slackened gait, this quivering lip? this tearful eye? Jerusalem is in full sight,—it is only just over the narrow valley—so near that the stones in the temple may be counted, and the tunes of mingled gladness may be heard from the crowded streets. It was a goodly sight,—the true God's sanctuary, the crowding population—God's ancient people,—and more than all this, there was the thought of happy meetings, and blessed homes on which this evening's sun would set. But he on the colt saw another crowd and heard another shout.

HE SAW THE DARKNESS

that would come over the city, he saw in advance the cross erected; and heard the frantic mob shout, "Away with him; away with him; crucify him, crucify him; his blood be upon us and our children." He saw another sight,—across the gulf of forty years he could see as clearly as then he could see the city across the valley of Jehoshaphat, and saw their dismal and awful prayer fulfilled,—his blood be upon us and our children. He saw the Roman eagle swoop down, and in the straitness of that siege saw things from which shrank away. He saw, too, the goodly stones of the temple tumbled down, and barley growing in silent fields where now so many footsteps tripped,—no temple, no ephod, no priest, no passover. He beheld the city, and wept over it, saying, "If thou hadst known, even thou, in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace; but now they are hid from thine eyes." There's a solemn lesson for us all here,—some may share a Savior's tears who may never profit by his blood.

The Mount of Olives reminds us of the Savior's agony to save. At the foot of the mountain, between two paths leading over the hill to Bethany is a little enclosure called Gethsemane. And, until a few years ago, it contained some singularly large and very ancient olive trees. Being at a convenient distance from the noisy city Jesus often resorted thither with his disciples; and here under the shelter of the olive branches when the city gates were closed and no footfall heard he enjoyed with his heavenly Father; and this fellowship endeared the place. Others would go home to sleep, but Jesus would go there to pray. We read that every man at even went to his own place, but Jesus went to the Mount of Olives. The Son of Man had no dwelling of his own; but Gethsemane was his closet, John vii. 53; and viii. 1,—there he entered often, and shut the door and prayed to the Father,—and doubtless the memory of those hallowed moments, and the sunshine of heaven opened the scene of his caused him to select it as the fittest place for the deepest of all his sorrows; when he who knew no sin, was about to be numbered with transgressors. It must have been a [illegible] appalling thing to him as he looked into the cup of trembling that was [illegible] to his hand. To be made a [illegible] was a new thing to him. He seems more amazed as he realized that [illegible] coming into such contact, or [illegible] with the very thing his soul [illegible], and be NUMBERED WITH TRANSGRESSORS.

His hand was too gentle and [illegible] to cast the cup away,—but, in an [illegible] easy of pain and bloody sweat he prayed that it might pass from him. It was the flesh that cried out; he was made like unto his brethren. But thank God he rallied from that paroxysm of woe, he found himself in an angel's strong arms, and the mighty conflict was then well nigh over,—the cross had no terrors now,—the sepulchre no gloom; the bitterness of death had past, and Judas and his torch-light band could not come too quickly now."

So, the Mount of Olives is identified with the supplicating [illegible] the Lamb of God, and so [illegible] as the great example in prayer [illegible] plications which ascended on those solitary nights, when of the people, there were none with him, survive in no human record,—yet doubtless—we will be eternally indebted to

when the Son of Man, the Man of sorrows, watched and prayed upon the Mount of Olives, if it be ours to get there. Only the petitions offered in Gethsemane have been preserved to us; and the 17th of John records a long and fervent prayer, offered, in all likelihood, in some quiet spot near the same venerable mountain's base. Did you ever notice the form of the Mediator's prayer? It was absolute, "Father, I will." But in praying for himself, how changed the language and tone! "Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me; nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt" "Now is my soul troubled,—and what shall I say, 'Father save me from this hour; but for this cause came I unto this hour. Father glorify thy name." A lesson of much profit may be learned here, viz., that the best preparation for trial is habitual prayer. Long before it became the scene of his agony Gethsemane had been the Savior's oratory. It says "He oftimes resorted thither." But when the hour of darkness came, and he, as it were, had to tread

he found that even he had [illegible] been there too often; and so, brethren and sisters, it will be the best preparation for our own days of darkness and scenes of trial, to resort often thither, in anticipation of any trials that await us; and thus bespeak mighty help against its time of need.

The Mount of Olives recalls to us the Savior's affection for his own. There are many relations which link people together,—and the instinct of endearment created by that relation is in some instances intensely strong. A brother knows how he loves his brother—but their love to one another will not explain a Savior's love to them—Jesus is a friend who sticks closer than a brother; a friend whose love will stand much severer shocks. A mother knows how she loves the infant in her arms, and how little she would grudge the hours spent in watching and the health she lost in restoring his,—but that will not tell how the Savior loves his own. She may forget,—he cannot forget those whom he has purchased by his precious blood. And, from the words of the spirit we take it, that only the most sacred of all human relations can in any measure compare with it; and even that but faintly. It says, "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ [illegible] the church and gave himself for it that he might sanctify it, and cleanse it with the washing of water by the Word, that he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish; so ought men to love their wives as their own bodies. He that loveth his wife loveth himself. For no man ever hated his own flesh,—but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as the Lord the Church; for we are of his flesh, and of his bones. This is a great secret,—but I am speaking concerning Christ and his congregation. Brethren and sisters, the love of Christ is not a fickle love. It was an ineffable love that directed his steps from Jericho to Jerusalem, in readiness for the cross,—and let me say that the bloody sweat of Gethsemane did not exhaust his love,—the desertion of his disciples did not dampen it,—and the soldiers' buffeting and the rabble's shout did not disgust it. Love to man was one of the last things that left the heart of Jesus,—and the darkness of Golgatha had not eclipsed it,—nor had the tomb-damp of Joseph's sepulchre tarnished it,—on rising it glowed so fervently it set hearts on fire on the way to Emmaus, and after lighting up one little company after another for 40 days, in a burst of final blessing he vanished from them into heaven. But before this he had promised to come again and receive his disciples to himself. Let us now look again at the means employed to overcome the

and sit down with the Father on his throne. In Luke vi. 12 we read: "And it came to pass in those days, that he went out into a mountain to pray, and continued all night in prayer." What an astounding statement! Think of it,—hour after hour one solitary voice rises and falls. O, what fervency, what earnestness, what importunity!! The cold dews fall upon him unheeded,—the morning breaks, and the darkness passes away, and still he prays, and CRIES AND WRESTLES.

Think of it,—this was he who knew no sin; he whose labors, and sufferings were ever with God in thought and affection,—and who was never ensnared by any worldly avocation, nor defiled by any worldly assimilation, whose very soul was the temple of the divine presence,—and whose heart was the altar upon which unquenchable fire of divine love ever burned, and sent forth the ever-ascending incense of adoration and praise. Yes; this is he who continued all night in prayer, where no eye could see, no ear hear but that of God whom he sought that he might more completely lose himself in the embrace of paternal love. This shows us the source of the ineffable words that fell from his lips by day; this explains the announcement that he spake only

THE FATHER'S WORDS.

Say, are we stronger than he? Are our foes less? O, then, how important is it that we should pray! Compassed with infirmities, our strength utter weakness; our minds weak,—all surrounding influence for evil,—how important that we imitate Christ, and pray, ever pray, pray without ceasing,—and in everything give thanks. This is when we have tribulation in the world,—and this is when we need peace in Christ to offset it. But joined to the injunction is that to watch, lest we enter into temptation,—and to watch because we know not at what hour the Lord may call for those who are his. It is only those who are ready to go in. God grant we may all be ready. Amen, and amen.

Consoling Thought.

"Good men of all ages, when they have seen the wicked triumphing, the poor despised and down-trodden, and the ungodly lording it over God's heritage, have sometimes been ready to lose their confidence and sink into despondency. The God of this world has so alarmed and disquieted them, that they have almost forgotten him who sitteth upon the throne of the universe, and controls and governs in infinite wisdom, goodness and mercy. Clouds and darkness may for a time be round about him, but righteousness and judgment are the habitation of his throne. "Child of God! Lift up thy head, trust in God thy Savior: exercise a true and living faith."

"The Spirit in 1 John xiv. 18 says, "Perfect love casteth out fear." But what is fear? We once read that Lord Bacon said, "Nothing was to be feared but fear." We understand there is a servile fear, and there is a fear that is filial. The former must be the kind of fear upon which Shakespeare remarks, "Fears make demons of cherubims. Fear is reverence. Fear is adoration. Then, again, coming back to the servile line, Aristotle says, No one loves the man whom he fears. Religiously, fear is the mother of safety; for so long as we fear God it will be impossible for us to treat his law with levity, or to modify the standard of his discipline."

"This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." Faith conquers fear; great faith means triumph, small faith means dejection, hesitancy and lost opportunities. Faith gives courage, resolution, energy,—and, as some one long ago said, "laughs at impossibilities, and cries, It shall be done."

Love is a stern disciplinarian. Do we realize this as we should? A life of love means a life of sacrifice.

One who is true to God, cannot be false to men. One who is false to men cannot be true to God.

It is often pretty hard to get over the fear of man sometimes; but we think it is more difficult still to get over the favor of man.

One might about as well expect to drive a plowshare through a wasp's nest, in open day, and not be stung, as to be truthful without giving offence.

If you are anxious about the well-being of some friend and would like to have him see and embrace the truth, subscribe for this paper to be sent to him. It will talk at times and places that you cant. It may make opportunity for you to say a word that will make you friend a joint-heir with the Lord Jesus Christ. It has been done. Why not try it?

You cannot know men, brethren, so long as you please them. Nor can you read any character whose ambitions you constantly gratify. Russell Lowell once pithily said, "There's a deal o'solid kicking in the meekest-looking mule." We can testify to this fact, for the meekest looking mule could kick with his fore-legs as well as his hind hoofs. The way out of self-importance is to live in constant sympathy with a divine idea. He who lives night and day with the Son of Man will be delivered from the vexation and torment of self-exaggeration.

At the dedication of "Shiloh Tabernacle" at Dowie's Zion City on last Monday the "Dr." spoke from the text "Until Shiloh come." He said: "I have pondered over that word, and I do not take the authority of the commentators. Shiloh does not mean Christ. It means this City of Zion. Here, according to that prophecy, will go forth missionaries who are to convert the world. Here Christ is to come. Here is to rise the water the book of Isaiah tells of. I know this is so. Do you accept my interpretation? Say yes or no." "Yes" answered the crowd. "Then we will incorporate it in our creed" said Dowie. We give this as a sample of what is taught by this man; and how he runs his followers. We are to try the spirits and see if they be right. We have nothing to try them by but the Word of God, and Dowie does not answer up to this standard.

Selected.

Bearing the Cross.

Much is said among professed Christians about bearing the cross; but we fear little is understood or really practiced in this matter. Men are all naturally in love with this present world. To this world we must become crucified. Crucifixion is a hard death; there is, however, no other way of entering into the kingdom of God. We must be "crucified unto the world, and the world unto us."

Most professed Christians, it is to be feared, have made a covenant with the world, not to part with it; and the tempter satisfies them if they speak in meeting sometimes, and give some thing to support the gospel, they may keep their covenant with the world: but, "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." How, then, are we to be separated from the love of the world, and be crucified unto it?

1. By a believing view of the Lord Jesus Christ, who became poor, was despised of men, a man of sorrows, acquainted with grief, endured reproach, resisted temptation, though he "suffered being tempted;" when he was reviled, reviled not again, murmured not, though wounded, bruised, put to grief, and his soul made an offering for sin, scourged, spit upon, his hands and feet pierced with nails, his soul in agony—all this he bore and no lisp of impatience ever escaped him.

Would you be crucified unto the world? We learn of him: contemplate his poverty, his life, his sufferings, his resignation, his patience, his loving and forgiving spirit, till the whole mind is humbled within you: and then realize this truth, "If so be we suffer with him, that we may also be glorified together." Rom. viii. 17. Do you ask what it is to suffer with him? We answer, To suffer with the same meek, patient, forgiving, resigned spirit that he had. This leads us to say:—

2. If you would bear your cross and be crucified unto the world, remember every trial of your life, whether temporal or spiritual, personal or family, from friends or enemies, direct or indirect, great or small, of short continuance or long, or whatever be the nature or character of it, is by the appointment or permission of that God who willeth not the death of the sinner, but who is seeking by all these trials to crucify you unto the world, and fit you to be glorified with his Son Jesus Christ.

How shall this design of our heavenly Father be accomplished? It can not be, unless you bear your cross. Do you ask again, What is it to bear my cross? We answer, It is to suffer all the trials of which we have spoken, patiently. You are not to quarrel with the instrumentality God may employ, nor indulge in fretfulness under it. If you do, you do not bear the cross. And though you should speak like an angel in meeting, yet if you fret and complain, under any of the trials of life by which God is seeking to crucify you unto the world, it is hypocrisy for you to talk about bearing the cross, you are but deceiving your own soul. God has assured us, "all things work together for good to them that love him" (Rom. viii. 28); yet, you can murmur, fret, and complain at those things which God has permitted or appointed!! Alas, alas! Do not dream you are ripening for the kingdom of God while this is the case. No, you are ripening for death—for perdition.

Tripped by his Pastor.

A worthy old gentleman had one weakness—a habit of absenting himself from church upon very slight pretext. One Sunday, which was a little cloudy but, by no means inclement, he was not found in his place. The next morning at unlearly hour, as the pastor was standing on his doorstep, who should come along but this old man, perched on a load of wood, his hat and overcoat, his hair and beard, all white with the thickly falling and fiercely blowing snow! Seeing the pastor, he halted to pay his respects and exchange a friendly word.

"Good morning," said the old man. "All well?"

"All well, thank you."

"Sorry I could not be at church yesterday."

"Yes, I missed you."

"Well, the fact is, it was such a bad day, and the weather threatened so much, that I thought it was too bad to venture out, and the—"

"Yes, it is fine, pleasant weather today," said the pastor. "If we should have as fine a day as this next Sunday, I shall look for you at church."

The old man blushed, and manifested a desire to break off the conversation—during all of which it seemed as if he were inwardly saying, "Caught this time."

"There is no power like love. I loved my little boy long before he loved me. One night I heard him say to his mamma, when he thought me asleep: "I love papa." What a thrill of joy that gave me! I had loved him from infancy, but now he was beginning to love me. A few weeks before he might have seen me carried out of the house in a coffin, and perhaps, not knowing better have thoughtlessly laughed at it. But now my love for him had got a response. Something like this is the feeling God has when a sinner melts under his love. Love produces love. What a power it might become in our pulpit and Sunday School classes and meetings! The reason we have so little love for Christ is that we are so little acquainted with him. The more intimately we get acquainted with the Son of God the more we shall love him, and we may get acquainted with him by reading about him in his word. D. L. Moody.

Those to whom we have sent letters telling about your accounts have not all made response as yet. Brother or Sister, we urge you to be sure and not neglect this matter longer. We want to pay our obligations—this is the reason why we ask you to give us what is due at once. If we could satisfy those we are under obligation to any other way we would not ask you, but as it is the only way we know of, we must hear from you to enable us to do so. We trust all will see the necessity of this and act NOW.

Lines on the Death of My Parents.

Father and mother are laid away;
To sleep 'til Jesus comes;
Then when he calls on that glad day,
He'll take his children home.

They lived to see the wilderness,
Transformed to fertile fields;
And labored hard in youthful days,
To live when old, at ease.

Of children, seven were born to them,
And three have gone before;
While four are left to mourn for them,
Bowing beneath the blow.

Their home a refuge was for all,
Who claimed the Savior's name;
And many guests that graced their home,
Now sleep in Jesus' name.

May all their children faithful be,
And live for Jesus here;
When called like them in death to sleep,
Their faith will have no fear.

Oh, may the God who dwells on high,
Bless each of us to day;
And while we live we'll ever try,
To do his will always.

The Church of God.—No. 2.

The term "Church of God" occurs six times, "Churches of God," "Church of the living God," and "Churches of Christ," each once, while the word church is found one hundred and thirteen times in the New Testament. This body is thus designated because of the relation sustained by its members to God and Christ through the gospel. Without hearing, understanding, believing, and from the heart obeying this gospel, it is impossible for anyone to become truly identified with the Church of God, no matter how good the intentions or what the ceremonies that may be engaged in.

When Peter spoke those pungent words on Pentecost, and many anxiously inquired, "What must we do?" the Apostle, full of Holy Spirit, gave this answer, "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." Acts ii. 38. Was this injunction followed? It was, for the record further says "they that gladly received his word were baptized" v. 41. What was done? A great number "received the word" of Peter. These "were baptized." On "the same day there were added to them about 3,000 souls." Unto whom this "addition?" "Them," the "disciples." See Acts i. 12-15. How was this "addition" accomplished? By "obedience to the faith" through baptism. See Rom. i. 5; xvi. 26; Acts vi. 7. The persons thus affected by the gospel of God's devising, and so drawn together around one common center, constituted the Church of God; and only when men and women are so united today, on the same platform, can they be properly regarded as constituents of the Church of God.

By what name should this body be known? Sometimes when we tell persons, we belong to the Church of God, we are asked, Is that all the name you have? Another question is here in order, What was the "name" of the Church in apostolic times? "Church of God" is the term by which the collective body of believers was known, because this is what it was. Why call it something else than what it is? If it really is God's Church, why call it by someone else's name? Would it not be a grave reflection upon the wisdom of God to apply some other term to his Church to denominate it, when the term he has applied to it, fully meets all requirements? Reader, will you answer these questions for yourself?

Recently a minister asked me, "Do you have a discipline with articles of faith and rules of conduct for the members?" to which I replied that "All Scripture given by inspiration of God, is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction (Greek, paideia—discipline) in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." 2 Tim. iii. 16, 17. If those Scriptures can bring about these results, where is there any room for improvement, by imposing something of human invention?

Christ is the Head of the Church. Eph. v. 23; Col. i. 18. The head of a man is the seat of intelligence. The head of a firm or corporation is the one directing that institution. Now, if Christ be the Head of the Church, he has the direction of that body. The body is subordinate to him, as he himself said, "Without (or apart from) me ye can do nothing." John xv. 5. Has he given directions for the government of the Church? If so, what are they? "Go teach (mathēteuo,—make disciples of) all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." Mat. xxviii. 19, 20. Did those to whom this command was given carry out these instructions? Reference to the Acts and letters of the Apostles will show that they were executed very minutely. Did this consist of, or even embrace, the making of a discipline for the conduct of the Church members? Not at all, for they were told to "teach" those whom they discipled "all things" they themselves had been "commanded." Were these "things" sufficient for the conduct of those disciples? No doubt of it. Then why add anything further? Were they not sufficient? In that case Christ has left the Church without sufficient directions for its guidance. Now, we are bound to take one of these two positions:

1. Either Christ through his word and inspired apostles gave rules sufficient for the guidance of the Church during the present dispensation, in which case any further "rules" would only be an addition to that which was sufficient, and so a reflection on Christ's wisdom, or

2. He has not met the requirements of the case, and the Church has been left to take care of itself as best it can. But in this event, where is the Christ "in whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge?" Col. ii. 3. Where is He who, according to his "divine power, hath given unto us all things that pertain to life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue?" 2 Pet. i. 3. If, as here stated, he "has given" us these "all things," then where are those who have manifestly added to them?

What do we behold in the world of today? A multitude of "churches," which are not governed primarily and principally in their faith and practice by the directions of Christ the Head of the Church. Their candidates for the ministry are impressed with the importance of the "rules" laid down by the "founders," and are required to solemnly obligate themselves to understand these, and to inculcate and enforce them upon all who come under their jurisdiction. If any become guilty of an infraction of those rules, they are brought to account and dealt with as criminals. Generally more importance is attached to these things, which can at best be but derived from the Word of God, than to the Word itself.

If, as is claimed, "the word of God is the only rule of faith and practice," then why have rules that are manifestly not "given by inspiration of God" and require to be revised and improved every few years? While the systems and regulations of men have inherently in them the elements of dissolution and disintegration, and need therefore to be often recast, "the word of the Lord endureth forever. And this is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you." 1 Pet. i. 25.

But we are asked "Are not all the different denominations just so many branches of the Church of God?" Do they all "speak the same thing?" 1 Cor. i. 10. Would God they did. Do they all practice the same things? A glance about us will tell the story. Is the Bible capable of so many constructions, and does it furnish excuse or authority for so many different and conflicting systems? Jesus prayed that those the Father had given him might all be ONE, even as he and the Father are one. John xvii. 20, 21. Where is this oneness today? And where has it been in the last seventeen centuries? It does not exist between the "churches." "The falling away" (2 Thes. ii. 1–12) has come; the "departing from the faith" (1 Tim. iv. 1-3) is here—departing from "the faith of the gospel." Phil. i. 27.

Brethren and Sisters, let us examine ourselves and our work whether we be in the faith or not, and whether we can rightfully claim the promise given to the Church of God.

Heaven Not Far Away.

I recently heard a preacher say to his congregation that heaven could not be far away, because Christ said unto the thief: "Verily I say unto thee, to-day thou shalt be with me in Paradise." Could he reached the same day.

The facts in the case are that such an hope is built upon an assumption. It is assumed that Paradise and Heaven are synonymous words, and relate to the same locality. Very little confidence indeed, can be placed upon any hope which cannot boast of a better base than an assumption.

We learn from the Bible that the original location of Paradise was on the earth; and when finally restored, we will find it upon the earth still. Liddell and Scott define the original word paradise, as a park, or a pleasure ground, an Oriental word, used by the LXX for the Garden of Eden. Who ever heard of the Garden of Eden being located in the skies? Vegetation which was so rich and luxuriant in Paradise, would most certainly require something else beside thin air to sustain it, which can not be found in the sky Paradise.

The words "to-day," or "this day," found in the text referred to are from the Greek word Semeron, and must relate to the day, or period of time spoken of in the text or context. It sometimes means a day of twenty-four hours a month or even a year, and sometimes to a day which is a thousand years long.

The day spoken of in the above text relates to the day of the Lord's coming, as is indicated by the request of the thief: "Lord, remember me when thou comest in thy kingdom." This is similar to Paul's declaration, "there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous Judge shall give me in that day," which day has not yet come. The close of the verse shows it to be the day of "his appearing."

It is evident that the day spoken of in the text, was not a twenty-four hour day. This we gather from Jesus' words to Mary, after his resurrection, "I have not yet ascended to my Father." Three of those twenty-four hour days had passed, and yet he was still on earth, and had never left it.

Again, if we accept the assumption that heaven and Paradise are the same place, the thief is not in paradise yet, because we have the express declaration of Jesus, previous to his ascension: "No man hath ascended up to heaven." And it is furthermore evident, because he said to the loving companions of his pilgrimage while he was upon earth: "Whither I go, ye cannot come." Can you for one moment suppose that a criminal, who had spent his life in sin and only repented while he was being executed for crime, would be favored by Jesus above all his loving followers? It could not be so. It is too inconsistent to be thought of.

Why is it that men who call themselves ministers of Jesus Christ, cannot accept, believe and defend from corruption the words and declarations of Jesus Christ? Whenever we find a preacher who teaches the people things which are contrary to the words of Jesus Christ, you can be positively sure that such a preacher is not a true minister of Jesus Christ. Neither will such a preacher be recognized by Jesus, when he comes in his kingdom. Jesus prophecied there would be just such preachers. In Matt. vii. 21, 22, Jesus said: "Not every one who saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophecied (taught) in thy name? (as ministers of Jesus Christ) and in thy name cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you," for the reason that neither their faith or even their practice were according to his will.

Paul was aware that preachers of that kind would arise, and that even the churches would demand preachers who would preach to suit the desires and notions of those who hire them. If they had a desire that "fables" should be preached to them, in place of "sound doctrine," fables would be taught to them.

In this day a preacher who cannot preach a mythical fable of a heaven filled with immaterial, immortal souls, is not wanted. "Fables" in place of "sound doctrine," is the great demand of our day. Paul says: "I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom; preach the Word; be instant in season, and out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all long-suffering and doctrine. For the time will come when they (the churches) will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts (desires) shall heap to themselves teachers (preachers) having itching ears; (menpleasers) and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." Bible scholars know full well that the fundamental teaching of the popular church of our day is essentially based on "fables."

Those who desire "sound doctrine," must search for it in the Word of God. It cannot possibly be found elsewhere.

Now, I ask, what is the almost universal belief of those who call themselves ministers of Jesus Christ? You will find it expressed in the following hymn:'

"I have to keep I have,
To be glorify,
My dying soul to save
And fit it for the sky."

The majority of so-called Christians engaged in the business of trying to save and fit imaginary never-dying souls for the sky; but Bible Christians do not know anything about any kind of business. Our Bible says nothing about "never-dying souls," never mentions such fabulous imaginative creations of the fancies of unregenerate men. Therefore it cannot be "sound doctrine," but it is an unvarnished "fable," which teachers who preach to please their hearers have turned the people unto.

It is [illegible] to think of how many really sincere and honest-minded people have been turned unto that heathenish "fable," and also that such people do not know but what the Bible is full of just such fabulous nonsense. [illegible] the word of teachers be "blind guides."

The people as well as the preachers, are to blame for this state of things, because they have not followed the instructions found in God's Word. Jesus says, "Search the Scriptures." If they had obeyed that direction, they would soon have detected the fact that their preachers were teaching them fables. The Bereans were commended for being daily Scripture-searchers. They tested the teaching of the apostle by the Scriptures.

We are instructed to try the spirits, (teachers) as to whether they be of God or not. How? by the Word of God. The people need not be deceived if they would but bring the teaching of men to the Holy Scriptures. The Bible is simple enough to be comprehended by the common people. You can understand it, and comprehend its teachings as well as a titled D. D., it is God's revelation to man; you can get it much purer yourself, than you can get it second hand through a clerical hierarchy I would not appreciate second hand theology, any more than I would second hand clothing.

The Holy Scriptures are very far from being a collection of intricate riddles which would require much worldly wisdom to solve. It is so simple that a child can comprehend them, if its mind is not previously filled with traditional rubbish. Paul [illegible] had known the Holy Scriptures, which is able to make thee wise unto salvation." Which faith, said Paul, "dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and thy mother Eunice." These godly mothers were doubtless young Timothy's instructors in the Holy Scriptures while yet but a "child." If Timothy as a child could be taught the Holy Scriptures, other godly mothers also who are instructed in the Scriptures, could likewise teach their children. The efforts of clericals to throw an air of mystery about the Scriptures is all folly.

Theological colleges are nothing more than preacher manufactories, and each factory turns out just the kind of goods the factory is designed to make. A Methodist factory will never make Baptist preachers, neither will a Baptist factory turn out Episcopalian preachers, and when they are made, with their various labels attached, such as Rev., Right Rev. "D. D." etc., they cannot be trusted as expounders of the Holy Scriptures; they need yet to be instructed in the Scriptures. They could not begin to be compared with even the child Timothy, after his mother and grandmother had instructed him.

Let a godly man or woman at their own home, take their Bible and concordance (for the same length of time they [illegible] spend in college) and go into an earnest searching of the Scriptures, these titled D. D.'s could not be compared with them as to obtaining a true knowledge of Holy Scripture.

Throw away the idea that the Scriptures are mystical riddles, they are not; they are just suited to the comprehension of the general run of people. The riddle is in the mystical dust which blinds the eyes of the people. Take for instance, the preacher mentioned in the beginning of this article, who does not know the difference between heaven and paradise, and also thinks that Jesus and the thief are in a paradise in the skies, and does not know that paradise, or the garden of Eden is not yet restored. His eyes are full of clerical dust. He needs a little Scripture eye-salve, like many other dust-befogged clergymen.

The thief on the cross has been the subject for a great many articles and the cause of many a heated discussion and yet I have never heard his faith spoken or written of "Now faith is the substances of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Heb. xi. 1. What did he hope for? Was it that he might go to heaven when death should relieve him of his sufferings? There is not a word in the record of this even that could be made to teach such an idea. He could only expect to receive the reward promised by the Christ. There was a promise of an inheritance in a future kingdom over which Christ is to rule and those who are obedient in this age shall rule with him. The request of the thief was, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." Jesus had said Matt. xxv. 31, "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory." Then evidently will the thief be remembered. If he had expected to go to heaven he should have made this request, viz., Lord, remember me when thy spirit goes to heaven. If such had been the request the question would not have been an open one. We are sometimes asked, what did the thief know of Christ? What could he have learned of him at the time of the crucifixion? Nothing in fact. Previous to this he must have heard the gospel of the kingdom preached and have seen some of the miracles performed by Christ as proof of his claim.

Dear readers, did you ever think seriously of the scene of the crucifixion? No artist has ever painted a picture so vivid as the one seen in the language of the New Testament writers. Then were there two thieves crucified with him, one on the right hand, and another on the left. And they that passed by reviled him, wagging their heads and saying, "Thou that destroyest the temple, and buildest it in three days, save thyself. If thou be the Son of God, come down from the cross." Likewise also the priests mocking him, with the scribes and elders said, He saved others; himself he cannot save. If he be the King of Israel, let him now come down from the cross, and we will believe him. And one of the malefactors which were hanged railed on him, saying, If thou be the Christ, save thyself and us. Under these discouraging circumstances the other rebuked him saying, dost not thou fear God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation? We receive the due reward of our deeds; but this man hath done nothing amiss. In this he confesses his own sins and condemns the Jews for crucifying an innocent person. By this we learn that the thief must have known something of the life and character of the Christ, the Son of God. We see the rabble surging and pushing around the cross and mocking the crucified one and heaping every indignity upon him. The apostles who had followed him during his ministry and had seen the lame and sick cured, and the dead called back to life again, failed to stand by Jesus when he was arrested and accused. But as our Savior said, "I will smite the shepherd and the sheep of the flock shall be scattered abroad." With all their boasting they flee and none stand with him when the trying ordeal comes. After the death of Christ the apostles returned to their business of fishing. They had met with such a defeat that their faith had been shattered. Peter expresses it in one of his epistles when he said, "He hath begotten us again unto a living hope by his resurrection from the dead."

If the hope of the beloved disciples was blasted what must have been the faith of one suspended on the cross and in the agonies of death to confess the Lord Jesus, and request that he remember him when he comes in his kingdom. It is difficult for us to believe under very favorable circumstances when we are led to believe in the risen Christ, not a dying one. I sometimes think we do not appreciate our grand privileges. Isolated ones like myself often complain of being deprived of preaching and church privileges, and yet they have the Bible in which is written so much for our guidance and admonition, and some are so encumbered with the cares of this age that they forget that they have made a good confession. Let us remember the adverse circumstances under which the thief believed in the Son of God. No human aid could help him and one whom the apostles thought would redeem Israel now suffering the agonies of death. His faith was certainly very strong. He surely believed that Christ was the resurrection and the life. If we are but mindful of the many good lessons taught in God's Word there is nothing that can take us from him who died for us. How many very recently have waited for hours in inclement weather to get a sight of the passing train of Prince Henry, who has just visited this country. With all his boasted royalty he would hardly stoop to grasp the hand of one of our poor laborers. Are we looking with the same expectancy for the Christ, the Royal Majesty of the heavens? If so, he will seek for us in the dust of the earth and will find the living ones, the poor and despised of this world whom he will be pleased to call his brethren. We will not have to trace our lineage back for generations, but we will be counted the first fruits. Blessed thought! Let me admonish you in the language of Paul "after having done all to stand." Remembering that if a man strive for mysteries, yet is he not crowned, except he strive lawfully. 2 Tim. ii. 5. If we can not preach or write, we can subscribe for and read The Restitution, and then pass it to some one who may learn the truth from it. Let our prayer be "Jesus Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom."

Wealth of Nations.

This subject in connection with our study of divine prophecy, is an important one. The financial growth of the United States has been rapid and perhaps without precedent in the history of nations. Our national wealth is, according to government statistics $90,000,000,000, an increase of $25,000,000,000 in the last ten years. These figures are so enormous as to be incomprehensible. The people as a mass are growing in wealth at this astounding rate. Every year adds $2,500,000,000 to the accumulations of the people of this nation.

The year book of the London Daily Mail contains some comparative figures of the wealth and indebtedness of nations which are regarded as of enough value by the authorities at Washington to warrant their promulgamation by the Treasury Bureau of Statistic. In its tables of national wealth it places the United States at the head of the list, of which the principal items are as follows: United States, $90,000,000,000; United Kingdom, $59,030,000,000; France $48,450,000,000; Germany, $40,460,000,000; Russia, $22,125,000,000. The relative public indebtedness of the countries named is given as follows: United States $1,105,000,000; Germany $3,255,000,000; United Kingdom $3,580,000,000; Russia $3,555,000,000; France $6,195,000,000. The ratio of public debt to national wealth is given as follows: United States, 1.4 per cent; United Kingdom, 6 per cent; Germany, 8.1 per cent; Russia 11.1 per cent; France, 12.8 per cent.

Thus does the United States play a very prominent part in the fulfilment of divine prophecy. Please read carefully the fifth chapter of St. James, "Be patient, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord."

Obituary.

Died at the home of her widowed mother in the town of Omro, Dec. 12, 1901, Gertrude K. eldest child of Willard and Isabelle Daggett, aged 4 years, 10 months and 13 days, after a long and painful sickness just as we were in hopes her life would be spared, suddenly and without warning came the dread enemy death folding in his cold embrace the form of our little darling. Her death was the result of typhoid fever which less than a year before had taken away her father. She seemed to pass the fever crisis safely, but instead of gaining as we hoped she would, bad symptoms seem to develop. Several doctors seemed to agree that death was due to the breaking of an abcess at the base of the brain which meant certain death. Little Gertie was a beautiful little girl, bright and winsome, and womanly beyond her years, proving herself such a comfort to her mother and the dear little pet of a large circle of relatives and friends. Services at the house were conducted by Elder Dennison of Omro, who spoke a few words of comfort from the text, "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." After which we bore the casket containing the little robed form of our darling through the bitter cold of that December day to North Rushford church, where services were conducted by Rev. Decker of Eureka, then we laid her beside her father, till he comes who has said, "I am the resurrection and the life, he that believeth in me though he were dead shall he live."

The Bereans Column.

[Under this heading the society of "Bereans" of Illinois, will supply the copy, and endeavor to fill the space once a month.]

Dear Bereans:

The subject given me to write upon is "Some Prophecies that have been Fulfilled."

One of the most noticable prophecies in the Old Testament, is that of the birth of Christ, found in Isa. xvii. 14.

We find that the bondage of the children of Israel was prophecied about three hundred and fifty years before it actually took place, by referring to Gen. xv. 13.

The successive downfall of the four universal empires was prophecied in Dan. ii. 31—41, and we find that this prophecy was fulfilled by referring to history.

The power of Christ to perform miracles was prophecied in Isa. xxxv. 5, 6, and if we we read the life of Christ given in Matthew or Mark we find this prophecy also fulfilled.

MARY ASLAKSEN.

Dear Bereans:

I am asked, What should be the aim of believers?

To be a believer is not merely to acknowledge that Christ is the Son of God; but to be so impressed with that fact, and the fact that he has made it possible for us to secure eternal life, that we will endeavor in every way to execute his wishes and conform ourselves to his example. To do that, two things are necessary. We must continue to increase our knowledge of the truth and to perfect ourselves in righteousness, and we should aid others to see the light and profit by it. This can be done, not merely by going to church, but by showing a Christian spirit in all our actions and dealings, that others may have respect for our religion, and for us on account of our religion. We must do unto others as we would have others do to us, and not allow business to interfere with our Christianity. In a word, if one believes in Jesus Christ, he will take Christ for his ideal, and strive to conform his life to that ideal.

Dear Bereans.

REPENTANCE.

We wish to write a few words on repentance. It is the first thing taught in the gospel.

What is the gospel?

It is good news about Christ's kingdom and the glorious promises.

How are we to have a share in them?

We must first repent, and then believe the truth. We read in Mark i. 15, Christ said, Repent and believe the gospel, and when he sent his twelve apostles out it tells us also in Mark vi. 12, that the first thing they preached was for men to repent.

Now, dear ones, out of Christ, why not repent and give up the evils of this world and come to Christ. This life is brief, but the one with Christ is eternal.

Yours, waiting for the soon coming King.

CHARLIE & EDNA ANDERSON.

Dear Bereans:

Having been requested to write for the Berean Column, I will write a brief letter.

The name "Bereans" denotes careful study of God's Word. In Acts xvii. it says:—"From Thessalonica Paul and Silas went to Berea. There the people received the Words of God and searched the Scriptures daily to see if those things were so." Closely connected with this is the story of Paul and Silas at Philippi. There was a damsel that followed them and cried after them. One day Paul turned around and commanded the evil spirit to depart from her. When her Master saw that his gain was lost (for she was a sooth-sayer) he was very angry and took Paul and Silas before the magistrates. They had them beaten and thrown into prison. In the middle of the night they sang songs and prayed and the chains that bound them were loosened and the door opened. The jailor seized his sword and rushed into the jail and was going to kill himself but Paul told him to do himself no harm for they were still there. The jailor came in and asked what he should do to be saved. Paul told him to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and be baptized.

The jailor then washed their stripes and made them comfortable as he could and straightway he and his house-hold were baptized. It is our duty as Christians if we say anything or do anything that will wound any one's feeling the first thing to do is to make it right with that person.

Another Scripture in Matt. v. 23-24, "And if you bring your offering to the altar and remember that you have anything against any one you should go and make it right with that person. That means you must worship God with nothing against your brother.

Now, Bereans, live up to your name. Be like the servant who was left with five talents and when his master came had multiplied his talents until he had ten, and when the Master comes you will hear him say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

Your Sister in Christ.

BERNICE A. PHELPS.

A Worker's Prayer.

Lord, speak to me, that I may speak
In living echoes of thy tone!
As Thou hast sought, so let me seek Thy erring children, lost and lone.

Oh, lead me, Lord, that I may lead
The wandering and the wavering feet!
Oh, feed me, Lord, that I may feed
Thy hungering ones with manna sweet!

Oh, strengthen me, that while I stand
Firm on the rock, and strong in thee,
I may stretch out a loving hand
To wrestle with the trouble of sea!

Oh, teach me, Lord, that I may teach
The precious things thou dost impart,
And wing my words that they may reach
The hidden depth of many a heart!

The Riches of God's Grace.

"Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." 1 Cor. ii. 9. Bishop Louth did not regard this text as a quotation of Isa. lxiv. 4, "That the citation is so different from the Hebrew text that it seems difficult, if not impossible to reconcile it by any literal emendation without going beyond the bounds of temperate criticism." He has left us the alternative of believing that the Jews willfully disguised and corrupted the text or that the apostle quoted from one or the other of the two Apocryphal books entitled: "Ascension of Isaiah," and the "Apocalypse of Elias," in both of which this passage was found. The objection that the Apostle would not quote from Apocryphal writings cannot be urged here, from the fact that in this short speech made at Athens he quoted from Aratus a Greek poet who wrote three hundred years before. Though we may allow that he quoted from an uninspired author, the fact that he does so stamps the passage with the impress of inspired truth. The wisdom of the world had not "made known the things which God has prepared for them who love him." For centuries Athens and Corinth and other seats of learning had had their wise men who discussed almost every conceivable question. Among these was that of man's nature, and the place of his final destiny. The philosophic mind of Grecian sages was not adequate to the task of answering the question which was continually pressing upon it, in reference to a future state. Socrate's answer was unsatisfactory to the learned of his day, and was even rejected as utterly false by the great majority of scholarly men.

In that celebrated treatise where Cicero sets himself to prove the immortality of the soul he represents the "prevailing opinion as against the doctrine; that there were crowds of opponents, not only the Epicureans, but, which he could not account for, those that were the most learned persons had that doctrine in contempt." Socrates, Plato and Cicero held that the soul of man was immortal and went at death to dwell with the gods in Hades. According to their view the body was forever laid aside leaving the soul free and unencumbered by what they regarded as a clog and a hindrance. That the soul's capacities for enjoyment was immensely advanced by being freed from the grossness of materialism. It is this doctrine of the soul's separate existence as taught by these heathen philosophers that has so marred the simplicity and harmony of the gospel. Soon after the death of the last apostle men began to engraft the doctrine of Socrates and Plato upon the Christian system. To do this made it necessary to change the meaning of Bible terms and assume that the soul of man is immortal, that death is not death, but transition. This done, how natural it was for such great men as Wesley and Butler to fall to contradicting plain Bible statements. For Paul's affirmation that "death passed upon all men," in consequence of Adam's transgression, Wesley substitutes "death passes upon no man." And Butler, "Our organized bodies are no more ourselves, than any other matter around us." Men today prefer the dogmas of Socrates to the doctrine of Paul. Theologians preach and poets sing of "worlds on high." "The poor Indian whose untutored mind sees God in the cloud and hears him in the wind," may well be excused for indulging the hope, "That admitted to yon equal sky, his faithful dog shall bear him company;" or heathen Greeks, deprived of the light of Revelation, be pardoned for holding the notion that the soul went to a subterranean region some where deep down in the earth. But what shall we say of men with the Bible in hand, yet giving full play to their fancies,—expatiating on the glories of a heaven of which they know nothing? What reasonable excuse is there for their indulging their hope without an inspired promise on which to found it? The things that God has prepared for them that love him are things which have been revealed by the Spirit which searches all things, and the deep things of God. We are not left to follow the wild vagaries of uninspired men in regard to man's nature and his future dwelling place. The opening pages of the Book to which, all bearing the Christian name appeal, gives the simple story of primitive man, the happy occupant of a beautiful garden on this earth. Everything about him adapted to his constitution; things to meet his natural wants, a rich variety to regale his senses. Things beautiful in form and color to charm the eye; "odors sweeter than those wafted from the groves of Araby" to delight his olfactories; music poured from the throats of a thousand feathered songsters to entrance his ear, and all things about him arranged to gratify his rational nature. In his brief sinless condition Jehovah allotted him the work of dressing and keeping of the garden; a high occupation in which he would be in touch with the visible forms of creation. After his fall he is doomed to a harder life; "to till the ground from whence he was taken," and to eat his bread in the sweat of his face. He lost immensely by that one act of disobedience, and his descendants have reaped largely of the fruit of his sowing.

We know that man is not what he would have been had he kept faith with his Maker; and the earth has undoubtedly been greatly marred by the curse that was pronounced upon it; and yet it serves in a measure the purpose of its creation; it houses and clothes and nourishes its sinful occupant, and affords him some rational enjoyment in case he abuses not her gifts nor his own powers. Something of Eden's beauty and loveliness still lingers amid the desolations of sin, to cheer us in our pilgrimage through the present fitful life. Season follows season in annual round, spring and summer repairing the mischief wrought by our winters in this high latitude. The curse is on us and our home. Sin and sickness and death are here to mar our happiness, and cut off our lives. In the midst of this sad state of things God remembers mercy. The light of his promises illumines our dark way. Death does not put us to sleep eternally. The things that God has revealed by his Spirit are the things which the profoundest wisdom of this world could not reveal. It was left for Paul and Isaiah, John and Daniel, and such like inspired men to lay a firm basis of hope, to give us the most tangible realities on which to fix the eye of faith, and not the ethereal vagaries and fancies of Socrates and Plato. As man was in the beginning placed on the earth and everything about him adapted to his needs, to minister to his enjoyment and to develop his faculties how presumptuous it is on the part of human wisdom to fancy some other as the place of man's future and eternal abode! Every reasonable mind will say, if this earth is put back in its primal condition; if obedient man may be allotted a place on it as lovely as the first paradise there can be no reasonable ground of hope of a better place. Had God left us with but the one promise, eternal life, we might reasonably conclude that this earth, which had been the appointed dwelling place of man in the beginning, would be his future eternal abode. But God in his wisdom has seen fit to give us a more abundant revelation of his purposes, having assured us in repeated promises of the fact that our future home will be here and not elsewhere—not "in worlds on high," as the poets have sung nor in that other place, if place it may be called that the poet's more daring sweep of fancy has described to us when he wrote,

"Beyond the bounds of time and space,
Look forward to that heavenly place."

Turning to the closing pages of this same book that tells the story of that first paradise and of the first ancestors of the human race, we read, "For the former things are passed away." Included among the things, that at this point in the vision, John says "are passed away," are the first heaven and the first earth; language denoting a marvelous change. We know much of the sad history of the present heavens and earth. A share of the bitter experience has fallen to the lot of each generation; and the sum total of all the evil, moral and physical and that which has been directly inflicted as punishment is overwhelming to the finite mind of man. Preceding the statement that the first heaven and the first earth were passed away is the announcement of the prophet "I saw a new heaven and a new earth." Put this with what the occupant of the throne said, "Behold I make all things new." I am quoting from that comforting chapter, the 21st of Revelations. Will the reader please read this chapter and note how many things are said to mark the difference between the old and the new. In the latter God is represented as dwelling with his people and wiping away all tears from their eyes. It is affirmed here: There shall be no more death; neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain. How our minds are wrought into rhapsody in contemplating such a state of things, a condition devoutly to be wished. Death no more and all its sad accompaniments banished from the earth. How different from the present, where death is the common doom of all. Every breeze is burdened with a sigh and every moment bears witness to a death struggle and the last expiring breath. 22nd chapter and 3rd verse reads, "And there shall be no more curse." From the time when the curse was first pronounced on the ground for man's sake, he has been eating of it in sorrow. Thorns and thistles and noxious weeds have disputed man's right to the cultivated field and added immensely to the burden of his toil. I have known the labor of tending a crop doubled by a luxuriant growth of weeds and briars. These tokens of that first fatal fall are conspicuously present whenever man turns the soil with the useful plow. No more curse! No more sorrow and excessive toil. How many of earth's over-burdened children on reading the happy announcement respond, amen. Say what men will in their religious fervor against the Bible promises relating to this earth it will be all right, and in every way adapted to man's higher nature when he becomes transformed by that marvelous power that is to change the body of his humiliation and fashion it like unto Christ's glorious body.

J. L. WINCE.

"He hath sent redemption unto his people: he hath commanded his covenant forever: holy and reverend is his name." This is the language of the Psalmist in view of the "wonderful works" of the Lord, which are "great." Psa. cxi. 2, 4, 9. The Psalms, being the national and religious songs of Israel, are full of expressions of devout reverence for the name of the Most High. Thus sings David, "Sing unto God, sing praises to his name: extol him that rideth upon the heavens by his name JAH, and rejoice before him." Psa. lxviii. 4. Likewise Asaph gives expression to his high veneration for the name of God, "That men may know that thou, whose name alone is JEHOVAH, art the Most High over all the earth." Psa. lxxxiii. 18. These expressions of piety were due to the revelations the Most High had made to those persons concerning his name. Thus we have God speaking to Moses, "I am JEHOVAH: And I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, by (the name of) God Almighty, but by my name JEHOVAH was I not known to them." Ex. vi. 2, 3. This word about the excellency and greatness of the Almighty's name was faithfully passed along among the Israelites from generation to generation, and therefore David, in his day, sings, "I will worship toward thy holy temple, and praise thy name for thy loving kindness and for thy truth: for thou hast magnified thy name above all thy word." Psa. cxxxviii. 2. [The reader will perceive that the reading here given of this verse varies from A. V. However, this is not only borne out by the requirements of the subject, but is also warranted by other translations. The above is strictly conformable to Luther's rendering.]

No wonder, then, that we hear the devout and inspired singer exclaim, "Holy and reverend is his name." Psa. cxi. 9. The term "reverend" here employed is found in no other place in the English Bible, though the Hebrew word from which it was translated, Yare, is of frequent occurrence in the Old Testament, being found 293 times. It will no doubt be interesting to the reader to know what some of the other terms are by which Yare had been translated into English. Here are some of them, "dreadful" 5 times, "fearful" 4 times, "terrible" 30 times, "fear" 234 times. Leeser's rendering of the last clause of Psa. cxi. 9 is, "Holy and to be feared is thy name;" and Luther has it, "Heilig und hehr." "Hehr" is given by the dictionaries as, "awful, sublime." Webster gives the meaning of "reverend" thus: 1. Worthy of reverence; entitled to respect, mingled with fear and affection." From these observations it will be seen that this term as originally understood and employed among the Israelites, was the synonym of respectful veneration for the name of God, mingled with fear.

My object in writing this article is to call attention to the fact that there are many persons in our day whose names are decked with the term "Reverend" as a title. Thus we have the plain "Reverend," then "The Reverend," next "Right Reverend," and "Very Reverend," and finally "Most Reverend;" and "Masters" and "Doctors" of many descriptions. Now since reverend is only one of the terms by which Yare is translated into English, one is led to inquire why the same term in some of its other forms might not serve equally as well, especially since reverend is given only once and other terms hundreds of times? In this way we would have, not only "Reverend A," but also the "Fearful B," the "Terrible C," the "Dreadful D," and the "Sublime E." But who can not see that in this way the step "from the sublime to the ridiculous" would be not very great.

"Reverend" is "a title of respect given to the clergy or ecclesiastics. We style a clergyman reverend."—Webster. For what reason or upon what authority is not stated. The question then is in order, Why is this term applied to preachers? "As a title of respect." Yes, but whence and why this "title of respect?" Are those men "reverend" because they are Christians? If so, why may not all Christians with propriety be styled "reverend?" If this title is used in a professional way because its bearers are preachers, who has authorized this use of it? Was this manner of designating men in vogue in apostolic times? Who ever heard of "Reverend Mr. Paul," or "Reverend Simon Peter?" In those day the proclaimers of the gospel were known by their names and were appreciated for the sterling worth attaching to their character, without high sounding and unauthorized titles to give them dignity. They spoke of each other in terms of respect, as Peter's reference to "our beloved brother Paul" (2 Pet. iii. 15), and Paul's mention of sundry brethren (1 Cor. xv. 6, 7; Gal. i. 18, 19), but neither of them used titles in speaking of those persons. The practice of conferring titles upon men engaged in preaching is unwarranted, having neither precedent nor authority in Scripture. It is a purely human invention which in its effects dishonors God by bestowing honors upon men which he did not intend for them. Were Jesus to return and behold all the flattering titles men assume or bestow upon each other, what would he say? "But all their works they do to be seen of men.....they . . love greetings in the markets, and to be called of men, Rabbi, Rabbi." Matt. xxiii. 5, 7. "How can ye believe, which receive honor one of another, and seek not the honor that cometh from God only?" John v. 44. Would they not be rebuked by Paul, Peter, James, and all the apostles for such useless and meaningless ornamentation of their names? Is not the entire absence of such giving of titles in the primitive Church a rebuke to the modern practice?

If a man is a true Christian, exhibiting the disposition displayed by the Master, he is a living epistle known and read of all men, and hence has no need of bolstering up his profession with a borrowed title. If he is not a Christian, of what service can the "reverend" be? Were it not better in the case of such a pretender he were known as the "Dreadful so-and-so?" If he is a scholar, "a teacher of the Gentiles in faith and verity" (1 Tim. ii. 7), will he not be appreciated by those to whom he ministers? Then why seek to add to his worth by the addition of a title that in no way tends to heighten his respect? If an ignoramus, how ludicrous such a title would be applied to such an one.

Therefore, from whatever standpoint the matter may be considered, a man-made title adds nothing to him who has true merit, and only makes the deficient appear the more awkward and ridiculous. Paul recognized "the grace of God" as the great factor in making him what he was (1 Cor. xv. 10); and it was this that led him to count all things that men might esteem, as "loss for Christ," that by all means he might win Christ, and be found in him, and know him and the power of his resurrection—summing up in the words, "If by any means I might attain unto the resurrection from the dead." Phil. iii. 7-11. To have been counted worthy to hear the gladdening news of the gospel, to be cheered by its promises amid trials, and to be conscious of being under the gentle discipline of God with a view to a crown of incorruptible and unfading glory in the everlasting kingdom of God, and in the mean time being engaged in every possible way, by voice or pen or other means, in the promulgation of this joyful message of life to others,—this is an honor compared with which the flimsy honors bestowed by men sink into utter nothingness.

I will close by subjoining the words of Elihu, "Let me not accept any man's person, neither let me give flattering titles unto men. For I know not to give flattering titles; in doing so my Maker would soon take me away." Job xxxii. 21, 22.

What We Believe and Teach.

"I believed therefore have I spoken." Psa. cxvi. 10.

We believe that God the Father created the heavens and the earth. Heaven for his throne, and the earth for the abode of man, which has never been changed and never will be.

And that he is the giver of every good and perfect gift to man.

That he made man in his own image and put him in the garden of Eden, and gave him a law, telling him if he disobeyed that law he should surely die. But the devil who was a liar from the beginning, made the man and his wife to believe they would not die, so they disobeyed, and in consequence of that disobedience death has passed upon all the race.

We believe that man in the death state is unconscious or knows nothing. That the dead praise not the Lord; and but for the death, burial and resurrection of Christ, there is no eternal life for man. And as God can not lie he will redeem man (or the righteous) and give him the new earth for an everlasting inheritance. This promise was first given to Eve, Gen. iii. 15, and to Abraham, Gen. xii. 3; and will be fulfilled through Christ and will be literally fulfilled in the coming restitution.

We believe and teach that Christ after his resurrection ascended into heaven and is seated at the right hand of his Father, and that he will return again to the earth, and will raise the dead of all ages, who have been looking for him, and will change the living saints from mortality to immortality and they will all fly up to meet the Lord in the air, who is coming back with all his holy angels with him, to take the kingdom which will then be set up. There will be a great destruction of his enemies, and he will reign over all the earth with power and great glory. Satan will be restrained of his power for a thousand years, or during the Millennial Age.

When Christ sits on the throne of his father David, then the twelve apostles will sit on twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel; and the saints are to reign, some over ten, some over five cities. During this time, and not until then will the world acknowledge him as the world's Ruler. Then will the curse be removed and Eden restored. Then will God's will be done on the earth as in heaven.

The law shall go forth from Zion and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem. Every eye shall see him, and every tongue confess that he is Lord to the glory of God, and at the end of the thousand years he will deliver up the kingdom to his Father that he may be all in all.

then begins. Time will be no more; and in the ages to come God will show the exceeding riches of his grace. He which testifieth these things, saith surely, I come quickly and my reward is with me, to give to every man according as his work shall be. Even so come, Lord Jesus.

Dear friends you see that I have not stopped to give all the proofs of our belief, but they can be found in the Bible by searching.

Brethren, let us have our work well done, so that we may be ready when he comes.

Yours, waiting for the soon coming King.

Married.

Married, at Brother Hugh Barnhill's, Wenatchee, Wash., on the evening of March 22, 1902, Brother Herbert Barnhill and Sister Vinnie Hoffman.

As we greeted Sister Vinnie and Etta, her sister, who accompanied her here, our thoughts flew swiftly back to Plymouth and the other dear ones we had so often met there; each guest of the evening we had met in Plymouth,—Mr. John Moore and wife, sister of Sister Barnhill, Mr. Jo[illegible] Mote and wife, daughter of Brother and Sister Barnhill, Cleo, who has just returned from Plymouth, and Ed[illegible]ard how each face brought its memories of the past. We had watched each one grow from childhood, have rejoiced with them as they gave up the world for Christ, prayed at their family altar, counseled with them, joyed over them; what close ties all this has wrought, and now it is our pleasant privilege to witness this marriage ceremony performed by my husband, before we go from them perhaps forever in this life.

May God grant Brother Herbert and wife to be partakers of the divine nature, and to be true laborers together with God.

The church at Wenatchee will truly have a pleasant addition in Sister Vinnie and Etta, and may his rich blessings rest on all is the prayer of your Sister and well-wisher.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, APRIL 9, 1902.

As it has been finely expressed, "Principle is a passion for truth." And an earlier and homelier writer has said, "The truths we believe in are the pillars of our world."

BRO. T. E. ADAMS informs us that he has a few hundreds more of his little tract "What must I do to be saved," which he will send on request free of charge. His address is Osawkie, Kan.

ONE trait that is common to all of us apparently, has deprived us of many a happy hour,—we are apt to be irritated by opinions opposed to our own, and, instead of testing them, either to reject or be persuaded into them.

WORD has reached us of the death last week of our beloved Sister Elizabeth Shoemaker, at Argos. She was one of the older class in our little circle, faithful and true. We shall expect a notice of the funeral for next week's paper.

RUSKIN says, "There is a wider division of men than that into Christian and Pagan. Before we ask what a man worships, we have to ask whether he worships at all. We beg to differ with this somewhat. We hold that a man must worship something.

IT is not by material benefits that God mostly shows his Parental regard for us, beloved, but through the impartation of his own Spirit,—the ruling principles of his own nature. And we apprehend that the obscure and destitute in whose heart his love is shed richly abroad is more favored of God than the prosperous who are lacking in this divine affinity, or likeness.

IN our judgment, real charity is a pervading tendency in a person,—not a particular affection, nor the warmth of individual attachments. It acts freely and universally, and before personal affections have time to be formed. It does not depend on associations or local connections, or mutual interests. In a word it is heart-work, and is not excited into life, as the passions are by the attractions of some object.

IN our issue of March 19, was a letter by Bro. Wagoner relating to the death of his daughter. Some extra copies were sent to him which failed of delivery, and cannot be duplicated by us as the issue is exhausted. Our Brother and Sister are very desirous of having several copies, and if some who do not care to keep papers after once reading them will kindly mail their paper of March 19 to J. F. Wagoner, Rochester, Ind., they will confer a favor on him and his wife that will be much appreciated.

THE name of Cecil Rhodes is perhaps better known than that of any man of our times. He was born in England on July 5, 1853, and when about to enter college his health gave way, and he went to South Africa on that account. He started without riches or influence, and acquired both by his own will power. He was called the "King of South Africa," and "The Empire Maker." He died suddenly at Cape Town, March 26. His plans in educational lines for worthy young men, to which he left a good part of of his immense fortune, if carried out will be of lasting benefit to the whole world.

Individual Duty

To the church: Is it realized? If not realized, it is not done. If not done, a debt is hanging over us. A most uncomfortable condition, as nearly all can testify,—and the reckoning time is sure to come.

We want to say to every brother and sister in the land that he or she has some duty to perform in relation to God's house, and to the truth that has called them out of the world. No one is expected to do impossible things,—but every one can and must do something. The words of Jesus cannot be misunderstood, so plain are they. He says:—"Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." Again, he says by John, "He that saith I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar." Again he says, "Not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom, but he that doeth the will of my Father." And when to this we add his last words, "Behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give to EVERY MAN as his works shall be," it becomes evident that no one can edge in with the crowd without a personal responsibility. If the church is not doing the work in the world which God requires of it, the cause is easily traced to individual delinquences, and that explains the awards to individual members. What a power for good would the Church of God be in this country if every member of it realized that there was something for every one to do, instead of taking it for granted that the work would be kept a going by the persistent and loving efforts of a few. Can we arouse any from their lethargy by the announcement that the Lord is at hand to come,—and urging them to learn if their names are on his pay-roll?

The Resurrection of Christ.

We cannot properly estimate the position held by the resurrection of Christ in the Christian system if we limit that system to the teaching of the New Testament. He is unquestionably the central figure in the New Testament teaching, but that teaching is the outcome, or enlargement of what had been taught before. The teaching regarding the Anointed, can be traced back through the writings of Moses, the Prophets and the Psalms,—back to Abel,—yea, even to the garden of Eden. There we find its origin, immediately after the fall, in the promise that the seed of the woman would be victorious over the serpent's seed. That seed, next to the deliverance itself, was the theme of subsequent promises; indeed so much so that the divine plan of redemption was bound up with his manifestation.

Throughout the succeeding ages, as the divine plan was gradually unfolded to the sons of men, the manifestation of the Deliverer was eagerly looked for by the eye of faith. "Your father Abraham rejoiced to see my day; and he saw it and was glad." John viii. 46. At last he was manifested. "When the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law." Gal. iv. 4. He was manifested in the last days of the Jewish commonwealth. In those days there was a general expectany of his manifestation. See Luke iii. 15. One old devout servant of God had a strong desire to see the promised Messiah ere he should be gathered to his fathers, and his laudable desire was gratified: "It was revealed to him by the Spirit that he should not see death before he had seen the Lord's Anointed. And he came by the Spirit into the temple; and when the parents brought in the child Jesus, to do for him after the custom of the law, then took he him up in his arms, and blessed God, and said, Lord, now letteat thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy Word; for mine eyes have seen thy salvation, which thou hast prepared before the face of all people, a light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel." Luke ii. 27-32.

But that was only the initiation of the divine purpose through the Anointed. Without the work accomplished in the days of his flesh the purpose would have been incomplete,—a link in the divine chain would have been wanting. He had to be made perfect through suffering. See Heb. ii. 10 and v. 7-9. His life's work was an essential link. There was added another important link—his death. "God spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all." Rom. viii. 32.

But he could not remain in the grave. How could the promised deliverance be effected if the grave were to hold the Deliverer within its grasp for ever? His resurrection was, therefore, another link in the divine chain, one of equal importance to any that had preceded it, or any that may follow after.

Each link has been added in its own place and time. But if the link of the resurrection had not been added the chain would still be far from complete; the woman's Seed would have been laid low by the bruising of his heel, but would have no power to bruise the serpent's head. Sin would be in the world, death would unquestionably reign; and with non-resurrection of the promised seed would disappear the last hope that the great enemy death would be destroyed, and all hope would be buried in his grave. But no, that could not be. God could not suffer his holy one to see corruption. His resurrection was an absolute necessity. It was part of the pre-arranged plan, for had not the prophets foretold not only the sufferings of Christ but also the glory that should follow? No deliverance from the grave, no glory to follow. Luke xxiv. 25-27, also xliv. 47; and Acts xvii. 2, 3. Just see the importance attached to it by the Apostle Paul—a man who saw the Lord after he rose from the dead: "If Christ be not raised your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ perished." 1 Cor. xv. 17, 18. But such an answer is not allowable. Paul never doubted the Lord's resurrection after his eventful journey to Damascus, and his argument in this chapter is so clear and so powerful that it is absolutely incontrovertible. We have also the testimony of other men, who had accompanied the Lord during his public ministry, to whom also he showed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of men forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God." Acts i. 3. Their united testimony was: "This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses." Acts ii. 32.

But over and above the testimony of the men who saw the risen Lord, it is indisputable that his rising from the dead is the natural sequence of preceding events, as to some extent we have already seen. His resurrection was not an after-thought made to fit into the Christian system, but an indispensable part of it; so much so that if the resurrection of Christ be a myth, the whole system falls to the ground, being not of God, but a vain imagination of man. Consequently for the Christian there should be no wavering, no lingering doubt in his mind. The resurrection of Christ is either true or false,—there is no middle ground. God either did or did not raise Christ from the dead. If he did not then the golden chain stretching down the ages, and reaching away beyond our day,—away into that glorious future when sin and death shall be no more, is alas! after all not a golden chain, but a rope of sand. If, however, God did in reality raise his Son from the dead, then the Christian system is divine,—the Bible is true,—the plan it unfolds and which so fully meets the wants of man is of God, and the light that streams from it will yet enlighten the whole world,—the whole earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord. The Apostle Paul gives the resurrection of Christ as an assurance that what remains of the divine purpose will in due time be carried out. To the Athenians he said: "God hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance unto all men in that he hath raised him from the dead." Acts xvii. 31. Remember it was the Creator of all that brought him again from the dead,—and why should it be thought a thing incredible that he should raise the dead. Let us once see his all-powerful hand in the matter and there will be no need to deny or waver. A waverer in regard to the resurrection of Christ loses the assurance of future things that God has given. He does not stand upon the same solid rock of truth as he who sees that the resurrection of Christ is another step beyond his life's work and the cross in the carrying out of the divine plan of redemption. The death and resurrection of Christ go hand in hand. Paul says he was "delivered for our offences and was raised again for our justification." Rom. iv. 25.

Where is there room for justification if men deny, or even doubt, that God raised up his Son Jesus from the dead? Without faith it is impossible to please God, for he that cometh to God must believe that he is a rewarder of them that seek after him." Heb. xi. 6.

Happily we have abundant evidence in Scriptures of truth that Christ is risen; we trust the living Word,—and we take every announcement that the Lord has indeed been raised as infallible evidence that God has accepted him, and that a way of deliverance has been opened up from sin and death. Thus in every way we look at it the resurrection of Christ is of supreme importance to all who claim to be his followers. And if any of our readers are cherishing a hope that a resurrection from the dead is not necessary to the realization of, we urge them without delay to examine well the foundation of it, before it be too late."

Gross Darkness shall Cover the People.

There is no escape from the conclusion that the leaders of the "Christian world" as it is called, are altogether in the dark as to the true meaning of the Bible and its true bearing upon society at large. They have so occupied themselves with the dreams of disembodied glory, that, as a rule, they are in no frame of mind for addressing themselves to these sober realities of the divine purpose. A purpose that has absolutely nothing in common with the ghastly gospel of the pulpits. The salvation which is in Christ Jesus with eternal glory is a thing that has wholly to do with the earth and man upon it. Where sin entered grace has already abounded; but this is not all; for where grace has abounded life and incorruptible existence shall at last prevail over all; in the absence of sin, death and every form of curse that now clings to human affairs upon earth. The Creator's decree is irrevocable,—"he will not turn from it," as says David, "of the fruit of thy body will I set upon thy throne," "and as truly as I live saith Jehovah, the whole earth shall be filled with my glory." The books in the Bible are just so many pillars in the same temple, so many stars in the same firmament, so many links in the same chain, so many rounds in the same ladder, or so many chapters in the same book. That is, while there is almost infinite diversity of detail, a unity of purpose pervades the whole, but as it was with the Jewish Rabbis in the days of Christ, so it is now with the Gentile "literemds"—"they have taken away the key of knowledge," and so men least perceive the truth, where it most abounds; and least discern the governing purpose of God where it asserts itself the loudest, and the most frequently. This class Jesus further describes as "blind guides," effecting a work in behalf of both the people and themselves which he pictures as a joint fall into the ditch." Such is not less the position of things in our day. The people having itching ears, have as Paul predicted they would, heaped to themselves legions of ear-tickling teachers, who, instead of instructing them in the true state of human affairs from the divine point of view, and the true purpose of God upon earth as revealed in the Scriptures, have occupied their attention with ceaseless rounds of apologies, in exact fulfilment of the apostle's words "They shall turn away their ears from the truth and shall be turned unto fables."

Report of Work.

On Feb. 21st, our faithful young Brother, Oscar Tethero started from Waterville with us and three others belonging to the Church, for Wenatchee, to begin meetings there in their cozy, new church. Meeting began the same evening with a good attendance which increased with every evening.

The brethren here are of that type who started in the gospel work to make a business of it, realizing it takes constant, steady toil, with watching and prayer to make a success of it. With this kind of members they have built, finished and furnished without the help of outsiders, a cozy, roomy church building, and when it was dedicated to the worship of God, no debt hung over it. Brother Harry Patterson's liberality is a noticable feature here.

Brother Mills, of South Dakota moved here last spring and immediately set to work to do his share in carrying the burden. Thanks to his generosity, a good bell rings out the "glad tidings" to the Valley believers. There is quite a history connected with this bell. Brother Mills first bought it through Brother Warner of Rensselaer, Ind., and used it in Goodland, Ind. It was then moved from Goodland to Andover, S. D., placed in a hall built for gospel work there, then as the work had gone down there he loaded it with his household goods and brought it here. It is a fine toned bell, and no wonder, it has been in practice many years in many climes, and grows sweeter and clearer with age. May it long call God's worshipers together. The brethren here have passed through great trials this last year, and have realized with the apostles, "It is through much tribulation they must enter the kingdom." They have trusted the Most High, and we believe it has been the means of strengthening them in the truths of the gospel of the kingdom.

There were twenty-five sermons preached in this series of meetings, and ten dear souls baptized into the blessed Christ.

Several believers came down from Waterville, some staying all through the meetings.

Many were the inducements held out for us to remain here a year, and it would have been a great pleasure to us to have done so, for while we might have helped them, they cannot realize how much encouragement it is to us to be working with such an earnest, prayerful, spirit-filled people.

But oh, the harvest is so great, the laborers so few. We must try to preach the gospel in other cities and towns also, where people little realize the worth or meaning of the words, "I am the resurrection and the life" believing they already have that life, thereby robbing Christ of the very honor he comes the second time to bestow upon the true Christian, even immortality.

From this place we went to Old Mission, ten miles away, had good congregations and fine interest, spoke there twelve times. To many here the gospel was as a new thought, as though it had never existed, and we left them, studying, searching whether these things be so. How they begged us to stay another week, and we felt almost condemned in leaving them, but we had written the Scholls brethren when they should meet us at the train, twenty miles away from the Railroad. Meeting was advertised to begin March 27th and we must go.

We left the searchers in the care of the brethren there to continue the study of the Word with them and we believe yet that several will accept the gospel. One lady said to me "This is the first sensible, reasonable religion I ever heard and I am going to stay by it until I am satisfied and then,"—"What?" I said: "Accept it and be baptized," she answered." Amen! May she do so with God's help, and she will certainly be led into the truth.

What practical demonstrations of real love for the truth we have witnessed in the west. When we went from Wenatchee to Mission, Bros. Perrine, and Titchnell, Sisters Patterson and daughter Myrtle, with Sister Lake, went with us to help in the singing. Sisters Phillips, Perrine, and several others came before the week closed, each coming to help. Brother Oscar Tethero with five others came from Waterville, 25 miles from Wenatchee Saturday expecting meetings over Sunday; but the schools and churches were closed on account of diptheria and they drove on over the mountains to Mission, ten miles further to attend just one meeting, and many of our eastern brethren cannot ride 10 or 15 miles once a year to attend conference, with a good gravel road most of the way. I wish you could take one ride over these mountain roads, and then you could realize what it means when I tell you of these western brethren. Our dear Brother and Sister Warner came many dark nights to meeting, ten miles, over roads that in daylight made one tremble to ride over, growing dizzy looking down at the swift-running Wenatchee river, many feet below us, we instinctively lean toward the mountains, wondering if the hack will stay in the narrow road where there is not two feet margin between the wheel and the, to us, very dangerous edge. The driver assured us it was safe, but we thought when we came to what the Elder called, the hair-pins, in the steep banks, we had a little rather ride on level roads.

These brethren will simply not let anything get in the way of their attending meetings. Brother Allie Corbaley and wife came to Wenatchee from Waterville, and spent over a week helping in the meetings—visiting at houses and with his quiet, patient argument convinced many of their wrong position. He is just trying to finish a new house, but they both considered the coming house of many mansions more glorious than any earthly house could be, and left it for awhile to help in the gospel work here. Sister Phebe Titchnell rode horse-back 85 miles over Badger mountains, crossing the Columbia river on ferry to attend meeting over Sunday. She started alone but overtook some ranchers driving a band of wild horses, they needed a leader, and she was capable for the task, which is not an easy one, and not always without danger down these mountain steeps; but to a brave western girl it is nothing; she came on ahead and led the band to its destination, and then sped on alone. What would we think, to undertake such a trip for one day of meeting? God will reward according to our works. O that all everywhere would awaken to the fact of their responsibility, and that when the King comes the opportunities of now will end.

But I must stop. The dear home with our beloved Brother and Sister Mills of Wenatchee must be left behind with each loved face so firmly fixed in our minds; for the gospel must be preached in other places also, so on Tuesday, March 25th we bid them all good-by, and started for Scholls, Oregon.

M. A. WOODWARD.

Work in Illinois.

From Oregon, Ill., I went to Atkinson, where I have some relatives. The gospel of life and the kingdom of God, as taught in the Scriptures, had never been preached there. After much trouble visiting different trustees, the preacher and neighbors, at last I got the use of a house that used to be a Baptist church, but now only used on funeral occasions. I talked for five nights to them, and it was entirely new to them. I thought that they had enough to digest for awhile. A number showed interest, and sanctioned verbally what I had preached and talked to them privately.

I then went to Clark Co. I have just begun a meeting at Moriah, in a log church building. The nights are dark and roads have been bad, yet 50 or 60 were present. I expect a big meeting here and pray God for some visible fruitage. We have a few good faithful brethren and sisters here. Bro. Z. E. Brant is the best advertizer of a meeting we have ever met. He telephones it all around, and invites every one he sees and tells them to invite others. If there was one such brother every where we hold meetings we would reach more with the truth, and near neighbors would not have to say when meetings close that they did not know of it till it closed. I always try to announce my meetings as widely as possible, but brethren where we go know better than we as to who might attend meeting. If any brethren near here read this who would like a meeting write us at Moriah, Clark Co., Ill. We will report when we close this meeting. Brethren and sisters, pray for us and keep your own light shining. Yours watching.

Watch.

While it is true that we do not know the day, nor the hour, when our Lord shall come, we do know the duty, and that is to watch.

In Mark xiii. 37 it is written: "And what I say unto you I say unto all, Watch." Not only did he command his early disciples to watch, but he commands us to watch also.

The reason is, "take ye heed, watch and pray: for ye know not when the time is." Mark xiii. 33.

It is important that we obey "lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping." Mark xiii. 36.

But how shall we watch? What shall we do? Listen: "Take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares." Luke xxi. 34.

He warns us not to forget that he will come and punish the unfaithful and reward the faithful. He warns us not to allow ourselves to be drawn into the fashions and manners of the world.

It is said that gardeners sometimes, when they would bring a rose to richer flowering, deprive it for a season of light and moisture. Silent and dark it stands, dropping one fading leaf after another, and seemingly going down patiently to death. But when every leaf is dropped, and the plant stripped to the utmost, a new life is even then working in the buds, from which shall spring a tender foliage and a brighter wealth of flowers. So, often, in celestial gardening, every leaf of earthly joy must drop before a new and divine bloom visits the soul. —Harriet Beecher Stowe.

It is comparatively easy to do what we have to do and go where we have to go, but the supreme test of a man is not so much in the discharge of obligatory as of voluntary and self appointed tasks. A man is not half a man who does not do some things with his teeth clenched and his face set like a flint.—Charles Frederick Goss.

Poetry.

Mother's Hope Slain.

What dead! That hope that once aspired to heavenly things,
Dethroned within the bosom that gave it birth?
Awaiting in dark robes the opening earth
To grant the boon of burial, it folds its wings,
And slopes its weary flight toward death.

'Twas once a joy supreme, this state of motherhood.
To lay upon life's threshold dearly bought
Through pain and fear and every anxious thought,
Our sons: to bend to nature's law and feel that God
Approved, and men and angels cared.

The mother's hope looks forth and song's melodious power,
Enshrines itself in secret bower and waits.
While joyous imagery dispels and dissipates
The future gloom, and angel hands bestow the dower,
As she has prayed, upon the unborn child.

Her lips, in pride, are framed to speak the word.
Hark! From her couch where soul and body riven
With pain, she cries, "Behold, a man-child given,"
That cry, O men, by God and angels heard
Remains the only hope of all the future worlds.

Ah, mother fond, thy fanciful hopes are slain.
Come now, and if thou canst for bitter tears,
Look out upon your path, where yet in tender years,
Thy pride, fruition of thy deathlike pain,
Thrust through, goes reeling on toward death.

Beside the way you sought with flowers to strew,
Dark demons lurked in shades by you unseen.
They met him, marked him, and O God, how mean,
With hand as red as hell they stabbed him through,
And hurled his drunken form beside the way.

Not alone, O once proud mother dost thou weep.
Behold, beside thee, on their knees thy kind,
Bend low o'er others dear to them and blind.
The myrtle of dead hopes on brows where demons sleep,
Glad men and devils look and laugh the while.

Who dared the wrath of God with this atrocious deed?
Where now hides he? The murderous fiend
Whose hand all stained and yet from justice screened
Firm grips his bloody blade while mothers plead,
Impenitent remains and fearless, unconfessed.

He hides not! Lo, at large he roams unhunted,
Flies o'er his head the flag, cries "Law," and "Liberty."
Its stars and stripes belauded, while stealthily
From out its silken folds of peace his haunted
Hand puts forth and strikes, and strikes us dead.

So dies the world while dreaming o'er its drink,
And choirs chant softly, parsons pray and preach
Their lips profane, the very words of God im peach.
With song and prayer we ease them o'er the brink,
Where speaks the law—"Damned!" "Drunken!" "Disinherited!"

The Soul of Man.

[A Sister in Plevna, Ind. writes asking "What is the soul?" saying she has been requested by one who is much interested to have this subject discussed in THE RESTITUTION. We have received from Stanley E. Bowdle of Cincinnati, O. some clippings from a daily paper of that city, which takes up this question, giving his opening of the subject, then a reply, and again his answer to his critic. We give herewith the three letters, and trust they will aid our Sister to enlighten her friend.—ED.]

THE MOST TROUBLESOME THING IN THE WORLD—THE SOUL.

"Vanity of vanities," saith the preacher, "all is vanity." It is even so. Vanity is the universal malaria of the race. The fevered pulse of profanity and the bilious eye of greed are but its symptoms.

In nothing is man more vain than in his conception of himself. In these conceptions vanity has had its perfect work. From the hour that man first saw himself his work has been to demonstrate that he is as eternal as his Creator. To be sure, the thing was not without difficulty, but the difficulties retired in the presence of swelling vanity. The aboriginal man was perplexed about himself. He saw the body perish, and he knew nothing but the body, and his incipient vanity was troubled a bit. But growing vanity soon unctuously informed him that the essential man was a ghostly spirit, etc. And man smiled as he beheld his immortal self, a self as eternal as his Maker.

Accoutred with this peacock feather given him by vanity, man has strutted up and down, lo, these six thousand years, and is still strutting.

Naturally curious, man has wanted to see the proof of this thing in print, and, accordingly, he called in the wise men, and astrologers, and even the theologians; and has requested them to write the proof thereof. And they have valiantly obeyed, and the shelves groan with their productions. It is not surprising, then, to find man impressing the Bible itself into the service of this vain notion. His vanity could not tolerate a difference of opinion between Jehovah and himself. With alithe and jaunty spirit, man now conceives the Bible as the chief fortification of this notion—a notion that finds no countenance in its pages. But with the coming of the Bible the soul, as conceived by man, has caused a world of trouble. Having created the soul, man must house it; but how and where? Some theologians have rubbed out Elysium in pagan philosophy, and have written in heaven, and have eliminated Tartarus and written hell, and in these place he proposes to house the soul after death. Some have proposed to house good souls only in Elysium and leave the rest to die. And still others have considered it proper to reclaim all souls ultimately in Elysium. And each has been perfectly willing to mutilate the Bible just enough to get his scheme through and no more. The religious bedlam created by this theological nonentity we shall leave for the present to say a word about some of the so-called scientific proof of man's natural immortality.

How astonishingly common is the notion that all science of any respectability unites in a grand testimonial to the truth of natural immortality. The fact is just the reverse. Science is as voiceless as the Sphynx about the soul. Science knows as much about the matter as a Black Foot Indian, says Macaulay.

The reason of this is obvious. Man has no knowledge of an existence prior to this bodily one. He sees his start, a start as humble as the start of any created thing. He sees his growth decay and death, sadly comparable at every point to the same phenomena in all things living. And science draws his cloak closer and is voiceless.

No one thinks of giving an immortal soul to a flea; nor to my horse, that knows indefinitely more than a flea; then, why to my valet, who knows less than my horse?

Thus spoke Voltaire, and science asks the same perplexing question. Oh, but some rhapsodist says, does not the account of man's creation say that man was made in the Image of Jehovah, and is not Jehovah immortal? True, verily, and I believe the account, but this no more proves that man is immortal than that he is omnipotent or omniscient. But of this phase we are not to speak just now.

Bishop Butler, in his famous analogy, spent much time in trying to exact of nature some proof of man's native immortality. But no less a man than Mr. Gladstone, in the last literary effort of his life, published in the North American Review, admits Butler's lamentable failure. The distinguished Bishop thought he had found an argument. It was in the common phenomena observed among those dying of lingering diseases, many of whom seem to grow in keenness of mental and spiritual perception with the body's decay. The good Bishop thought that this afforded the presumption that the total elimination of the body would result in an infinite increase of mental and spiritual life. Mr. Gladstone exposed this argument. He called attention to the fact that as some diseases attack the mental powers first, leaving the bodily powers normal for years, the Bishop's argument might justly the belief that arms and feet might ultimately become immortal.

The past decade saw another master hand at this plow. The late Joseph Cook, the famous preacher, thought that he had compelled nature to answer this everlasting question. Many in this city will remember his lecture, delivered here some eight years ago, entitled "Does death end All." The argument in that lecture was this, very briefly: "The bird with a migratory spirit always has a climate to match it; hence man, with his longing for immortality, must have an immortality to match it."

This is the weakest argument in words on this subject. In the first place, but few men ever think of immortality, and, certainly, but few men long for it. To the majority of men who run and don't read the matter of immortality occupies about as strong a relation to their intellectual lives as does the Darwinian theory. They simply are not interested in the subject. (Try to talk to your friend beside you in a street car and see). Then, again, even in the case of the bird with the migratory spirit, there is no certainty that it will reach the climate adapted to it. Accidents, storms, an unfavorable season, often leave whole flocks of birds in death en route. But why take the novel case of the migratory bird? Any appetite or desire will serve as well. Man has an appetite for food, but does this argue that he will secure the food desired? What of the two millions in India's famine district already dead? What of those starving there at this moment? No, the analogies are powerless to help this vain fancy of man's.

Our conclusion then is, that man's desire for immortality no more proves that he has it than the desire for food proves that he will get it. He may perish in sight of both.

Behold, then, science, nature, all, voiceless upon this subject—as silent as the sepulchre. And amid the significant stillness ask yourself, reader, whether Jehovah would have concealed so great a fact from man if it be a fact. Man is mortal, perishing. He is by nature bound whither he came—the dust, nothingness—unless the Power that made him arrest his course.

STANLEY E. BOWDLE.

THE SOUL AND ITS IMMORTALITY.

The greatest interpreter of life and human nature the world has ever known makes his most interesting character say: "For in that sleep what dreams may come." In the Commercial Tribune of December 10, Mr. Stanley E. Bowdle discourses on the soul, and in his concluding paragraph sums up his argument as follows:

Behold, then, science, nature, all voiceless upon this subject—as silent as the sepulchre. And amid this significant stillness ask yourself, reader, whether Jehovah would have concealed so great a fact from man if it be a fact. Man is mortal, perishing. He is by nature bound whither he came—the dust, nothingness—unless the Power that made him arrest his course.

Does Shakespeare agree with Mr. Bowdle?

The last clause of the quotation suggests the possibility that the writer does not intend a blank denial of the immortality of the soul, but is arguing for what is called conditional immortality, dependent upon the personal manifestation of Christ. If this were really his intention, ought not the idea to have been more definitely expressed? The article, as it stands, leaves on the reader's mind an impression of an outright denial of the soul's immortality. Can Mr. Bowdle's argument or any other argument establish such a conclusion?

Up to the year 1492 it would have been safe for any one to deny the existence of a Western Continent. Up to 1800 one might have denied that steam would propel a vessel. In 1819 it was proved that a vessel never could cross the Atlantic without sails; a transatlantic steamer arrived in port while the demonstration was in progress. Up to 1870 it might have been reasonably denied that men would ever be able to talk to each other at a distance of hundreds of miles. Up to 1890 few would have disputed that it was forever impossible that a photograph should be taken through wood, flesh or other opaque substance. Were any of these conclusions sustained by the event? If Mr. Bowdle's argument established anything, did it not rather establish the verdict "Not proved?"

In the universe about us there are two supreme mysteries—the one is God, the other man. For deity Herbert Spencer substituted the Unknowable. But as his philosophy advances he cannot avoid attributing to the knowable, and he feels constrained to spell the word with a capital initial. Mr. Matthew Arnold advances beyond Mr. Spencer to the conception of "something not ourselves that makes for righteousness." Doubtless Mr. Arnold would have accepted the addition that this something possesses intelligence and will, as well as moral character. Prof. Huxley was the prince of agnostics. He introduced the word agnostic into the language. Mr. Huxley's principle was that he would accept nothing which could not be conclusively proved. He, therefore, declared that of deity he knew nothing, although he recognized a moral order in the universe, was a friend and admirer of the Bible and was very far from being a scornful skeptic. The movement of his mind as to this matter is disclosed in the lines which were placed on his tomb by his own request. They are said to have been written by his wife.

Be not afraid, ye waiting hearts that weep,
For still He giveth His beloved sleep,
And if an endless sleep He wills, so best.

In this quotation is noticeable the use of the capital H, an almost distinct recognition of the being of God, and something akin to reverent submission to his will. Prof. Huxley's position as to the immortality of the soul was not that of denial. He said simply that he had no evidence of it. But the noticeable fact in regard to the two agnostics, Huxley and Spencer, is their inability to resist the fascination of the great theme, or to avoid terms which indicated more or less faith in the being of God.

Man is the second great mystery. What is his life? What is his consciousness, and how comes it? What is the soul? The teaching that he is not immortal seems to imply that the soul is material, or, at least, is the product of material conditions; that, instead of being, as Plato contended, a personal identity, that evokes the music from an instrument, it is only a harmony produced within the instrument itself, and disappearing with it, as Plato's opponents contended. Strikingly enough, in a recent volume whose title is, "The Nineteenth Century," Oliver Lodge, writing upon physics, speaks thus:

"Undoubtedly the philosophic attitude of the leading physicists at the close of the century is devout. The outlook appears to them no barren wilderness of materialistic atheism, but a land of promise, energized and suffused by a divinely imminent and all-inclusive spirit. The unspoken thoughts of the leaders of science have become not less but more essentially religious."

Mr. Lodge does not write from the standpoint of one who pleads in the interest of Christianity, but as a physicist only. Few scientists will question that man is a mystery, almost as insoluble as Deity, and that his most striking characteristics are beyond their power of explanation. Darwin avowed that the mortal nature of man is the most difficult to account for. In quoting Voltaire's flippant utterance about the immortality of a flea, his horse and his valet, does Mr. Bowdle really believe that the Frenchman's horse knew more than his valet, and, therefore, was equally entitled to immortality? If this were true, why did Voltaire employ such a fool as his valet?

To pronounce that a being so wonderfully constituted as man is destined to utter extinction is to go entirely beyond the record. The utmost that can be reasonably asserted is a doubt. According to the evolutionary theory, creation has advanced to the point at which man appears, and has put them onward in the progress of civilization. To what end? Thus far there has been an evolutionary purpose of which, as for this world, man is the climax. If now he is to vanish from existence, if death ends all, we have the most incomprehensible anticlimax. Has evolution brought its products up to this point only to blot their supreme result out of existence? Must we write over the creation Mr. Webster's "miserable legend:" "What is all this worth?"

Is man shut in this little cave and dome of the world with nothing beyond? As Carlyle expresses it, "This dog cage of an earth, who are thou that sittest whining within it?" If it be so, then evolution with man as its climax ends in bathos. "Naught is everything and everything is naught."

Mr Bowdle asks whether Jehovah would have concealed from man so great a fact as immortality, if it be a fact. Has he concealed it? Has he not made an impression upon the mind and heart of man the world over in all ages that the soul lasts beyond death? Du Chaillu tells us of the inhabitants of western equatorial Africa that they believe that the spirits of the dead linger about their burial place for a time and then go they know not where. When a strong personality as Julius Cæsar went out the Romans could not believe that he was extinguished. They enthroned him among the gods. He was Divus Cæsar. Whence comes the impression of immortality in all times and races unless it be from the Creator? If some other testimony is needed it must be given by the voice of a divinely accredited man. Such a voice has come to us through Jesus Christ as well as through his apostles. The Christian world has always believed in the resurrection of Jesus. The rationalist historian, Hase, acknowledged that without this fact it is impossible to explain the existence of the church. Theodore Parker in his youth heard a Christian minister from the pulpit allege that all natural proofs of the immortality of the soul are inadequate, and that the doctrine rests on the resurrection of Jesus. Mr. Parker rejected this explanation, admitted the inadequacy of the natural proofs, but claimed throughout his remarkable ministry that immortality is known by intuition, by immediate insight. Parker was rejected by his Unitarian brethren, who still maintained the miraculous element in the life of Christ.

The Christian teaching that the soul is immortal does not stand alone. It is a part of a great system of doctrine, the being of God, the sonship of Christ, the revelation of truth to man through Christ, the immense dignity of human nature through its sonship to God, the immortality of the soul as an essential element in this order of revelation. The Christian world does not believe the immortality of the soul on the ground that it is proved by science; it believes it on the testimony of the Scriptures, and supremely on that of the Lord Jesus Christ. Intelligent men of science plainly acknowledge that science establishes nothing against the immortality of the soul, and the present outlook of science is confessedly toward a spiritual interpretation of the universe.

A. J. SAGE.

"AND HE GIVETH UNTO THEM ETERNAL LIFE."

In an article, as excellent as error would allow, Mr. A. J. Sage asks me a question relative to immortality, and then proceeds to comment upon the absurdity of my probable answer to it. Waiving the right to smile at this novel method, I proceed at once to the task.

At the outset, let me assure my critic that his effort to establish a difference of religious opinion between Shakespeare and myself was thoroughly enjoyed. If so intended, it was excellent humor. If not so intended, permit me to say that, in the matter of religious knowledge, I do not recognize Shakespeare as an authority. To learn that my religious beliefs were not shared by Shakespeare does not disturb me; and I take it that Mr. Sage would not be disturbed to learn that his views were opposed to the teachings of Renan or Voltaire.

The man who determines to follow the great men of this world in matters of religious belief must needs have a sorry time of it. To formulate religious beliefs with equal fidelity to Shakespeare, Heine, Voltaire and Philips Brooks is an acrobatic feat I have never attempted. Shakespeare is, therefore, totally irrelevant to this controversy.

The difference between Mr. Sage and the Bible is very simple. He believes that every man born into the world is equipped with a shadowy, never-dying spirit, which at death escapes from the body and goes to a place or condition of felicity, if good; or to a place or condition of misery, if bad. That in that state, condition or place, it lives forever, with all the faculties of earthly life quickened. With this belief the Bible has no sympathy. With this soul or spirit, as perceived by Mr. Sage, the Bible is profoundly unacquainted. Of a naturally, immortal, never-dying man, soul or spirit the Bible knows nothing whatever. And this notion of Mr. Sage is a pagan graft. It is the result of that great compromise between Christianity and paganism which took place in the early centuries, and from which religion has suffered untold disasters. Let not these utterances disturb you, my reader—save only to make you investigate. Remember that a great church in America is revising its creed.

This popular notion concerning the soul makes the armies of Xerxes as fully alive today as when their presence profaned Greece. The Goths and Visgoths, the barbaric hordes of Tartars and the countless millions of benighted blacks of Africa are today as thoroughly existent as is God. And the "still lapse of ages" no more affects their immortality than it does Jehovah's. Is this the doctrine of the Bible? It is not. Listen to the simple account of man's creation. "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground; and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul."

How utterly absent from this account is any suggestion of man's immortality. "Man became a living soul"—observe this, reader. It does not state that the soul, holding the thinking powers within itself, was placed in the dust-formed man. According to this inspired account the dust was just as necessary to make the thinking sentient man as was the breath. And this is just what Mr. Sage would deny. The body is a clog to the soul, according to modern theology. Following up this narrative, let the reader observe what Jehovah said to Adam after he had sinned: "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return."

The reflecting reader will see in this a terrific argument against [illegible] theology. He will see in it [illegible] ing nature, his fearful mortal[ity] will see in it that he is [illegible] bound by nature. It was [illegible] death that St. Paul had in mi[nd] he said; "As in Adam all die." [illegible] reader, be misled by the ha[sty] saying, "O, this passage refers [to] body." Remember that Jehovah [is] talking to the sinning Adam, and [is] pronouncing judgment on the ent[ire] man.

The words "soul" and "spirit," [as] used in the Bible, need give the un[bi]ased student no trouble. With the aid of a lexicon, and often by looking into the revised version alone, the meaning of these words will be seen. They stand for the person, the life, the breath. These words are never used to show man's pre-eminence in creation. In this particular he has no pre-eminence whatever. Solomon says: "As the one dieth, so dieth the other, yea, they have all one breath, so that a man hath no pre-eminence over the beast: for all is vanity: all go into one place; all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again."

Job says, speaking of man: "He fleeth also as a shadow and continueth not."

And St. James says: "For what is your life? It is even a vapor that appeareth for a little while and then vanisheth away."

Speaking of death, the inspired writers show themselves profoundly unacquainted with the doctrine due to man's vanity: "The living know that they shall die, but the dead know not anything," says Solomon.

The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down unto silence, says the Psalmist; and,

In death there is no remembrance of thee; in the grave who shall give thee thanks?

Whatsoever thine hand findeth to do, do it with thy might, for there is neither knowledge, wisdom nor device in the grave whither thou goest.

These passages could be indefinitely multiplied. Indeed, so great is their number that no less a man than Dr. Abbott recently said that the Old Testament writers lived at a time when the hope of immortality was not guaranteed to the human race. Singular, indeed, is this! Can it be that David and Isaiah and Solomon did not know of a future life? True it is that they did not know of the pagan immortality which has been grafted on the Christian system, but they did know of immortality as the gift of God through a resurrection from the dead.

O that thou wouldst hide me in the grave till thy wrath be past.

Though worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God, said Job.

I shall be satisfied when I awake in thy likeness, sang David.

Many that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, said Daniel.

Coming to the New Testament, we find that one short and tremendous sentence embodies the promise of our Lord to his followers: "And I will raise him up at the last day." At the tomb of Lazarus the comfort of modern pulpitology is significantly lacking. "Thy brother shall rise again" was all our Lord could say, amid his tears. And St. Paul closes the glorious symphony of the Bible with the grandest oratorical finale in literature: "When this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, death is swallowed up in victory."

Grand beyond words is the reward offered by the Bible to those whose transgressions are forgiven and whose sins are covered"—life eternal, by resurrection from the dead. Absurd beyond expression is the imaginary felicity in Elysium, of disembodied spirits, offered by the paganized religions of this crazy world.

With kindest regards for Mr. Sage, and with the hope that one day I may see him clothed and in his right mind on this subject, this article is concluded.

Go Ye.

Our ever-living Savior passed away from earthly ayes, nded forth this great commandment from the eager, opening skies, ye, go ye, teach all nations, boldly teach them and baptize."

So they went, those men anointed with a power from on high;
So they went to sneers and hanger, to the mob's vindictive cry;
Went to suffer racking tortures and triumphantly to die.

All their life was but one purpose, that the life of Christ should be Spread abroad among earth's millions, as the waters fill the sea.
So the heroes died, and, dying, left their task for you and me.

Reconciliation.

The Scriptures represent man at the present time as being in an unreconciled or alienated state or condition toward God, his Creator. Paul said to the Collossian brethren that they were sometimes alienated and enemies in their minds by wicked works.

Again, he said: "For all have sinned and come short of the glory of God." But, man is not left in this condition to perish without hope. Paul says: "We are freely justified by God's grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, whom he has set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past through the forbearance of God, that he might be just and the justifier of him who believes in Jesus." Again, said Paul: "Ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus; for as many of you as were baptized into Christ have put on Christ." Again he says: "In Christ Jesus, those who were afar off are made nigh By the blood of Christ." Again he says: "We have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace." Again he says: "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature, old things are passed away; behold all things are become new, and all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ, for he says that God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself and that he made him who knew no sin to be a sin-offering for us that we might be made the righteousness of God in him." See 2 Cor. v. 13-21. "He was delivered for our offences and was raised again for our justification; for if when we were enemies we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son, much more being reconciled we shall be saved by his life." See Rom. v.

Paul also in 1 Cor. xv. shows the important position that the death and resurrection of Christ occupies in the gospel of the grace of God. He said he "delivered to them first of all that which he received himself, how that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures, was buried and rose again the third day according to the Scriptures." Also in the first discourse preached by the apostles after the Savior gave them the commission to go into all the world to preach the gospel to every creature, on that important occasion Peter represents Jesus as a Man approved of God, by the miracles which he performed whilst amongst them. He was also delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God and was taken by his hearers and crucified and slain, but God raised him up again. It was not possible for death to have dominion over him, because he was the one that God had promised to take the throne of his Father David to reign over the house of Jacob forever. But, says Peter, "God has exalted him to his right hand as Lord and Christ, there to remain till his enemies be made his footstool," after which he is coming in power and great glory to reign as King of kings and Lord of lords. When the audience on that occasion believed Peter's preaching they enquired what they should do? In reply he told them to "repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit, for the promise is unto you and to your children and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." We are told that "they who gladly received his Word were baptized and continued steadfast in the apostle's doctrine, in fellowship, in breaking bread and in prayers."

We learn from observation and experience, in harmony with the Scriptures, that man is both morally and physically unqualified to inherit the kingdom of God.

Man at first was made upright but sin has entered the world and death by sin. Man has been turned out of his home, shut away from the tree of life to return again to the ground from whence he was taken, and unless there had been a plan of redemption provided he would have perished forever. "But God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life."

Jesus said to his disciples, "Because I live you shall live also." "I am he that liveth and was dead and am alive forevermore, and have the keys of death and the grave. The hour is coming when all that are in the graves shall come forth. They that have done good to the resurrection of life and they that have done evil to the resurrection of condemnation." O that we may labor to enter into that rest that is promised to those who follow the Savior. Those to whom he will say, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom." "These are those who have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." From their eyes all tears will be forever wiped away. May this be our happy lot.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Can a Perfect Creator Do Imperfect Work?

Editor Restitution:

Will some one of the writers for THE RESTITUTION (W. H. Wilson preferred) please answer the following question: Can a perfect being make an imperfect creation?

Yours in the faith.
MRS. MOMPER.

ANSWER.

I am aware that the above question is one over which honest minded sceptics stumble, and should receive careful attention. I am conscious also of other points to which they raise objection which are not strictly covered by the question, and yet is related to it, and that is, to learn how to determine when the Supreme Being is mentioned in Holy Scripture. It is naturally supposed by many that whenever we find the word "God" in the Scriptures that it means the eternal Father, but it does not. Not understanding this, many may find what they call self-contradictions, and also acts which would not be consistent to apply to the perfect Being we call God. The word "God" is not the name of the great Eternal, which you will learn before I conclude this article.

As a sample as to where the word "God" is used, which does not apply to the Supreme Being, see Psa. xcvii. 7: "Worship him all ye gods." The Hebrew word for "gods" is elohim. Paul, in Hebrews applies this to angels, when he says: "Let all the angels of God worship him." Hence these "gods" (elohim) were angels. Again, see Exod. iii. 6, God appeared to Moses in the burning bush, and said: "I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. And Moses hide his face; for he was afraid to look upon God." Now who was this God which appeared in the burning bush, and spoke to Moses? See verse 2: "And the angel (elohim) of the Lord (Yahweh—the Supreme Being) appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush." Hence, it was the angel of this Eternal Father which appeared and spoke to him, and not the Supreme Being himself. This is fully confirmed in Acts vii. 38.

See Gen. xxxii. 30, Jacob says: "I have seen God face to face." Jesus says: "No man hath seen God at any time." Here are two instances where the word "God" appears, which is applicable to two persons. Were it not so it would be a direct contradiction. Hosea xii. 4, refers to this event, and says: "Yea, he had power over the ANGEL (the elohim of Yahweh) and prevailed." We could hardly expect Jacob to have a wrestling match with Supreme Being. These examples could be multiplied, but the above will be sufficient to illustrate my point.

The Supreme Being has a name which is his alone, and is never applied to any other. See Exod. vi. 3: "And God spake unto Moses, and said unto him, I am the Lord. And I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob by the name of God Almighty, but by my name JEHOVAH was I not known to them." This name "God Almighty" in the original is AIL Shaddai, and means the Strength of the Mighty Ones, but that was not his name. "By my name JEHOVAH (YAHWEH) was I not known unto them."

With regard to this name "Jehovah," a well known writer says, the name "Jehovah according to Masoretic pointing, was invented 500 years after the time of Jesus. But all philologists and theologians, are now agreed that Jehovah is a spurious pronunciation. It was devised by

VOLUME LI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, APRIL 16, 1902. NUMBER 15.

Jewish superstition, which did not permit an Israelite to pronounce this sacred name correctly. All critics, however, are now agreed that the true pronunciation of the word is YAHWEH which they predicate on the fact of the word in Exodus vi. 2, 3, being the old form of the third person, future tense. YAH is the same in contracted form, and is used of the Deity upwards of fifty times; one of which exhorts us to "extol him by his name YAH."

With regard to the use of the words Lord and God in our common Version, "these words do not convey the idea of the Spirit in the use of terms.

LORD is of Saxon origin, and signifies monarch, ruler, governor, etc. it fails to represent the meaning of Ail, Eloah, Elohim, Shaddai, and Yehowah.

GOD, in Saxon, signifies good, a meaning which cannot possibly be extracted from any of the names recited above. God is indeed good, but the word is not a translation of any of the words before us, and when used in their stead, leaves the mind in the dark concerning the things which they were intended to convey."

Prof. Young in his Analytical, says: "The incommunicable name of the God of Israel, in the Common Version of the English Bible, is generally, though improperly translated by THE LORD."

These words are applied to many others besides the Eternal. "As there be gods many and lords many." 1 Cor. viii 5. "Is it not written in your law, I said ye are gods. He called them gods unto whom the Word of God came." John x. 34, 34.

But there is only one Supreme Being known by the name YAHWEH, it is his name alone, and has never been applied to any other. See Psa. lxxxiii. 18: "That men may know that thou, whose name ALONE is JEHOVAH (YAHWEH), art the most high over all the earth." Bear these things in mind and I will now deal specially with the QUESTION AS ABOVE PROPOUNDED.

Bear in mind also that the creation of man was not alone the work of Yahweh. See Gen. i. 26: "Let us make man in our image, after our likeness, etc." Yahweh commanded, and the Elohim did his behests. The work of creation as far as it had then progressed, was pronounced "good," that is, it was perfect upon the plane upon which it was projected, but destined to reach an absolute perfection, when the work of creation shall be completed, which creation is still in progress, and when finished, will be crowned with a perfection which the Supreme Being alone can produce.

Many fault the work of the Creator because he did not make man an automaton, a mere senseless machine, capable of performing only the routine work of a machine. That was very far from the purpose of Yahweh in the creation of man. He was formed as an independent free-will agent with power of choice either for good or evil. From the very beginning it has been the purpose of the Great Eternal to people this earth with a race of absolutely perfect people, which perfection must be attained by power of an individual choice on the basis of faith, character, and obedience; which purpose is as sure of accomplishment, as "that Yahweh liveth." Then shall the whole earth be filled with the glory of Yahweh."

The first man Adam, with power of choice, was put on trial, that he may become the head of a perfect race of people, but he sadly failed in making the right choice. Nevertheless the purpose of the Creator must be accomplished through another, and hence the Eternal made this declaration, "The Seed of woman shall bruise the serpent's head." This means that this "Seed" will ultimately exterminate the serpentine power of sin, by inflicting a mortal wound upon the head.

In due time the "Seed" made his appearance, upon the same plane of existence as the first Adam, with power of choice, that he may attain the perfect life, and also become the head of a perfect race of people which shall yet people this earth. Through power of choice, faith and obedience, he merited, and has received the perfect life. "Wherefore God hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name; that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." Phil. ii. 9, 10.

"For it became him for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the Captain of their salvation PERFECT through suffering." Heb. ii. 10. He is as yet the only one of the human family who has been made "PERFECT," but he has "many sons" in training for the same perfection. He is the beginning of the creation. He was not first man made, he failed, and lost his position as the head of creation. A perfect Being must have a perfect creation. Hence Jesus, the "Seed of the woman," has prevailed, and been made "perfect," and constituted the beginning of creation. See Rev. iii. 14: "These things saith the faithful and true witness, the beginning of the creation of God." See Col. i. 18: "Who is the beginning, the first-born from the dead."

He who is now "the beginning of the creation of God," has many brethren in training to take their place as the first fruits of the perfect creation of God. See James i. 18: "Of his own will begat he us with the Word of truth that we should be a kind of firstfruits of his creatures" (creation). This is not the flesh creation, that is not perfect, and counts for nothing in the creation of God. See John i. 12, 13: "As many as received him, to them gave he power (free will choice), to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name; which were not born of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." "If any man be in Christ he is a new creature" (creation).

Speaking of Jesus, Heb. v. 8, 9, "Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered; and being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him."

When was he made "perfect"? See Luke xiii. 22: "I do cures today and tomorrow, and the third day I shall be PERFECTED."

When are the firstfruits perfected? See Heb. xi. 39, 40: "These all having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise; God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect." The firstfruits will be perfected as described in 1 Cor. xv. 52, 53: "The dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruption must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality."

After this, these perfected brethren will be constituted the Elohim of the age to come, in place of the angels, they having at this time become superior to them, and subject to the newly constituted Elohim, who with Jesus, will complete the work of creation, when both the people, (who will submit on the plane of obedience) and the physical creation also will be made perfect. A perfect Being can never be satisfied with anything short of a perfect creation. "As I live, the whole earth shall be filled with the glory of Yahweh."

"I am the Lord (Heb. Yahweh) that is my name—the Lord (Yahweh) of hosts is his name." Isa. lxii. 2.

To judge that the creation of Yahweh is imperfect, is premature judgment, it is passing judgment on his work before it is completed. The creative work is still in progress, and will continue on through the millennial age, when it will culminate in absolute perfection, to the glory and praise of Yahweh, the Creator. A perfect Being never has, never can, or ever will make an imperfect creation. The present state of things is the result of the choice of man, and not the work of the Creator.

Grafted Fruit.

Almost people enjoy good, grafted fruit, I wish to call your attention to nine varieties of beautiful and very desirable grafted fruit of the Holy Spirit. The subject seems to have expanded and become luminous to me while meditating upon it, and I hope you will also meditate upon it, and thereby become nourished and refreshed.

David said, Psa. i. 1, 2, "Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful. But his delight is in the law of the Lord; and in his law doth he meditate day and night." Meditation about things pertaining to the Kingdom of God and the welfare of man, is a very important aid in arriving at the real spirit of the gospel of Christ.

Paul said, Gal. v. 22, 23, "But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law," etc. Whoever faithfully produces all these varieties of fruit will be sure of a glorious reward in the everlasting kingdom of heavenly origin, where peace, love and joy will ever be unlimited, and with which the afflictions of this brief, mortal state are not worthy to be compared. We cannot bear all of this fruit except we have the Spirit of Christ dwelling in us. Rom. viii. 9. Jesus said, John xv. 5, "I am the vine, ye are the branches; he that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit; for without me ye can do nothing." Now comes the idea of grafted fruit. Paul tells us about grafting, in his epistle to the Romans. vi. 16-21. He represents the Jews as branches of the cultivated olive tree, but on account of unbelief, they were broken off, and the Gentiles were taken from the wild olive tree and grafted in, in place of the Jews. The grafts, of course, depend upon the roots of the main stock for their nourishment. The Jews became dead branches, and were pruned off; but we must not forget that Christ has power to raise the dead and graft them in again. Rom. xi. 23.

Please notice briefly, each of these nine varieties of grafted fruit, and see how closely they are related to each other.

1, Love,—"God is love." We are required to love God with all our heart, and our neighbor as ourselves. "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor." Rom. xiii. 10. If all produced this fruit continuously earth would be a paradise; and then we would have the second variety—joy. If love and joy were universal, wars would cease, and all evil speaking. This would bring us to the third variety—peace. Peace on earth and good will among men. The people would no longer be taxed to maintain an army and navy, nor coast defences. If all produced abundantly these three varieties of spiritual fruit, they would be more healthy spiritually and physically. God would not send the plagues among them as now, and his name would be adored.

If we have love, joy and peace our hearts will be in a proper state of mind to exercise that attribute of God, which is "long-suffering." Should any of our neighbors at any time come short of producing good fruit, we can remember that there was a time when we did not do so, but God bore long with us; and "He which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins." James v. 20. It is well for us that God is "long-suffering." If we bear this fruit, we will also bear gentleness, which is a very winning fruit of the Spirit. It is irresistible. With this there will be no striking or hasty violence by word or deed.

If we bear love, joy, peace, long-suffering and gentleness, goodness, the sixth variety, is sure to follow; and we shall be ready and willing to "do good unto all as we have opportunity."

Seeing the good effects produced by the above described fruit of the spirit, will greatly aid us in exercising "faith" in God and the Lord Jesus Christ, and a firm belief in the gospel of the kingdom of God. "Without faith it is impossible to please God;" and the gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. If we make shipwreck of our faith, we will be broken off as dead branches to be consumed. We abide in the vine or the olive tree by faith, and we have need to take heed to ourselves and watch to be on our guard to avoid all evil. We shall then see the need of meekness. Though Jesus was the Son of God, and all power was given him in heaven and earth, yet "learned he obedience, and was "meek and lowly of heart." It is not well for mortals to be "puffed up." "He that exalteth himself shall be abased."

Now, it is clear that we cannot bear the foregoing eight varieties of spiritual fruit unless we also bear the ninth, which is "temperance." We should not be drunk with wine, or anything else wherein is excess. Intemperance destroys all the virtues in man, and fits him for "everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and the glory of his power."

These nine varieties of fruit produced in abundance make one so perfect that there can be no law against such; and in due season the reward of eternal life and felicity will obtain through Jesus Christ, the Life-giver. Think what a beautiful character the above fruit represents. But the wild olive tree, figuratively speaking, also produces nine varieties of fruit—most undesirable. I will just name them, and leave the reader to compare them with the good fruit. They are hatred, sorrow, war, hasty anger, roughness, badness, unbelief, haughtiness and intemperance. Badness covers a very extensive field of sins. Happiness cannot abide with one who bears this kind of fruit. Let us carefully prune it away.

D. D. LATHROP.

Truth versus Error.

A few weeks ago I was visiting my son and family who live in Newark, Ohio, a city of twenty thousand inhabitants. While there I attended church where the Disciple people worship. The preacher's subject was "Our Future Home." He read for his lesson the first fourteen verses of St. John xiv. His first statement was that our future home is in heaven and that death is but a passing into another state, a transition. The soul being immortal cannot die. As proof he related a very pathetic story. A father and his little daughter came to a dark water to cross. The little one being nervous her father pointed to a distant light and told her that was their home and that he knew the way and would row her safely over. Some time after this the little child was stricken with death and the father asked her if she was afraid of death. Her answer was, oh! no papa I see the boat coming with Jesus in it. I am not afraid; he will care for me. The story touched his audience and many a tear was wiped away and many a sob was heard through the audience. Now, I ask in all candor what is the origin of this story? Can it not be found in Greek and Roman mythology? Instead of preaching the gospel men have turned to preach the fables and traditions by which they make the Word of God of none effect. After reading his lesson and commenting on a few of the verses he called attention to other Scriptures as proof of his statement. His first comment was on the second verse of his lesson "In my Father's house are many mansions or dwelling places," as the revised version has it. This house is in heaven the preacher said. The latter part of this verse and the following was passed over without any notice. Our Savior says, "I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself; that where I am ye may be also." Now here is a plain statement with a promise of coming again. When Christ spoke this he was on the earth and he promised to come to earth again to receive them unto himself. Is not the proof here conclusive that Christ would come again to receive them unto himself. Not a word here that at death their immortal souls would be received in paradise or heaven, but as the Psalmist has said, Psa. cxlvi., "Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man in whom there is no help. His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish.' No boatman to row us over, but a vivified Christ to come and give us eternal life. A very remarkable statement in this connection was that in "passing over" we do not lose our identity or personality. As proof of this Moses and Elias on the mountain of transfiguration was alluded to. Each of these persons were known, says the preacher, from their personal appearance. There is a beautiful lesson in this incident which we have not now time to notice. In this connection we wish to ask, what will the resurrection accomplish if Moses appeared there in his glorified body? Our Savior said to his apostles, Matt. xvii. 9, "Tell the vision to no man, until the Son of Man be risen again from the dead." The devil's lie or the doctrine of the immortality of the soul is the foundation for all such errors. It denies the existence of death and refuses to believe that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures, and that he was buried, and that he rose again according to the Scripture. That is "he poured out his soul unto death." They believe and teach that their Christ died according to Greek and Roman mythology. Truly has the apostle said, 2 Tim. iv. 3, "For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." The preacher next called our attention to a part of Rev. xxi. speaking of the holy city, New Jerusalem. This holy city, said the preacher, is in heaven, God's dwelling place, "our Father's house" referred to in the lesson. He then spoke of the size and beauty of the city urging his audience to so live that when death came they might have a right to enter into this beautiful city, as he said, "made without hands, eternal in the heavens." A remarkable thing in his reading this Scriptures was that he should omit reading the first verse which reads as follows: "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth; for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea." The apostle is here writing of the holy city coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. In the next verse the writer declares that the tabernacle of God is with men, and he (God) will dwell with men. In the 22nd verse the writer says, "And I saw no temple therein, for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it (the city). And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon to shine in it; for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof," and now as proof that this city is then located on the earth not in heaven, notice the following Scripture. "And the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it, and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honor into it." The kings of the earth, not of heaven, do bring their glory and honor into this city. In this city will be found the tree of life, and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations. Is not this the most conclusive proof that our "future home" is on the earth and not in heaven. Our Savior said, "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth." Further the Apostle Peter says, 2 Peter iii. 13, "Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."

At the close of our preacher's discourse he made a strong appeal to those present to seek Christ. Believe, repent and be baptized for the remission of sin. In conclusion let me say that the speaker was a very pleasant one, a graduate of a college, a young man who might be a power with the truth. What we have written has been done in the spirit of the Master, yet believing that we must not compromise the truth in the interest of error. Dear brethren and sisters, let us pledge ourselves that come what may we will have an abiding place in our Father's house.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, APRIL 16, 1902.

DR. T. DeWITT TALMAGE, the well known Presbyterian minister, died in Washington last Saturday night.

THERE seems to be prospect of peace in South Africa, though the arrangement of terms is not yet announced.

THE friends of Brother and Sister A. H. Zilmer will be pleased to learn that they are the parents of twins, a boy and girl, born April 12.

EVERY to-morrow has two handles, —we can take hold of it by the handle of anxiety, or by the handle of faith.

"THE believer is expected so to live as that his peace and joy shall be the lights that shine upon men, showing them the power of the religion of Jesus in that way."

"LORD, what wilt thou have me to do?" To some the answer is, "Arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins." In every case the answer is appropriate to the enquirer's state and power.

THERE are those who find joy almost everywhere, and leave it behind when they go. Such are always welcome visitors. They give light without meaning to shine,—and do good work for God in doing good to his children.

"UNDER all discouragements bear up cheerfully, remembering that it is by trouble that God puts temper into the steel. If it will not bear tempering it is not worth much. He has promised once for all "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee."

PREACH Jesus the Christ!! His humiliation, sufferings, death, sacrifice, resurrection, ascension, and mediation. Preach his coming again, and his glorious kingdom, the seat of which shall be Jerusalem, from whence the law is to go forth. Preach the glorious resurrection also, and the soul-cheering facts of the mundane inheritance of the saints.

JESUS said, "Salvation is of the Jews;" this is not only true in the sense of its having come through them,—but because it is Jewish in its character, Jewish in its channel, and Jewish in its end and completion, for the gospel is an invitation to joint-heirship with Christ of this heavenly kingdom, —and the land upon which it once existed for a thousand years, or thereabouts.

"Redemption."

To understand the great scheme of redemption, it is absolutely necessary to comprehend clearly what men and women have to be redeemed from. Our first parents were placed under a law involving life and death. Life the result of obedience,—death of disobedience. They were free to obey or disobey the divine command. The woman was persuaded to eat of the forbidden fruit, and, giving it to her husband, he ate and brought himself and posterity to death. As to the nature of the death, some say it was spiritual death, temporal death, eternal death, —the spiritual death meaning separation from God,—the temporal death, the the eternal death, the eternal torment of the soul in the flames of hell, or torment of the conscience,—torment of some kind at any rate. According to this, man, as the result of breaking the law of God brought upon himself and posterity three deaths. If this contention be true, a Redeemer must be found who could pay this penalty for man, so that he might be bought back to God. We are aware it is contended that such an one is to be found in the Lord Jesus Christ,

THE SON OF GOD,—

but is this so? If it is, Jesus must have died the three deaths, which are said to be the penalty for sin; that is spiritual, temporal and eternal. That he died the temporal or natural death we expect all believers of the Bible to admit. But that he died the spiritual death spoken of, viz., separation from God,—or the eternal, that is torments in hell or anywhere else, or anything else, hardly any would dare affirm. If that were so, then God's Son would have been separated from his Father for ever, and would now and for evermore be suffering the agonies of

instead of being, as affirmed in Scripture, at the right hand of God, waiting until his enemies be made his footstool. Seeing then, that the only death that can be applied to Christ is the death of the body, if he is the Redeemer,—the redemption must be from the power of the grave, to which all go as the result of the first man's transgression. That the death to which the human race is subject is not the three-in-one death alluded to, must be evident from the fact that it is to be

DESTROYED BY CHRIST

"For he must reign, till he hath put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." 1 Cor. xv. 25, 26. Again, "I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death; O death, I will be thy plagues, O grave, I will be thy destruction." Hosea xiii. 14. From this it is evident what death men require to be redeemed from, seeing it is that which takes them to the grave, that they are to be ransomed from. That this is so, will be readily admitted by all who will lay prejudice aside and look clearly to the facts.

THE FIRST ADAM

when created was under no law. Afterward he was placed under the law of life and death. When created he was made out of the dust of the earth, and caused to live by breathing. Man's nature, therefore, was human, not divine. As already stated, when put upon probation it was under the law of life and death. After breaking the law man passed from under the law of

to that of death only, from which there could have been no release apart from the provision being made of one who could keep the law of God, and thus offer an acceptable sacrifice on account of our sins, and be raised again, so that justifying faith could be exercised in him as the center and embodiment of all Jehovah's

REDEMPTIVE PURPOSES.

The first Adam did not become subject to the law of death until he had transgressed. The Second Adam was made of a woman who was by nature under death, and therefore occupied quite a different position from that of the first Adam. The child Jesus was educated by his Father in heaven; the things heard of the Father (Jno. xv. 15) were continually imparted to him; the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom, and was upon him; so that at the age of twelve he was in advance of his parents. We cannot half appreciate the infinite pains taken by God to provide a Savior that would conquer death and bring life and immortality to light for us: if we forget the infancy, childhood and youth of Jesus, as he grew in favor with God as his physical, mental and moral powers enlarged, till at last without one polluting touch of sin upon him. Doubtless it was his divine instruction that enabled him to realize that it was because he was made of a woman, doomed to die, that it made it necessary for him to be baptized of John in Jordan, in order to fulfill all righteousness. He thus publicly testified to the justice of the law which turns the race back to the dust out of which it was taken,—not even excepting one who personally knew no sin. How much more necessary then must that act be for those who, in addition to their connection with a mortal race have to be remitted! As it appears to us Jesus was on probation for his becoming the Christ, up to the time of his baptism. The words of approval from heaven seem to imply this: "Thou art my beloved Son, in thee I am well pleased." But still he was on trial; he had to be obedient unto death,—and he was; he was holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners, although tempted and tried in all points like as we are,—therefore it was not possible for the grave to hold him. "Through the blood of

THE EVERLASTING COVENANT"

God brought him again from the dead, —the power of an endless life took possession of him, and constituted him the beginning of a new race,—"the first-born from the dead." Col. i. 18. God has given him power to bestow the same divine nature of existence upon all who accept him as their Redeemer and Lord, by believing his gospel, which is the power of God unto salvation to every one who believes it. Rom. i. 16. It is which is the POWER of the grave. Those who believe the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, and are baptized for remission of their sins, and henceforth live godly, will by and by be able to shout, "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" The sting of death is sin, and the strength of sin is the law; but thanks be unto God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." 1 Cor. xv. 55-57.

The Soul.

"The soul that sinneth shall die." But what is the soul that is threatened with death if it sins? Whatever it is, it is not immortal; it could not die if it were. The word soul in this sentence, simply means "self," a corporeal personality,—and hence the word person may be used as the equivalent of the word soul. It is often used in this sense in the Scriptures; as, for instance in Rom. xiii. 1, "Let every soul (person) be subject to the higher powers." "Three thousand souls were added to the church,"—three thousand persons. Acts ii. 41. "And fear came upon every soul" (person). Jesus said, "My soul is exceedingly sorrowful, even unto death;" that is, myself; or, "I am exceeding sorrowful." Matt. xxvi. 38. "He which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul (a person) from death." Jesus said, Matt. xvi. 26, "What is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul, or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" The same questions are asked in Luke ix. 25, "What is a man advantaged if he gain the whole world and lose himself?" In the 49th Psalm, verse 18, we read, "God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave." It is plain to be seen that the Psalmist had not in mind the immaterial, immortal soul of theology. How could that come under the power of the grave. Substitute the word self and all will be plain. The very next words show this to be the true meaning. It says: "For he shall receive ME."

Bible Questions.

As "Jesus Christ shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom," 2 Tim. iv. 1, how can any one be rewarded or punished before Jesus returns to this earth?

As the Thessalonians, when converted to the Truth, "Turned to God from idols, to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven," 1 Thess. i. 9, 10, how is it that Protestants and Catholics are waiting to be taken to God's Son in heaven?

As the Bible says there is but "one hope," Eph. iv. 4, and that the "hope of eternal life," to be bestowed at the second appearing of Jesus Christ, Titus i. 2; ii. 13; iii. 7, what right have any to teach that man have eternal life now, and that the coming of Jesus is something which does not concern his disciples?

Scolding.

A little girl who had witnessed the perplexity of her mother on a certain occasion when her fortitude gave way under a severe trial, said:

"Mother, does God ever fret and scold?"

The query was so abrupt and startling it arrested the mother's attention almost with a shock.

"Why, Lizzie, what makes you ask that question?"

"Why God is good; you know you used to call him the 'Good Man,' when I was little—and I should like to know if he ever scolded?"

"No, child; no."

"Well, I am glad he don't; for scolding always makes me feel so bad, even if it is not my fault. I don't think I could love God much if he scolded."

The mother felt rebuked before her simple child. Never had she heard so forcible a lecture on the evils of scolding. The words of Lizzie sank deep into her heart, and she turned away from the innocent face of her little one to hide the tears that gathered in her eyes. Children are quick observers; and Lizzie seeing the effect of her words, hastened to enquire:

"Why do you cry, mother? Was it naughty for me to ask so many questions?"

"No, love, it was all right. I was only thinking how bad I had been to scold so much, when my little girl could hear and be troubled by it."

"O, no, mamma, you are not bad, you are a good mamma, only I wish there were not so many things to make you fret and talk like you did just now. It makes me feel away from you so far, like I could not come near you, as I can when you smile and are kind; and oh, I sometimes fear I shall be put off so far I can never get back again."

"Oh, Lizzie, don't say that," said the mother, unable longer to repress the tears that had been struggling in her eyes. The child wondered what could so affect its parent, but instinctively feeling it was a case requiring sympathy, she reached up and laid her little arms about her mother's neck, and whispered:

"Mamma, dear, do I make you cry? Do you love me?"

"O, yes; I love you more than I can tell," replied the parent, clasping the child to her bosom. "And I will try never to scold again before my little sensitive girl."

"Oh, I am so glad; I can get so near to you when you don't scold; and do you know, mother, I want to love you so much."

This was an effectual lesson, and the mother felt the force of that passage of Scripture, "Out of the mouths of babes have I ordained strength." She never scolded again.

The Image of the Beast. Rev. xiii. 14.

Having in a former article taken the position that the two horned symbol of Rev. xiii. 11, is a symbol of our country; it is necessary on my part to make an application of the image of verse 14. An image is a likeness of a person or thing; man is said to be created in the image of God. We often hear the remark that "history repeats itself." The fact that the nation symbolized by the two horned beast makes an image to the leopard beast of verse 1 is a case in point of history repeating itself. one power doing again that which another power had done before. Why is the harlot woman of the scarlet robe called Babylon? Because she has filled up the immoral likeness of ancient Babylon. See xvii. 4-5.

It comes of necessity that the nation making the likeness must have its rise at a later date than the one to whom the likeness is made. Therefore we find the two horned symbol coming up after the former one has gone into captivity. If our position is correct, the United States will by its laws and actions, form a likeness or image to Rome; and as Rome has passed through many phases, or forms of government, we should find in the prophecy some indication as to what period in her history is to be duplicated by the United States, so as to form the likeness or image.

The time indicated is the time when Rome received a "deadly wound by a sword." See verse 14. The leopard symbol, or that phase of Rome's government came into existence gradually as Christianity supplanted paganism in the empire. Then was fulfilled that which is written in verse two "And the dragon gave him his power, and his seat, and great authority." Then in verse three we have the account of the wounding of one of his heads, said head being the imperial head which existed in the days of John, to whom the revelation was made. See xvii. 10, "Five are fallen, and one is, and the other is not yet come."

Rome is said by Daniel to be diverse from all the beasts that were before; that we think is in the fact that Rome passed through seven different phases of government, indicated by the seven heads, and by John called seven kings. Rev. xvii. 10. The papacy being the eighth and of the seven; but not enumerated as one of the heads, neither by Daniel nor John. In speaking of the future we should not be too positive, because we may be mistaken; but it seems very improbable that a nation coming up last in the line of symbols, should in making an image go through all the different phases of the Roman empire. The only inspired testimony that we have on this point is Rev. xiii. 14, "Saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast, which had a wound by a sword, and did live."

The appeal to the people to make the image, fairly indicates that the form of government is republican, that is the government that makes the image, but after the image is made and demands worship on pain of death in case of refusal, it then speaks "as a dragon." Also the reference to the beast "that had the wound by a sword, and did live," indicates that the image is to be made to the Roman empire while in its imperial form or phase. The wounding of this head was accomplished by an invasion of the empire by the northern tribes of Germany and Russia (called Sythia) and ended in the breaking up of the empire into ten divisions, indicated by "ten horns." This wounding of the head was accomplished by a succession of invasions, commencing in the last part of the fourth century, and continued during the most part of the fifth century. The fall of Rome is given in history as A. D. 476.

The next event as indicated in the prophecy is the giving to Rome a mouth speaking blasphemy. See Rev. xiii. 5. Any one that will compare the acts of the little horn of Dan. vii. 8 with the beast of Rev. xiii. 1, after he receives the mouth "that speaks great things and blasphemies," will see that they are identical. It will be readily seen that the image is a religious image because it demands worship. It is proper now that we ask the question, how far have the builders of the image progressed already? Rome was a nation that professed to be Christian, so does our country. Rome's Christianity was a mixture of paganism and Christianity, so is the popular religion of our country. Rome in the fifth century taught that when we die the soul goes to heaven, and our country holds tenaciously to the same unscriptural doctrine. Rome in the fifth century taught the horrid doctrine of eternal torment, so do the creeds of the orthodox churches of our country. Rome then (and now) taught the truth nullifying doctrine of the trinity; the same doctrine is the chief corner stone of the orthodox churches today. This likeness may be continued to almost any length, but I will conclude by asking one question, can any one that objects to the position I have taken concerning the image, point out one prominent doctrine held by the popular Christians of the fifth century, that is not held by the orthodox churches of today? Now to complete the image it remains for our government to incorporate the popular belief into the law of the country, and enforce the same; then the image will be complete. To be continued in reference to the mark of the beast and the number of his name.

GEO. FRATES.

Criticism of Dr. Seiss of Philadelphia.

I have seen a sermon of Dr. Seiss in a London periodical, in which he thinks there is a duality in the translation of living saints at the coming of Christ, as also in the resurrection of those who sleep in Christ. To substantiate this view, he quotes Rev. vii. 9, 14, and says, we read of a great multitude of the redeemed, who are represented as having had to suffer these very woes; and having reached heaven through them. But why did the Dr. neglect to quote the 15th verse? This verse tells us what position this great multitude will occupy in the great restitution. It would seem that the Dr. thinks that because they have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb; therefore they are taken to heaven. But in the 15th verse I read, "Therefore are they before (not on) the throne of God, and serve him day and night in his temple." I would like to ask the Dr. if he thinks there is a day and a night in heaven? This great multitude are simply servants. Isa. lxvi. 19, 20, brings these servants to view. He says, "I will send those that escape of them to the nations, to Tarshish," etc. "to the isles that are afar off, that have not heard my fame, neither have seen my glory; and they shall declare my glory among the Gentiles." 20 v. "And they shall bring all your brethren an offering unto the Lord out of all nations."

But the great trouble with the Dr. is his belief in the immortality of the soul; and therefore, it is with him, as it is with all others of the same belief; all Scripture opposed to the serpent's lie must be stultified, in order to do service to that doctrine.

We notice also that the great multitude of Rev. vii. 9, are from all nations; hence Israel must be represented among them. This great multitude were not included when the first resurrection took place, because they believed in the serpent's lie, Gen. iii. 4, or they had not been born of water, John iii. 5, but while in the great tribulation, they realize their error and straightway wash their robes and make them white in the blood of the Lamb. But their negligence and error will prove a bar against their getting into the number of the Bride of Rev. xiv. 4, "These are they which were not defiled with women, for they are virgins." These were redeemed from among men, being the first fruits unto God and to the Lamb." Evidently, the first resurrection; and none others can learn the song of the 144,000, which were redeemed from the earth. They are now prepared for servants, and only for servants.

We are informed that there are several thousand Israelites in New York that are being converted to Christ, but they have not been baptized, (born of water) but are rantized; hence cannot get into the kingdom of God according to the Savior's prohibition. John iii. 5. These are sealed in their foreheads, Rev. vii. 3 8 inclusive; sealed for servants evidently, and are in the great multitude. These will be the servants to bring their brethren for an offering unto the Lord, out of all nations, upon horses and in chariots (railroad cars), but this great multitude are not translated to heaven as the Dr. seems to think, but are mortal when they went into the great tribulation; and are mortal when they come out; and are possessed of all the imperfections of mortality. To them children shall be born the same as now. In this we find a fulfillment of that expression in Isa xi. 8, the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice' den. These will never attain to immortality, but will be the means of fulfilling that promise in Isa. ix. 9, "Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end." Submitted in love of Dr. Seiss and all others.

OUR LETTER DRAWER.

Brother Underwood:

I cannot get along without the dear old RESTITUTION. It is surely a very good help in studying the Bible. I thank God that I ever started in the good cause, and I will try to fight it through till the end comes. Pray for me, that I may prove faithful to the end.

From your brother in Christ
WARREN TILTON.

Editor Restitution:

I am so thankful for THE RESTITUTION you have sent me. I do not know how to do without it. I am isolated from those of like precious faith. I cannot subscribe but will send what I can to help pay postage. I will not need the paper many years more.

I will say to the dear ones of like precious faith, I with you am striving for an entrance into the kingdom of God, when Jesus comes. I am longing and looking for his coming to put away sin and sickness, and when this corruptible body shall put on immortality. I bless and praise the Lord for the blessed hope of a resurrection from the dead. If we die we shall live again, for our life is hid in Christ. He is faithful that has promised, to those who believe and obey. May the time soon come is my prayer. I go to hear preaching sometimes, but it is about going to heaven when you die. They do not give Christ the glory of giving immortality when he comes. I praise God for the light he has given me on the precious Word of life only in Christ.

Your Sister in Christ.
MRS. H. S. DRESSER.

Editor Restitution:

I have long loved our dear, old RESTITUTION, and desire to take it while I live (which may not be long) or until the kingdom comes. May God bless it while it hands out the truth to a dying world. I have some letters from dear ones. Sister Morgan, I received your letter and will answer it some day, was so happy to hear from you again. Bless all the brothers and sisters far and near.

Ever your Sister in Christ, waiting our coming King.

SALLIE BLACK.

Dear brothers and sisters in Christ:

I wish all the household of faith a Happy New Year and hoping that we may all double our diligence to make our calling sure. I remain your Brother.

Yours in hope of eternal life.
J. W. BOOTH.

Dear Restitution:

The paper is a great comfort to me, living most of my time where I have no church to attend; but with my Bible and the good sermons in THE RESTITUTION and encouraging letters from dear waiting ones. I am trying to live faithful and to ever be found doing my duty as a child of God trying to show others the true and only way to inherit eternal life so that when our dear Savior comes, whether living or asleep, we will rise to meet him. O what a blessed hope we have for we know it wont be long till we can hear "Come waiting ones, inherit the kingdom prepared for you." Oh brethren, let us be faithful and have our lamps trimmed and burning. May the dear Lord bless you in all your work, is my prayer. My faith is growing stronger every day. I ask an interest in your prayers.

Yours waiting for the kingdom of God.

MRS. E. A. MORRILL.

No Sweeter Word.

"I will not leave you desolate." John xiv. 18.

No sweeter word than this can find a tongue,
When strength and courage fail with harp unstrung,
"I will not leave you desolate;"
A precious word which poets love to sing,
To trembling age a word most comforting,
"I will not leave you desolate."

When loving friends and social joys depart,
And troubles come to overwhelm the heart,
"I will not leave you desolate;"
When night is coming on that hides the sun,
And weary limbs remind you "day is done,"
"I will not leave you desolate."

O blessed word! I hear it once again—
The service ended—as a sweet "amen,"
"I will not leave you desolate"
Linger awhile until the Father call,
I catch the vanishing recessional,
"I will not leave you desolate."

I Ask for Light.

In the "Berean Column" of THE RESTITUTION April 2, under the head "to have a share in them?"—Christ's kingdom and the glorious promises. The answer given is, "We must first repent, and then believe the truth." Reference is made to Mark i. 15; and iv. 12.

We have heard this thought before, yet it seems strange to us, and hard for us to reconcile with our idea of the gospel—God's plan of salvation. If I am not mistaken the word of truth, the gospel must first be heard or believed, then repentance or reformation of life and conduct, connected with a burial in baptism for remission of past sins, is the divine law of adoption into the body of Christ—the Church of the Living God.

As faith comes by hearing the word of God, and without faith it is impossible to please God, I am at a loss to understand how repentance comes in before we hear and believe the truth. The gospel requires repentance and baptism of the believer, but not of the unbeliever. What causes a sinner to repent before he believes the good message of mercy to fallen man?

If I was a Sabbatarian, and rested my case on the law and the gospel, I would preach the law first, and say repent or reform first, then believe the gospel and be baptized for the remission of sins. Now who will be kind enough to do me a favor, and set me right.

T. E. ADAMS.

[The "Berean Column" is written mostly by young folks, many of them boys and girls, who have "believed," "repented" and been "baptized." Some may not have advanced so far, but if they are true "Bereans" we have good reason to hope they will soon belong to the "Church of the Living God." It is not to be supposed that these young people will be as explicit and exact in all the fine points as older and more experienced writers will be. We apprehend that if Brother Adams could talk with our young Brother and Sister, Charlie and Edna Anderson, that there would be no serious difference.

In answer to the question "How are we to have a share in them?" referring to Christ's kingdom and the promises, is given—"We must first repent, and then believe." Now if we leave out the words "first" and "then" we will have just what Mark gives us in the text cited. "Repent" and "believe."

In order to get at the real fine points of the process it is necessary to carefully analyze and elucidate the matter. Of course one must be told, or find out in some way, that he is on the wrong track—is a sinner—and certainly the "word of truth" whether it be read or told to him, will supply that much to his mind, and he will so be satisfied of his error and turn about—"repent."

So far well and good; but mere sorrow for his sin will not do. "Turning about"—"repenting" denotes action. He must not only face about, but he must go in the opposite direction—reform his life and conduct. This will lead him to acquire the knowledge of what God wants him to do, and then do it, and he will find that "baptism for remission of past sins" will be a necessary part of his work, and that a godly life thereafter is likewise essential.

Much of the trouble comes from endeavoring to divide this matter of "belief, repentance and baptism" into so many different parts. It is, of course necessary, in sermonizing or writing at length, that various phases of a subject be taken up in order and analyzed separately; but we should not forget that true belief and repentance are so closely allied that the precedence of one over the other is not always clear to the learner. The student investigating the question "what must I do to be saved?" sees the gospel truths unfolding to his view gradually—so gradually that "belief" and "repentance" come together. By the time he gets only part of the knowledge that in its fullness induces "belief," he has already "repented" of his past sins, and is ready at once for "baptism."

We do not doubt but Charlie and Edna Anderson understand and can tell this process through as well as any one can. That it was not all particularly brought out in the space of two inches of print is not surprising. The person who arranges the Column for these young folks does not desire any one of the contributors to take all the space, but has them write short letters in order to develop the ability that each has, without trying to bring out all on a subject that they may be capable of even. We do not think Bro. Adams wishes to specially "find fault" with what was written as much as he does to stimulate thought, and give an impetus to further study. So we trust the "Bereans" will not be discouraged, but keep right on in the good way.—ED.]

Genesis. Chap. 43.

Chap. xlv. 39, And the famine became strong in the land.

1. And it came to pass when they had finished eating the grain which they had brought out of Aiguptos, that their father also said, Go your way again and buy for us a little food.

2. And Joudas spake unto him saying, The man, the lord of the land testified to us saying, Ye shall not see my face unless your younger brother be with you.

3. If then thou will send our brother with us we will go down and market food for thee.

4. But if thou wilt not send our brother with us we will not go; for the man spake unto us saying, Ye shall not see my face unless your younger brother be with you.

5. And Israel said, Why did you do me the wrong in telling the man that ye had a younger brother?

6. And they said, The man asked us and about our race, saying, Is your father still living and have ye a brother? and we told him according to this inquiry. We did not know that he would say to us, Lead your brother, did we?

7. And Joudas said unto Israel his father, Send the boy along with me, and let us arise and go our way, that we may live and not die, we and thou and our retainers.

8. I am receiving him, require him at my hand, if I do not lead him unto thee and stand him in thy presence I shall have sinned against thee all the days.

9. Yea, if we had not been slow, we might have already returned twice.

10. And Israel their father said unto them, If it be in this wise, may ye have done it. Take from the fruits of the land in your earthen vessels, and conduct down to the man votive-offerings of the retinue and the honey and incense and stackle and teribuith and nuts.

11. And double the money taken in your hands, and the money returned in your pouches take back with you, lest perchance it is an error of ignorance.

12. And take your brother, and arise and go down to the man.

13. And may my God have given you grace in the sight of the man, and may he have sent back your brother and Benjamin. For I have been rendered childless even as I was childless.

14. And the men taking these votive-offerings took also double the money in their hands and Benjamin, and arose and went down into Aiguptos. And stood in the presence of Jooseph.

15. And Jooseph saw them and Benjamin his brother by the same mother; and he said to the one over his own household, Lead the men into the house, and slay sacrifices and make ready; for the men will eat bread with me at mid-day.

16. And the man did even as Jooseph had said, and led the men into Jooseph's house.

17. And when the men were aware that they had been led into the house of Jooseph, they said, It is because of the money returned at first in our pouches, that we are being led in, to cheat and impose upon us, that they may take us for house-servants, us and our asses.

18. And when they had come to the man over the house-hold of Jooseph they talked with him in the gateway of the house.

19. Saying, We beseech thee, lord, We came down at first to buy food.

20. And it came to pass when we had got to the halting-place, and had opened our pouches this money of each one one was in his pouch; our money (silver) by weight we have returned now in our hands.

21. And other money have we brought with us to market food-supplies; we do not know who put the money in our pouches.

22. And he said unto them, It is a propitious thing for you; fear not, your God and the God of your fathers hath given unto you treasures in your pouches, and your money of approved value I had; and he led them unto Simeoon.

23. And he brought water to wash their feet, and gave fodder for their asses.

24. And they made ready their votive gifts until Jooseph should come at midday, for they had heard that he was going to dine there.

25. And Jooseph came into the house, and they brought unto him the votive-gifts, which they had brought into the house, and did homage to him on their face to the ground.

26. And he asked them, How are ye? And is your father the old man, said he in good health, of whom ye said, He still liveth?

27. And they said, Thy house servant our father is in good health; he still liveth; and he said, Blessed by God is that man; and bowing they did homage to him.

28. And looking up with his eyes Jooseph saw Benjamin, his brother by the same mother, and said, This your younger brother, whom ye said, Ye would lead unto me is it not? And he said, God be merciful to thee, child.

29. And Jooseph was moved; for his inner feelings turned toward his brother, and he sought to lament; and entering into the inner room he lamented there.

30. And washing his face he came out and controled himself, and said, Set food beside us.

31. And they set it beside him alone, and for them by themselves, and for the Aiguptioi who were dining with him by themselves; for the Aiguptioi could not eat bread with the Hebrews; for it is an abomination to the Aiguptioi.

32. And they sat down in his presence, the first-born according to his eldership privileges, and the younger according to his younger privileges, and the men showed astonishment each one to his brother.

33. And they received portions from him for themselves; but Benjamin's portion was made five times as large as all their portions; and they drank and got jolly (lit. drunk) with him.

COMMENT.

The reader will observe that the verse numbering of this chapter is all changed by the C. V. and R. V., carrying over the last verse of the preceding chapter, the 39th namely and making it the 1st of this 43rd chapter. The changes of numbering both of chapters and verses occurred at the same time and with the same motive on the part of the old Jewish rabbis in the early part of the second century of the Christian era, namely to discredit the Septuagint or Greek version which had been from the outset and was then the authorized and accepted Bible of Christianity with the imprimatur of the Christ and the apostles for its sanction. This is proved by the spurious copies of the Septua still extant which they also conformed to this corrupted Hebrew text at that time. The boldness of this attempt helped to thwart the first fraud. For it revealed the motive as well as the modus opperandi; and though there was absolutely no knowledge of Hebrew in the Christian church of that day, there was an accurate knowledge of Greek and too much general intelligence to be imposed upon in this way.

In the later revival of interest in the Hebrew text, culminating the latter part of the fourteenth century, this early attempted fraud of the second century proved successful to the extent of most of these changes of proper names and the beclouding of the more important Messianic prophecies through the vicious vowel-pointing of the original Hebrew text being adopted and incorporated into all the European translations, the English included since. The Catholic apostasy and the schisms, sects and divisions of the Protestant church are the direct result of this fraudulent tinkering with "the Word of God," and we of the nineteenth century are the legitimate heirs of this "Higher Criticism" as it is called which discredits even the Mosaic authorship of the Pentateuch, and divides the authorship of another well-attested book of the Old Covenant [illegible] as they call him and "the God unknown" of their profound [illegible].

CHAS. GARDNER.

Is Man a Machine or a Free Moral Agent?

In my travels I frequently come in contact with parties claiming or setting forth foreordination, that is there is nothing done but what God so ordained it should be. That it could not have been evaded or prevented.

Now, if man is a machine foreordination and predestination will stand good, and no man is responsible for any depredations he may commit. Then human laws should be set aside, and let divine laws alone rule, if it was destined so to be. Then Adam was damned, or condemned before he was placed in the garden, and damned because he ate the forbidden fruit, a double portion, heaped upon this helpless creature.

His loyalty to his Maker cuts no figure, if he is doomed to be condemned, he will be condemned regardless of any good he may do, even through the obedience of obeying the gospel of [illegible] and Savior, Jesus Christ, and living a holy life.

Adam's penalty for disobedience was death. If man is a machine and God made him so, then, he did God's pleasure and God's machine did just what he desired it to do, and that brought death in the human family. According to such a theory, God is well pleased in the death of every person now; will this rule stand the test of the sacred Word of God? "I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth, Saith the Lord God." Ezek. xviii. 32.

Hear him again, "As I live saith the Lord, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked; but that the wicked turn from his wicked way and live, turn ye, turn ye, why will ye die?" Ezek. xxxiii. 11.

Is God the cause of all the misery, woe, heartaches, pain, sighs and tears?

Is he the cause of many mothers sitting by their sick children, with husband in some gambling den, spending his money? Did God make him forget his vows to her whom he had promised to never forsake? Is God the founder of these disreputable houses of ill-fame?

These are a few suggestions that I have introduced for the candid mind to consider.

I take the ground that man is a free moral agent, he can act or choose for himself. God gives him the right of choice. Man was created with a capacity for an endless life and a desire to have it; but it was assured to him only on conditions. The test given was as mild as it could possibly be. Man was unloyal to the trust of his Maker and came short of the position he was to occupy, and through him sin was introduced in the world, and death was passed on all men. Yet, in the fall of man God promised a Savior and made other provisions to keep them mindful of this, and introduced an offering for sin, and God made the selection, of what would be acceptable to him and wished man to practice and execute his will. But soon they forgot their Maker, and were so disloyal to him that God sent a flood destroying the ungodly, but before he sent the flood, he gave a solemn warning and offered them a way to escape if they would only accept. God has always been kind to his people and has fulfilled many of his promises, and will fulfill every promise he has made; but, dear readers, the promise of eternal life to you and I is on conditions; and will be granted to us only on conditions, and those conditions has been set forth in his sacred volume of truth, God having anciently [illegible] many portions and by various methods to the fathers by the prophets, in these last days spoke to us by his Son, whom he hath appointed Heir of all things, Heb. i. 1, 2.

Some of God's messages given in ancient times consisted of temporal blessings, which rested upon conditions, as long as his children obeyed his voice God fulfilled his promises. See Deut. chapters xxvi. and xxviii.

After reading those chapters take the history of the children of Israel. Did God bring that punishment on them, or was it sent on them because of their disrespect for his words?

Let us not gather the temporal blessings and have them included with the eternal blessings; yet, they were both given, with rewards and penalties, one for the national blessing, and the other for individual and eternal blessing. The nation that was to receive the temporal blessings was soon found indulging in sin and worshiping idols, and through the desire of flesh had forsook the right way, insomuch that when the true light came they received him not. The True Light was to enlighten every man. He came to his own domain and yet his own people received him not, but to as many as received him he gave authority to become children of God, to those believing into his name.

Now you see the eternal blessing all depends on our receiving him; but some love darkness rather than light, and will not come to the light lest their deeds be reproved, and they be found false witnesses before God. But, let every man prove his own works, and then shall he have rejoicing alone and not in another for every one shall bear their own burden. Let him that is taught in the Word communicate unto him or those wishing to be taught in all good things, that those believing might be sealed with the spirit of promise. Then when we are once sealed the pledge of our inheritance depends on our continuance in well doing. He that hath ears to hear let him hear what the spirit saith unto the churches; he that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death. Rev. i. 11.

But beloved remember ye the words which were spoken before of the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ. How that they told you there should be mockers in the last time, who should walk after their own ungodly lusts. Jude exhorts the faithful to keep yourselves in the love of the truth, and to God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life. See Gal. vi. 7, 8, 9. Do not mistake. God is not to be derided, for whatever a man may sow, this also will he reap. Because the one sowing for the flesh will of or for the flesh reap corruption; but the one sowing for the Spirit will from the Spirit reap aionian life. Therefore we should not flag in doing well, for we shall reap at the proper time or season, if we do not relax. Emphatic Diaglott. Can any one believe after they have been introduced in the household of faith, and sowed the good seed of the kingdom and proved loyal to their Maker, having separated themselves from the pleasures of this life, deprived themselves of many comforts of life, in order that some wanderer might hear the news of the soon coming kingdom. Some have left their families, wife and children at home; gone forth with the Sword of the Spirit, sowing the good seed of the kingdom of God, sacrificed their lives for the love of the gospel, and to think at last God had so ordained that they should be lost, and on the other hand some vile vagabond who has blasted some home, taken the life of some mother's daughter, or murdered his own companion and children, and then to think they will be saved. Here is your fore-ordination, look it square in the face. Then if it was predestined that every person born in this world was doomed to be lost or saved, then it was useless for Christ to have come and suffered the many trials, and at last to have died upon the cross. Hear him in his prayer in John xvii. 20, "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through thy Word. God gave gave his Son up to die upon the cross and that favor was conferred for every one, but only on conditions, and if we comply with those conditions, God through his Son will confer the favor of eternal life to his children, and that life is in Christ; so when Christ who is our Life-giver shall appear, we shall appear with him in glory.

Obituary.

Death has again visited the congregation at Argos, Ind. This time to take from us our long loved and much loved Sister Elizabeth Shoemaker. She was born in 1822, Sept. 8. Early in life, before the cares and responsibilities of married life were assumed she saw the need of, beheld the beauty in, and laid hold upon the promises of God. She first united with the old Mount Pisgah church, but for many years has been a member of the church at Argos. All through her long Christian life the Father had a witness, the church a worker, and the world a light. Her place is now vacant until the night shall have passed. She was twice married. Her first husband died soon after marriage, in California. Her second husband died some twenty-four years ago. She leaves a daughter, four grand children, and several step-children, to all of whom she was as a mother. She also leaves her influence for righteousness which can but be of much value to the living.

DEAD.

How the word thuds upon our hearts! What momentary stillness it brings into our lives! How unvoluntarily and almost unknowingly, the mind hastens in brief review over the life of the one announced to be dead. Now the life ended. What despair! What utter despair! How weak we are! How unable to assist when assistance is most needed! But in our weakness and despair there comes wafted across the centuries the echo of his voice who spake as never man spake, "I am the resurrection and the life." What light in darkness! What joy traces itself upon the face of sorrow! What hope raises the heart aloft from this valley of despair. Blessed hope, glorious prospect! Most kind and gracious Father! "The resurrection and the life." How full of meaning. Victory over death! Triumph over the grave! Designed, promised and demonstrated by God for man, through "Christ our life" at his appearing unto salvation. "Come, Lord Jesus, and comes quickly."

F. L. AUSTIN.

John Elton was born at Newtontony, County of Wiltshire, England, Sept. 14, 1825. Was married to Caroline Young, May 26, 1849; landed in America March 25, 1850, living in Cuyahoga County, Ohio, for eight years, after which he moved to Fulton Co., O., where he has resided on his farm ever since. While in Cuyahoga County they belonged to the Disciple church, but after coming to Fulton County, united with the Church of God of which he has been a faithful member about thirty years. He leaves a family of eight children, five sons and three daughters, and many friends and neighbors to mourn his loss. He fell asleep in Jesus at Toledo, O., April 5, 1902, aged 76 years, 6 months and 21 days. A very large number of people attended the funeral services conducted by Brother A. H. Zilmer at Baker Union Church on Apr. 8, 1902.

Pray without Ceasing.

1 THES. V. 17.

Prayer is appointed to convey
The blessings God designs to give;
Long as they live should Christians pray;
They learn to pray when first they live.

If pain afflict, or wrongs oppress
If cares distract, or fears dismay;
If guilt deject; if sin distress;
In every case, still watch and pray.

'Tis prayer supports the soul that's weak;
Though thought be broken, language lame,
Pray, if thou canst or canst not speak;
But pray with faith in Jesus' name.

Depend on him; thou canst not fail;
Make all thy wants and wishes known;
Your not; his merits must prevail;
Ask but in faith, it shall be done.

Spirit Birth and Resurrection.

Do the phrases "Resurrection of the dead," and "Born of the Spirit," simply mean one and the same thing?

From hearing, and a careful reading of the writings of some of our most able expositors of Bible teaching, I am forced to conclude that such is their idea. But if it be so, then I desire instruction, and hope some one will minister to my need.

That "Spirit birth" is the consummation of the powers of regeneration—begettal in Christ (by the word of the Spirit)—embryotic state—(abiding in Christ, as an absolute necessity to get nutriment for continuation and growth) and finally deliverance from the mortal, by the bringing forth into the activities and realities of the immortal—spiritual self-existence, or being, by a "change from mortal to immortality," I can readily see; and also that this change will be experienced by the righteous dead at the time of their resurrection from the dead.

But what I cannot so readily see is this, that resurrection—reliving, is the cause, or (in and of itself alone) the means of imparting immortal life, or that resurrection alone is the change or Spirit birth, (notwithstanding the body dead are changed—brought into Spirit life at the very moment of their resurrection).

If it be that resurrection and Spirit birth are identical, then I am greatly in need of instruction about so many things necessarily growing out of that fact, of which I will call attention to only a few:

1. If this be so, then I am unable to see how the living saints can ever get immortality, not being subjects of resurrection, having never died—living and believing in him at the time of the resurrection, "shall never die." John xi. 26. Therefore will never have a resurrection from the dead, and par consequence cannot be born again.

2. Then I am unable to see how his dear Son was the "beginning of the first born from the dead." How he could be the "first born among many brethren." Because, surely Lazarus and others were raised from the dead before he was; and therefore if resurrection gives Spirit birth—confers immortality—then surely they were then made immortal and were born before Christ was; hence Christ could not have been "the first fruit."

3. If resurrection alone is the birth immortal, and it being true that such birth is predicated alone of the righteous as it surely it, then it follows that none but the righteous dead can ever have a resurrection. Hence it must be that some of the righteous dead will "come forth (having done good) to the resurrection (birth) of life, and others (having done evil) to the resurrection (birth) of condemnation." John v. 29. "Some to everlasting life, and some to everlasting contempt." Dan. xii. 2.

4. If resurrection is the birth that gives immortality, then I am unable to see how it can be otherwise than that Lazarus and many others got immortality before the coming of the Life-giver, and the day of reward, for they were surely raised from the dead.

This is submitted in love, but not for controversy. Rejoicing always in the satisfaction of apprehending the harmony of all the testimony in regard to things revealed for our learning, but with no disposition to enter the arena of investigation of untaught questions knowing they do "gender strifes."

"The secret things belong unto the Lord our God, but those things which are revealed belong unto us and to our children forever, that we may do all the words of this law."

With great desire that I may be accounted worthy of that change awaiting all that are in Christ, whether living or dead, in the day when he shall come and raise the sleeping ones, and with them also change the living ones.

May it be ours through a "patient continuance in well doing."

Christ is Coming.

"The coming of the Lord draweth nigh."
James v. 8.

He is coming, he is coming,
Can you read the signs aright?
Do you hear the tread of nations
As they march to join in war?
Do you hear the gospel herald
Calling loud in every land?
Oh ye nations, turn, repent ye,
For his coming is at hand.

He is coming, he is coming,
All his foes to overthrow;
And the hidden plots of darkness
All the universe shall know.
O'er his enemies triumphant
He shall reign upon his throne,
Every knee before him bending,
Him the mighty God shall own.

He is coming, he is coming,
And our eyes our Lord shall see;
Long has been the time of watching,
But he's coming now for me.
Floods of joy within are bursting,
As I catch his glorious smile,
He is coming, quickly coming,
He is longing for his child.

What We Believe. No. 1.

It is my intention to write a series of articles on the leading features of the principles that have formed the basis of the faith of the Churches of God for many years. An outline of these principles is given in the upper right hand corner of THE RESTITUTION. It may be safely said that this statement is a fair expression of the faith of the brotherhood quite generally. We as a religious body of people believe the things therein set forth. We hold that they express truth, not only truth in a general way, but essential, saving truth; such, not because we thus hold, or because we so proclaim, but because we find these things revealed in the Word of God. The latter must of course be the basis of all faith relating to salvation. The Scriptures given by inspiration of God are profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works. 2 Tim. iii. 16, 17.

We not only believe these things ourselves, but contend that they ought to be proclaimed to all the world as God's means of reaching and saving men and women from the ruin of sin. That they are truths beyond question; but it is equally true that they are not only neglected but comparatively unknown to many who claim to be Christians, though most clearly stated in the Word of God.

But it may be objected by the uninitiated, "Do you have a creed, and if so, from whence have you the right to frame one?" This question deserves consideration. Creed is from credo, "I believe." Paul said, "I believed, and therefore have I spoken; we also believe, and therefore speak." 2 Cor. iv. 13. But as with all true faith, our faith must have an object, it must have something to believe. "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God." Rom. x 17. The Apostles were commissioned to go and preach the gospel, the glad tidings. These "tidings" were about something; this something was to be credited by those who proclaimed it to others. In this they acted from the same motive which prompted Paul: "I believe, and therefore speak." Not only did they herald their faith by word of mouth, but also penned the things they by faith apprehended, so communicating them to others, and providing for their perpetuation. Were they living in our day they would no doubt utilize the advantages offered by the press to promulgate the truth they themselves believed. Thus the Church has seen fit to set forth concisely the leading features of the things to be believed—not as a barrier but rather as a stimulus to investigation; not as containing every detail embraced in the economy of God as relating to man, but as giving a general outline of the things to be believed and done in order to be saved. This has not only the advantage of defining the faith of the Church, but also of unifying the members, and of making the preaching of the truth harmonious. There was need not only in apostolic times of "unity of faith," but this is indispensible to the obtainment of the object for which the Church exists in the world. For who can not readily imagine the evil that would result from a want of unity among the constituents or a wide difference among the proclaimers of the truth, if each were to promulgate a theory of his own. There always have been in the Church some who, through a lack of proper judgment or for other reasons, manifested an inclination to dwell on certain things, though perhaps in themselves perfectly true and legitimate, at the expense of certain other things. It is to obviate the consequences of such tendencies that the Church says, "We believe."

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, APRIL 23, 1902. NUMBER 16.

I have often wished that we had the matters contained in the statement in our paper printed on a card to hand to persons who enquire about our faith. When thus questioned on the train or in the waiting room, one has not the time, nor is it always prudent, to enter into a formal discussion of what we believe, or what constitutes the difference between ourselves and other people. Each statement should be followed by one or two Scripture references which would be sufficient to show the reader what we believe and why, as for instance, "We believe in the final 'restitution of all things spoken,'" etc. Acts iii. 21. And so on to the end.

Having made these preliminary observations, we will now address ourselves more directly to the task before us. "The restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." What do we mean by restitution? What did the inspired writer mean? "Things" are to be subject to a "restitution." These "things" have been "spoken." God is the One speaking. The agents employed in this were "all his holy prophets since the world began." Now, the question is, What is the meaning and scope of the restitution here spoken of? So far we have omitted the qualifying term "all," which shall now have our attention. Let the emphasis be placed on this word thus: "Restitution of ALL things spoken," etc. By reference to the context (Acts iii. 15-21) the reader will see that some "things" had been uttered "by the mouth of his prophets" which found their fulfilment in the events connected with the crucifixion of Christ; but this did not constitute "all things spoken." "Those things" mentioned in v. 18 are some of the "things spoken," but there are some things whose establishment, fulfilment or accomplishment will be at another time and in another way than by the death of Christ. This he accomplished, but now the heaven must receive him "until the times of restitution of all things which God hath spoken;" etc. Then, when these "times" begin, God will "send Jesus Christ" (20), then, too, will come "the times of refreshing from the face of the Lord," to those who hear and heed that prophet—Christ. To those who refuse submission and "will not hear that prophet" it will mean their utter destruction from among the people. Acts iii. 23. This is, of course, very comprehensive, embracing the entire work of Christ after his second coming.

By placing this at the head of our confession of faith we not only say that we believe in the work of Christ on earth in the future, but indirectly also that we appreciate what he has done in the past; in fact that his accomplished work of making an atonement, establishing for us a covenant securing eternal life, is to us a pledge of good faith on the part of Deity to carry out "all things" he has contemplated and promised to his friends.

In my next I shall deal with "the establishment of the kingdom of God on earth" as one of the "means to this end."

Short Sermons. No 27.

Sincerity plea a delusion. While sincerity is absolutely necessary to salvation, yet the plea that it makes no difference what you believe, just so you are sincere in it, surely is a most fatal delusion, misleading and side-tracing tens of thousands of good honest people. The sincerity plea and the insanity plea are closely allied in their nature and design, and frustrates and cuts off all effort and investigation to find the truth. The Master was not one of those soft, wishy washy kind of preachers, preaching for his bread and butter. Listen to him a moment please, "As he spake these words many believed on him. Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my Word, then are ye my disciples; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Now if men and women who do not know the truth, and do not continue in his Word, can be made free and be his disciples indeed, because they are sincere and honest, then what is the difference between truth and false doctrine? The validity of sincerity was tested long ages ago, when our fore parents were put on trial for life, with truth on one side and false doctrine on the other. The Creator stood for the truth, while the biggest liar in the world stood up and plead his own cause, and opposed the Creator, claiming that the advantage was on his side, and that the Lord knew better than he had taught them, thus charging God with folly. Now who will dare say that it made no difference with them and their children, which one they believed and obeyed? Jesus has told his disciples to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth (the gospel) and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned. These sincerity preachers would surely say that he was very narrow and uncharitable, if they dare say what they thought, and what they do now say about others, who try to follow the Master. There is no saving virtue in a lie or false doctrine, even if millions honestly believe it. Paul says of those who received not the love of the truth that they might be saved, "And for this cause, God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie. That they all might be damned, who believe not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness." While the brethren were chosen unto salvation through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth. Oh, can't you see the difference? The same apostle in his letter to the saints at Ephesus, bears like testimony to the truth. In whom ye also trusted after that ye heard the Word of truth, the gospel of your salvation; in whom also, after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise. If Paul was correct when he said, "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, and if any man preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached, let him be accursed," then it is plain that those who do not believe the gospel of Christ will not be saved. Why? Because they believe in some other gospel—a perverted or corrupted gospel, which will curse or condemn a man who preaches it. And why? Because he is a humbug and an adversary to God, and his gospel is a base counterfeit, and no salvation in it, and all the honesty and sincerity in the world will not save a man who falls into such a net. Do we now seek to please men or God, who trieth our hearts? Paul was honest and as sincere as he could be when going the wrong road. King Saul was no doubt sincere, when he digressed a little from his instructions, and saved some of the cattle and sheep to sacrifice to the Lord, yet it was a dear lesson to him, and cost him his kingdom and his life. All these downfalls and misfortunes are written for our instruction to the intent we may take warning and shun those pitfalls and snares of the enemy. Solomon says there is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death. If a man through mistake takes a dose of poison, will it kill him? Yes, it will kill him unless some one hastens to his rescue with a counter remedy. Sincerity would not save him. A good stomach pump well used would be of far more importance to him. Then if we sincerely believe and imbibe that old theological dose of poison invented and prescribed in Eden, "Ye shall not surely die," will it not kill us? Yes, most assuredly it will kill us, unless pumped out of us; as it was then, and yet is, Satan's deadly dose. Time has not extracted the deadly poison, and turned it to sugar. Many will say in the great judgment day, Lord, Lord, open unto us. These folks who ever they may be, evidently were honest and sincere in their claims, and yet they were sadly disappointed and made a complete failure. Oh, what a lesson of warning to us. Those who preach this sincerity doctrine remind us very much of those Pharisees who shut the kingdom of God against men, will neither go in nor suffer others to go. And if it makes no difference what a man or woman believes, then the old woman was right when she shouted, Glory be to Beelzebub. And then why send missionaries to heathen lands? All such missionaries are a curse instead of a blessing if it makes no difference what men and women believe. Those poor heathen are evidently just as sincere as we are.

The Nature of Man.

"Thou hast clothed me with skin and flesh, and fenced me with bones and sinews." Job x. 11.

Theologians tell us the "me" has no reference to the visible, mortal man, but refers to the invisible, immortal part of man as the possessor of the bone and flesh. By the same reasoning neither is the soul the real immortal, invisible man, as in the first verse the "me" is changed into the possessive and possesses the soul. Neither can the spirit be the invisible, immortal man, because by the same reasoning it is also a possession of the "me" as shown in the twelfth verse.

The ninth verse shows a possibility of the "me" returning to dust, pretty fair proof that the "me" was taken from the dust, lest how could there be a returning?

The nineteenth verse does not throw much light on the invisible, immortal "me" theory. Where Job tells us if he had been carried from birth to the grave, "I (or the me) should have been as though I had not been."

The same "me" that is fenced with "bone and sinews" is the "me" that is to be hid in the grave. Job xiv. 13. So where can the real, invisible, important, immortal theological man be found?

According to their own reasoning it is neither skin, flesh, bone, sinews, life, soul, spirit or breath, (Job xxvii. 3) for all belong to the theological "me."

In the God given history of man's creation no such a being is mentioned. We are told "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man (the man of dust) became a living soul."

There is no mention of an immortal inhabitant taking possession of this living soul in the record. Paul makes no mention of an immortal being in possession of our corruptible bodies; but instead of immortality being lost or hid in mortality, mortality will be swallowed up of immortality. They can not both obtain at once, "First that which is natural, afterward that which is spiritual," is the order given. So be it.

Last Day Pleasures.

E. B. Arnold says: "This truly is a pleasure loving age, and thousands of dollars are spent daily by humanity seeking for pleasure. All kinds of games and sources of amusements are invented to satisfy the abnormal cravings of a pleasure intoxicated people." Brother Arnold's statement agrees with 2 Tim. iii. 1-5, where the following prophetic utterance is made: "This know also, that in the last days * * * men shall be * * * lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God." Reader, these were the words of the Apostle Paul, uttered more than eighteen hundred years ago, and during the closing years of the nineteenth century their fulfillment has appeared to be realized.

"Lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God." As an illustration of the fulfillment of the above prophecy, we append a schedule of prices which prevailed at Metropolitan opera house, in New York City, on the night of Prince Henry's attendance. Brethren think of it! Stall boxes, containing six seats sold for $250.00; stall boxes containing five seats, $200.00; stall boxes, containing four seats, $150.00; rear stall boxes, containing three seats, $100.00; orchestra chairs, $30.00; dress circle $15.00; first rows in balcony $12.50; rear rows in balcony, $10.00; family circle, $5.00; admission, with standing room only $5.00. It is also fitting here that we should note the manner in which one man squandered (spent) thousands and thousands of dollars in order to obtain pleasures. We refer to Corbett, the prize-fighter, society speaks of him as "a good fellow." Here is what he spent (squandered) in seeking for pleasure: spent in the "land of Bohemia" $207.00; living expenses, including rent and servants, $140,000; entertaining friends, $52,000; cigars, individual use, $5,000; clothes, $32,000; travelling at home and abroad for pleasure, $50,000; ten years individual wine bill at $20 per day, $73,000; lost at roulette, $40,000; lost in Wall street, $25,000; lost at faro, $40,000; lost on races, $20,000; lost on prize fights $80,000. Corbett is not the only man who has squandered almost a million dollars in seeking for pleasure. The list of bankrupt pleasure seekers runs up into the thousands.

"Child of God," surely "it" must be in "the time of the end." "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly."

OUR LETTER DRAWER.

Dear, Old Restitution:

We call you old because you have been years telling the glad tidings of the soon coming King, and you are still telling us what to do in this life. We love to read the good letters from those who are holding forth the light, and may it shine forth as the sun and brighten all the weary way. There are so many in this part of the west that have never heard the gospel. How we do wish that we could find some good minister that could come and stay here with us, but it seems impossible to do so. I wish that we could all say as Paul did, "I have fought a good fight, I have kept the faith," but I fear we cannot. The road seems rough sometimes as we are marching on and our trials seem more than we can bear. Sickness and death comes and takes those that are so dear to us, and makes our home so lonely and sad; but we sorrow not as others who have no hope; for if we believe that God raised up Christ from the dead so will he bring all that sleep in the cold embrace of death. May he soon come and redeem this world from sin, these trials seem more than we can bear, but we look to Jesus and find comfort through his words; for he said, I will never leave you nor forsake you, then we take renewed courage and go on and brave the storm, and as we travel on how our hearts do long for the dear Savior to come and make all things new. May God change the hearts of our loved ones that are standing out in the cold sinful world. I tell you dear brothers and sisters, you wonder why our young friends dont come out from among those that walk the broad road, it is because there is so much contention in the church. Now we must be careful what we say and do and not be a stumbling block for them. How can we expect them to come when there is so much thrown in the way. Dear brothers and sisters please remember this, to not be a stumbling block and the cause of one of those dear ones to fall by the way, and not become a child of God; for we want them all to come to a knowledge of the truth as it is in Christ Jesus. I pray that God will bless all and remember that Jesus died that we might live. I am yours in the truth as it is in Christ, and come Lord Jesus, and come quickly.

Your Sister in Christ.
H. M. REED.

Dear Restitution:

Years come and go and with them we experience continuous changes. For many years I have suffered from a derangement of the system. But a few summers ago my neice, Cora Cook visited me. She was in the bloom of health and little did I think then that she would go down into the silent grave before I did; but the good Lord has spared my life, this far and I know not what for; but Cora just in the prime of life was taken with consumption. She was a good girl, the sunshine of her home and beloved by all who knew her. Oh, how deeply I sympathize with her parents. Brothers and sisters, my earnest prayer to God is that her father, brother and sisters may heed her earnest request just the day before she died, that was to secure the blessed hope of life through our blessed Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. In the Holy Word of God we find those comforting words, "All things work together for good to those who love the Lord." We all meet with troubles and sorrows here, but blessed be God our Father, that in the hour of darkness and gloom we can reach out the hand of faith and lay hold of the eternal promises of God. Oh, can it be true that we shall soon see Jesus our glorious King who will usher in everlasting peace. Yes, there will be no more sickness, pain nor death to tear from us our brightest and loved ones; but they shall be restored to us never to part again.

May we grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, who is the Author and Finisher of our faith. May we prove faithful to the end and enter into that rest that remaineth to the people of God.

The light of smiles shall fill again
The lids that overflow with tears,
And weary hours of grief and pain
Are promises of happier years.

There is a day of sunny rest
Although we feel our present pain,
And hope a brighter, happier sphere,
Will give our loved ones back again.

Nor let the good man's trust depart
For God has marked each sorrowing day
And numbered every secret tear,
While here we tread life's bitter way.

An Aunt of the deceased one,
S. F. MORGAN.

Wrong Standards.

Our standards of success or failure are material. We say: "Did you hear of the great misfortune that has come to our friend Brown?"

"Why, no; what is the matter?"

"Why, he has lost everything he had in the world."

"What! has he lost his character? Has he lost his conscience? Has he lost his health? Has he lost his wife and children?"

"Oh, no; but he has lost his money; he has not a cent left after paying his debts."

"And do you know of the great success gained by our friend Smith?"

"No, I am glad to hear it. Has he conquered that great habit of lying that he had? Has he left off drinking and swearing, and has he become an honest, clean man?"

Oh, no; but he has been elected to congress."

And the mind stands dumb before the vision of great possibilities.—Dr. Wayland.

To be neutral on questions which involve the interests of thousands and millions, is to surrender to that which you know to be wrong, and from which only ruin can come. Take the liquor traffic—the crowning sin of this age, the master-piece of Satan's work, and where would it be, if men and women who know it to be a wrong, would only take an attitude in opposition to it.

WHEN YOUR TIME IS OUT PLEASE RENEW.

M. JOBLIN, SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, APRIL 23, 1902.

As there are five Wednesdays in this month our next issue will bear date of May 7th.

"I HAVE been a great deal happier since I have given up thinking about what is easy and pleasant, and being discontented because I couldn't have my own way."

RESIGN every forbidden joy: restrain every wish that is not referred to God's will; banish all eager desires, all anxiety; desire only his will; seek him alone, and you will have peace.

WE complain that we have "no time" for this that or the other thing that should be done. We once read of an Indian Chief of the Six Nations who said a wiser thing than any philosopher. A white man remarked in his hearing, that he had not time enough. Well, replied Red Jacket, gruffly, "I suppose you have all there is!"

MANNING says:—"We never have more than we can bear. The present hour we are always able to endure. As our day, so is our strength. If the trials of many years were gathered into one, they would overwhelm us: therefore in pity to our little strength, he sends first one, then another, then removes both, and lays on a third, heavier, perhaps, than either; but all is so measured to our strength that the bruised reed is never broken."

Passing Events in the Light of Prophecy.

We compile the following from Glad Tidings:

The Franco-Russian Announcement regarding their position in the Far East is the reply of France and Russia to the Anglo-Japanese Agreement. They express themselves fully satisfied to find in it (the agreement) the essential principles which they themselves have on several occasions declared established, and which remain the basis of their policy. But it must occur to every one as highly significant that they have issued a Joint Announcement, more especially in view of what follows: "Nevertheless, they themselves being also obliged to take into consideration the eventuality of aggressive action on the part of a third power or fresh troubles in China jeopardizing the integrity and free development of that country, and becoming a menace to their own interests, the two allied governments reserve it to themselves to consider in such a case means for assuring their protection."

The Economist points out that a war between France and Russia on the one side and England and Japan on the other will not be carried on only in the far east. The part assigned to France will be to attack England at whatever point she is supposed to be most vulnerable. It is necessary to keep this fact in view, because unless it be remembered Englishmen will not make adequate preparations to meet the duties and the burdens which their new alliance lays upon them.

The Paris Tempo says: It is self-evident that Great Britain and Japan cannot be constituted as the exclusive guardians and protectors of the status quo in the far East. To obviate any misunderstanding, any misapprehensions, and consequently any conflict, France and Russia have reserved to themselves also the right of defending their interests and the integrity of China.

Commenting on the presenting of the joint note to China, the Times correspondent at Pekin states that China has learned for the first time that Russia is really solicitous to maintain the integrity of China. Russia's actions hitherto have effectively concealed that such was her desire.

A great game is being played on the international chess board, and a false move may lead to the inevitable conflict which must sooner or later come. The times are indeed full of significance to those who are looking for a time of trouble as a prelude to the better day when nations under Divine rule will dwell in peace and righteousness.

The rebellion in Southern China is spreading. The Imperial troops appear to be unable to suppress it. It may lead to the "fresh trouble" which seems to be anticipated in the Franco-Russian Announcement.

Turkey appears to be going from bad to worse. Ruter's correspondent at Constantinople says the Russian Ambassador has more than once recently drawn the attention of the Porte to the state of the country and advising the government to take severe measures for the suppression of lawless bands, and the Daily Chronicle correspondent says a meeting of the ambassadors of the powers to consider the matter will be held shortly.

The Money Market Review says, the one broad fact with which all the world is acquainted is the Ottoman Treasury has drifted into a position so precarious that there is no knowing what may happen unless something be done to arrest the ship on its way to bankruptcy. The Hirsch millions might be opportunely used for the deliverance of Israel from Gentile oppression by providing a haven of rest for them in the only province of the Turkish Empire that shows signs of prosperity."

Light is Spreading.

Westcott's gospel of the resurrection, pp. 6, 138 is quoted in Dr. A. J. Gordon's Ecce Venit, p. 246 as saying, "Not infrequently we substitute for the fulness of the Christian creed, the purely philosophical conception of an immortality of the soul, which destroys, as we shall hereafter see, the idea of the continuance of our distinct personal existence. Nothing is more common than to hear it assumed that the soul is the whole self. Yet nothing can be more clear upon reflection than that the only self of which we are conscious is made up of soul and body." And then Dr. Gordon adds, after referring to Enoch and Elijah:—"With such a vision before our eyes, we should cease talking of the immortality of the soul, as though we knew not that God had provided some better thing for us. It is a lamentable apostasy from Paulism to Platonism to substitute the hope of being "unclothed" for that of being "clothed upon." Let philosophers dream of a naked immortality as man's highest estate in the life to come, but we will be content with nothing less than God's full provision of this mortal putting on immortality. Therefore the conception of the body as the Spirit's clog and prison-house should find no place in a Christian eschatology.....But the transfiguration will for ever abolish such an anomaly, giving us a winged body in the place of a weighted spirit. If heathen mere lism spoke the best it knew in the famous saying of Plotinus, that "he was thankful he was not tied to an immortal body, let not Christianity fail to speak the best it knows in the rejoicing of its disciples that they shall be untied, indeed, from this mortal, but only to be translated in an immortal body: "They shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run and not be weary; they shall walk and not faint."

"Only Believe."

The above is the title of a small tract which sets forth the idea that if men will "only believe" that Jesus died to save them, they will be saved. It is an important for those who have God's Word to speak it faithfully now, as it was in the days of Jeremiah. Chaff compares no better with wheat now than it did then (Jer. xxiii. 28) and for that reason we will look into this easy way of being saved. It is true the Savior of men uttered these words "Only Believe," (Mark v. 36) but what was he speaking about? Had he been preaching the

to the multitude, and then appealed to them in these words to believe it if they would share the salvation it offered? A mere glance at the context is sufficient to show that the words "only believe" did not relate in any way to God's great salvation; but were addressed by Jesus to the ruler of the synagogue, whose little daughter was lying at the point of death, and who had besought Jesus to come and heal her. While on the way to the house word was brought to the father that and therefore it was useless to trouble the Master farther. On hearing the message, Jesus said to the ruler of the synagogue, "Be not afraid, ONLY BELIEVE." If it would be dishonest in business matters to sell a piece of real estate with no clearer evidence of title than this,—how much more wicked must it be to deceive others in reference to eternal things! We do not say any willfully do this. But [illegible] that mitigate the consequences? Will a man be saved by believing that Jesus died to save him, because some one told him it was a fact? When there are many passages which clearly show what man must do to be saved, why wrest a passage out of its connection and cause others to upon what is without foundation in truth? It must be because he who does it, is himself deluded. The blind is leading the blind, and the Word of the Lord for it, they are not saved because they know no better,—"They both fall into the ditch." Matt. xv. 14. This was no new doctrine. Seven hundred years before the words of Jesus were uttered, the Spirit by Isaiah said, "For the leaders of this people cause them to err,—and they that are led of them or, as margin, swallowed up. In all these deluded teachers a supposed spark of divinity causes them to put a false, swollen estimate upon man: and say God is determined to save as many as possible, even if it oblige him to modify conditions clearly expressed and published,—and so prevent the in them. Having come to that conclusion, they presume to make the terms easier; themselves, as in the text quoted, as also in the words, "Jesus only" in Mark ix. 8. They form part of the description of the Transfiguration, and any intelligent person can see they have no reference whatever to believing in "Jesus only," as they are made to mean. Truly those who will select two or three words and use them as being the sum and substance of the gospel,

THE CHILD WAS DEAD

"WREST THE SCRIPTURES to their own destruction." 2 Pet. iii. 16. There are two verses used frequently in the same way: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved," Acts xvi. 31, and "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved." Rom. x. 9. This is intended, as a "short cut," or a near, easy way to be saved; all the verbiage respecting the covenant ratified by and by virtue of which Christ himself was raised from the dead is dispensed with; Heb. [illegible] 20, and the gospel of the kingdom to be preached in all the world under the great commission is omitted as a useless appendage; repentance toward God and remission of sins preached in Jesus' name are not worthy of mention,—and as to putting on Christ by baptism, no account is taken of it whatever. But the objection to us will be made here, that "It SAYS believe on the

and thou shalt be saved." "It SAYS if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved," and that is enough for me. But while we are sorry to hear that, we cannot let the matter rest there in view of the abundant testimony at hand. As to the first passage, in Acts xvi. 31, the very next verse says, "and they spake unto him the

WORD OF THE LORD,

and to all that were in his house." This same Paul in Rom. i. 16 says, "The GOSPEL OF CHRIST is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." And the words of the jailer, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" shows that it was the gospel of Christ he needed to believe. Can it be doubted that Paul kept from him the very thing that would save him, and nothing else could save him, seeing the apostle was in the

SAVING BUSINESS?

This is evidence that the WORD of the Lord, spoken to him was the GOSPEL of the Lord, and now the objector can see exactly what it is to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, viz: "to believe his gospel; and in the next place he should note that it was after the WORD was preached that he was baptized, agreeing with the commission, Mark xvi. 16, "He that believeth, and is baptized shall be saved." And he can turn to Rom. x. 8, and see that that Paul preached to the jailer has to be believed by the Romans and all others,—and that to confess the Lord Jesus by word of mouth, is to confess with the mouth the gospel of the Lord Jesus, and the raising of the Lord Jesus from the dead by God is part and parcel of the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ seeing it is distinctly stated that he was for our justification. And, inasmuch as the 17th verse of Rom. x., says "faith cometh by hearing the Word of God,"—and Heb. xi. 6, says: "But without faith it is impossible to please him (God)" we hope that some one will be led to see the futility of trying to improve upon God's plain way of saving men from sin and death to life and glory.

We were intending to add no more, but a thought occured to us in connection with the "Disciple Congress" recently held in Cleveland. Paul tells us he and his brethren were built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ being the chief cornerstone. And he also states elsewhere that "the standeth sure." The Denomination referred to did not build upon apostles and prophets. Their gospel began with New Testament times instead of away back in patriarchal times,—and to this may be attributed the fact that, judging from one of the public addresses, the system has outlived its usefulness. The Rev. Wm. Oeschger, of Vincennes, Indiana, said:

"We need a new evangelism. The old is a misfit, and does not reach men as it should. The new evangelism will be a fact evangelism. The reign of the authority of truth will mean the millennium. We are living in a new age. Almost every science has undergone a new birth within a comparatively recent period. Everything seems different from what it did fifty years ago. Along with the new conception of life, Christian people should awake to the fact that the present is not the age of their grandfathers,—and up-to-date methods must be adopted." We take this to mean that their sails must be trimmed to the wind.

The Bereans Column.

[Under this heading the society of "Bereans" of Illinois, will supply the copy, and endeavor to fill the space once a month.]

Dear Bereans:

I thought I would write a short letter for the column this month, to let you know how much I enjoy reading these articles from the different members. I wish to thank those who have so readily responded by sending letters to be published. I am so glad to see you take hold of the work as you have. Let us not grow weary, but let us remain active, for I believe it is a means of spiritual growth especially to the isolated members, for by reading and writing these articles we feel as though we were united in one common interest. Since I have started this letter a portion of Scripture keeps running through my mind; it is the first three verses of the third chapter of 1 John. It seems to me that John attained unto the highest degree of spirituality in this life. He seems to breathe that spirit in the first verse when he says, "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us." He sees the great love that God has for us. How different the Scripture seems to us, when we look upon God as a Father of love instead of one of vengeance. It seems to cast a great light over many things that were a mystery before, and it also changes our attitude to him, for love begets love. It is equally true that hatred begets hatred, so when the true character and designs of our Creator are realized in the human mind love in return for love rises in the heart. The practice of making wrong representations of God's designs towards us has an opposite effect. It drives them away from serving God or causes them to enter into the service as a slave giving unwillingly, and for the purpose of escaping judgment. But going back to the lesson, how did God bestow his love upon us? He showed his great love to us by allowing us to be called the sons of God, that is we are his sons by adoption, if sons, then heirs and joint heirs with Christ; but he goes on further and says, "Now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be," so we see that something better is awaiting us in the future. It is this, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. When will this be? When we die and go to heaven to meet him? No, it is when he shall appear, and not till then. At this time if we are Christ's, then our bodies will be changed and fashioned after that of our blessed Master. Mark what John says in the third verse of this same chapter, "and every one that hath this hope in him purifieth himself even as he is pure." What a wonderful incentive it is to try and live a pure life, if we have such a hope. The bride of Christ must be like him pure, and he that hath this blessed hope of his appearing and the glorious things that will take place at that time, purifieth himself even as he is pure. Such purification does not consist of outward forms of religious ceremonies, but the purity of the heart, for man looketh upon the outward appearance, but God looketh upon the heart.

LILLIE MYERS.

CHRISTIAN LOVE. 1 JOHN iv. 7, 8.

What is more Christian like than love, for in 1 John iv. 7, 8, we find, "Beloved let us love one another, for love is of God, and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not, knoweth not God; for God is love." How often we forget this when we are angry, and how often we give vengeance in some way. Were we to think twice and remember that God so loved us that he gave his only begotten Son for us, that in return we ought to remember to set our affection on things above, not on things on the earth and not avenge ourselves unto wrath, for it is written that vengeance is the Lord's and he will repay. Let our love be without dissimulation, be kindly affectioned one, to another for the night is far spent and the day is at hand. So let us cast off all darkness and put on the armor of love is my prayer.

ELSIE GESIN.

OBEDIENCE.

Dear Bereans:

To be obedient to our Father is an advice that cannot be too often given. We read in Rom. v. 19, "For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous." Dear friends, let all of us be obedient to God, for he is watching us and will reward us for our obedience. The Bible tells us that we must cast down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing in captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ. Dear brothers and sisters, let us be obedient and faithful unto the end, is my prayer.

Your Brother.

CHAS. LINDSAY.

Obituary.

Died, at the home of his parents, George and Lillie Huffman, their little son, Walter Lee, lacking a few days of being six months old, of what the doctor called a light form of scarlet fever. It was only two days until death claimed him as his victim, breaking into that family circle for the first time, which consisted of papa, mamma, two boys and two girls, the eldest and youngest being boys. They were so proud of their boy baby, and he was a large, healthy, fine looking baby to be cut off so soon. How my heart goes out in sympathy to them as I see their heads bowed in sorrow, and their hearts sore in anguish; for I have three times passed through that ordeal, although we know our children will come back from the land of the enemy. It seems like the rod of affliction is heavy for us to bear, it makes us feel our weakness and helplessness. We had no funeral sermon, just the neighbors speaking a few words of sympathy and singing that sweet hymn which made us feel good though filled with sorrow, "We'll Never say Good By in Eden." It is a joyful thought to think there is such a time coming. There are not many but what have felt the pangs of good-by. Let us strive for that home where there is no sorrowing, no crying, no death, no good-bye's. It is surely worth striving for.

Ever your Sister in Christ, waiting our coming King.

MARTHA W. HUFFMAN.

Do you know that when an individual is out of the line of duty he is apt to think that everything said along that line is hurled at him? We have been called to account in this way when we had no more direct reference to the one thus offended than the man in the moon. Sensitiveness is a trait of character that predominates very largely in these last days. Showers of grace in the form of spring showers is the best method to win men, yet it may be best at times to condense the truth and hurl it hard enough to knock a man down, even if he does think the devil hit him. Let him think so; he will learn better after awhile.—Bible Advocate.

"The wages of sin is death." I cannot interpret such a text to mean anything less than the extinction of life. I have come to believe in the probable annihilation of those who persist in sin. The word death, as applied to the soul, is a death that means total extinction."—Chas. M. Sheldon.

More Faith.

I hear men everywhere praying for more faith, but when I listen to them carefully and get at the real heart of their prayers, very often it is not more faith at all that they are wanting, but a change from faith to sight.

"What shall I do with sorrow that God has sent me?"

"Take it up and bear it and get strength and blessing out of it."

"Ah, if I only knew what blessing there is in it, if I saw how it would help me, then I could bear it. What shall I do with this hard hateful duty which Christ has laid right in my way?"

"Do it, and grow by doing it."

"Ah, yes, if I could only see that it would make me grow!"

In both of these cases you do not see that what you are begging for is not more faith, although you think it is, but sight.

You want to see for yourself the blessing in the sorrow, the strength in the hard and hateful task.

Faith says not, "I see that it is good for me, and so God must have seen it," but "God sent it, and so it must be good for me."

Faith, walking in the dark with God, only prays him to clasp its hand more closely; does not even ask him for the lighting of the darkness so that the man may find the way himself.—Phillips Brooks.

The Coming One.

From Enoch down to the present time the voice, "Behold he cometh," has rung through earth's domain. Prophets, and sons and daughters of prophets, have echoed it over all lands. The imagery of man and the symbolism of wild beasts of the forest have said, "The night is far spent the day is at hand." The numbers of Daniel and Revelation, the history from the Babylonian kingdom to the downfall of the papal power in 1870, have signally said, "Behold he cometh with clouds and every eye shall see him."

We need no historical clippings to understand the fifth chapter of James, and the first five verses of 2 Timothy, third chapter. Knowledge has increased beyond all past ages. The mind is bewildered by the contemplation of its marvelous achievements in the nineteenth century. And all nations are preparing for war as never before in this world's history, while the world and the church go hand in hand. Yet, amid all these things comes the admonition to all who love Christ, "Be ye also ready;" "Ye brethren are not in darkness." Hence, those who are looking and waiting for the coming one may lift up their heads and rejoice, knowing that he will shortly come. "Amen! Even so, come Lord Jesus."

Joseph's Canal.

There is a canal in Egypt more than 4000 years old. It was built by the government under the direction of "Joseph, the brother of Benjamin, the son of Rachel and Jacob, the son of Isaac, the son of Abraham, the chosen of the Lord." It is known as the Bahr Jousouf. It waters the province of Fayoum, endowing it with fertility and supporting a large population all these centuries, has been an important aid to commerce. It leaves the Nile at Asiut and runs almost parallel with it for 250 miles, until it gains an eminence as compared with the river bed which enables it to turn westward through a narrow pass seventeen feet above the mean level of the river and enter a district otherwise shut off from the fertilizing floods on which all Egypt depends. Herodotus, Strabo and Pliny, declare that the construction of this canal furnished a channel of navigation and irrigation to an entire province, and moderated the climate so as to make it habitable.—The Chicago Record.

Keeping Sweet Under Trials.

A tourist writes of a spring as sweet as any that ever gushed from sunny hillside, which one day he found by the sea, when the tide had ebbed away. Taking his cup he tasted of the water, and it was clear and sweet. Soon the tide came in again, and poured its bitter surf over the little spring, hiding it out of sight. When the tide ebbed away again, the tourist stood once more by the spring to see if the brackish waves had left their bitterness in its water; but they were flowing as sweet as ever.

So it may be in the heart of the Christian when floods of bitter trial and sorrow roll over his life. From secret wells the sweet waters flow, crystal and fresh as ever.

A Life Lesson.

Give while you live;
Your dying gift may fail
To hush the world's sad wail;
Your gold laid up with care
An enemy may share;
The shameless prodigal
Perchance may waste it all.

Give, and the influence
May save from rank offense
The children of your love;
Lay up such wealth above
Since God gives back the price
Of all your sacrifice.

Genesis. Chap. 44.

1. And Jooseeph directed the one over his household, saying, Fill the pouches of the men with food, all that they can carry, and put each one's money in the mouth of the pouch

2. And my drinking cup, the silver one put into the pouch of the younger one and the price of his grain; and it came to pass according to the word of Jooseeph even as he had said.

3. And the morning dawned and the men were sent away, they and their asses.

4. And when they had gone out of the city, and had not got far, Jooseeph also said unto the man over his household, Arise, pursue after the men and apprehend them, and thou shalt say unto them, Why have ye returned wicked for good? Why have ye stolen my silver-drinking cup?

5. Is not this the one in which my lord driuketh? And he divineth with it (the particular way here was by watching the flights of birds) ye have consummated wickedness in what ye have done.

6. And finding them he spake unto them according to these words.

7. And they said, Why doth the lord talk according to these words? May it not have occurred to thy house-servants to have done according to this word.

8. If we returned the money which we found in our pouches unto thee from the land of Chanaan, how would we steal from out the house of thy lord silver or gold?

9. With whomsoever of thy house-servants thou shalt find the cup, let him be put to death, and moreover we will be house-servants for our lord.

10. And he said, Now it will be even as ye say. With whomsoever the cup be found he shall be my house servant, but ye shall be clean.

11. And they hasted and took down each one his pouch upon the ground, and they opened each one his pouch.

12. And he searched, beginning from the elder till he came to the younger, and found the drinking cup in the pouch of Benjamin.

13. And they rent their outer-garments, and put each one his pouch upon his ass and returned to the city.

14. And Joudas and his brethren went in unto Jooseeph, he being still there, and they fell down before him on the ground.

15. And Jooseeph said, What is this thing which ye have done? Did ye not know that a man such as I am is accustomed to divine?

16. And Joudas said, What shall we say, in reply to our lord, or what shall we talk or in what way may we have been justified? God hath found out the iniquity of thy house-servants, Lo, we are members of our lord's household, both we and the one with whom the drinking-cup was found.

17. And Jooseeph said, No, may it not have been mine to do this word. The man with whom the drinking-cup was found, he shall be my house servant; but do ye go up with salvation unto your father.

18. And Joudas drew nigh unto him and said, I pray thee, lord, let thy house-servant speak a word in thy presence, and be not angry with thy house-servant because thou art in close relation to Pharaoo.

19. O lord, thou didst ask thy house-servants saying, Have ye a father or a brother?

20. And we said unto our lord, We have a father, an old man, and he hath a boy, a younger child of his old age, and his brother is dead, and he alone is left to his mother, and the father loveth him.

21. And thou didst say unto thy house servants, Lead him down unto me and I will care for him.

22. And we said unto our lord, The boy cannot leave his father; and if he should leave the father he will die.

23. And thou didst say unto thy house-servants, If your younger brother doth not come down with you ye shall not again see my face.

24. And it came to pass when we had gone up to thy house-servant our father, we told him the words of our lord.

25. And our father said, Go again market for us a little food.

26. And we said, We are not able to go down, but if our younger brother may go down with us we will go down; for we cannot see the man's face, should our younger brother not be with us.

27. And thy house-servant our father said unto us, Ye know that my wife bore me two sons.

28. And one went from me, and ye said that he was devoured by wild beasts, and I have not seen him until now.

29. If then ye should take this one from my face, and sickness should meet him on the journey, ye will lead down my old age also with sorrow to hades (the grave).

30. Now then if we should go our way unto thy house-servant and our father and the boy be not with us, his soul hangeth on the soul of this one.

31. And it will be, when he seeth that the boy is not with us, he will come to his end, and thy house-servants will lead down the old age of thy house-servant and our father with sorrow to the grave.

32. For thy house-servant was given the boy from the father, I saying, If I do not lead him unto thee, and stand him in thy sight, I shall have sinned against the father all the days.

33. Now then I will remain with thee as thy house-servant of my lord: and let the boy go up with his brethren.

34. For how shall I go up unto the father, the boy not being with us? May I not have seen the calamities that will find my father.

COMMENT.

In 4th verse R. V. omits last clause entirely, "Why have ye stolen my silver drinking-cup"? namely, a singular omission to say the least, it being the gist of their offense for which they were being arrested.

Neither does the expression in the 7th verse R. V. "God forbid" appear in the text.

Neither is the term "bondman" or "bondmen" used in this chapter as given in the R. V.

The two words used for "servant" here are "pais" and "oiketees." "Doulos" is the word for "bond-servant" and such a servant has had his last chance to be a freeman and has voluntarily chosen servitude for life because he loved his lord more than liberty.

Change of Dispensations. No 4.

The two mountains which "were mountains of brass," Zech. vi. 1, however insignificent they may seem in themselves, form no mean factor in the change of dispensation now progressing, as they enclose in the figure, four certain systems of events portrayed by the four chariots, (corresponding to the four horses of Rev. vi. 8,) which emerge from between them, thus enabling us to locating the point of time during which those events must occur, and so strengthen our faith in their identity when we see them, and it behooves us to search the Scriptures for the right interpretation of the figures employed; and (1) the mountains of brass.

A mountain, in Scripture, is used to represent a kingdom. In Dan. ii. 35-44, the stone that smote the image and then became a great mountain, represented the kingdom of God, and Babylon also was spoken of by Jeremiah as a destroying mountain, Jer. li. 25, and again in Zech. vi. 7, as a great mountain which is to become a plain. The kingdom of Greece is represented by the belly and sides of brass in the image of Dan. 2nd Chap., which with the foregoing gives us a clue to the identity of the kingdom of Greece, when the vision of two mountains of brass is presented to us; but another figure is used to represent the kingdom of Greece, to-wit, the leopard beast of Dan. vii.

With this much of the great "cipher code" before us, we proceed to notice briefly (1) the past history of Greece and (2) its future, as written on the page of inspiration; but in tracing the history of the Grecian nation, we must bear in mind the decree of inspiration as written, Dan. vi. 12. "As concerning the rest of the beasts, (the leopard being one of them) they had their dominion taken away, yet their lives were prolonged for a season and time, and then not forget as we proceed, to carefully discriminate between the authority of the Grecian state and the far-reaching influence of Grecian literature and religion; and at the same time remember that while the 4th kingdom, (Rome) was to be divided Dan. ii. 41, it was to continue in its divided state till it was superceded by the kingdom of God.

No matter by what name the historian designates it, or what division is spoken of, whether of Rome as the Western empire, or of the Byzantine empire, Eastern empire, or Grecian empire, it is still the Roman state or one of its divisions designated; while on the other hand, as we shall see, though their language, customs, manners, learning, arts and taste spread over the whole Roman empire, yet the Greeks never gained their independence as a nation after being conquered by the Romans, till the year of our Lord 1863.

The days of Grecian supremacy came in between those of the Medo-Persians and the Romans, and the Greeks ceased to be an independent nation more than a century before the Christian Era commenced. See Maunder Treasure of History, page 5, chap. 6, also page 62. On page 50 Maunder writes, "In the time of Augustus the Greeks lost even the shadow of their former freedom and ceased to be an independent people, although their manners, customs, learning, arts, and taste spread over the whole Roman empire. The character of the nation was now sunk so low, that the Romans esteemed a Greek as the most worthless of creatures.

Asiatic luxury had wholly corrupted them, their ancient love of freedom and independence was extinguished; and a mean servility was substituted in its place. At the beginning of the fourth century, the nation scarcely showed a trace of the noble characteristics of their fathers."

Again, on page 789 he says, "We have seen.....to what a state of degradation the Greeks were reduced in a few centuries after their subjugation by the Romans; thus it continued as long as it was either really or nominally a portion of the Roman empire till at length, like the imperial mistress of the world herself it bent before the all subduing Alaric, the Goth, A. D. 400 and shared in all the miseries which were brought by the northern barbarians, who successively overran and ravaged the south of Europe.

After the Latin conquest of Constantinople in 1204, Greece was divided into feudal principalities, and governed by a variety of Norman, Venician, and Frankish nobles; but in 1261, with the exception of Athens and Nauplia, it was reunited to the Greek empire by Michael Paleeologus. But it did not long remain unmolested; for the Turks then rising into notice aimed at obtaining power in Europe; and Amurath II. deprived the Greeks of all their cities and castles on the Euxine Sea and along the coasts of Thrace, Macedon, and Thessaly; carrying his victorious arms, in short, into the midst of the Peloponesus." According to Maunder from 1261 till 1863, about 600 years the Grecians chafed under the Turkish yoke, but in tracing their history, he blends it with that of eastern Rome, under the title of "the Grecian Empire," probably because Greece was re-united to eastern Rome at that time, and both Greece and the rest of the eastern empire were overrun by the Turk; but from the commencement of the Greek revolution in 1821, he resumes the separate thread of Greek history, page 790, and gives a description of the final struggle, which ended in 1863 with complete independence for Greece. After the revolution had lasted six years the great powers of Europe intervened in behalf of Greece and "a treaty which had for its object the pacification of Greece, by putting to an end the sanguinary contest between the Porte and its Grecian subjects, was signed at London on the 6th of July 1827, by the ministers of Great Britain, France and Russia." See Mam. Treas. Hist. page 484, and establishing, under certain tributary stipulations, the independence of Greece, page 796. At the end of 5 years more, in 1832, a qualified independence was secured for Greece as a tributary to Turkey, with Otho, selected by the ministers of the three powers, as sovereign prince. See page 797. This lasted 30 years, and during the year 1862, two insurrections against his authority occurred in Greece." The first which was entirely military was promptly repressed; the second was bloodless, yet wholly successful.

The king left his capital to visit the Peloponesus, and on his return found himself shut out of Athens. Thus far the revolution had been disgraced by no single crime. Otho and his Bavarians had been expelled; a provisional government carried on the administration of the country, and the universal choice of the country had demanded Prince Alfred, the second son of Queen Victoria as their future king. To this request the British government returned a firm refusal. Such was the state of affairs at the end of 1862, when the Greeks had their future on their own hands, and the great powers showed no disposition to interfere. It was a golden opportunity, but it was easier to point out their wants than to predict their action. The Greeks at length elected as their king, Prince George of Denmark, the son of the present Danish sovereign and brother of the Prince of Wales, page 800. Their independence lasted till the Turko-Grecian war broke out in the spring of 1897, and when the Turks had practically conquered them, the great powers of Europe again intervened and prevented Greece from falling into the hands of the Turks and converted it into a Russian vassalage. Thus ended the first of "two mountains" which were "mountains of brass."

But one more intervention on the part of the great powers of Europe must occur (when the leopard beast must come boldly to the front, Rev. xiii. 2) this time to extend the dominion of the Grecian king toward the south and toward the east and toward the pleasant land, and give him his power and his seat and great authority. Thus establishing the second of the two mountains, which were mountains of brass. But this cannot occur till the vision of the four chariots, Zech. vi. (4 horses Rev. vi.) is fulfilled, for the four chariots come out from between the two mountains of brass, and if the foregoing premises are correct, no other place can be assigned them to appear Scripturally, than between Jan. 30, 1898, and the appearance of the leopard beast just before the second advent of our Lord.

A Word of Admonition.

Paul an Apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God to the saints and faithful in Christ Jesus, which are at Ephesus. (Eph. i. 1.) He like the apostle Peter in his epistles in writing to the churches, stirs up their minds by way of remembrance, so in the 2nd chapter we find this statement, "Wherefore remember that in times past ye were Gentiles in the flesh called uncircumcision by that which is called circumcision in the flesh made by hands; that at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world." He is holding up as it were a mirror wherein is reflected their former condition, and bringing this fact very clearly and forcibly to their minds, strangers, aliens, foreigners, no God, no Christ, no hope. Can any one conceive of any worse condition to be in? Yet at this present day how many there are who are in this condition. Many willfully, so many through ignorance, which ever way it is the effect is the same. These words stand out just as boldly and just as true as when they were uttered by the apostle. Now many of the churches this winter have been holding revival meetings, or in other words canvassing for members, so that there may be a few more pennies coming into the church treasury. In these meetings there is considerable excitement worked up, for this is what they depend on to convert sinners, and when they are worked up to a certain degree they invite them to come forward and wrestle with God in prayer, and not let go until they had found peace and salvation. Oh, what a deception, deceived and being deceived. These words of the apostle sound out in clarion tones. Strangers, foreigners, aliens, without God, without Christ, without hope. The question comes very forcible to the mind of a man in Christ. How can they pray to God when they have none? No Christ as an advocate, mediator and high priest to offer their prayer, without hope. This is certainly an awful condition to be in. You may find perhaps here and there one who realize their condition and get out of it by a knowledge and belief of the gospel and obey the command by being baptized into Christ, and by so doing placing themselves in the condition where they have God and Christ and hope, one that is anchored within the vail sure and steadfast. I know a man, one whom I think considerable of, he is a good living man and has brought his family up the same. He is well acquainted with the covenants of promise and he is not afraid to tell it to others when an opportunity presents itself. In my conversation with him I found out that he was at one time a Baptist, having joined that church. He believed in the immortality of the soul going to heaven at death, etc. By some means he got to learn the truths as advocated by THE RESTITUTION and can converse readily with any one on these subjects, but he has never been baptized since he learned the truth therefore was not baptized into Christ. I endeavored to show him the position he was in, that he would have no part or lot in the great salvation. God's plan of salvation was to believe the gospel, then be baptized. When he joined the Baptist Church he was ignorant of the gospel and therefore did not have a saving faith. He knew nothing of the covenants of promise, therefore he was among that class, strangers, foreigners, aliens, no God, no Christ, no hope. My heart went out to him in sorrow to think how he was deceiving himself, believing that he was all right without being immersed into the all-saving name of Jesus the Christ. I have not seen him for a long time, but sincerely hope that his eyes have been opened, and that he has obeyed from the heart the truth that saves, and not error.

Religion: What is it?

Religion is a subject about which a good deal is said, but it is little understood, even among the professedly religious people. There is no true religion without faith; nor any true faith without the belief of the truth. Now, although a Scriptural faith is the rarest thing among men, it is exceedingly simple, and by no means difficult to acquire, when it is sought for aright. Paul gives the best definition of faith to be found. He says: "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Heb. xi. 1. This is the faith without which, he tells us, God is not pleased. It is a faith which lays hold of the past, as well as the future. The person who possesses it knows what is testified concerning Jesus by the prophets and apostles, and is fully persuaded of its truth; he also knows the exceeding great and precious promises which God has made concerning things to come, and he confidently anticipates the literal fulfilment of them. Laying hold of these things with a firm faith he acquires a mode of thinking and a disposition which are estimable in the sight of God; and being like Abraham in these things, he is prepared by immersion into the Christ—the way into the fold—to become a son of the father of the faithful, and of the friend of God.

This faith comes by studying the Scriptures; as it is written, "Faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God." Rom. x. 17. When this Word is understood, and allowed to make its own impression in "a good honest heart," faith establishes itself there. It is impossible for a man ignorant of God's Word to have faith. But some may say, there are multitudes who believe in Christ, who are very ignorant of the Scriptures. Yes, they believe in Christ as Turks believe in Mahommed. But this is not the faith defined by Paul. The mere belief that Jesus is the Son of God is not believing in him. It is testified that "the devils also believe and tremble." To believe in Jesus is to believe what God testifies in his Word concerning him. The "religious world" professes to believe in Jesus; but it is ignorant, and therefore faithless, of the message he was sent to deliver to Israel. His message had reference to "the things hoped for"—to the things of the Kingdom which the God of heaven will set up upon the ruins of the kingdoms which now exist. The testimony of God is: "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever." Dan. ii. 44. This is the testimony of God "IN THE DAYS of these kings," not a thousand years later, not after a thousand years of desolation of the earth. Again, the testimony of God is that "The righteous shall never be removed; but the wicked shall not inherit the earth." The testimonies of men and women may be that the earth is to be destroyed, but Jesus is coming to make a huge bonfire of it, and that the righteous are to be taken away to a place, as some describe it, "beyond the bounds of time of space." Reader, believe them not, for if they speak not in accordance with the Word of God, it is because there is no light in them, though they may profess to be prophets or prophetesses. Men are invited to believe in the Messenger of [illegible] in the message which unfolds the things of the covenant. To believe one and reject the other is stultification. The "religious world" has placed itself in this predicament, and unless it believes the truth as it is in Christ Jesus, and does as he did, that is, keep his Father's commandments, which at present seems unlikely, it will be cut off as was Israel in the days of old.

Love is the keynote of religion, and it is testified that "Love is the fulfilling of the law." Rom. xiii. 10. "He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me"; "If any man loveth me, he will keep my words;" and "He that loveth me not keepeth not my words." John xiv. 21, 23, 24. In the face of these sayings of Jesus, what is the love of "professors" for God and his Son worth? It is like their faith, of no account whatever. God asks men for their hearts, but they give him only their lips. They profess to love him but give their affections to another. From the ecclesiastical throne, or pulpit, to the humblest "layman," can they give a Scriptural demonstration of obedience to the faith? Where is the obedience to the gospel of the kingdom in the name of Jesus? Who ever thinks of obeying this? And yet he comes to take vengeance on all who obey it not. 2 Thes. i. 8. I cannot too earnestly commend the words of Samuel to the attention of the reader in this place. "Hath the Lord," saith he, as great delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices as in obeying the voice of the Lord? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams. For rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft, and stubbornness is as iniquity and idolatry." 1 Sam. xv. 22, 23. A man may, indeed, know the truth; but he must believe and do if he would inherit the kingdom of God.

Religion is of two kinds: that, namely, which is invented by the thinking of the flesh; and that which is revealed of God. The former is superstition, and leads men to do a vast deal more than God requires of them, or less than he has appointed. The religion of God does not require men to abase themselves into the dust, and to afflict their bodies because of sin; nor to plant themselves as so many statues of clay, with downcast faces, in places as silent as the tomb. The notion that men may invent religious services, and that the Divine displeasure can be appeased by human contrivances are fallacies, which are characteristic of false religion wherever they are found.

The word religion is derived from the Latin religio or religare, which signifies, to bind again; hence, religion is the binding again, or, that which heals a breach previously existing between two parties. That a breach exists between God and man is evident to every candid and thoughtful mind, and that man is the offender no one will deny; therefore, in this breach between God and man, it is God's prerogative to lay down the terms of agreement; and all that man has to do is to accept the conditions laid down by him in the Scriptures of truth. That God has been working for the purpose of reconciliation is seen right down through the ages of Adam to the present day, and the signs of the times go to show us that it will soon be ended, for God has said: "My Spirit shall not always strive with man." Gen. vi. 3. He has long since ceased to be proclaimed the conditions of peace and life which he will soon complete in every case where they are accepted.—Good News.

It is right for us to care what folks think of us. The man who does not care for the opinion of others is not the man to influence others, or to be worthy of the sympathy or respect of others. But when the choice comes fairly between doing what is right or doing what others think we ought to do, the opinion of others must be defied by us, however much we may regret the necessity of losing the good will of our fellows. What God thinks of our conduct is of more importance than what is thought of it by all other beings in the universe.

The Illinois Vineyard.

I have just closed, at Moriah, Ill., one of the most interesting meetings that I have held in a long time. After the first night or two, which were very dark, and roads very muddy, we had a full house, every seat being packed full in the little, old log church house. The audience kept increasing until we had all of 200 seated, by filling in every vacant place with board seats. We regretted that some had to stand up and others remain outside at the windows. Brethren, we may call on you next fall to help the brethren here to build a new church house. Most of the brethren here live in little log houses, with only a few acres of land to live on and are not able to do much financially, but they have large hearts, as they kept me well, and raised $16.00 for me. How true it seems that the poor of this world are generally the rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom.

Eight came forward for baptism, and we buried them for adoption into Christ and for remission of sins. They are Lewis Weaver and wife, Bertha Weaver, Mrs. Amy Weaver, John McDonald, Aaron Cooly and wife, and Ella Frakes. Some of these had long believed with us but had never obeyed, while to some the teachings were wholly new.

They want us at four or five other points near here, and we believe that a good work could be done throughout Southern Ill. As none have responded for my proposed missionary work in Canada, I now ask you to send in help for work in Illinois, to our treasurer J. M. Clotfelty of Lanark, Ill. I shall work in Illinois as long as the conference supports me in the work. There are other brethren who could do much good if we could support their families and keep them in different parts of the state; for the harvest is great in Illinois, but the laborers are few.

How I wish that our brethren, who have paid my expenses, and kept my family during my work in Ill., could have peeped into the old log church here, and have seen the interest manifested by 200 persons, in the glorious things of the gospel of Christ, and his soon-coming, with his rewards,—and they would have felt well paid for their pecuniary sacrifice.

Oh, brethren and sisters, how small a portion of the world, or even of Ill., have we carried the gospel witness to! No matter how few obey it is our duty to preach the gospel in all the world to take out the bride. May we not become discouraged in well-doing; in due time we shall reap if we faint not.

Yours, working and watching for the King.

W. L. CROWE.

Obituary.

Died at Geraldine, Texas, on Feb. 28, John P. Robinson in the 54th year of his life. Geraldine is a town of a new colony in Texas, and brother Robinson went thither for his health, believing that a warmer climate would be better for him, but died of pneumonia shortly after reaching there. He was the first one to be buried in the colony cemetery and the new grave in the far away south upon the prairie tells its own story. He was born in Ogle County, Illinois, April 25, 1848. He leaves his family, a wife and two children—a boy 19 and a girl 9 years old—on his farm in Marshall County, Iowa, to mourn for him, besides a large circle of relatives, friends and brethren. He was an earnest, strong believer of the gospel and had a hope of eternal life to be bestowed upon the Christian at the coming of Jesus and the resurrection. The family did not know of his death until the sad news of his burial reached them. In his sickness everything was done for him that could be done, and our kind-hearted and faithful brother, Frank Hoover, watched with and waited upon him until the end came. The consolation of Israel's God be with the wife and children in their sad bereavement.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to send to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth N. J.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

"Let Not Your Heart be Troubled."

Are trials on your portion here?
Do any your prospects dark or clear?
Has want, or sickness, knocked at your door?
Seems grief after sorrow yet in store?
"Let not your heart be troubled."

'Twas Jesus' word to comfort sweet,
To those who worship at his feet:
Nor let it be afraid," he said,
Just lean on me—by me be led—
"Let not your heart be troubled."

"And be not anxious" any day,
Nor fail to keep the world at bay;
If first ye seek God's righteousness,
Be sure your heart and life he'll bless,
"Let not your heart be troubled."

Just let him fill your heart with peace,
Then will these anxious cares all cease,
And you shall rest the bliss of love,
The pure and true sent from above;
"Let not your heart be troubled."

Christ the Son of God.

That the Jewish world disputed the claim of Christ to the sonship of God is in evidence by the many disputes which they had with him on that subject. They evidently had some idea of the coming of the Messiah as proclaimed by the prophets, but as our Savior said, "by your traditions ye have made the Word of God of none effect." When the Scripture was quoted in evidence of his claim they were enraged or silenced. When Christ asked the Pharisees, "What think ye of Christ? Whose son is he? They say unto him, The son of David. He then saith unto them, How then doth David in Spirit call him Lord? Saying, The Lord saith unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footstool? If David then call him Lord, how is he his son? And no man was able to answer him a word, neither durst any man from that day forth ask him any more questions." Matt. xxii. 42, 46. Evidently they understood the promise that God had made to David that he should have a son who would occupy his throne forever. Psa. cxxxii. But they did not understand that David would ever recognize Christ as his Lord. They had lost sight of the truth, that the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head, and that through Abraham and his seed all nations of the earth should be blessed. An honest desire on the part of man to know the truth will lead him into the knowledge of the Scriptures concerning the Christ the Son of God. When the wise men who came from the east asked the question, viz: "Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him," the chief priests and the scribes answered, "In Bethlehem of Judea; for thus is it written by the prophets, And thou Bethlehem in the land of Judah art not the least among the princes of Juda; for out of thee shall come a Governor, that shall rule my people Israel." Matt. ii. 2, 6. This prophecy was literally fulfilled in the birth of the Son of God. The wise men accepted the prophecy as a truth and so they worshiped him. Herod did believe the same and sought to take the young child's life. The Jews were indifferent, not believing that Christ would come in this way, but that their Christ would live forever. When a babe in the manger was presented to them as their Christ they revolted. Their traditions taught them differently. Thus we see that their ideas were confused. When Christ began his ministry and performed many miracles they still sought to put him to death. The greater the miracle the more incensed they became against him. They charged him with blasphemy when he claimed to be the Son of God. He impressed the people every where that his doctrine was a strange one and that he spake as never man spake.

Do the people of the twentieth century believe in the Christ of prophecy? Are not their ideas as confused as were they during the days of his ministry? When our Savior asked his disciples, "Whom do men say that I the Son of Man am?" The answer was, "Some say that thou art John the Baptist, some Elias, and others Jeremiah or one of the prophets." They were willing to admit that he was a Bible character of some note but not God's Son. Others could only see the carpenter's son, one of their own humble citizens. If the inquiry were made today among the so-called Christian world, What think ye of Christ, etc.? What would be their answer think ye? Let us see.

We quote from the creed of a very popular church. The Son, who is the Word of the Father, the very and eternal God, of one substance with the Father, took man's nature in the womb of the blessed virgin; so that two whole and perfect natures, that is to say, the Godhead and manhood, were joined together in one person, never to be divided: whereof is one Christ, very God and very man. Is not this equivalent to what the world thought of Christ, as given in answer to the question, "Whom say the world that I, the Son of Man, am?" How could Christ be the Son of God and the very and eternal God at the same time. We are asked to believe such unreasonable things in order that the pre existence of Christ shall be upheld. Or to believe in the existence of an unreal Christ.

The true doctrine of immortality through Christ alone is no longer taught from the pulpits of the modern day churches. A very popular preacher of our capital city said in his Easter sermon, "The main question under consideration is that of immortality. The hope of it seems to be universal and the belief in it almost general. Putting the question to the soul itself the answer comes back that it was immortal." The speaker thought its answer on this proposition were in support of its continuous existence. Another has said on the same occasion: "If we propose to be quite honest and frank with ourselves we must admit one fact, that there never, since the dawn of Christianity, were so many people doubting concerning the future life as there are now. Not ignorant nor bad people, but the best there are, or among the best. If a person asks me whether I think there is satisfactory evidence that the body of Jesus was raised from the dead, I must be frank and say I do not. I believe death is another kind of birth; that we graduate from this life, take the next step in an ever advancing career of progress and that we are just ourselves over there." In view of these expressions are we not priviliged to say, that the Christ of the Bible is not found in such creeds. What if the name of the crucified one is found in every line of such sermons, it is no evidence that such people believe in him. Both of these preachers teach that immortality is inherent and not conditional.

Ye of no faith listen to the testimony of creditable witnesses. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." How may we get everlasting life? By believing that the soul is immortal, or believing that we will receive it through faith in Christ? The answer is found in the above Scripture as quoted from St. John iii. 16. Again 36 verse, "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life (in promise), and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life (everlasting); but the wrath of God abideth on him." That is the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life. St. John xvii. 3, "This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." Not to believe in him or not to know him is death eternal.

We are often met with this statement, viz., "God will not hold me responsible for something I cannot understand. I am bewildered at this doctrine and that, and cannot settle my mind as to what is truth." My dear sir, God will hold you responsible for unbelief, or the belief of a lie.

Paul said at Athens, Acts xvii. 30, 31, "The times of this ignorance God winked at; but now commandeth all men everywhere to repent; because he hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge (rule) the world in righteousness, by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead. God has appointed a day in which he will rule the world in righteousness, and has given us assurance that he will do so by raising Christ from the dead. God wishes us to become kings and priests unto him and to reign on the earth. But in order to be so honored we must believe in his Son. We cannot identify ourselves with the religions of today and honor God's Son. Let our confession be like that of the apostle when he was asked, "Whom say ye that I, the Son of Man, am?" The answer came clear and strong, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." It cannot be that the so-called Christian world believed in such a Christ, or denominational lines would fade away and creeds would be a thing of the past. Take what view you may of the utterances found in this article we must conclude that the truth concerning the Son of God is not found among the churches of this age. Let those who have taken upon themselves the name of Christ in baptism, beware of the doctrines of the day. If you are alone in the world, let not the enemy deceive you with the idea that you can believe what you please and at the same time join some church for a home. I know from experience that it is not pleasant to be so situated, and yet I also know that we are not alone. Have we not all of God's promises? May we not read God's Word and meditate on it? Also once a week we can and ought to have THE RESTITUTION, whose pages are filled with very many good articles from the brothers and sisters. Let the following Scripture be helpful to us who are isolated. "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their Word." St. John xvii. 20.

Evolution of the Spiritual Life.

There are laws which govern the development of the natural life, which begins with vitalized matter, which has assumed no form, but according to natural law, in successive stages it gradually develops form, and at a specific stage is quickened into life, and then receiving the nourishment provided for it, a perfected organism is evolved, but not as yet an independent individual, but at the proper stage a new independent life is evolved from inorganic matter, into organic earth-life. But if the natural law governing the successive stages of this earth life is interfered with in any one of its stages, the new life which is started will never become an earth-born individual. It is even so, with the laws which govern the evolution of the spiritual or new life—the life everlasting.

There are laws which govern the evolution of the spiritual life, which must be complied with in every particular, as exactly as the laws which govern the development of the natural life, and if not complied with in every stage of its development, there can be no birth of the spirit.

THE PROCESS OF SPIRITUAL EVOLUTION.

In the first place the right conditions must exist. The person must be susceptible to spiritual influences, without this, the spiritual begettal cannot take place. The begettal is the first stage in the development of the spiritual life. The seed received at begettal by which the new life is started, must be that which is of an incorruptible nature; it is contrary to law to expect that which is corruptible to develop or produce that which is incorruptible. See 1 Pet. i. 23: "Being begotten (not born) again not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the Word of God, which liveth and abideth forever. This is the only "incorruptible" seed there is. None other can develop the incorruptible life. This seed alone is susceptible to the action of spiritual laws which by successive stages can develop or bring to birth children after the power of an endless life.

It is at this point that no mistake should be made as to the reception of the right seed. A mistake at this time would prove abortive in producing the spirit-life. There cannot possibly be any justifiable excuse for making a mistake, as we are specially told just what it is. Verse 23, says: "Being begotten again not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the Word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." It is here called "the Word of God," and verse 25, explains what is meant by the phrase, "Word of God." It is this: "And this is the Word which by the gospel is preached unto you."

Now, there is much spurious seed in the world labeled "gospel," which we need to be beware of, because it is dead seed, the germ of the spirit-life is not in it, and hence cannot produce the spirit-life.

Jesus is the only one of the human family who has been "born again"—"born of the spirit," and hence he is able to say explicitly what the genuine seed is. In Matt. xiii. 19, he says it is the "Word of the kingdom," or in other words, "the gospel of the kingdom." Now Peter speaking under the guidance of the Holy Spirit as we have seen, said the "incorruptible seed" was the gospel, and if we accept just what Jesus himself preached as the gospel, we can be positively sure that we have got the real genuine seed, which has the life germ in it. As to what Jesus preached as gospel, see Matt. iv. 23: "And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom." See also Luke ix. 1, 2: "He called his twelve disciples together, * * * and he sent them to preach the kingdom of God." See ver. 6: "And they departed, and went through the towns preaching the gospel." Hence to preach "the kingdom of God" is to preach "the gospel." See verses 59, 60: "And he said unto another, follow me. But he said suffer me first to go and bury my father. Jesus said unto him, let the dead bury the dead: but go thou and preach the kingdom of God."

See Matt. xiii. 19, and you will observe that the "good seed," or "the incorruptible seed," must be received in "the heart," and when the good seed receives a real heart-reception, it has found its congenial soil, and then we are ready for the next step in the evolution of the spirit life, which is this:

See Rom. vi. 4: "Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life." The new life is now begun to develop. The begettal for the spirit-birth has taken place. From this time on growth and development must proceed in successive stages until the birth of the spirit results.

The next step after the begettal of water is given in Rom. vi. 11: "Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive (spiritual life) unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord."

The spirit-life having been begun in us, it must predominate over the flesh. If the flesh life predominates, it is a sure evidence that the spirit-begettal has never taken place. "Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts (desires) thereof." The word "reign" signifies dominion, authority. Sin cannot "reign," have dominion or authority over any one who is really begotten of the Spirit. If any one should find in their own case that it does predominate, you have very good reason to doubt your spirit begettal. One who is really begotten looses his or her desire for fleshly and worldly things, and finds exquisite delight in spiritual matters.

Those who serve the flesh, are under "the law of sin and death," and are under "condemnation." Those who are truly begotten of the Spirit, pass out from under "the law of sin and death," and condemnation, for that belongs to the flesh life. See Rom. viii. 1, 2: "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." (why?) For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death."

There are two laws here: "the law of sin and death," which applies to the flesh life, and the "law of the Spirit of life," which governs those who are begotten by the Spirit.

Those who are under the law of "the Spirit of life," differ materially from those who are under "the law of sin and death" in the former they do not practice sin, while the latter do, it is their natural inclination.

See 1 John iii. 9: "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him: and he cannot sin, because he is born of God."

The above version from King James is misleading, but latter translations which are more exact in giving the literal thought of the original, and which harmonize better with common sense and experience. For example see Diglott:

"No one who has been begotten by God practices sin, (Why?) because his seed abides in him; and he cannot (practice) sin, because he has been begotten by God."

Campbell, McKnight and Doddridge has it: "Whoever has been begotten by God does not work sin, (why?) because his seed abides in him, and he cannot (work) sin, because he has been begotten by God."

It is not possible for those who are truly "begotten by God," to "practice" or "work" sin, because "his seed abides in him," and he is under "the law of the Spirit of life." It is not to be supposed that such people never err, because they do; but they do not "practice sin," like those who are under the "law of sin and death." The reason given why they do not "practice" or "work" sin, is "because his seed (the new life germ) abides in him," the "incorruptible seed," "the Word of God which liveth and abideth forever." "And this is the Word (seed) which by the gospel is preached unto you."

Says Paul, speaking of one of his converts: "I have begotten you through the gospel," and the gospel he preached was not spurious seed, but "the Word of the kingdom," the seed which produced much fruit when lodged in good soil.

There is plenty of seed sown which is never quickened, the spiritual germ never manifests itself, because the proper conditions do not exist, which are in harmony with "the law of the Spirit of life." When life does manifest itself, it must be nourished, first with milk for babes, and then strong food for those of more advanced development. As in the natural or flesh life, nourishment which harmonizes with, and is demanded by the natural man, must be used to perpetuate life, so likewise, in the case of one who is begotten by the Spirit, sustenance which harmonizes with, or is in accordance with "the law of the Spirit of life," must be used, or the begettal will become abortive.

Paul says, (Rom. viii. 2): "The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." The same law which made Paul "free," will make any one else "free," provided they comply with the conditions of that law. In no other way can any one escape the penalty of "the law of sin and death." "The law of the Spirit of life" when lived up to will eventually lead to the Spirit-birth, which will be a life that knows no end. But in the other case, a person who remains under "the law of sin and death," will reap the penalty of that law, which is a death that knows no awakening.

Whenever you find a person preaching a doctrine that all flesh which ever did, or will exist, without complying with "the law of the Spirit of life," and without seeking the birth of the Spirit, (the begettal of which must take place as given in James i. 18: "Of his own will begot he us with the Word of truth, that we should be a kind of firstfruits of his creatures,") you can safely set aside such an one as a false teacher, and his doctrine as dangerous.

All people by nature are under the "law of sin and death," and if it is not set aside by "the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus," death, eternal death, must inevitably result. The life eternal can never spring from the flesh, but it is as natural to grow out of "the law of the Spirit of life," as death is to "the law of sin and death."

The reador will observe that this article bears directly along the line of questions by Bro. [illegible] listed in THE RESTITUTION of April 16. It is not given as an answer, because it was already written before the appearance of his questions.

You will observe that I have treated the birth of the Spirit as a process which must begin before the resurrection. The resurrection is not of itself the birth of the Spirit, it consists in the change which takes place at that time. The living who have complied with the "law of the Spirit of life," receive the Spirit-life at the same time that the holy dead who sleep in Jesus do. The birth consists in the "change" which both the living and the dead experience at the same time. The birth is the "change" and the resurrection the time when the change is experienced. Paul says (1 Cor. xv. 51), "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all (both the living and dead) be changed." We must not substitute the time for the change, and there will be no change if the new life has not previously been cultured in harmony with the "law of the Spirit of life."

An Open Letter to Elder B.

I have heard you speak several times, and you urge us to prepare to go heaven. You tell us there is a home far away, and our loved ones are there waiting for us. I wish to know what authority you have for telling us these things. I have searched the Bible from the beginning of Genesis to the end of Revelations, and cannot find any promise of any one going to heaven. Instead I find that our Savior said, "No man hath ascended up to heaven except the Son of Man, which came down from heaven." When the apostles asked our Savior what reward they should receive, did he say, "I will take you to heaven when you die." No, he gave no such answer, but said, "In the regeneration when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of glory, ye shall also sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." Matt. xix. 28. Jesus says they are to be rewarded when the Son of Man sits in the throne of glory. When will that be? Listen to what he says. Matt. xxv. 31, 32, "When the Son shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of glory, and before him shall all nations be gathered." Showing positively that it will be at the second coming of our Lord. There is no promise of any one, either good or bad, being rewarded until our Lord comes in power and great glory. Instead of our friends who have died being in heaven, praising the Lord, we learn by God's holy Word that they are in their graves, awaiting the resurrection. To save space I will give references, only kindly look them up. Psalm vi. 4, 5; cxlvi. 3, 4; Eccl. ix. 4, 5, 6. The apostle Paul tells us in 1 Cor. xv., that if there is no resurrection, then they who have fallen asleep are perished. But all are to be resurrected and judged, and the righteous will be given the earth for their inheritance, and it shall be for ever. See Psa. xxxvii., Dan. vii., and many other places in God's Word. In Rev. v., we have recorded the song which the redeemed shall sing. Say, we shall reign on the earth, our Savior is to be King over all the earth. His throne will be located on Mount Zion's brow, in the city of Jerusalem. The nations of the earth will be compelled to yield obedience to him or be destroyed. The earth shall be renewed and purified, then the holy city, the new Jerusalem, shall come down from God out of heaven, and be located on the earth. Why should we want to go to heaven when our Savior will be here? The faithful of all ages shall be here; that city with gates of pearl and streets of gold will be here. And I want to be here too. Submitted in love.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAY 7, 1902. NUMBER 17.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Time is what we want most, but what we use worst; for which we must all account.

If age puts an end to our desires of pleasure, and does the business of virtue, there is no cause of complaint.

Last week we received a call from Sister Nancy Barber on her way from Oklahoma to Salem, Ohio. It was our first meeting, but we trust it will not be the last. We certainly enjoyed her company, and say, Come again and stay longer.

Nothing is more noble, nothing more venerable, than fidelity; faithfulness and truth [illegible] into [illegible] and endowments of the human mind. If falsehood, like truth, had but one face only we should be upon better terms: for we should then take the contrary to what the liar says, for certain truth. A hypocrite is under perpetual restraint; and what a torment it must be for a man always to appear different from what he really is!

The Kingdom of God,—its Relation to the Jews.

It is pretty generally admitted that the scattered Jewish nation was once God's chosen people; that in past ages he took them under his special care, and that through his prophets he revealed his will. But when we say there is a national future for them,—and that God in his revealed Word has determined that they shall be the first nation in the earth, we are meet with many objections. Not long ago we were told that the Jews had had all that was promised to them; that they were scattered on account of their sins, and will until they are grafted into the Gentile race, which is now fast taking place, as evidenced by the increasing numbers who are embracing Christianity. We believe and teach that this is not the future God has in store for the nation whom "he has chosen to be a special people unto himself, above all people that are upon the face of the earth," Deut. vii. 6; xiv. 2, of whom he has declared, "Though I make a full upon the face of the earth, yet will I not make a full end of thee." Jer. xxx. 11. After the Jewish nation had been brought out of Egypt by the hand of Moses, and settled in the land promised to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, for an everlasting possession, Gen. xiii. 14, 17, it existed under a divine constitution, which provided that if they hearkened diligently unto the voice of the Lord their God, to observe and do all all the blessings enumerated in the first fourteen verses of the chapter should be theirs. But on the other hand, if they did not observe and do his commandments, they should be besieged throughout all their land," (v. 52) disease and sickness should reduce them until they should be left few in number," (v. 62) and eventually, "The Lord should scatter them among all people, from one end of the earth even unto the other." ver. 64. It is unnecessary to trace their history down the ages. All intelligent readers of the Scripture know that some good kings—as David and Solomon—reigned over them, and many bad ones—as Ammon and Zedekiah,—that Zedekiah was of the house of David, Ez. xxi. 25-27, from whom the kingdom was taken by Nebuchadnezzar, and the nation taken captive to Babylon. Seventy years after this the two tribes returned and occupied their land for five hundred years,—at the end of which time their iniquity reached its culminating point, by their rejecting and crucifying the Messiah because he proclaimed himself their King, (John xix. 19 21,) and crying, as they thirsted for his life,

"HIS BLOOD BE ON US and our children." Soon after this, as Christ had predicted (Luke xxi. 20-24) their chief city, Jerusalem, was compassed about with armies under Titus, and "they fell by the edge of the sword,"—were "led captive into all nations," and their land since that time has been "trodden down of the Gentiles," thus literally fulfilling the prediction referred to in Deut. xxviii. They are a "bye word" and a "hissing." Who has not heard of their past and present? Verily "his blood has been on their heads and those of their children." But God has declared that this state of things shall come to an end,—that a glorious future is in store for his despised and down-trodden people. Through his prophets he has declared, that "in that day will I raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen down, and close up the breaches thereof, and I will build it as in the days of old;" Amos ix. 11. "In that day, saith the Lord, I will assemble her that halteth, and I will gather her that was driven out, and her that and I will make her that halted a remnant, and her that was cast off a strong nation, and the Lord (Jesus Christ) shall reign over them in Mount Zion from henceforth, even for ever and ever." Micah iv. 6, 7. The land which has lain desolate so many centuries will then be cultivated. The desolate land shall be tilled, whereas it lay desolate in the sight of all that passed by; and they shall say, "this land that was desolate is become like and the waste and desolate and ruined cities that are left round about you shall know that I the Lord build the ruined places and plant that which was desolate. I the Lord have spoken it, and I will do it." Ezek. xxxvi. 34, 36. For the purpose of bringing about this great change Jesus Christ will return from heaven and reign in Jerusalem.

GOD HAS SWORN

with an oath to David that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh he will raise up Christ to sit upon his (David's) throne. Acts ii. 30. It is also declared, that, "at that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord, and all nations shall be gathered unto it, to the name of the Lord to Jerusalem." Jer. iii. 17. Christ will not come then, as a lamb led to the slaughter, but as the Lion of the tribe of Judah, and will establish an

and be King over all the earth. Zech. xiv. 9. Under his sway will the nations be blest, for they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks. Nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. Isa. ii. 9. The poor will be cared for, and not ground to the earth by the oppressor as they now are in many lands. The world will be and his immortal brethren. Sin in all its forms will be restrained, and the knowledge of the Lord will fill the earth as the waters cover the sea. Hab. ii. 14. What a glorious picture to look at, when iron-clad ships of war and engines of destruction shall be the things of the past, and the labor and money expended in upholding them devoted to the cultivation of and the good of the people generally. "There shall be no more thence an infant of days, nor an old man that hath not filled his days, for the child shall die an hundred years old." Isa. xiv. 20. When that heavenly kingdom is established THE NATIONS THAT ARE SAVED SHALL WALK IN THE LIGHT OF IT, and the kings of the earth shall bring their honor into it. At his feet will be poured the wealth and honor of all nations. The groaning earth will be renewed by the removal of every curse; the ages will roll on and on; and pleasures for evermore will be for all found fit for when he comes. In view of the moral condition of the world today, and passing events, we are persuaded that Gentile times will expire before long, and those who will jointly possess that kingdom with David's Son and heir,—must become joint-heirs with him before he comes. While mercy lingers we plead with all who have not entered the ark of safety to lose no time, but do so at once,—the Lord is surely at hand to come. And to all who have taken the oath of allegiance to the King of the Jews, we would say, keep up a vigilant watch,—only those who are ready go in.

Persecution of Jews.

A special cable dispatch to the Cleveland Leader from Berlin, dated April 18th says:—"Harrowing tales of persecution of Jews in Roumania have been brought to this city by a band of 250 refugees from that country who are enroute to Canada under the supervision of officials of the Baron Hirsch Fund. The officer in charge of the party said to the Leader correspondent today:—

"The campaign of starvation organized in Roumania threatens to be a catastrophe unless official influence of civilized nations is speedily employed to bring King Charles to his senses. Two hundred and fifty thousand Jews in that country are praying for a chance to escape from a living death. Unfortunately we are able to provide for only a limited number of skilled workmen and agriculturists.

The night before we started from Bucharest we were besieged by hundreds who begged pitifully to be taken as servants. Not satisfied with robbing the Jewish natives of their rights of citizenship and despoiling them of homes and property, the authorities are now making it impossible for a Jew to earn a living. The king considers the silence of the outside world as full approval of his policy.

While it is sad to think of Israel's troubles, their existence [illegible] promise should inspire us with more and more confidence in the many promises of God which have been made,—and with delight we turn to the words of Jacob's God in the first chapter of Zech., "I am jealous for Jerusalem and for Zion with a great jealousy; and I am sore displeased with the heathen at ease, for I was but a little displeased, and they helped forward the affliction; therefore saith the Lord, I am returned to Jerusalem with mercies; my house shall be built in it, saith the Lord of Hosts..... my cities through prosperity shall yet be spread abroad, and the Lord shall yet comfort Zion and shall yet choose Jerusalem."

It may be that the present outbreak is wisely arranged to arouse those who have abundance of means to put their shoulder to the Israelitish wheels already in motion. May the Lord soon send the Deliverer to turn ungodliness from Jacob, we pray.

Gospel of the Kingdom.

For E. S.

Dear sir,—you insist that it is "not necessary to believe the gospel of the kingdom." Well, we are wide as the poles apart, but we will try once more to show you it is; and by putting it into the paper, which you have access to, it may help others if not you.

The reason why it is not necessary in your opinion to believe the gospel of the kingdom, is, because it does not say so in 1 Cor. xv. Now, all divine truth has not been compressed into that chapter,—some things were reserved for another chapter in that letter.—and later another letter was sent, and all of equal importance and authority, why did you not search further for evidence, before you

DECIDED THE MATTER?

If you had turned to Rom. i. 16, written by the same Paul you would have seen that the gospel of Christ is the veritable, and only power God employs to save; and only saves those who believe it. Of course Christ would not preach some one else's gospel when that of his own was the power to save. He was in the saving business was he not? Well, what

WAS HIS GOSPEL?

What gospel did HE preach in order to save people? When he started out on his wonderful mission,—"He began to preach, and to say, Repent; for the kingdom of heaven is at hand;" Matt. iv. 17; and the 23rd verse says, "Jesus went about all Galilee preaching the gospel of the kingdom," and in Mark i. 14, we read, "Now, after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee preaching the gospel of the KINGDOM OF GOD."

It is evident from this that Jesus deemed it necessary to preach the gospel of the kingdom, because it was necessary to believe it if they wished to be saved. In addition to this he sent out the twelve and the seventy to preach the same gospel. And in Matt. xxiv. 14, we find him saying, "And this gospel of the kingdom in all the world for a witness;" and after his death and resurrection, and just before his departure for heaven he gave his disciples a commission to go into all the world and preach THE gospel,—not a gospel. And who would have the presumption to say he sent them to preach another gospel than that of the kingdom, which he said should be preached in all the world? And the

SHALL BE PREACHED

of the kingdom may be gathered from the fact that it says that the things of the kingdom of God was his theme during the forty days between his resurrection and his ascension. And its importance may be further proven by the fact that the Samaritans were not considered fit subjects for baptism, by Philip the evangelist, till they had believed the things concerning the kingdom of God as well as the name of

JESUS CHRIST;

and by the fact that for two whole years Paul preached same kingdom of God in his own hired house while a prisoner at Rome: a strange infatuation indeed, if what you say be true. It is clearly the very thing to be believed in order to be saved. To preach the gospel of the kingdom was to call or invite people to accept it: and this is exactly what Paul did at Thessalonica, see chapter ii. 12. of first epistle, where he tells them how he exhorted, comforted and charged them as a father to walk worthy of God, who had called them unto his called the gospel, and they had accepted the invitation. But the conditions had not yet been all complied with.—like the converts at Lystra, Iconium and Antioch, they had to go through much tribulation before they could enter the kingdom.—but they were ALREADY in the Church of God, for they ordained elders in every church and before leaving. See Acts xiv. 19-22. This is all we have time and space to say. Next week, D. V., we will pay some attention to what you consider your stronghold, the 15th of 1 Cor. If you want the truth you will see if your position can be harmonized with the above Scriptures,—and if not, you should ascertain the reason why.

Dear brothers and sisters in Christ:

We can sing the dear, old childhood's song once more,

"Home again, home again, from a foreign shore,
And O, it fills my heart with joy to meet my friends once more."

Not that we had no friends in the far west, for we met, we loved and parted in tearful sadness, many, oh so many, who had become so dear to us, but the old familiar faces, tried through many years, and always true, are so very dear to us. We felt homesick to meet them again. How it adds sweetness and preciousness to the blessed gospel, when we realize we are all (all, that means the body) one in Christ Jesus, serving the same Father, working to the same end, even to building on the same foundation, Jesus Christ, gold, silver, precious stones, ready to be tried in the great day of his appearing; who will stand the tests along the way.

March 25th we started for Scholls, Ore., bidding the Wenatchee brethren good bye again, feeling indeed this must be the last time we shall look on their dear faces this side the kingdom. The Waterville and Wenatchee brethren had became very dear to us; for we drank the cup of trial with them; and if we could have felt entirely justified in the act would have accepted their very urgent request to tarry with them for a year. May God give them all strength for the coming days, and especially for our dear, faithful fellow-laborer, Brother Perrine, we ask that the dear heavenly Father mete out to him wisdom and grace sufficient for every need, that he may give meat in due season to his people, filling them with spiritual food that they may be built up, and each, pastor and people be ready for the coming of the King. The car door closes, we watch from the car window as far as we can see the dear ones who have come to the depot to see us off again. Over the Cascade mountains, through the almost three mile tunnel, we finally reach Portland the morning of the 26th. Brother Jaquith met us there and took us to his home. How glad we were to meet these brethren again. We began meetings Thursday evening and stayed here 18 days. Two were baptized into the Christ, and if these two gain eternal life it will be worth all that called for sacrifice for the brethren or for us. We had good meetings here, though it was as a year ago, a very unfavorable time, for the roads were bad, a great deal of rain and farmers behind with their work, and still the congregations were good, and the brethren at their post of duty at each gathering. They have a good Sunday School, prayer and social meeting at its appointed time, when the blessed remembrance of our Lord's supper is kept, and preaching as often as Brother Wm. Skeels, their evangelist can be there, membership not large but the faithful few keep at the work. They have the church newly papered and a line of new sheds for the faithful horses to rest under. All this speaks of steady growth, in this direction at least, and the Lord is pleased with any healthy growth of his body, but I sometimes fear there is something of a dwarf growth with many of our dear people, in the spiritual life, and I do not wonder altogether that some look frightened when we speak of the Holy Spirit directing us, for of all subjects in the Bible this perhaps is the most abused. One says, "Well, I know I am right; for I asked the Holy Spirit's guidance." Another says, "I would not know how to read my Bible or understand it if the Holy Spirit did not guide me." Another will say, "I can buy all the Holy Spirit I want for ten cents," meaning that they can buy a copy of the New Testament, two great extremes. One must realize that the Bible is the Sword of the Spirit; the other remember the Spirit is not given now as in apostolic days, but our sweet and beloved Guide says, Luke xi. 13, "If ye then being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him." How foolish to ask him for something we do not need. If we need it, and asking receive it, how careful we should be not to grieve it away from us, for says the apostle, Eph. iv. 30, "And grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption," and remember, except the Spirit dwell in you these mortal bodies cannot be quickened from the dead. O how earnestly we should strive for a full portion of this blessed Spirit. Without this Spirit of Christ we are none of his. Rom. viii. 9. Let us study to know what his Spirit is, do not be afraid of having too much of it; for, watch his life, it was the spirit of humility, love, service—instead of being served—earnestness, obedience, and for these the Father loved his Son, for these same beautiful graces the Father will love his adopted sons and daughters. O, careful, brethren, careful not to reach that lukewarm stage. What a dangerous condition. "Spewed out of his mouth," so sickening to the dear Master, he cannot retain them, but empties them out to relieve the rest of the body; earnestness in his work, how necessary for growth. We all need more of it. God help us to ask for and live for an abiding fullness of his Spirit, then we are always ready for Christian work.

After bidding the Scholls brethren good bye, we started Monday morning, April 14th for home, reached Chicago April 19th at 8:30 in the evening. Sister Richter met us at the train and took us home with her. We had the pleasure of meeting the Chicago brethren at Van Buren Hall on Sunday morning, and breaking bread with them. The Elder spoke for them Sunday morning, on Sunday evening I spoke in Sister Denton's parlors to a nice congregation. We have the promise of several from Chicago attending our June conference here at Dutton, beginning May 29th. We hope nothing will prevent their plans.

And now, dear ones, in Michigan—begin to mature plans whereby as many as possible may be in attendance at this coming meeting,—do not get lukewarm.

Your Sister in Christ.

Dear Restitution:

Having just returned from a very pleasant visit to Winchester, Va., accompanied by Brother and Sister Updike, of Browntown, who went there to visit their children, Mr. and Mrs. Dunlap, I will write a few lines so that others who read The Restitution, and used to meet with us there in the happy days that are passed and gone, may hear from us again. Having lived there nearly 20 years of my life, I became very much attached to the place and people. Of course an absence of ten years has made many changes in the place, but none in the good people, they still remain a kind social people, ever ready to extend the welcome hand and the extraordinary kindness of Sister Dunlap and her much esteemed husband will ever be remembered with love and gratitude. They are pleasantly situated in the city near the B. and O. depot, and have several young ladies boarding with them, which makes their home more lively. During our stay we met Brother William Dunlap of Highview, Va., and Brother A. H. Shinholtz, of Cumberland, Md., who had recently made us a visit at Browntown, which we very much enjoyed, and while the visit was very pleasant in every particular, yet it awakened and recalled many sad incidents that had passed as the days have gone by. But this we may expect as we journey through this vale of sorrow and tears. After taking leave of our friends at Winchester we returned home by way of Stephen's City, nine miles south of Winchester, where our much esteemed Brother A. J. Boyer and family live. Here we met with a cordial reception from the whole family, five in number and all practically in the faith, except the son, and we hope ere long to find him within the fold. We had quite a refreshing season from the presence of the Lord, during our stay. It made me think of David, who said, "How good and pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." We spent the time talking over the precious promises upon which our hopes are predicated, and singing many beautiful hymns, while the two young sisters played skillfully upon the organ. Sister Boyer is quite an efficient Bible scholar. We cannot be in her company very long without becoming enlightened in the way of eternal life, and for her encouragement the promise, "They that turn many to righteousness [illegible] for ever and ever." The two sisters sang the beautiful hymn called the "City of God," in which we need no temple. I think I enjoyed this piece equally as well as did Brother Wagoner, when they sang it for him during his stay with us in Va. I trust the dear Lord may give him strength to bear up under his sad affliction and enable him to visit us again in the near future, as our trust is in the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers into his vineyard. Truly the harvest is great and the laborers are few. Then let all who can thrust in the sickle of truth and gather in the precious grain before it is too late.

Announcement.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God, in Michigan, will be held [D. V.] at Dutton, Kent Co., Thursday evening, May 29th, 1902, and continue over the following Sunday, [May 29, 30, 31, and June 1st.]

Another year has nearly rolled around since the Annual Michigan Conference was held. Death has been doing its work among us, and some are now sleeping that were accustomed to meet with us. How many more will lay their burdens down e're another year will pass, God only knows. This we do know, that the left ones must work with still greater zeal and energy as the ranks are all the time lessened by sickness and death. So let every lover of the truth, who possibly can arrange to be at Dutton, our old yearly gathering place. Let all come with the one thought to further the cause of Christ. Not altogether to get good, but determined to give as much as we receive, then we will have a good meeting. Let each church send one or more delegates with report of their standing during the past year. The friends at Dutton are prepared to entertain all who may come. Dutton is on the M. C. R. R., ten miles southeast of Grand Rapids.

Yours in hope of life eternal.

To the Brethren of Illinois, Greeting:

The call for means for the support of an evangelist has been some what delayed because of our not having an evangelist in the field. As we now have Brother Crowe at work, and he gives good reports, we beg of you to give your free-will offering. Remember the Lord loveth a cheerful giver.

Living to God.

O Lord of love and power,
How joyful life might be
If in thy service every hour
We lived and moved with thee;
If youth in all its bloom and might
By thee were sanctified,
And manhood found its chief delight
In working at thy side!

Genesis. Chap. 45.

1. And Jooseeph was not able to control himself in the presence of all those standing by him; but said, send them all away from me; and no one stood in the presence of Jooseeph when he made himself known to his brethren.

2. And he gave voice to lamentation; and all the Aiguptioi heard, and it was heard in the house of Pharaoo.

3. And Jooseeph said unto his [illegible] him, for they were terrified.

4. And Jooseeph said unto his brethren, Draw nigh unto me; and they drew nigh; and he said, I am Jooseeph your brother, whom ye sold into Aiguptos.

5. Now then do not grieve, nor let it seem a harsh thing to you, that ye did sell me here; for God sent me on before you for life.

6. For this second year there is a famine over the land; and there are five years more in which there is no ploughing nor early harvest.

7. For God sent me on before you, that there might be a remnant left for you upon the land, and to support a great remnant of you.

8. Now then ye did not send me here but God, and he that hath made me as it were a father of Pharaoo and lord of all his house and a ruler of all the land of Aiguptos.

9. Haste then and go up unto my father and say unto him, Thus saith thy son Jooseeph; God hath made me lord of all the land of Aiguptos; come down then unto me, and do not tarry.

10. And thou shalt take up thy abode in a land of Gosem of Arabia, and thou shalt be nigh me, thou and thy sons and thy sons' sons, thy sheep and thy cattle and whatever is thine.

11. And I will support thee there; for yet five years is there a famine; that thou mayest not be worn out thou and thy sons and all thy possessions.

12. Lo, your eyes and the eyes of Benjamin, my brother, see that my mouth is talking to you.

13. Tell then my father of all my glory in Aiguptos, and of all that ye have seen, and go quickly and conduct my father down here.

14. And he fell upon the neck of Benjamin, his brother, and lamented on his neck.

15. And he embraced all his brethren and lamented on them, and after that his brethren talked with him.

16. And the report was carried through to the house of Pharaoo, saying, Jooseeph's brethren have come; and Pharaoo and his court were rejoiced.

17. And Pharaoo said unto Jooseeph, Do thou say unto thy brethren, Do this, fill your conveyances and return into the land of Chanaan.

18. And takes up your father and your chattels and come to me; and I will give you of all the good things of Aiguptos, and ye shall eat the marrow of the land.

19. And do thou enjoin these things, that they take for them waggons out of the land of Aiguptos, for your children and your wives, and take up your father and come.

20. And do not be sparing with your eyes of your utensils: for all the good things of Aiguptos will be yours.

21. And the sons of Israel did in this wise; and Jooseeph gave unto them waggons according to the directions spoken by Pharaoo, the king, and he gave unto them provisions for their journey.

22. And unto all he gave double flowing robes, and unto Beujamin he gave three hundred of gold and five exchangeable flowing robes.

23. And to his father he sent according to the same things, and ten asses to carry from all the good things of Aiguptos and mules to carry bread for his father on the journey.

24. And he sent away his brethren and they went their way; and he said unto them, Do not get wrathful on the way.

25. And they went up out of a land of Aiguptos, and came into a land of Chanaan unto Jakoob their father.

26. And told him saying, Thy son Jooseeph liveth, and he is ruling all the land of Aiguptos, and Jakoob was astounded at the thought; for he did not put faith in them.

27. And they told him all the things spoken by Jooseeph, all the things he had said to them; and when he saw the waggons which Jooseeph had sent to take him, the spirit of Jakoob, their father, revived.

28. And Israeel said, It is a great thing for me if Jooseeph, my son, still liveth; I will go my way and see him before I die.

COMMENT.

10th verse R. V. has "the land of Goshen," should read "the land of Gesem of Arabia."

23 verse R. V. reads "she-asses" where it should read "mules" and "victual" where to be good old English it should read "victuals."

24th verse R. V. "fall out" is "get wrathful."

26th verse R. V. "thy son" is omitted.

28th verse R. V. "It is enough" [illegible]

The reader will remember that the original names of persons and places are given all through my translations so that the casual reader as well as the scholar can see how they have been changed and tempered with in what purport to be "literal translations from the original Hebrew and Greek."

Resurrection.

Being born (begotten) again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible by the Word of God, which liveth and abideth for ever, for all flesh is grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of grass; the grass withered, and the flower thereof falleth away, but the Word of the Lord endureth for ever. And this is the Word by which the gospel is preached unto you. 1 Pet. i. 23-25. Of his own will begat he us with the Word of truth, that we should be a kind of first fruits of his creatures. James i. 18. For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father. Rom. viii. 15. So we can see, dear brothers and sisters, that we must be begotten of the Word of truth, and be adopted into the family of God's dear children. Then we are entitled to a resurrection to eternal life, then we can come forth to an endless life. Then at the same time the living saints will be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump. So we can see that all depends on our being begotten of the Word. If there is no begettal, there can be no birth from the dead, as Christ was begotten from the dead. He obeyed his Father in all things, and God raised him from the dead to an endless life. God's laws are all in harmony. He is the author of organic law, also of revealed law. In organic law the child must be begotten of its parents and if the mother lives out the allotted time the child comes into the world with same nature of its parents. So in God's revealed law. God is incorruptible. See Rom. i. 23. And changed the glory of the incorruptible God into an image made like to corruptible man. So corruptible man cannot produce an incorruptible child, that would be out of harmony with organic law. And again, God being incorruptible and his Word being incorruptible, and man being begotten of an incorruptible God and of an incorruptible Word he must come into the resurrection incorruptible, or it would be out of harmony with revealed law. See 1 Cor. xv. "Behold I show you a mystery, we shall not all sleep, but we shall be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. Now here at the last trump we see the two classes, one is a living and the other dead. They both have been begotten of God. One has fallen under the power of death, the other is here when the Lord comes. The living has no advantage over the dead one, for the Lord will descend from heaven with a shout and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first, and they (the living) shall be caught up together in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord. There was one child raised to life by Elijah and one by Elisha. Some were raised in the day of Christ and the apostles, but none to eternal life till Christ was raised up by the glory of the Father.

Obituary.

Nancy J. Akins was born July 17, 1837; died April 28, 1902; aged 65 years, 9 months and 11 days. She was married to Thomas Tilton Dec. 9, 1855. He preceded her to the final resting place about two years and a half ago. Four children are left to mourn the loss of a mother. To those who have never lost mother, these words cannot convey all that this means. Nothing outside of the love of God can take the place of mother's love nor answer for it. Our sister was a sufferer of the dread disease—consumption. Though her sickness was of duration beyond the ordinary, yet she was patient through it all. Being baptized about three years ago, she went to sleep assured of life in Christ by a resurrection from the dead. O, glorious day! Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly!

The children are W. D. Tilton, B. D. Tilton, F. M. Tilton and Gertrude M. Tilton O'Banion. Eight grandchildren survive. To these we can [illegible] life and the only hope of a life to come. May the children all prepare themselves to meet the beloved dead on the morning of the resurrection. Another of the faithful has gone. Who will take her place in the ranks? One by one they go and recruits are needed. May God touch the hearts and understanding of many that his work may go on gloriously.

S. J. LINDSAY.

Byron McCrory, oldest son of J. W. and Julia McCrory, was born July 8, 1878, died Apr. 21, 1902. His entire home life was at the place of his birth, near Plymouth, Ind. For the past year he had been in the employ of Clifford & Sons. It was while at labor, Monday P. M. April 21, blasting stone, that by an accidental discharge of dynamite, he was, without warning, ushered from life to death, from light to darkness. Hurled many feet into the air, alighting many feet, practically lifeless, from the place where he had stood but a second before in life and action. But a short time did even the ember of life continue till it passed out, as a dimly burning candle recedes into the surrounding darkness. It took but a moment and man's enemy had added another name to the long list of the dead, and a father, mother, sister, three brothers, numerous other relatives, and many friends to the great company of earth's mourners. Surely life is uncertain. And though bright the passing hour, the following may be dark and awful. And how dark were they all had not Christ the "true light" shown in the darkness. For "in him was life; and the life was the light of men." And because of him the sea shall give up the dead which are in it; and death and the grave shall deliver up the dead which are in them. Unto God who will have a desire to the work of his hands, do we point these bereaved and saddened parents, sister, brothers and others. The funeral services were held at the family home on April 23, the writing officiating, after which he was laid away in the old Pisgah cemetery near where he had always lived.

F. L. AUSTIN.

From a newspaper clipping sent us we learn the following regarding Bro. J. T. Cook of near Bracken, Ind.

Friday occurred the death of J. T. Cook at his home near this place. Mr. Cook was one of the earliest settlers of Wabash county, having lived on the farm on which he died since 1842. He was twice married, six sons being the result of his first marriage. Two of these are living. Four daughters were born from his second marriage, and the two living are Mrs. Kinkade and Mrs. J. A. Clevenger.

John T. Cook was born in Kent county, Delaware, October 27, 1815. In early manhood he moved to Rush county, Indiana, where in May 1837, he was married to Mary Morris. To this union were born seven sons, of whom only Camillus and William survive him. He moved to Huntington county in January, 1842, and settled on and improved the farm on which he lived from that time until his death.

February 8, 1858 his wife Mary died. He afterwards married Lusana (Baugher) Kerns. By the second wife three children were born. Minerva, the eldest, and who cared for him in his declining years and Olavia, now Mrs. J. A. Clevenger survive him. His second wife died March 31, 1897. Mr. Cook was an Adventist for about 50 years. He was one of the first trustees of Warren township, Huntington county. He was a very industrious and well to do farmer and lived to see the wilderness blossom as the rose; truly a pioneer, having spent more than 60 years at his late residence.

MISS CLORAH RHODES.
MRS. DAVID KINKADE.

From the Arapahoe, Neb., Pioneer, we take the following:

The funeral took place Tuesday, with services at the M. E. church, after which the remains were taken to the Arapahoe cemetery followed by a long cortege of loving friends.

Selections.

All Russia in a Tumult.

Today Russia is a prey to disaffection with the government. The disaffection extends from Finland, the northwest corner of the European empire, to Transcaucasia, the most southeasterly province. It has made its way into every class except the priests. Within the month nobles, professors, students, army officers, private soldiers, laboringmen, and peasants have put themselves on record against constituted authority. Twenty years ago, on the other hand, the propaganda against autocracy was confined to a small and hidden band of Nihilists, who were regarded with loathing by the immense majority of the people. The Czar, then, was looked up to with reverence by nearly all his subjects.

The extent and seriousness of the prevailing disaffection is indicated by this brief summary of the last two and a half weeks of Russian history.

April 15—M. Sipiaguine, Minister of Interior, assassinated in St. Petersburg by a student of Kieff who had been sentenced to compulsory military service for rioting in 1901.

April 19—The Secretary of State of government of Minsk assassinated by a student of Warsaw.

April 20—A Warsaw student twice wounded Governor General of Warsaw. Of a levy of 857 in Helsingfors, Finland, but fifty-six obeyed summons. The remainder absented themselves as a demonstration against compulsory service in the army.

April 23—The religious sect of Jehovists in Perm (1,200 miles east of St. Petersburg) declares itself against existing government.

April 25—Workingmen exhorted to oust foreign managers and foremen. Many factories fired by incendiaries. Riot in Helsingfors brutally suppressed by Cossacks.

April 26—Rioting in St. Petersburg. Fifty killed.

April 27—Reign of terror in provinces of Poltava and Kharkoff (600 miles south of St. Petersburg). Peasants, suffering from disease and hunger, band together for loot. Size of peasant army, 18,000. Czar decides to relinquish his annual Easter visit to Moscow on account of disturbances.

April 28—Owners of landed estates in Poltava flying in terror to cities to escape peasant hordes.

May 1—All the laboring population between Vladimir and Moscow (200 miles) in a state of revolt against authorities. The regiment of Uhlans under Colonel Moroseff refused to fire against disturbers.

This last dispatch if true, is of immense significance. When the soldiers, whom an autocrat counts upon to keep him on the throne, turn against him or stand neutral he is obviously doomed. If the disaffection in the Russian army has spread or is about to spread to any appreciable extent, Nicholas III. and his consort would better pack up and go or buy peace by becoming constitutional rulers. The government can despise riot or rebellion so long as the peasants who make up the armies obey orders blindly. When they refuse to obey it is time to look out for a deluge.

The greatest obstacle to the success of a revolt lies in its lack of a leader and consequent want of co-operation between the workmen in different cities of the empire from St. Petersburg to Baku, the hunger-crazed peasants in the southern and central provinces, the [illegible] elements in the army, and the students. On the other hand, the movement has been such a short time under way that the leader, if there be a man competent for leadership, has not as yet had time to identify himself with the opportunity. It may be that next year Europe will ring with the name of some Russian who today is unknown to the world or even to his own country.—Chicago Tribune.

A Lesson in Humility.

Fine as is the point of the hypodermic injector, by which an anodyne is thrown into the circulation of a sleepless man, it is not so sharp or penetrating as the suggestion of the gent's wife intent upon making her husband a better man.

"Isn't it curious, Cynthia," the colonel said to Mrs. Calliper, "how sometimes the current of our lives is deflected by the most trivial incidentals? Now there was Philetus Gobliuton; you remember what a vain, consequential man he was? But all that was changed by just the slightest thing in the world.

"He went one Sunday to a church where he had never been before, and where he was quite unknown. As usual he made toward the middle aisle, where, at home, he was accustomed to sit; but the man that met him led him, not down the middle aisle, but along the back of the pews and down a side aisle, and gave him a seat pretty well back.

"That was a crusher for Philetus. Here was a man, evidently a person of some account, who, with the unprejudiced eyes of a total stranger, had sized him up as a man of side-aisle importance.

"Could it be that his friends and acquaintances really so regarded him? It set him thinking, and the result you see in the modest, thoughtful Philetus Gobliuton of today."

"Jason, dear," said Mrs. Calliper, "don't you suppose it would be a good thing for you to go to a strange church once in a while?"

What Have You Missed from the Lack of Willing Consecration.

"But yield yourselves unto God." Rom. vi. 13.

A stranger once called at the great Friedberg Cathedral and asked permission to play on the organ. The custodian was very stiff and unwilling to allow him access to the great instrument, but permitted him to sit down for a few moments, while he listened and tested his ability. He was soon amazed at the touch of that masterhand. Before he had played many moments, he was listening spellbound to the unearthly music that was coming forth from the pipes. "Who are you, anyhow?" he asked. "Why," replied the other, "I am Mendelssohn, and this organ was built at my directions." Then the official could not find words enough to express his humiliation, and apologized. "To think," he said, "that I should have kept Mendelssohn from his own organ." Alas! how many are keeping the masterhand of him who made us for himself from the keys of our being. Let him have you and he will bring out of your life its highest and best, and make your whole existence a psalm of praise, a doxology of glory to God who made you for himself.—Watchword and Truth.

When You are Successful.

Though you may be able to draw your check for millions, if you are not master of yourself, you are not successful. You may control thousands of employees; but, if you cannot control your temper, if you are the slave of passion, you have failed.

You are not successful if you chafe and fret, if you are discontented and unhappy, and out of harmony with your environment.

If your vocation absorbs all your energies, leaving nothing at the close of each day for your home and family but lassitude and irritability, you have no claim to the character of a successful man.

You are not successful, even though you become a great specialist by the abnormal development of one side of your nature, if you allow a large proportion of your brain cells to go out of business.

You may be a giant in congress, or in the counting room; but, if you are a pigmy in the drawing room, a nobody in society, you have failed to reach one of the most [illegible] phases of success. If you neglect self-culture, if you do not develop your higher faculties, but live down among the brute qualities of your nature, you have defeated the very object of your being,—growth.

You are not successful, though you own a fine house and wear broadcloth, if you grind the life out of those under you in order to increase your wealth.

While you depend upon chance and believe in your lucky star, the doors of achievement will remain closed against you.

Home Lovers.

The persons who do not love their home, or who are by hopeless heredity natural nomads, ready to shelter under any roof for convenience sake, must be radically wrong in the matter of common sense. Necessity often compels many people to perch on strange roosts, but every body should strive if possible to acquire, before middle age, at least, some permanent staying abode that might be characterized and enjoyed as a home. A home of one's own is the building of one's character for better or for worse. If the home shrine is always illuminated by tapers of parental love and solicitude, and sustained through all the vicissitudes of life by filial devotion, its occupants cannot fail to attain all the possible comforts of human existence. Some may find transient solace in superficial street parading, others in stiff formalities of drawing rooms or promiscuous assemblies, yet such are not the natural resources of human comfort; for it is the home, and the home alone, "be it ever so humble," that yields what our hearts most crave for on earth.—The Christian at Work.

Short Sermons. No. 28.

"Trusting in the promises." That all good Bible Christians are trusting in the promises of the Lord, there is no doubt in my mind. While there is a great multitude that no man can number of sincere folks at that, who sing themselves off into ecstacies about trusting in the promises, who in reality are strangers to the covenants of promise, and know in a manner nothing about them, and are in a condition much like those who never heard of them. To trust in the promises of the Lord one must of necessity know what they are, and believe in them, and hope and trust in their fulfilment. And for any one to talk and sing about trusting in the promises of the Lord when in fact they do not believe them, or know what they are, is the worst kind of deception. What has the Lord promised his faithful servants, How readest thou? Simon Peter says that exceeding great and precious [illegible] given [illegible], that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature. The divine nature is promised the believer, who is living and walking by faith and hope. And no one who claims to be in possession of immortality—the divine nature, can in reality trust in this promise. While the Holy Spirit through Paul says that God will render or give eternal life to them who seek for glory and honor and immortality. Now my friend, if you have been taught and made to believe that you now have in your possession and person, this glory and this honor and this immortality, then you will not, and cannot seek for them, and will as a natural result miss eternal life. See Rom. ii. 6, 7. And the same Spirit through the same apostle says to brother Titus. In hope of eternal life, which God that cannot lie, promised before the world began. Titus i. 2. If Paul had in his possession this eternal life, he would have known it by the Holy Spirit which was to guide him into all truth, then pray tell me how he could still hope for, and trust in this promise? Hope does not apply to present possession. See Rom. viii. 24, 25. And this eternal life that Paul and all other Christians hope for, is divinely located, not in us, but in the Son of God. And the best of Christians only have it by faith in the promise of God, much as they have the Son. See 1 Jno. v. 10-12. The gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord. Rom. vi. 23. And this eternal life is safely deposited in Jesus, the Life-giver—hid with Christ in God, and will be given to those who seek for it, and are found worthy when Jesus, the Life-giver, comes to reward his servants, and rule and reign until he destroys death, the last enemy. Then death cannot be his coming, nor the voice that Jesus sends to call us to his arms, as men and women vainly sing. The covenants of promise relate not to a home or mansion in the skies, but to a real good, lovely, happy home on this earth when the curse is removed. This is what the Lord promised father Abraham for an eternal home. Abraham saw the land, and died in faith, and now sleeps in hope of the fulfilment of that God-given promise. And all Christians are heirs, and will be content to share with father Abraham in this God-given home, and delight themselves in the abundance of peace. Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth." So let us believe and trust in the promises of God. And if any man hopes and trusts in the promise of going to heaven at death, that man has been mislead, [illegible] to sad disappointment, as there is no such a promise in the Bible, but lots of them on the outside.

Obituary.

Died, at his home in Brown Co., Ill., near Ripley, Sister Elizabeth Griffith, on Sunday evening, April the 18th, 1902.

Sister Griffith leaves a husband, three sons and one daughter, and the household of faith, besides a host of friends to mourn her loss. One daughter preceded her by a few months to the grave.

Miss Elizabeth Cruze was born in Lewiston, Ill., June 19th, 1850, being at the time of her death 51 years old.

When six years of age, she with her parents went to Texas. After remaining there three years they returned to Illinois.

She was married to Joseph Griffith Dec. 25, 1873. Shortly after their marriage they went to Iowa, after three years they returned to Illinois where they lived until her death.

She united with the Church of God, of the Abrahamic faith, at Ripley, in 1892 and has lived in the faith ever since. Her husband and two daughters were all baptized by Brother Foore.

We sorrow not as those who have no hope. Although we will miss a kind and attentive sister, yet, if we believe that Christ died and rose again all that are in Christ will he bring with him when he comes the second time without sin unto salvation.

The funeral services were held in our church building, at ten o'clock on the 15th.

After singing "Some Sweet Day," and "There will be no Dark Valley," we read the 14th chapter of Job in connection with 1 Cor. xv. commencing at the 12th verse. Then a word of prayer and singing "We will Never Say Good Bye in Eden," then the writer spoke to a large and attentive audience on the Life and Death question. Then after singing "Tarry With Me," conducted her to the cemetry where we laid her to sleep the sleep of the just, till the resurrection morn. We would say to husband and daughter, press on toward the mark of the prize, and to the sons, put yourselves in condition to meet your mother in the everlasting kingdom, and may God bless you in your efforts.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Holy Bible.

Holy Bible, book divine,
Precious treasure, thou art mine;
Mine to tell me when I come,
Mine to teach me who I am.

Mine to guide me into life,
Mine to teach to cease from strife;
Holy Bible may I see,
All the truth revealed in thee.

What We Believe. No 2.

"As a means to this end" (that is, "the restitution of all things which God hath spoken," etc.), the Church of God advocates "the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations." It may be said that all churches teach "the establishment of the kingdom of God," and hence there is no need of making this so prominent as a point of difference from other religious bodies. But what does the Bible teach us about the establishment of the kingdom of God? It will be observed that the Church of God insists on teaching "the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth." "True," the objector may say, "but so do we. We, too, hold that the kingdom of God is on earth." Some explain that "the kingdom is in the heart" of the believer, while others maintain that the Church is the kingdom, and that the terms "church" and "kingdom" are synonyms. While it is claimed by the promoters of these views that these are taught in the Bible, and are therefore matters of faith with those who so hold, the Church of God is equally firm in its adherence to [illegible] and faith in the Bible; and yet it does not subscribe to either of these views. It is proper here to say that the Church of God advocates the future "establishment of the kingdom of God." But why "future?"

First. Because the God of heaven has promised to "set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." Dan. ii. 44. It is perfectly clear from these statements:

a That the kingdom here promised is to occupy the same territory occupied by "all these kingdoms;"

b That it is to supercede the kingdoms which it shall destroy;

c That it is not to pass out of the hands of its original possessors, that "it shall not be left to other people;" and d That it shall stand forever.

Second. It is certainly evident that at no time in the past was such a kingdom established, neither is now in existence. This being true, the Church of God looks for the establishment of the kingdom of God on earth as a future event. This kingdom is one of the "things spoken" by the mouth of all God's holy prophets, and its establishment on earth is one of "the means to this end," "the restitution of all things spoken." How then could the kingdom be otherwise than future at this time, especially in view of the fact that God has not yet "sent Jesus Christ," whose occupancy of heaven is limited "until (up to) the times of restitution of all things spoken?"

We would not underrate the importance and effectiveness of Christ's past and present work, in shedding his blood for many for the remission of sins, in establishing a covenant of eternal life for all who will submit to and obey him; as well as the institution of the Church as a training school of those who through the gospel and incipient obedience—baptism—are discipled to him. All this has place and function, and when properly used according to the divine intention will work out the end designed by the wisdom and beneficence of God. But let it be strictly borne in mind that these very arrangements of God's grace are not a finality—not the end to be attained, but only a means to an end. All this seems to have been lost out of sight by those who contend that the kingdom of God is now in existence, either in the effects of the grace of God on the heart of the believer or in the Church instituted by Christ.

In order to reduce this matter to a more tangible form, let me say that a kingdom consists of at least four different elements:

a A king, as the term king-dom implies.

b Subjects.

c Territory.

d A capital, with the possible addition of a code of laws.

It will be seen that the article of faith in question speaks of "the Christ as King of kings." Why does the Church of God hold that "the Christ" will be this King? Because of the promises God made concerning his right to reign. We may here briefly refer to the promises made to David concerning the perpetuity of his throne. "I have made a covenant with my chosen," says God, "I have sworn unto David my servant, Thy Seed will I establish forever, and build up thy throne to all generations..... My covenant will I not break nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips. Once have I sworn by my holiness, that I will not lie unto David. His Seed shall endure forever, and his throne as the sun before me. It shall be established forever as the moon, and as a faithful witness in heaven." Psa. lxxxix. 3, 4, 34-37. Reference to the original covenant and David's understanding of these matters pertaining to a "great while to come" may be found in 2 Sam. vii. 12-29. Prior to the birth of "the Christ," who is to be this "King of kings," it was announced that "the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David; and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Luke i. 31-33. This was also the burden of the announcement of the angels to the shepherds: "Fear not: for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all the people, for unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord." Luke ii. 10, 11. It is because of his relationship to David that Christ is entitled to "The throne of his father David." The apostle Peter had this in mind when he gave utterance on the day of Pentecost to these words: "Therefore (David) being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne; he seeing this before spake of the resurrection of Christ," etc. Acts ii. 30, 31.

Again, it may be asked, "Is not the Christ now seated on his throne, and hence the kingdom in full operation?" Let us observe what "the Christ" himself has to say as to the time when he shall "sit upon the throne of his glory." Hear him: "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, THEN shall he sit upon the throne of his glory." Matt. xxv. 31. To maintain that the Son of Man is now seated on the throne of his glory, it would be required to establish that he has so "come in his glory and all the holy angels with him." But this would necessitate the further conclusion that he has sent his angels and has gathered his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other (Matt. xxiv. 30, 31), and also that he has given rewards to "every man according to his works." Matt. xvi. 27. For all these things belong after his coming in glory. Again, the apostle Paul addressed these words to Timothy: "I charge thee before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom: preach the word." 2 Tim. iv. 1, 2. He "shall judge." The time is "at his appearing and his kingdom." Has he "appeared a second time without sin unto salvation to those who look for him?" Heb. ix. 28. If so, when? But to the Corinthian brethren the Apostle addressed this caution: "Judge nothing before the time until the Lord come." 1 Cor. iv. 5. The Lord was to judge at his appearing and his kingdom; these brethren were to judge nothing before the time until the Lord come; the Lord had not as yet come; the time to judge had not arrived; therefore the kingdom was not yet a fact in the days of Paul, but was future.

33. If then Pharaoo shall summon you and say unto you, What is your employment?

34. Ye shall say, Men who raise domestic animals are we, thy servants until now, both we and our fathers; that he may cause you to take up your abode in a land of Gesem of Arabia; for every shepherd of sheep is an abomination to Aiguptioi.

COMMENT.

Instead of "the land of Goshen" as in all the versions, the reader will observe that the text gives it as "Gesem of the land of Arabia," an importance difference this to the student of history and topography as well as to archaeologists.

The R. V. says also that "all the souls of the house of Jakoob, which came into Egypt were three score and ten" (70). The text says "seventy-five."

In the 28th verse R. V. says—"to show the way before him into Goshen; and they came into the land of Goshen."

The text reads "to have him meet him at a city of heroes in a land of Hraneesees" another important historic and topographic difference, that the reader will do well to note.

The differences of names are too many to note particularly here; and the reader is asked to compare carefully. For this chapter is a key to much of the later genealogical identity of persons in Israelitish biography and Biblical history, however dry and statistical it may seem to the general reader; and the New Covenant record is the evidence that the apostles and early Christian church relied upon it and followed it.

Conversions under Apostolic Preaching. No. 4.

LYDIA, SELLER OF PURPLE, AND HER HOUSEHOLD.

The introduction of Christianity into Europe was made at Philippi; and by Paul and his companions in the ministry of the Word—Luke, Silas and Timotheus. Paul and his associates in labor sailed away from Troas by Samothrace and landed at Neapolis, the seaport of Philippi. The voyage was made in two days. The distance from the harbor to Philippi is ten miles over a high range of land, which begins its ascent near the sea shore. It is a fact of great importance that the "first city" at which Paul arrived on his entrance into Europe should be that colony which was more fit than any other in the empire to be regarded the representative of the power and greatness of imperial Rome. It was Rome in miniature where the people enjoyed all the rights of citizenship which was exercised by the people of Italy. The gift of a colonia was bestowed upon it by Augustus Ceasar. This fact taken in connection with Paul's Roman citizenship will serve to explain some things found in this narrative of Paul's experience here. This will be shown later. The city was a border garrison of the provinces of Macedonia, and of no little importance as a Roman military colony. The old historians tell us that here in the plain of Philippi the last battle was fought and lost by the republicans of Rome. The whole region round is eloquent of the history of this battle. Here on the hill of Philippi Cassius died. But I need not detain my readers with scenes connected with the battle which ended the Roman republic by the triumph of Antonius over Cassius and Brutus, the two arch conspirators, and assassins of Julius Cæsar. A battle and a victory outranking that of Antonius in importance are narrated in the 16th chapter Acts. A battle in which truth and righteousness gain a victory on the confines of Europe, in the colonial city of Philippi. The planting of an ensign infinitely more significant than the golden eagles that gleamed at the head of the Roman legions was an event worthy of a place on the page of inspired history. Paul and his fellow-laborers are in Philippi in obedience to an earnest and beseeching prayer made to the apostle by a man heard in vision saying, "Come over into Macedonia and help us." Ver. 9. There was no synagogue in this city into which, Paul "as his manner was," could go to allege the doctrine of Christ out of the Scriptures and but few Jews, and proselytes of the Jewish faith to whom he could discourse. That earnest call at Troas for help was from heaven and could not possibly be in vain. Ears and hearts would be opened to hear and heed the message. These men of faith had to wait certain days till the sabbath came round; on which day they went out of the city by a river side where prayer was wont to be made, and they sat down and spake unto the women who resorted thither. The jailor and his household, though the principal topic of the narrative, do not come first in the record of conversions. Lydia, a seller of purple, of the city of Thyratira, was the first fruit of gospel effort here. Was it accidental that Paul and this woman met at Philippi? Some would say yes, purely so. But surely Paul's presence at that particular time was no accident but specially pre-arranged for by him who rules and overrules the principal events in history in order to accomplish his purposes in reference to his Word, and the church. That vision at Troas places this meeting in the sphere of the supernatural. It was not a coming in contact at the crossroads of things that float hither and thither. Lydia's home and place of dyeing is Thyatira, but at Philippi she has found a place for the sale of her fabrics. It is written, "Whose heart the Lord opened, that she attended unto the things spoken of Paul." Obedience in baptism no doubt was insisted on by the apostle, and attended to on her part and that of her household. In exchange for the spiritual things of the gospel she freely, and even urgently, makes these pilgrim gospel proclaimers welcome to her house for the time being. Thus far all things are peaceful and hopeful for the success of the mission in Macedonia. The congregation met in the house or by the river side; souls were converted and a church of men and women gradually built up. This state of things continued for "many days." No one under the circumstances could foresee the storm that was to overcast so fair a prospect. But a bitter persecution, however, was unexpectedly provoked. The devil was not disposed to allow things to run on thus smoothly. The field which these foreign evangelists had so successfully cultivated must be abandoned and their voices silenced. The Christian religion is to be brought into direct conflict with heathen authorities, and with the powers of evil which give paganism its supremacy over the minds of men. A damsel possessed with a spirit of divination followed the apostle and his company as they were going to the place of prayer, and cried, "These men are the servants of the Most High God, which show us the way of salvation." This was kept up "many days" until Paul became grieved and turning toward her commanded the spirit, in the name of Jesus Christ to come out of her. And it came out the same hour. It must not be thought that the apostle was irritated and gave the command in an angry tone. We cannot suppose that divine power would have lent its sanction to such a mood by forthwith expelling the demon. If this wretched demoniac had been allowed longer to keep up her cry the whole city would have been familiar with her words. Paul knew this and "he could not bear the thought that the credit even of the gospel should be enhanced by such unholy means." For some such reason our Lord would not suffer the devils to speak "because they knew him," or as in the margin "to say that they knew him." Mark i. 34. Out of pity too, doubtless, the apostle commanded the evil spirit to come out of this poor slave girl whose health was impaired, and mind destroyed by the demoniacal influence. The power to cast out devils by the Lord's own appointment, was a part of the apostolic mission and stood in evidence of the truth of the gospel. This was the first miracle wrought here and it brought these propagators of the new religion into antagonism with the powers of darkness and of spiritual wickedness in high places. Signs were to follow them that believed. It is written, "In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing it shall not hurt them; they shall lay their hands on the sick and they shall recover." Mark xvi. 17, 18. The last verse of the chapter states the primary design of these miraculous manifestations. "And they went forth and preached every where, the Lord working with them and confirming the Word." The Word which was to be the ground of faith and through faith the means of salvation in every age, must be confirmed by miracles, such as the apostles wrought in broad day light in the presence of competent eye witnesses; these marvelous signs ranking infinitely above any thing a heathen soothsayer could do; and still in modern times challenging and defying the critical acumen of a Hume to place them on a level with heathen and Roman Catholic wonders, and the pretended miracles of later times.

Report.

Editor Restitution:

I take pleasure in informing you that Bro. W. L. Skeels of Shoils, Ore., visited us while enroute to an appointment at Central Point in southern Oregon, and preached eight discourses. No building could be obtained, consequently meetings were held part of the time in a schoolhouse and part of the time in a private house. The attendance was quite small owing to a combination of circumstances. One lady, however, seemed to be quite interested, and should other meetings be held here in a reasonable length of time good may result. At least we feel strengthened and encouraged by this visit of Bro Skeels. There are ten members of the one faith located here. Among them is Sister Hicklin of Okla., and Bro. G. W. Smith and family of Kan. May we all live earnest, sincere and devoted Christian lives, and be ready to meet the Savior at his appearing and kingdom.

Yours in hope.

J. J. CARY.

To the Brethren of Illinois, Greeting:

The call for means for the support of an evangelist has been some what delayed because of our not having an evangelist in the field. As we now have Brother Crowe at work, and he gives good reports, we beg of you to give your free-will offering. Remember the Lord loveth a cheerful giver.

Remit to me as Treasurer, at Lanark, Ill.

J. M. GLOTFELTY.

If you are anxious about the well-being of some friend and would like to have him see and embrace the truth, subscribe for this paper to be sent to him. It will talk at times and places that you cant. It may make opportunity for you to say a word that will make you friend a joint-heir with the Lord Jesus Christ. It has been done. Why not try it?

"The Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAY 14, 1902. NUMBER 18.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

The love of the world ignores God, fixes on the present only, and has relation to the mere surface of things."

"Put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provision for the flesh, to fulfil the lusts thereof." Rom. xiii. 14.

Christ's brethren love the zealous and disinterested advocates of the truth; and are careful to do nothing to embarass them."

"People who plead that they have bad memories, forget that they have the power to make good ones. They have good memories for what they continually busy themselves about; this is a universal rule."

"Effective good requires infallible wisdom and infallible power. When these two are on the earth it will be a satisfaction and a glory to have to do with government. At present it is a vexation of spirit."

"See what is involved in the psychology of immortal-soulism. It is not only an unbiblical dogma; but one that proves fatal to fundamental Bible truth. It just robs Christ of his glory as the Life-giver to men. If anything is plainly taught us of his work in coming into the world, it is that he might give, not happiness merely to a select few of immortal beings, but life itself. The redeemed will owe EVERYTHING to Christ, even their very existence.

"What is gained, in point of intelligibility, by substituting the "unknowable" for "God?" Nothing. It is rather an unwitting concession of the truth of the Bible declaration that by wisdom (by the exercise of their own unaided powers) the world knew not (and cannot know) God. The Bible is 6000 years ahead of our philosophers in pronouncing God unknowable to reason. In divine kindness it steps forward to fill up this terrible chasm. But men prefer to leave him "unknown." They like to think him "unknowable." They get rid of his authority in that way, and establish their independence; they make themselves their own masters. But it is vain and absurd, and ruinous. God has made himself known, and men are responsible when they reject the knowledge, as they will find when the judgments of God in the earth re-assert his rights to be the Governor among the nations."

"I and My Father are One."

This is what Jesus said, and we do not think it very hard to learn in what sense this was the case, if we remember what he said on another occasion: "My Father is greater than I." There should be no difficulty in seeing the perfect harmony of these two apparently conflicting utterances, especially when we have considered many similar ones by Christ, as for instance, "There is none good but one, that is God;" repudiating the virtue of being good himself, in the absolute sense that God was, by saying, "Why callest thou me good?" Jesus was one then, with the Father, in the same sense as he prays that his disciples

MIGHT BE ONE,

John xvii. 21-26,—one in spirit, one in purpose, one mentally, not carried away with the world, but sanctified by the truth. Ver. 17. This was the kernel of Christ's meaning in this beautiful prayer. What more lovely words could he have used to express the depth of his love and care for his flock,—what loftier sentiment could he have been possessed of than that expressed in the 24th verse? "That they may be

WITH ME WHERE I AM."

There seems to be blended in this beautiful petition all the lofty feelings of devotion, self-sacrifice, and sympathy of human nature, with the rich depths of the Eternal Purpose of the Creator of the universe. Recognizing as Christ did his near relation to the Father, and knowing that he had fulfilled his mission thus far, yet he did not forget his followers, his companions in his works, but as though he were already departed from them, he yearned for their protection and their ultimate salvation. Yea, he was in a limited sense one of them, in which he was not one with the world. They understood the great purpose of the Father, and had embraced it, and lived in it, and worked for it. They knew the Father, for Christ had "manifested the Father unto them." Ver. 6. They were one mentally with Christ and with God, though there was to be a fuller "oneness" in the future even as Christ now is, that is, one in spirit substance. That will constitute the

COMPLETE ONENESS.

But before the physical transformation occurs, the mental change must take place. Those who profess to be followers of Christ must have assimilated the mind of God, and expelled the old man mentality by its entrance till there be the much-desired "spirit of Christ," in manifestation, without which "we are none of his." What is there more conducive to the general welfare of fraternal associations than unity? Nothing. What, on the other hand, is more destructive to common interests, peace, and happiness, than mental conflict? It does not require a very keen observer to perceive that where discord prevails, a chaotic state of things will soon obtain, even in temporal matters, and

SO IN SPIRITUAL.

The more oneness among religious professors, the tighter the bonds of fellowship, and the richer the fruits of companionship. If it requires mental uniformity in things pertaining to earthly matters, for prosperity, how much more so does it require mental conformity with those to whom we belong,

GOD AND CHRIST,

for whose blessing we pray, and for whose gift of everlasting blessedness we look and hope? Especially clear is it when we know that upon this very thing our hope depends. Therefore God says: "Be ye holy, even as I am holy," for without holiness no man shall see the Lord. How much then, depends upon our mental conformity to God's law. How imperative that we should feed continually, masticate and grow healthy and strong on the mental and spiritual food which God has placed within our reach."

Funeral of Sister Catherine Mitchell.

Dear Brethren, Sisters and Friends:

The blows of the arch enemy fall in rapid succession. Before we recover from the shock of one, another, and another have fallen. But amid the darkness of these sad hours it is delightful to know that the day is at hand,—the long dark night of sin, suffering and death will soon end; and the morning without a cloud will dawn. In the meantime we have to weep with those who weep,—and we are assured by the Spirit that "It is better to go to the house of mourning than to the house of feasting," because death is the end of all men, and the living lay it to heart. Sorrow is better than laughter, for by the sadness of the countenance is the heart made better. "The heart of the wise is in the house of mourning, but the heart of fools is in the house of mirth." Eccl. vii. 4. A wonderful Book is

THE BOOK OF GOD.

It contains medicine for all sorts of trouble. Alas! It is only on occasions like this that tens of thousands will think in that direction; but when the shadow of death falls across their pathway and their loved ones pass beyond their influence, or control, or sympathy,—and they realize that all their opportunities, and privileges, and possibilities are over,—that their record has been made, their accounts cast up,—then, men and women are obliged to consider subjects which are avoided when life slides smoothly along. There are trials many, incident to this life for all of us. One of the greatest to me, is, to lay away one who lived without God,—without Christ, signed away the day of salvation; hardened himself against the appeals of love and mercy and his life has gone out in the blackness of darkness for ever. If there be one within the sound of my voice who is pursuing that course, I plead with him by all the love of God and of Christ, to look into you casket, and see the proof of his own mortality,—see that "life is a vapor that appeareth for a little time and then vanishes away,"—and at once ensure his life with Jesus. I do not mean that death in this way can be evaded, but that the same Jesus who said on approaching the grave of Lazarus,

WITHOUT HOPE;

"I AM THE RESURRECTION and the life" will ensure him life after death in an endless degree,—providing he believe the gospel of the kingdom of God, reform his life, be baptized into the sin-covering name of Jesus for the remission of past sins, then live godly, waiting for his Son from heaven. Oh! I thank God I am not sorrowing without hope today. I praise his holy name because I read, "Thy dead shall live!" Because it says the summons, "Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust, for thy dew is as the dew of herbs and the earth shall cast out her dead," will surely be issued;—I praise him because his servant David said, when I awake in thy likeness," not before. I praise him because the Prince of Life himself has said, "they shall hear his voice and come forth to life;" I praise him for he has said the dead in Christ rise first, at the shout of the archangel and the trump of God. And I praise and magnify his holy name because they will then shout, "O death, where is thy sting, O grave where is thy victory?" And I praise him because I read, "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord,—they rest from their labor; and their works follow them;" and still again I praise him, for it says, "them that sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." And as this is the class to which the dear Sister belonged, our tears are not all tears of sadness. We sorrow not as those who have no hope. We consider her sleep,

"I SHALL BE SATISFIED

A BLESSED SLEEP,

from which none ever wake to weep. We look with joyful anticipation for the general assembly of all God's saints. If faithful to the end, we shall met our loved ones there, and help to make the arch of the heavens ring with "Blessing and honor and glory and power unto him who sitteth upon the throne and to the Lamb forever." I became acquainted with the dear deceased one in the spring of 1863, 39 years ago; before the close of the year she accepted the great truth concerning man's nature, that it was altogether mortal; and having learned what fatal disease affected the human family she was induced to take the medicine offered by the great Physician sent to us by the God of love. He said, "I am come that they might have life;" this suited her case exactly, and disposed her to learn more of his gracious offices and work, such as that it was by means of his resurrection it became possible for her after death,—so that his words "because I live, ye shall live also,"—were music in her ears; and the apostolic word, "He was RAISED AGAIN for our justification," was like a new chapter of redemption's story to her. It was a revelation from heaven to her, although she had read it many a time before. Often and often she had heard it proclaimed that Christ had died for our sins and paid it all. But the fact that there would have been no justification for us without his resurrection had been lost sight of; because the penalty of the law had been lost sight of. DEATH was the penalty. It was explained,—was death, by the Judge by the words, "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." This made it clear to our Sister, as it will to ALL, who will believe the record, that the redemption which is in Christ Jesus is a redemption from death; yes,—a REDEMPTION FROM DEATH.

TO LIVE AGAIN,

Permit a stranger to most of you,—and whom you may never see or hear again, to press this great truth upon your attention,—that it is redemption from death you all need; and if you study the matter in the light of the divine logic, read to you from the 15th of 1 Corinthians it may be an odor of life unto life to you. And it may be helpful to some to explain WHY there would have been no justification for us without the resurrection of Christ. Briefly, very briefly, Jesus was tempted and tried in all points, like as we are, yet without sin,—and so was able, being sinless, to offer himself

WITHOUT SPOT TO GOD.

His resurrection was PROOF that he was spotless,—his NON-resurrection would have proven him NOT SPOTLESS; and left us, as before, without a Savior; being raised again it proved his blood precious, and that it had ratified the everlasting covenant that alone could give life after death; and blessed be God, you can if you will, prove the life-giving power of that covenant by Christ's own resurrection in Heb. xiii. 20. It says brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great Shepherd of the sheep, THROUGH THE BLOOD of the everlasting covenant." And seeing it was a resurrection like Christ's Paul suffered so much to secure, I earnestly hope some of you will do the same. I started to tell you what truths our dear Sister fell in love with and became obedient to,—but have used most of my time on one of them. But I dare affirm that that doctrine of life in Christ is the key to the whole truth. There can be nothing without life. But for those who obtain the life, the Eternal Purpose of God provides a kingdom of glory, peace and blessing in which that endless life can be enjoyed. And the gospel of the kingdom which Jesus said should be preached in all the world just as the life Jesus came to give, includes the kingdom. And it is to be on this earth. The Spirit says the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth,—and the kingdom to be given to the saints of the Most High i nder the whole heaven, not above, and Jesus said, "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth; and also said, "Where I go ye cannot come,—but if I go away I will come again and receive you unto myself." In briefest outline this is gospel,—minus the conditions. No one can be saved in his sins.

"THE GOD OF PEACE

INCLUDES THE LIFE,—

SIN MUST BE PARDONED.

There is a law of pardon published. It has three clauses: faith in the things concerning the kiundom of God and the name of Jesus Christ. Second, Repentance toward God. Third, baptism into Christ for remission of past sin; and then must follow a godly life till Jesus comes, or death overtakes one. This was the truth confessed by our Sister till she lost consciousness; and we are about to lay her away to await the voice of him who said he was the resurrection and the life. Believing her to be of those of whom Jesus said, I will raise him or her up at the last day, because sin, the sting of death had been removed, we are not afraid to trust her for a little while under the dominion of death,—and so we say, good by, dear Sister, good by. We hope to meet you thrilled with the power of an endless life, and nevermore part.

All can see by the afflicting circumstances of the hour, the truth of the passage which says the present life is a vapor. We pass like shadows,—our purposes are broken, our plans perish, our possessions take wings, we all fade as a leaf,—friends fail, joys flee,—pleasures pass,—hopes perish,—kindred die,— only God lives and changes not. So, then, lest this life glide away let us now lay hold of the life to come,—the life that cannot fail us. The gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord, as I have tried to show you. And O, dear friends, He opens the fountain of perennial bliss. He offers the vigor of an endless life. He invites us to partake of his own Eternity. And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son hath not life. I entreat you not to forget it—hath not life, without the Son.

To the stricken family I would say, God, whose Word was never known to fail, promises to be the Father of the fatherless if they put their trust in him. May this be your happy choice! May you learn to trust him in the dark hour of bereavement. Believe him, obey him, and wait for his Son from heaven and all will be well. Amen.

A Few Signs.

Catastrophe in the shape of earthquake and volcano has overtaken some of the islands of the West Indies. For several days there have been earthquake shocks until last Thursday Mount Pelee, on the island of Martinique seemed to explode, and engulf the city of St. Pierre and its inhabitants. It is possible that some few of the people escaped to the hills beyond, but it is quite certain that upwards of 25,000 people were killed. Shipping in the harbor was destroyed. Ashes fell 350 miles distant, and on several other of the islands volcanoes have burst out, and the destruction is great. On the island of St. Vincent molten lava is streaming over whole districts, and the north half of the island is a ruin. Added to this comes the news of earthquakes and volcanic disturbance in the Aleutian Islands near Alaska, and on April 18 there was a severe earthquake in Gautemala, and many people killed there.

Queen Wilhelmina of Holland is near death's door. Should she die and leave no direct heir, the next in order will be the Grand Duke of Saxe-Weimar, who is a vassal of the German Emperor. It is reported that he has renounced his claims, and the next in line is Prince Albrecht of Hohenzollern, who the Dutch think would rule as dictated by Germany. Of course Germany wants to dominate Holland, as that would give her the Rhine from its source to the sea, and insure her open ports for her vessels. Naturally the other nations will oppose such a grab, as that will disturb the "balance of power" very materially.

At a meeting of Jewish Rabbis at New Orleans last week, the matter of changing the Sabbath from Saturday to Sunday was taken up and discussed, and advanced so far as to result in a committee being appointed to investigate its expediency and make report at a future meeting. It would seem that such a question would not be mentioned among this people, but it has a large number of advocates, and even if it be defeated it shows that they "seek to change" at any rate.

The death of Archbishop Corrigan of the Catholic Church at New York has caused a feeling of uneasiness at the Vatican. The unrest of the Catholic Church in America has for several years been a question that has required great tact in handling, and this man was quite a factor in keeping down the ambition of many. His death leaves no one who can be relied upon to fill the place as the Pope would wish, hence the anxiety.

Severe storms have swept over parts of Europe, and along the Italian coast much damage was done to harbors and shipping.

England is in a state of turmoil on account of sale of all the great Atlantic steamship lines to a syndicate of United States speculators. They fear the transference of so many vessels from the British to the American flag, will weaken the English transport service in case of war with any other nation. Trusts and combines are the order of the day now, and they will have to submit.

A new Jewish Hospital called "Shaare Zedek," has just recently been opened at Jerusalem. It is located on the Jaffa road where the breezes can be of benefit, and has an area of 32,750 square feet. The work was begun in 1897, and has been done solely by Jewish artisans. The hospital is built with the idea of getting the best hygienic results, and is well up-to-date in every way.

Ladies' Tithing Society.

A meeting of the Ladies' Tithing Society will be held in connection with the Michigan Conference, on Saturday, A. M. May 30th.

"Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse.....and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not.....pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room to receive it."

Dear Sisters, the question ought not to be with God's children—how great a blessing will it bring me to give my tenth to the Lord, but will this sacrifice bless another, is this offering to God to build up the sacred cause of truth? Then let us give unto the Lord and not to self. Have you ever given your tenth to God's cause? If not, try it one year. You will be surprised how the Lord's pocket-book will fill, and when you wish money to use to help a poor brother, or send a paper to another, or help pay an evangelist to tell the same glad news to others that gave you hope of eternal life, it is ready. O so many ways to help on the cause, and this is the best way I believe, to develop method in the gospel work. Try it, and know some one is blessed by your efforts. Try and be present at the Tithing Society Meeting.

"Leanness of soul" arises far more often than we think from the indigestible nature of the spiritual food we have been feeding upon. We are not satisfied to eat the food God has provided for us, and we hunger for the flesh-pots of Egypt. We do not like our providential surroundings, perhaps, or our church, or our preacher, or our work, or our family associations, and we are all the time thinking we could be better Christians if only our circumstances were different, if we could attend a different church, or move into a different neighborhood, or engage in a different sort of work. Our souls "loathe the light food" of God's providing; and we question, as the Israelites did, whether God is really able to provide the spiritual food necessary for us in the "wilderness," where he seems to have appointed our dwelling-place.—Hannah Whitall Smith, in Every Day Religion.

Obituary.

Micah B. Halstead was born in Seneca Co, Ohio, in 1832. Came with his parents to Laporte Co., Indiana, when only about two years old. From thence to Jasper Co., Indiana, in 1851, with his brother David T., where he since continued to reside. He was happily united in marriage with Virginia Harris, of same Co., in 1857 who survives him. To them were born eight sons, all of whom are living except one, Edward M., who died in South Dakota. One sister Mrs. Letta Benjamin, and one brother David T., both of same county, also survive him. His death was very sudden, and entirely unexpected, occurring Sunday morning, April 27, 1902, from neuralgia of the heart, at the age of 69 years, 11 months and 25 days. He lived an unpretentious life, but highly esteemed for his unswerving honesty and integrity of purpose. His many friends were of those who knew him best. He never sought to gain or retain the friendship of any, through sacrifice of principles or false pretense. He became a member of the Church of God in 1866. Heartily embracing the faith and hope of life and immortality only as the gift of God through Jesus Christ. To which faith and hope he continued his adherence without wavering. The foregoing is the testimony of those who were nearest to the deceased. The funeral was conducted by the undersigned, from the late residence of Bro. Halstead on Sunday May 4, 1902. May it be his and ours to have "a part in the first resurrection."

Announcement.

The Church of God, of Indiana, will meet in Conference [D. V.] at Antioch, three miles north of Argos, and five miles south of Plymouth, Marshall County, Indiana.

The meetings will begin on Saturday, June 7, at 10:00 A. M., and continue over the following Sunday. For the last thirty-eight years the Church has not failed to meet there and hold meetings over the second Sunday in June. The fond memories of many will go back to those good meetings, and the dear ones that we have met there, who are now quietly sleeping in Jesus, awaiting the resurrection morn.

Let every one that can possibly do so, lay aside worldly cares for awhile and gather there to work for the blessed Master. Let us not go there simply to have our own spiritual strength renewed, but also to assist in the work of saving others.

Each congregation is requested to select one or more delegates and send to this meeting. Let us make this meeting the best one ever held in the history of the church.

Attempt Great Things for God.

Is this the time, O church of Christ, to sound Retreat? To turn with weapons cheap and blunt
The men and women who have borne the brunt
Of fierce assaults, and sadly yield their ground?—
No! rather strengthen stakes and lengthen cords!
  Enlarge the plans and gifts, O them elect,
And to the Kingdom come for such a time!
The earth with all its fullness, is the Lord's:
  Great things attempt for him, great things expect,
Those love imperial is, whose power subdues.

The Scriptures a Revelation from God.

In recent years people are breaking away in millions from the creeds of their fathers, and setting up new faiths which their ancestors never dreamed of. In many cases hewing out to themselves cisterns, broken cisterns, which can hold no water. Under these circumstances perhaps the following series of articles on the above subject may be of some service to the brethren and others. The most radical perhaps of all are the agnostics. This is a compound word derived from the Greek gnosis, signifying wisdom or knowledge. A body of men in the early centuries of the Christian era and before, called themselves gnostics or wise men. Some of them with their doctrines crept into the early church, and perverted the teachings of Jesus and his apostles, which lead up to a great change in the doctrines of the church in the third and fourth centuries. These modern agnostics also claim to be very wise men, but the name which they have taken literally means "know nothings." The Greek letter alpha prefixed to a word makes a negative equivalent to our no or not. however, that is the name that a class of individuals have chosen to distinguish themselves by, who claim that there is no evidence of the existence of a supreme being. Making themselves wise they became fools, and their foolish hearts were darkened. To any thinking person, unbiased by prejudice, it must be evident that there must be some great intelligence at the head of the universe. Supposing one of these agnostics had been taken into the machinery building at the Pan-American exhibition, and shown all the various complicated machines at work there and was told that the whole came together by chance, that there was no intelligent designer who constructed those machines, but that the various molecules came together of themselves, atom by atom, and that these various atoms stopped coming when there was just enough of them to complete the various machines. The agnostic would laugh such an idea to scorn.

When the wonderful works of creation, which we see everywhere around us are in question, which man has not yet, and probably never will fully comprehend, this agnostic considers that all a very simple affair that could all develop itself without any guiding intelligence directing it. They assure us that this could all occur through the process of development, and this development without any guiding intelligence which they know of, developed of itself up to man. "And therein the ass in trying not to laugh, in stretching and stretching became a giraffe, which no one can deny."

Where ever man is found in every clime of the world, with rare exceptions, he worships something, it may be a stone, a block of wood, an animal, a dead man or a living one. He may worship fire, the sun, the moon, or stars, or an unseen being; that there is this universal tendency, no one can deny. It may be called superstition, but that does not explain this universal tendency to worship. Man has many other desires implanted in his nature, and means are provided for their gratification, such as desire for food, love of home, of friends, of the opposite sex, of children, etc. Those are all faculties of the brain, which may be large or small, in different individuals, they can easily be located in the head, and an expert can readily tell whether they are large or small, and what the peculiarities of the character will be as a result. The faculty of veneration is situated in the top and center part of the head, and when large gives the person great reverence for their God or gods. It does not matter whether one or many so-called eminent men do not believe this; that will not alter the fact, that just in proportion as that faculty is large, and active in an individual or the reverse, so will be the strength of their devotional feeling. Destroy that faculty and there is no tendency to worship any thing. This faculty of the brain placed there by the Creator, adores and venerates, and that is its only function, it should be guided by the intellect as to whom to worship. Many times it is suppressed in its actions, but it will often assert itself in those who deny its very existence. I have been on the ocean with a large band of scoffers, who derided every thing pertaining to a supreme being, but when a fertile storm arose, and every one on board expected the ship every minute to go to the bottom, they got down and cried for mercy, to the god of storms, and when he heard our cry and saved us from destruction, there was not much jeering at religion for some time after.

There can be no question then that there must be a supreme being. Is it not reasonable to suppose that he will have given a revelation to man of what he requires of him? By the light of reason alone man cannot tell if there is another existence after death, although this has been conjectured in all ages, but it is only from a divine revelation that we can get an assurance of such a fact.

Looking around us to see if there is any evidence that a Divine being has revealed himself to man, other than in his works of creation; if he has given such a revelation we would reasonably expect such a revelation to be of an elevating character. Very many have claimed in all ages to have had divine revelations. The Babylonians, the Egyptians, the Greeks and the Romans all claimed to have had such revelations, but these governments and religions have all passed away. We would naturally expect a divine religion to be somewhat permanent. Among the world's old religions is that of Zoroaster, which is preserved among a few people known as Parees, they are the ancient inhabitants of Persia, driven out of that country by the Mahomedan invasion, and now principally in and around Bombay, India. Zoroaster is probably a name for more persons than any one who wrote in connection with this religion. They believed in two creators of the universe, one the good principle who created spirits, he is called Ormuzd, and an evil being called Ahriman who created the bodies of men, and the material universe. These ideas to a great extent were introduced into many of the early churches, which lead up to the idea, that the highest duty of a Christian was to emaciate his body, and so liberate the spirit from the demon created body.

Another of these ancient religions which still survives is that of Brahma. He is one of the three chief gods worshiped by the Hindoos of India. If we are to judge this religion by its results among the people who practice it, and it would seem to me to be a fair way of judging; its effects have been most disastrous, and I have had a fairly good means of judging, as I have traveled through a good deal of India, and made myself conversant with the customs and manners. But a few of these degrading customs can be noticed here, sanctioned by their priests, and rigidly carried out in their laws and customs. Girls have no choice whatever as to who they are to marry, they are married in childhood. Every married girl or woman is commanded to worship her husband and obey all his behests no matter how unreasonable. If he dies before her, she is to ascend to the pile of wood where his body is to be burned, and cheerfully be burned with him. This custom was kept up by the command of their priests, until the British government put a stop to it, and with very great difficulty; and now a widow must not marry again, and no treatment is too vile to make her submit to. This religion teaches re-incarnation, and strange to say we have a large number in this country who have adopted this belief calling themselves Theosophists; and stranger still, the originator of this cult, was a woman, and its present high priestess is an English woman. Oh, woman, what folly to teach the doctrines of the devotees, who degrade, demoralize and crush your own sex!

Another very ancient religion is the so-called religion of Confucius, but his writings are hardly after all of a religious character strictly speaking, as in them all he scarcely mentions a God or gods. His writings were simply additions to a foregone religion, consisting of many wild vagaries, and superstitions, and the result is exemplified in the "Heathen Chinee," who is too well known to need any description. One of the most recent—apart from the many claimed revelations belonging to the nineteenth century—is that of Mahomed. He however recognized in a measure, at least, the book which we call the Scriptures, as a divine revelation. If we are to judge the Mahomedan religion by its fruits, it is bad indeed, and cannot be from a wise and merciful being. The Turk who is at the head of this religion is a synonym for every thing that is vile. Through the ages this religion has encouraged its believers to degrade their women, the result has been disaster to the race. The mother is the fountain head of life, and if she is degraded the race must inevitably sink in the scale of moral existence. This religion teaches a future paradise of sensuality for men, but with black eyed "houris" specially prepared for them, and to the present women little or no hope is held out of any future life. These religions clearly cannot be from an all wise God, who created and sustains the universe. In the next article we will examine the evidences and claims of the Scriptures.

Germany—Which Side Will She Take?

We believe that God has a hand in the affairs of nations, and that he is causing them to form the alliances that will best forward his purposes, and bring about the happy reign of Jesus and his saints upon the earth.

It is plain that France will take the side of Russia, in the great Armageddon battle, but many are puzzled as to what part Germany will play. She is already angry at Great Britain, and there is no danger of entanglement there, though Britons have been taught to look upon Germans as blood relations, friends and allies; but this relationship, is two distant to count. There can be "no natural alliance" between Germany and Great Britain, for "at heart Germany is England's worst, most unprincipled foe." So at least concludes an English writer And if Germany is the Gomer, named in Ezekiel, he is right, and she will be on the side of Russia instead of on the side of England, when the question as to who is to have the Holy Land is settled forever.

Is Man a Machine or a Free Moral Agent?

If man is born to be damned, then can we be justified by faith? Then faith in our Lord Jesus, and in the Scriptures would be of no avail, then the commission that our Lord gave to his disciples, to go into all the world and preach the gospel, and he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned, then Peter on the day of Pentecost was mistaken when he preached to that vast multitude, and warning them to reform of, or from their evil ways, and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, then they that gladly received the Word were baptized. Acts ii. 37, 38 41.

Here you see the Word had the effect. Hear the Apostle to the Romans, "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, to the Jews first, and to the Greek; for therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith, as it is written, the just shall live by faith." Rom. i. 16, 17.

When we hear these glad tidings, good news of the kingdom of God, and how we become heirs and associate with Christ in that kingdom, and Christ, King of kings on David's throne in Mount Zion and Jerusalem, the land of Canaan, which God had promised to give to Abraham. Gen. xiii. 14-17. And his seed, which is Christ, Gal. iii. 16, how God had sworn with an oath to David, his seed shall endure forever and his throne as the sun before me. I have made a covenant with my chosen, I have sworn unto David my servant, thy seed will I establish forever and build up thy throne to all generations. Psa. lxxxiii. 3, 4, 34–37. Now he says, if you can break my covenant of day and night that there should not be day or night in their season, then may also my covenant be broken with David my servant, Gen. xxxiii. 20–26, "And the angel said unto Mary, Thou hast found favor with God and shalt bring forth a Son, and shalt call his name Jesus. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Most High, and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Luke i. 30–33.

Christ never denied the title of his kingship, even before Pontius Pilate, when asked, Art thou the King of the Jews? Jesus answered, Sayest thou this of thyself, or didst others tell it thee of me? Jesus answered, My kingdom is not of this world. If my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight for me, that I should not be delivered up to the Jews. Pilate therefore said unto him, Art thou a king then? Jesus answered, Thou sayest that I am a king. To this end was I born and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth. Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice." John xviii. 33–37. Yet the Jews had him crucified. But God had sworn to David that of the fruit of his loins according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne. Acts ii. 30. God did raise him from the dead. Christ ascended up to heaven, is coming back to this earth again. Acts i. 9-11. How long shall heaven maintain him? "Whom indeed heaven must retain until the times of restitution of all things, which God has spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Acts iii. 17-21. And now his gospel is sent forth, and is choosing from among the Gentiles a people for his name, and with this the word of the prophets harmonize as it is written, "After these things will I return; and I will rebuild that tabernacle of David's which has fallen down; and I will rebuild its ruins and will re-establish it." Acts xv. 13-16. (Emphatic Diaglott. "The glory of Lebanon shall come unto thee, the fir-tree, the pine-tree and box together to beautify the place of my sanctuary, and I will make the place of my feet glorious. Thy sun shall no more go down; neither shall thy moon withdraw her light; for the Lord shall be thine everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended. Thy people also shall be all righteous; they shall inherit the land forever, the branch of my planting, the work of my hands, that I may be glorified." Isa. lx. 13-21. "And righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins. The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid, and the calf and young lion, and the fatling together and a little child shall lead them." Isa. xi. 3-10.

These are some of the glorious promises that belong to the kingdom of God, and are promised to those that love him; and the apostle to the Gentiles, when he stood before Agrippa, said he stood and was judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto the fathers; and how the Gentiles might have their eyes opened and turn them from darkness to light, and give them an inheritance among them that are sanctified through that faith that leadeth unto me. (Christ.) Acts xxvi. 18. How the apostle sent from Miletus to Ephesus and called the elders together, and then informed them that he had kept back nothing that was profitable unto you; but have shewed you and have taught you publicly and from house to house testifying both to the Jews and also to the Greeks, repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ. Here is what he says to the elders, "For I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God." Then he says, "After my departure shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. Therefore, watch and remember that by the space of three years I ceased not to warn you every one of you night and day with tears. And now, brethren, I commend you to the word of (his grace) God which is able to build you up and to give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified." Acts xvii.

The apostle to the Romans says, "Now to him that is of the power to stablish you according to my gospel, and the preaching of Jesus Christ to the revelation of the mystery, which was kept concealed in the times of the ages; but now is made manifest, and by the Scriptures of the prophets, according to the commandments of the everlasting God, made known to all nations for the obedience of faith." Rom. xvi. 25, 26.

The gospel is the means that God is using to bring his people to reformation, and when we have believed these precious promises as set forth in his Word, then by faith we become heirs. How become an heir? "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Jesus Christ; for as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise." Gal. iii. 26–29

But all have not obeyed the gospel. Some will not believe, or reject. "How does faith come by hearing the Word of God? Rom. x. 16–17. Those who have obeyed are commanded to present our bodies a living sacrifice, holy acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to the things of this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God. Rom. xii. 1–3.

When we have complied with his sacred words, then it will be a favor of God to give us that gift which is not of ourselves, and through that favor he will bestow unto us through Jesus Christ eternal life. That life is not natural. We do not inherit it; but we are as our federal head, Adam, and as he was of a dying substance, so are we. But we hope, says the apostle, "We hope for what we see not then do we with patience wait for it." And when we shall be delivered from the bondage of sin and corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God. These are the ones who shall be called of God.

Paul says, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth, there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the righteous Judge shall give me at that day, and not to me only but unto all them also that love his appearing." The apostle had a hope. Therefore, my beloved in the Lord, let us fight the good fight of faith, and the Lord direct your hearts into the love of God and the patient waiting for Christ. "Wherefore, gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and hope to the end: for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ."

Yours waiting for the kingdom of God.

G. W. SMITH.

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ:

I will endeavor to say a few words to you through THE RESTITUTION, although I am acquainted with but few of you. I have a great love for all who hold the truth as it is in Christ Jesus, and I am happy to tell you that I am one of your number, for I was baptized into that all-saving name by Brother Z. E. Braut, on Dec. 8, 1901, and I can truly say I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. I was reared in the faith, my parents having held fast that form of doctrine for years, and I had for a long time realized my duty to my Lord and Master, in that I should obey his command to be baptized, and had opportunities to have done so, but I kept putting it off always feeling that I was not ready, until at last I felt that I could put it off no longer, and I am so glad that I have been buried with him in baptism, and that I am safe inside the fold, and an heir to the precious promises that God has made to those that love him, and I am striving to do his will, and to live so that I may be found worthy of a place in his kingdom, when Christ comes to reign on the earth, and to those who know and understand, but as yet have not obeyed that form of doctrine once delivered to the saints, I earnestly urge you to make haste to do so and not wait as I did; for we know not what a day may bring forth, for as the Apostle James says, What is your life, it is even a vapor that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away. And oh, to die when one understands the gospel of Christ, and has had opportunities to accept and obey it, but has neglected to do so. Then let us do our duty while there is yet time, for it may soon be forever too late. Dear brothers and sisters, I believe we ought to exhort and encourage one another to love and good works, and I think a good way to do so is through THE RESTITUTION, for in this way our words can reach the ears of those with whom we cannot have the privilege to meet. So let us strive more and more each day to do God's will. Let us read more in our Bibles and pray more, and for each other, and let us walk worthy of the vocation wherewith we are called. Eph. iv. 1. Let us so live that when our Lord comes we may inherit eternal life, and a place in his kingdom.

Your Sister in Christ.

Higher Criticism.

In the olden time no one questioned the fact that Moses wrote the first book of the Bible. It was left to modern times for men to learn (?) that not Moses, but several persons, wrote the book of Genesis.

Really, it matters little whether we know who wrote the several books of the Bible. But it is of infinite importance that we appreciate the fact that "all Scripture is given by inspiration of God" having come "not in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost."

It may matter little as to the name of the man who wrote this book or that; but we do know these books were written by holy men. Further, we know that the Scriptures came not by man's will. In other words, no man said, "I will write this." But God spoke through men, moving them by his Holy Spirit to say the things that were to be said.

But higher criticism gets above (?) this. It tells us that Genesis was once in three parts, written by three different men, at different times in different places. Later these three fragments were welded together into a consecutive narrative by a fourth party. This union is not so perfect but that the lines of union can be fairly well traced, and the three separate parts distinguished; and as was to be supposed, these three parts do not harmonize in all particulars; one contradicts the others, and there are frequent discrepancies.

If I accept such reasonings as this, how can I believe in the divine origin of the Bible? It makes the Scriptures a mass of crazy patchwork. One man writes a certain portion, later, another man writes more, and then a third adds his part; now along comes a fourth and puts the three together as well as he can, and the narrative is complete (?).

Let me give you their own words. They are the words of a Bible scholar, not an intended Bible enemy: "The Hebrew chronicles and histories are all of them composite works. Like many of the medieval chronicles and histories, they are compiled from different sources, from materials of different ages. The extracts are woven together so as to produce a consecutive narrative. But it is generally not difficult to distinguish the points at which the different sections are pieced together. The similarity of style, in certain sections of the narrative, combined with marked dissimilarity from the style in other sections, has enabled scholars to class together the portions which may be assigned to one or other literary source."

Since higher criticism takes this position, let us at the outset understand the drift of its teachings. Its tendency is to break down the authority of the Bible by striking a blow at its divine origin.

For example, the book of Genesis is composite, written by unknown men in unknown times in unknown places. Now these gathered-up fragments are patched together by another unknown man in an unknown time and unknown place. And all this is but to show how the book of Genesis, or any other book of the Bible for that matter, could be written by men, and without the aid of inspiration. And when it is thus once grasped that the Book, or books, could be thus written without the aid of the Spirit of God, many a man goes further, and says that, in his opinion, God had no more to do with the making of the Bible than he has had to do with any other good book.

And so men reason from higher criticism (?) to complete doubt, skepticism, and agnosticism. This every time is the logical outcome of higher criticism. And this is the one argument against the doctrine of higher criticism, so-called.

Again, these different parts of a book, though patched together into one complete whole, are yet so poorly put together that scholars can detect the lines of union, and dissect the whole into its many component parts. And what is the rule by which they discover so much?—There is but one answer: they are entirely guided by their own weak, fallible judgment. Neither do all these higher (?) critics agree in their dismembering of the Word of God. Nevertheless they have found enough points in common to keep them steadily at work on their darling scheme.

By their fruits ye shall know them. Let us forever understand that corrupt fruit is unmistakable evidence of a corrupt tree. Any theory that tends to elevate the human judgment above the Word of God must be forever wrong. If any man wishes to put his mind and judgment above the authority and truth of the Scriptures, let him espouse higher criticism.

However, when I make my mind and judgment superior to anything, that thing so subjugated to my mental authority and judgment becomes to me a decidedly secondary thing. How is it with you?

And this is the second argument against higher criticism, so-called.—L. A. Reed.

His Text—Joseph's Bones.

A few days before Easter, a preacher, a very lovable man, met me on the street and told me what a time he had in selecting a text for his Easter sermon. You will be surprised when I tell you it is Gen. l. 24, 25, "And Joseph said unto his brethren, I die, and God will surely visit you, and bring you out of this land, unto the land which he sware to Abraham, to Isaac and to Jacob. And Joseph took an oath of the children of Israel, saying God will surely visit you and ye shall carry up my bones from hence." When he died they put him in a coffin in Egypt, it is added.

Well, brother, I am as you say, very much surprised. I cannot see how you can get any thing out of Joseph's great anxiety about his poor old "tenement of clay." Why he appears to be more concerned about it, than he is about his soul. How are you going to handle it? You could talk on how he overcame evil with good. This would be a prolific theme. But is it not strange that he expresses no hope of meeting his father Jacob, his grandfather Isaac, or his great grand father Abraham in heaven?

My dear, good friend looked puzzled. Moses kept faithfully the trust, and laid Joseph's bones in his inheritance in Shechem in the territory of Ephraim, his offspring. I told my preacher that Joseph was not a heathen nor an unbeliever. If ever there was a man familiar with the Divine purpose, surely that man was Joseph. If he hoped for an inheritance other than that promised to his ancestors, he said nothing about it. If he had an immortal, invisible personality, the undertaker could not bury in Egypt. Joseph don't appear to know any thing of it, for he is silent about it.

The writer has never been able to get the consolation other church people get, or appear to have from the prospect of a home "way up yonder." I could see scarce any mention of it in the Scriptures, besides, to me, there was nothing specially fascinating in a sky home. If there is why do we mourn so, when our friends are taken up there? The average church people may talk a little more than Joseph did about it, but not much more. Death leaves so little to go to heaven or any where. The dear Irish women dying, told the priest, if it was all the same to him, she would stop off in Ireland for a time, on her way to heaven.

I thank God for the promise that "the meek shall inherit the earth." When our glorious high priest returns from within the vail, he will gather his own, whether alive or in the embrace of death and invite them to reign with him on the earth. Joseph will be there too. His grave prison at Shechem cannot hold him when our Lord returns.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God, in Michigan, will be held [D. V.] at Dutton, Kent Co., Thursday evening, May 29th, 1902, and continue over the following Sunday, [May 29, 30, 31, and June 1st.]

Another year has nearly rolled around since the Annual Michigan Conference was held. Death has been doing its work among us, and some are now sleeping that were accustomed to meet with us. How many more will lay their burdens down e're another year will pass, God only knows. This we do know, that the left ones must work with still greater zeal and energy as the ranks are all the time lessened by sickness and death. So let every lover of the truth, who possibly can arrange to be at Dutton, our old yearly gathering place. Let all come with the one thought to further the cause of Christ. Not altogether to get good, but determined to give as much as we receive, then we will have a good meeting. Let each church send one or more delegates with report of their standing during the past year. The friends at Dutton are prepared to entertain all who may come. Dutton is on the M. C. R. R., ten miles southeast of Grand Rapids.

Yours in hope of life eternal.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, prerequisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Be Content.

Unwrap thy life, or any wants refuse:
He who with Christ would dine
Shall see no table curiously spread,
But fish and barley bread.
Wherewithal then shall Jesus bade us pray,
"Give us our sumptuous fare from day to day?"
Why will thou take a castle on thy back
When God gave but a pack?
With gown of beaten gold, why will thou dress
For braid and tapperies?
Learn thou with flowers to drape—with birds to feed—
And pluck thy large want to thy little need.

The Lamb of God.

"Behold the Lamb of God which taketh (margin, beareth) away the sin of the world." There were few in the time of Christ's first advent who were anxiously looking for him, as there are a small number now. To those who accepted the message of John the Baptist he became the one who would redeem Israel. The gospel that John preached was that the kingdom of heaven is nigh at hand, or the royal Majesty of heaven is among you. It was that the Lamb of God was present. To believe in the Lamb of God and believe that he came to bear away the sin of the world is to believe in the Seed of the woman who would destroy the enemy, and the Seed of Abraham, David's Son, also the Son of Mary who should rule over the house of Jacob forever. Christ is our paschal Lamb slain for us." 1 Cor. v. 7, "For even Christ our passover is sacrificed (slain) for us." Christ came not so much to deal with our sins as to right what Adam had lost. Rom. v. 18 reads, "Therefore as by the offence of one (Adam) judgment came upon all men to condemnation; (death eternal) even so by the righteousness of one (Christ) the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life." In the life and death of Christ all men may seek for glory, honor and eternal life. Christ said, "If I be lifted up I will draw all men unto me." St. John xii. 32. Again St. John vi. 44, "No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him: and I will raise him up at the last day." Christ is God's instrument which has made it possible for men to become sons of God and heirs of God. "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." 1 Cor. xv. 22. In this Scripture we are taught that in our Adamic nature is the seed of eternal death; but in Christ there is the seed of eternal life. It is the seed, if properly cultivated will in the end bring a perfect nature, in which there is no death. 1 John iii. 9, "Whoever is born of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him; and he can not sin, because he is born of God. When the leaven (the seed) leaveneth the whole lump, or we reach that fulness in Christ we will sin no more. It is strange that men read the Bible and then teach that Christ's death removed our individual sins. If I have been profitted in the study of the Scripture it is that Christ in his death gave me an instrument by which I could stand against the enemy. In the Medo-Persian government an edict was unchangeable. When wicked Haman secured from the king a sentence of death against the Jews it could not be revoked, but the privilege was given for the Jews to defend (fight) for themselves. The result was that they gained a great victory. Their lives depended on an obedience to the decree of the king. Is it not so with us? The sentence of death passed upon Adam, rests upon us and is irrevocable, but God permits us to stand in Christ and fight for our life. Paul said in 2 Tim. iv. 7, "I have fought a good fight. I have finished my course; I have kept the faith." If the truth were preached upon this subject men and women would strive to place themselves right towards God before claiming to be his children. Arm yourselves with God's armor that the darts of the enemy may not harm. In the religious teachings of today we are told that we can do nothing toward securing salvation until God shall send his Spirit to quicken and draw us toward the Father. Christ in his death accomplished this. To us the gospel is preached and we are commanded to believe and obey it, that the life in Christ shall be ours. We must believe and accept the message and then we may claim the right to stand. After this Christ is our Mediator. If any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father Jesus Christ, the righteous. He is also our High Priest. Heb. ix. 24. For Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands, which are the figures of the true; but heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us. Christ is not the advocate for the unrighteous, neither is he the high priest of the wicked world, but for those who have accepted him as the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world. I insist that we distinguish between these two relations which Christ sustained toward God. Paul says that Christ hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel. Why not accept this as the truth? Christ is our life and when he shall appear we shall appear with him in glory and not before. We were taught from infancy that Christ's mission in the world was to forgive our sins, and if we would believe this and state in public that our sins had been forgiven we were fit subjects for the church and heaven. Not a thought did I ever have that Christ was any thing to the sinner but a sort of a priest to forgive sins. We are not called upon to agonize over our past sins, but change sides and fight our way to eternal life. We should rejoice that Christ redeemed us from the power of the grave and did it on such rational terms. First, accept the Lamb of God; second, change your life by being baptized into the Christ. Then accept him as our advocate and do as Paul did, fight the good fight, finish the course, keep the faith. When the Lord, the righteous Judge shall come, we will receive a crown of righteousness. May we be found always laboring for the meat that perishes not.

The Light of the World.

How lamentably true is the fact, that religiously a gross darkness has enveloped the people. Their vision cannot penetrate the dark vista of the future. They have vainly sought the aid of science and philosophy for light, but still no light appears: darkness like an impenetrable cloud obscures the glorious sunlight of truth as it radiates from the Light of the world the great luminary of spiritual light.

Theologians and false teachers whose minds have received no greater light than that which eminates from the traditions of men, have set themselves up as sky pilots, and have proved to be very unsatisfactory guides.

Other guides have also arisen who by specious reasoning, and an improper handling of Holy Scriptures do change the old "gospel of the kingdom," and substitute in its place, modern notions something after the style of that preached by Alexander Campbell.

The word gospel signifies good news or glad tidings, and when applied to the phrase "kingdom of God," means the good news concerning that kingdom.

The fact is well established in Holy Scripture that God has never recognized any other kingdom as his, except the kingdom of Israel. When the kingdom of Israel was overthrown, as recorded in Ezekiel, the prophet recites that it should be overturned until he come whose right it is, and I will give it him.

When the angels heralded the birth of Jesus, they proclaimed him as the promised heir to David's throne. Listen: "The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end."

When Jesus tarried with his disciples, he taught them the good news (gospel) concerning the restoration of this kingdom to Israel, and even he was about to leave them, they anxiously enquired: "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" He also promised his twelve ambassadors, "Ye shall sit upon twelve thrones judging (ruling) the twelve tribes of Israel."

There are modern teachers who would not only eliminate any connection of Israel with the "gospel of the kingdom," but would also remove the word kingdom, and substitute in its place the word "government" signifying of course a kind of a moral government. One of these teachers says, "We must, therefore, find some term of broader significance (than the word kingdom) to express its real meaning," and says, "I would suggest the word government."

As to when this "government" or kingdom was established he says: "As to the time when this beginning of God's government was to be manifested, the prophet John preached about the year A. D. 30, that it was then at hand." Again: "The government of God was planted in Zion nineteen centuries ago," etc.

It is a well established fact that the kingdom Jesus and his followers preached the good news about, was a kingdom to come, and not a kingdom "planted in Zion nineteen centuries ago" about the year A. D. 30.

The saving faith and hope of the gospel has relation not only to the covenants of promise, but also to the kingdom, or civil polity of Israel. See Eph. ii. 11, 12: where it is distinctively affirmed that "strangers from the covenants of promise," and "aliens from the commonwealth of Israel," have "no hope" are "without God," and also "without Christ."

It is a fact also which cannot be disputed, that the gospel of the kingdom, as preached by Alexander Campbell and his followers, "planted in Zion nineteen centuries ago," knows nothing about either the "covenants of promise," or the "commonwealth of Israel." Now any gospel which eliminates those elements has no salvation in it, because they are "without God in the world," "without Christ," "having no hope." When any one comes to you with a gospel lacking these things, reject it, cast it from you as you would a venomous reptile, because there is no salvation in it. Beware of the tendency to depart from the faith in these last days.

"The light of the world is Jesus." He has brought "life and immortality to light through the gospel." Remember this fact, it is "through the gospel." Not anything that men preach as gospel. "The gospel of the kingdom," is good news of a kingdom yet to come, and not a Campbellite proclamation concerning a government "that was planted in Zion nineteen centuries ago."

W. H. WILSON.

Conversions under Philip's Preaching.

HE PREACHED CHRIST UNTO THE SAMARITANS.

It was at the time of Stephen's death that persecution, in which Saul was a prominent actor, waxed so hot against the church at Jerusalem, that all its members, except the apostles, were scattered abroad throughout Judea and Samaria. Acts. viii. 1. Fear did not seal the lips of these evangelists; for the record runs, "Therefore they that were scattered abroad, went everywhere preaching the Word." v. 4. Though all persecution against the Church of God have been waged with a view to silencing the voice of the proclaimers of the truth, the blessed message in some way, and by despised instrumentalies has found utterance in the face of the most determined opposition. The heralds of the gospel may be in bonds as was Paul when he wrote, "But the Word of God is not bound." 2 Tim. ii. 9. And when held as a prisoner at Rome awaiting trial at the bar of Cesaar he wrote, "The Lord stood with me and strengthened me; that by me the preaching might be fully known, and that all the Gentiles might hear." Tim. iv. 17. Writing of his first imprisonment in the capital of the Cesars, he speaks of his own bonds and the things that happened unto him as having fallen out rather unto the furtherance of the gospel. Instead of serving to discourage and silence its proclaimers what had fallen to Paul's lot only served to encourage boldness in those out of bonds, and thus the apostle wrote to his Philippian brethren. "Many of the brethren in the Lord, waxing confident by my bonds are much more bold to speak the Word without fear." Phil. i. 14.

Philip, one of the seven chosen to look after the temporal wants of the Grecian Christians in the holy city, was among the scattered evangelists. Samaria became his field of labor. "He preached Christ unto them" (the Samaritans) is the proposition to which I wish to call attention. All that he said is not recorded in this brief history. Without question he alleged from the Scriptures that Jesus was the Christ, the Anointed One. Those to whom he preached knew that Jesus who had made such marvelous claims a short time before, professing to be the Messiah, the One sent of God, the Savior of men, the Giver of life, and the Heir to David's throne, had been crucified at Jerusalem. They were aware of the fact that he was a claimant to all the honors and offices, which the Hebrew prophets had centered upon the Messiah; and as a teacher had stirred the minds of the people in Judea, in Galilee and beyond the Jordon; and by his severe but justly merited rebukes provoked the anger of Scribe and Pharisee. They knew this, for the news had spread abroad from the great Passover gatherings and other gatherings of the people at the feasts falling within the period of his ministry. Philip, Peter at the Pentecost when the Spirit was poured out, showed that God had raised from the dead this same Jesus and made him both Lord and Christ (Acts ii. 24, 36) and that he was exalted to the right hand of God (v. 33) and the miracles everywhere being performed were done by his name. Acts iv. 30. Philip could not have said less than this and I think in the light of other Scriptures he said more; that he urged upon them reformation as was done by Peter in his first sermon, and later at the home of Cornelius. Acts xi. 18. In this passage it is "Repentance unto life"—eternal life of course; without the prospect of which no one would reform; and the promise of an eternal kingdom would be meaningless. To inherit an eternal kingdom one must have an eternal life. "In hope of eternal life which God that cannot lie promised before the world began." Tim. i 2. Here it is a matter of promise, and an object of hope, backed by God's faithfulness, so must be a part of, a vital part of the message to "aliens from the commonwealth of Israel." Eph. ii. 12.

To preach Christ is a general proposition comprehending many important truths and in addition to the ones I have already enumerated, the grand and important one of the kingdom of God as we learn from the 12th verse, which I will quote: "When they believed the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women." That he should preach the things concerning the kingdom of God, was doing what was in harmony with the language of the commission to the apostles, enjoining the proclamation of the gospel which had been the main theme of John the Baptist, the seventy, the twelve apostles in their circuit of the "cities of Israel," and of Christ himself; for it is recorded of him, that "he went about all Galilee teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom." If the gospel of the Great Teacher was burdened with the kingdom, so should be the gospel of every man that preaches, whether Philip under the inspiration of the Spirit, or brethren Zilmer and Wagoner, and all others who are obliged to "study" like Timothy "to show themselves approved unto God, workmen that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth." 2 Tim. ii. 15. The kingdom is the goal of the Christian, the place of rest after the toil and turmoil of life are past, the place of dignity, honor and exaltation, as the meed of labors faithfully performed; the place where the great King will share his throne with those who had followed him through trial and suffering. How incomplete would the gospel be, with the kingdom left out. The believer would not be satisfied without being assured by promise of both a place and condition. The kingdom meets this constitutional need, so to speak, for in it God's love will culminate. Philip preached the things concerning the kingdom and those Samaritans gave heed to what he preached. Their faith took in the kingdom, as set forth in Old Testament predictions, and in the promises to the fathers, "Believing the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ they were baptized both men and women" They obeyed at once and make manifest their faith. The converts under apostolic and evangelistic preaching were properly instructed and we may safely conclude from this example, and others equally plain, that faith in the gospel of the kingdom was a pre-requisite to baptism; and so it ought to be the same today. Many modern sermons are preached, having in view the conversion of men and women, in which there is no allusion to the kingdom of God, no words like Paul's on his first visit to Thessalonica. He taught the people "to wait for God's Son from heaven." These examples of inspired preaching cannot be safely ignored. Whoever fails to present the truth as set forth by inspiration is not to be trusted as a guide in matters pertaining to salvation.

J. L. WICE.

The Parable of the Pounds.

LUKE XIX. 11-27.

This is the most comprehensive of all the parables; it outlined the kingdom of God from that time, Luke xvi. 16, to its perfect triumph. 1 Cor. xv. 28.

Two reasons were given for speaking this parable, 1st, "Because he was nigh to Jerusalem." The disciples knew that a crisis was near. Luke xviii. 31-34. He was deliberately going to Jerusalem to suffer and die, to carry his cross to the place of execution. Mark x. 32-34. Must his followers share his fate? Must they literally bear their crosses after him? Matt. xvi. 21-26. Was this attempt to reform the nation and to achieve their independence of the Gentiles to fail like others? Acts v. 36-37. Or was his glory to shine forth in power, Matt. xvi. 27-28, as it did in that specimen moment when mortal men were "eye witnesses of his Majesty," and saw the holy dead and the translated and heard the voice of him whom no man hath seen"? Luke ix. 27-35.

2nd reason, "Because they thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear." They are not anxious about the nature of the kingdom. Three years of public discussion and private instruction had fully informed them on that point, they believed that Jesus was the "King of Israel" and would be given the throne of his father David, that all kings shall fall down before him, all nations shall serve him. Gen. xxii. 18; Deut. xxxiii. 2; Psa. ii., xlviii., lxvii., lxviii., lxxii., xcvi.; Is. xl. xlii., xlix., lx., lxvi., Jer. xxx., xxxi.; Ez. xxxiv., xlvii.; Dan. vii. 13 27; Zech. x., xii. That they believed and understood that the prophecies of his kingdom would be fulfilled literally is proved by their questions, which belief Christ never denied, and corrected only as to the time. They died without recording a change of faith. Matt. xvi. 22; xix. 27-28; xx. 20-28; xxiv. 36; Acts i. 6-7. What teacher would permit his pupils to entertain a radical and far reaching error through all their course of instruction? They also knew that the kingdom of heaven though then invisible, was in some sense a present institution, that it had a present and future aspect and many features, so that it was very difficult to fully explain and illustrate them all. Luke xiii. 18. A time in which it is invisible, John iii. 2, and a time when it will appear, a time of preparing the living stones, Matt. xvi. 18; 1 Pet. ii. 4-10, and a time when they will come together. Rev. iii. 12. A time when the net is gathering good and bad. Something that though unseen was with or among the Pharisees. Luke xvii. 20, 21, had come unto them. Matt. xii. 28; xxi. 43; into which men were and still are being translated, Col. i. 13. Something that one man was "not far from," Mark xii. 34, that the Pharisees shut up against men, would "neither join themselves or suffer them that are entering to go in." Matt. xxiii. 13. It was taken from them and given to a nation. Matt. xxi. 23.

No doubt the disciples were impatient to witness and share their Master's glory and power, when this parable, this wonderful chart of the future, was spoken to support and comfort them in their coming trials and to inform them and us when the kingdom of God will appear. The time was not given in years and days, that are so often misapplied; but far better in a series and order of events, whose arrangement cannot be changed and need not be misunderstood. The events are these in the following order:

1. The nobleman purporting to go away gives his ten servants ten pounds. John xvi. 7, 28; Matt. xxv. 14.

2. He goes to a far country to receive a kingdom. Hosea v. 15; Acts i. 9-11.

3. His citizens send a message after him. Acts iv. 1-21; v. 17-40; vi. 9-15; ix. 23; xiii. 40-46; xvii. 5-13; xxviii. 25 28.

4. He receives the kingdom. Psa. ii. 8; Dan. vii. 14; Rev. v.

5. He returns; the prophets connect his return with the restoration of Israel as does James. Acts xv. 16; Deut. xxxiii. 2; Psa. cii. 13-18; Jer. xii. 15; Zech. i. 16; viii. 3; Mal. iii. 7; Matt. xxiii. 39; xxiv. 30; Jude 14; Rev. i. 7.

6. He calls his servants. Matt. xxv. 19; Luke xvii. 34-37; Psa. l. 1-5; Rom. xiv. 10; 2 Cor. v. 10. 1 Peter iv. 17.

7. He reckons with them. Matt. 44-57; John v. 22; Rev. ii. 23; 2 Tim. v. 1-8.

8. He assigns the faithful their offices in which they reign with him, have "power over over the nations" 1000 years, in this time all the earth is filled with his glory, all nations serve him, and all the families of the earth are blessed. Psa. xxii. 22-31; Matt. xiv. 30; xxiv. 47; xxv. 21; Lu. xxii. 28 30; 1 Cor. vi. 2; xv. 25; Rev. ii. 26; iii. 12, 21; v. 10; xx. 4.

A Cure for Negligence.

When tempted to stay away from the house of God, just ask yourself the question, "Suppose all the members did as I feel like doing—what then?" An empty church, of course. When tempted to cut down your church dues, just ask, "Suppose all members began cutting—what then?" An empty treasury, of course. When tempted to complain because others do not run the church according to your own notion, just ask, "Suppose others kept aloof and grumbled as I do—what then?" A tumble-down church, of course, ready to pass into the hands of the receiver. If there are no such churches, it is because not enough members yield to such temptations. —Lutheran.

To deceive one's self is very easy, and the self-deceived are often the hardest to undeceive.

By accident we neglected to change the date and number on the first page of this issue. Each can do so with a pencil.

THE friends of Brother and Sister J. H. Willey will be glad to learn that after their ten thousand mile journey, coming from Australia, where they have been the past three years, they arrived in Plymouth on last Saturday evening.

THE parabolic mode of teaching is extremely ancient, and has always been popular, and very frequently there is that about it which fascinates and fixes attention, and compels thought. Under the similitude employed lies a moral or spiritual truth which the speaker wishes to impress upon the minds of his audience. The original idea of the parable is that of comparing together or illustrating one thing by another.

Now, as in the first century, salvation is a personal matter. Now, as then, salvation will not be given for anything else than belief and obedience to Divine commands. The words of the Christ of God "are spirit and they are life." "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you." His commands are not grievous, and aiming to render obedience to them is the secret of life. Christians of the first century had hope,—hope based upon the oath and promise of God.

IT will be noticed that the Antioch meeting programme is given in this issue of our paper. Forgood reasons the time is shortened this year, but as there need be but little of the time taken with business, as that is mostly done at the Annual Conference, as much as possible is put into the two days. With the talented speakers who have each promised to attend, and the subjects that each have selected, we feel assured that it will be worth while making an effort to be at the meeting. Let each one be sure to be on hand for the very first meeting, and stay till the last. Whoeverdelays and misses the opening services and sermon will suffer loss; and the person who goes home before the closing address Sunday night will miss a rare treat. Get ready now, and attend each session.

A Word of Exhortation.

It is nearly nineteen hundred years since Jesus uttered the parable of the nobleman,—since he left the earth for a "far country;" therefore his return is much nearer today than it was then. When he comes, it will not be to find a world in faith and holiness, for the question was put by himself, as recorded in Luke xviii. 8: "When the Son of Man cometh, shall he find the faith on the earth?" Not the faith of God will not be found to any extent in the earth. Jesus knew what he was talking about; we see proof of this all about us. Men and women are going their own ways, seeking, as of old, the broad path which leadeth unto destruction, "for as it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the day of the coming of the Son of Man." Brethren of Jesus, let us make use of the light we have. We have been favored above myriads of our fellow creatures, in that there is no need for that day to overtake us unawares. We know what is coming, and can be ready for it if we will. But nothing is more certain than that if we do not take time to keep the Word of the Lord fresh in our minds by constant reference to it, —if we do not keep our eyes open to passing events that tell us that the Lord is at hand to come,—if we do not watch and pray we will drift into the whirlpool and go over the precipice with the heedless multitude. Yes; nothing is more certain than that if we do not take time to meditate upon these things, and avail ourselves of the divine assistance proffered us, in the day when the Lord of hosts makes up his jewels, (Mal. iii. 17) he will have no time to gather such busy peoplons we.

"PETER followed afar off," Luke xxii. 54. To follow Jesus afar off will not do; we know how it turned out in Peter's case; he followed afar off,—that was the first wrong step; then, he sat down among them,—those who were enemies of Christ Jesus; and afterwards he denied Christ altogether."

Where Their Worm Dieth Not.

The passage (Mark ix. 44) from which the above quotation is taken, instead of disproving conditional immortality, proves it plainly. The solemn declaration of Christ is not an original saying of his. It is quoted word for word from Isa. lxvi. 24 where it says, "They shall go forth and look upon the carcasses of the men that have transgressed against me: for their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched, and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh." A moment's glance shows us that both the worm and the fire are, alike, external and distinct from the subject on which they prey: and, also, that what both prey upon are not the living, but the DEAD. The allusion is to dead bodies, which are food of the worm and the funeral pile. Isaiah frequently uses the image of the worm, but it is always in connection with death. What he means is, "The moth shall eat them up like a garment, and the worm shall eat them like wool." The one text explains the other. This fearful image conveys the idea of death and hell, as the cleanser of God's world by the utter destruction of the wicked. These words of Isaiah endorsed by Christ assert a state of eternal death and destruction; not one of eternal life in hell, as the destiny of transgressors in the future. Isa. xxxiii. 14, "Who among us shall dwell with devouring fire.....who shall dwell with everlasting burning?" The answer is found in the 15th verse. "He that walketh righteously," etc. It does not refer to life in misery, but to the eternal extinction of life; the irrevocable loss which the wicked will bring upon themselves. Those who are spoken of in v. 14, are the people spoken of in v. 12 who shall be as the burning of lime, as thorns cut up shall they be burned in the fire. Jude v. 7, "Even as Sodom and Gomorrha.....are set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire." That fire is not burning at the present time, although it is called an "eternal fire." It is the vengeance, or the destruction that is eternal punishment; the fire is eternal in its effects. We read of eternal judgment in the same sense in Heb. vi. 2. Who will suppose that Jesus will eternally judge? It will be his decisions that will always stand.

J. O. Woodruff's

Name has been associated with the truth in America for nearly fifty years, to our certain knowledge, but how much longer we do not know. All along those years his name has been attached to articles in the literature of the brotherhood, and we always considered him a sound and uncompromising setter forth of the gospel, and its conditions as the power employed by God to save. He has distributed hundreds of thousands of pages setting forth the truth as it is in Jesus, without pecuniary profit. And when about eighty-two years of age he conceived the idea of compiling a work that would witness for God after he shall have gone the way of all flesh. Before the work was completed he was taken ill,—and for some time it looked as if it never would be. But the enemy was not permitted to gather him; and our venerable brother now offers the brethren and sisters at large a handsome volume of 410 pages in six parts with between sixty and seventy essays, and we think several of them separately contain matter worth the one dollar charged for the whole. As the compiler has to pay the expense of publication from the sale of the work, we hope every one who reads this will at once send for one or more copies, and relieve his mind on that score.

As a sample of the bill of fare offered we name the following subjects treated. "Is there a future Life?" "The Gospel of God's Love," "Life what is it?" "Purpose of God Revealed in Promises to the Fathers," "Coast of Truth," "Kingdom of Messiah," "Not left Alone," "Eternal Life the Myth of Science, the Truth of Scripture," "The name of Jesus," "The Hope set before us," "The Manifestation of Sons of God," "The Animal Man," "The Revealed Purpose of God," "Times of Restitution," "What must I do to be saved?" "God manifest in flesh," "Immortality of the Soul—is it true?" "The world to come," "Nature and God," "God must be," "Glories of the Age to Come," "Hope set before us," and some forty other topics. A word to the wise is sufficient.

What We Believe. No. 4.

Having with numerous Scripture testimonies settled the point that the saints will reign with Christ, and that this reign cannot be until the return of Christ to the earth, we will examine another matter coming up consideration, viz., "the immortalization of the righteous." A close inspection of this statement will disclose the fact that the Church of God does not believe that men in general are immortal—deathless—not even at present "the righteous." This calls for further remarks. If not even this class is now immortal, how can it be said that all men, regardless of who or what they are, possess this quality? This is not only a delicate point, but also a vital one. It will be readily conceded that the body of man is mortal, but to say that man in his entirety is mortal, is to strike at the very heart of modern religious teaching; for confessedly and manifestly the doctrine of "the immortality of the soul" is a fundamental article of nearly all religious teaching, though not of the Bible. Now, it is not particularly gratifying to know that almost all "orthodox Christendom" is arrayed against us, because we do not wish to oppose so many well meaning and good people simply to be contrary. On the other hand it is a satisfaction to know that, although the majority of "Christian" teachers is against us, we are not necessarily wrong because we are comparatively "few" in number, especially since the prophetic Word clearly predicted the defection of "many" from the faith, by reason of whom the way of truth should be evil spoken of. 1 Tim. iv. 1; 2 Tim. iv. 3. 2 Pet. ii. 1, 2. We prefer to stand by the truth, though unpopular, and take the consequences.

The term "immortalization of the righteous," implies that none but this class of people will attain to immortality. Confining ourselves to the work of Christ in this age, we may say that "the righteous" are the only candidates for immortality. Immortal saints are associated with Christ as "joint heirs in the kingdom." What then "immortality," and when is it to be the possession of "the righteous?" Abstractly, the term means deathlessness, not to be subject to death. But there is a more tangible definition than this. It is in the person of the risen and glorified Savior, who said, "I am he that liveth, and was dead; and behold I am alive forever more." Rev. i. 18. The same truth was expressed by the apostle John, "This is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son:" 1 John v. 11. What God "hath given to us" is "eternal life;" but mark you: It is not "in" us; it is "in the Son." Not as he was in the likeness of sinful flesh, but as "manifested" in and through the glorious body of the Son as became from the embrace of death in the power of an endless life. 1 John i. 2; Heb. vii. 16; xiii. 20. Thus have life and incorruption been "illustrated" (Diaglott, 2 Tim. i. 10); in the person of Jesus made deathless and incorruptible through obedience (Rom. vi. 9; Acts xiii. 34-37; Phil. ii. 6; Heb. v. 8, 9), has God given to us eternal life that we might "lay hold of" it. 1 Tim. vi. 12.

It could not be said that "this life was manifested to us" in the life of Jesus in the flesh, for then he lived among men as a man; as children are partakers of flesh and blood he also himself likewise took part of the same (Heb. ii. 14); he was hungry, tired, and in need of friends; he was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin—never yielding to the overtures of the tempter; he cultivated communion with God by prayer, as well as reading and meditating upon his Word. We see him obedient to his Father's will even to the cross, where realizing the approach of the cruel monster death and being no longer sustained by the Father's power, he exclaims in the anguish of his soul, "My God, why hast thou forsaken me!" Here was "manifested," not what that life is, but the path that leads to its possession—obedience. It may be properly said concerning Jesus, "He asked life of thee (God), and thou gavest it him, even length of days forever more." Psa. xxi. 4. In this pure and spotless life we learn how to put to death the desires of the flesh and of the mind; how to overcome the seductive influences of the world. John xvi. 33. While the first Adam through disobedience was a sinner, bringing death upon himself and all his posterity, the last Adam —Christ—by obedience illustrated the way of life, leaving us an example that we should follow his steps. 1 Pet. ii. 21-25.

As it was impossible for Jesus to be exalted to his present position as High Priest without passing through the ordeal of suffering and death, and so being made immortal; neither will the saints be admitted to the honors of the kingdom without obedience to Christ. Heb. v. 9. This obedience will result in "eternal salvation" to those who exercise it. This salvation is nothing short of their complete redemption from sin and all its consequences, including "the last enemy, death." 1 Cor. xv. 26.

Of those to obtain immortality, or the power to live (as well as reign) forever, Christ is the "First fruit." 1 Cor. xv. 20, 23. He is "the Captain (the One leading the way) of their salvation." Heb. ii. 10. So whatever way we went, and to whatever goal he came, this will be the lot of those of whom he is the "Leader," the "First Fruit." Had it been possible for him to obtain endless life without obedience unto death, they might likewise have come to this result; if it was necessary for him to come under the dominion of death in order to rise victoriously to glory, honor, and incorruption, so must his followers either be raised from the dead, to the incorruptible nature, or, if living, be changed from mortal to immortal. This will not take place until the coming of Christ; for "Christ the First Fruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming." 1 Cor. xv. 23. "They that are Christ's" are those belonging to him, who through faith and obedience have come into that relation with Christ that he may "raise them up at the last day" (or change from mortal to immortal.) John vi. 54; xi. 26; 1 Cor. xv. 51, 52.

In view of such testimonies as the foregoing, how useless to say that man, as he is now constituted, is immortal; and what a fearful reflection upon the wisdom of God to say that he created a being which, though it might fall to the lowest depth of moral degradation, is nevertheless destined to live as long as God lives; that in fact God himself will not be able to terminate the existence of such a rebellious creature. How much more consistent is the view that eternal life will be for those who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory, honor, and immortality to those who shall be counted worthy of such honors. Rom. ii. 5-7; Luke xx. 34-36.

The Illinois Vineyard.

I went from Moriah to Marshall on May 9, and Brother John Claypool drove me out to his place ten miles from town, where we began meetings in the neat little church building that our brethren built after the Campbellites had stolen a union church from them near there.

We had a fairly good attendance and interest. Five came forward for baptism and one united with the Church on his previous baptism. The names are Christian Murphy and his wife Diana, John Hutchings and his wife Elizabeth, George Claypool, Miss Lethia Murphy. Miss Murphy broke out with measles before the baptism, so she could not be baptised at that time. On Sunday afternoon I baptised them in a beautiful clear pool of water near by, and in the evening we celebrated the Lord's Supper, to show forth his death till he comes again.

Some of these had been baptised before in the so called "Christian Church" but were dissatisfied with their baptism, chiefly because of the faith enjoined by that people of being in a pentecostal kingdom, and the serpent's lie, and because we must "purify our souls by obeying the truth," and the birth of water must follow the begettal by the word of the kingdom, which we must hear and understand in order to be of the good ground class, as well as bearing fruit afterward to the glory of God.

Brother John Claypool deserves all credit for his loyalty to the cause under many trying and discouraging circumstances, being always ready to help the cause financially, and always at his post as leader in the Bible class there.

We believe that the Lord used us in strengthening and encouraging the church there to faithfulness and loyalty to truth, and to a more spiritual life. Two who were not baptised quit their tobacco. We pray they may hold out in the good resolution, and yet obey, by burying the old man of sin completely and putting on the new man Christ.

We received thirteen dollars on our work and expenses from the brethren there.

I am now at the home of Brother and Sister Rogers, near Hazel, Jasper County, holding meeting at a union church near here. We had a fair attendance last night, and pray that good may be done.

From here I go to Riply, and then to our Kansas Colony Conference, beginning June 7, at Shaw. As the success of our colony plan depends much upon this meeting we would like to see as many of our people as possible there. We want to organize a stock company, or co-operative association to start some industries that will give employment to our poor brethren who may move there, and who are worthy.

We received some help for evangelistic work in Ontario, which wife deposited in the bank there, till I can go there when work here will permit. We received $4 from Wm. Platts of Fonthill, Ontario, and $5 from Sister Siple of Hammond, La. If the way is open next fall we hope to go there to preach the gospel at our old home, where Babylon now reigns supreme and undisturbed by vital truth; and where "Right Reverends" and "Doctors of Divinity" now feed the people the tuffy of tradition, philosophy and old wives' fables.

Brethren, pray for us, and those who have just obeyed.

Answer to Problem.

PROBLEM.—How long from the time Israel left Egypt until they arrived at Sinai? I have received six answers as follows:

No. 1. 59 days.	Minnie F. Sweet.
No. 2. 59 days.	Minerva Bently.
No. 3. 75 days.	Alonzo Hassen.
No. 4. 14659 days.	Alta P. Cole.
No. 5. 59 days.	J. Ogilvay.
No. 6. 42 days.	J. A. Moyer.

I give the briefest solution as follows by No. 5:

The last half of Ahib, 15 days.
Whole of second month, Zif, 29 days.
Part of Third Month Sivan to same day they left Egypt, 15 days.
Total, 59 days.

Are any of these answers correct?

Take your Bible and carefully read Ex. xix. 1. Does Moses mean that they arrived at Sinai

1. On the first day of the third month, or
2. On the 15th day of the third month, or
3. Three Months from the time they left Egypt?—Three months from the 15th of the 1st month.

If we count to 1st of Third Month, it was 44 days.

If we count to 15th of Third Month, it was 59 days.

If we count to 15th of Thammuz, it was 89 days.

If we make it 50 days counting to 15th of Third Month how could it be 50 days from Passover to the giving of the Law or Pentecost, and how could Israel have crossed the Red Sea on Saturday?

JESUS' BIRTH.

The wise men came from Jerusalem to hear the good news. They came to worship Jesus. Herod was troubled when Jesus came because he did not want any other king. Herod wanted to know where Jesus was born so he could go and kill him. The angel came to Joseph in a dream. Herod would destroy the child, so of course Joseph took him away out of danger. When Herod was dead, behold an angel of the Lord appeareth in a dream to Joseph in Egypt, saying, "Arise and take the young child and his mother, and go into the land of Israel, they are dead that sought the young child's life." Being warned of God in a dream he turned aside into the parts of Galilee. Joseph was afraid because Archelaus was in his father's room. And he came and dwelt in a city called Nazareth that it might be fulfilled as was spoken by the prophets, he shall be called a Nazarene.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS.

After Jesus had been crucified three days and the Sabbath day began to dawn an angel of the Lord descended from heaven and rolled the stone away from Jesus' grave and sat upon it. His countenance was like lightning and his clothes were like snow. Then the people became afraid, and the angel said to the women, "Fear not; for I know that ye seek Jesus which was crucified, but he has risen as he said he would." Then the angel said, "Go and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead and that he is waiting for them in Galilee." Then they quickly departed from the sepulchre, and on their way they met Jesus and fell on their knees and worshiped him. Then Jesus said, "Fear not and go and tell my brethren to go to Galilee, and there they shall see me." Then the priests and elders assembled and gave large sums of money to the soldiers to say that Jesus' disciples came at night and stole him away. This saying was reported among the Jews, and is even said now. Then the eleven disciples went to Galilee and met Jesus. But when they saw him some worshiped him and some doubted him. Then Jesus said, "All power is given me unto heaven and earth Now go ye into the nations baptizing the people in the name of the Father, of the Son and the Holy Ghost. And I am with you always to the end of the world." Amen.

JESUS' COMING.

Titus ii. 13, Looking for that blessed hope. Why is it blessed? Because Rev. xxi. 4, tells us that all tears shall be wiped away, there shall be no more sorrow or death, we will have eternal life, and all the dead shall rise. Looking—watching for the return of Christ. Col. iii. 1. If ye be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above. It is also blessed because when Jesus comes he will bring the reward with him. Rom. ii. 7. To those who are patient will come eternal life and immortality. Acts i. 11. Behold two men were seen in white apparel and said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing into heaven? The same Jesus who is taken from you to heaven shall come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven, which means that men all over the world shall see Jesus return to the earth the way he ascended to heaven. Rev. xxi. 5. When Jesus comes again all things will be made new. Rev. v. 10. We shall reign on earth and not in heaven. 2 Thess. v. 9. For God hath not appointed us unto wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ.

LITTLE THINGS.

"He that is faithful in that which is least, is faithful also in much." How comforting is this assurance that great things are not required of us. Great events come to the few; small, homely duties are the tasks of the many. Yet how irksome these daily tasks become. Very few of us find much inspiration in baking, dusting, plowing, sowing, at the desks in the office, at the desks in the school room, either studying or teaching, caring for the home; making sunshine and pleasure for father, mother, brother, sister; making light of disappointment; covering up vexations with a smile; conquering the tempers as they fly. Ah, yes! the conquering of self! What is it but the controlling of and doing faithfully the little things. Yet how seldom we think of these as gaining for us an entrance into the kingdom. Whatever we do we are to do as unto the Lord and no matter how homely the task, if it is done for the Master it becomes glorified. To those who overcome, overcome in all things, a crown of life is to be given, not to those who do great things only. So let us remember that it is the faithful that are to be raised to life eternal, that it is those who govern themselves that are to be rulers in the age to come, and despise not the day of small things.

LELIA E. WHITEHEAD.

Unseen Door-Keepers.

"The angel of the Lord by night opened the prison doors, and brought them forth." Acts v. 19.

Sometimes we see the angel who opens to us the door of opportunity, but more often we do not see him. Sometimes God makes very plain to us the leading of his providence, but far more often things simply seem to happen "of their own accord."

Yet nothing happens of its own accord. No gate opens without the gate-opener. If any blessing has come into your life, you may be sure that some one put it there. If you hear any call, there is a mouth behind the voice. Not at haphazard has any opening of your life come to you; some hand has taken down the bars, some arm has pushed back the doors.

When next you approach some closed door, whether it be closed by sickness or poverty or former failure, or what not, do not see the door, do not think of it, but think only of the unseen angel waiting beside it. And remember it is only by following the angels you see that you can obtain the good offices of the angels you do not see."—Amos R. Wells.

Twilight and Dawn.

"Abide with me—fast falls the eventide;"
Those words come to me in the twilight gray.
"The darkness deepens—Lord, with me abide,"
Thus reverently I speed departing day.

"When other helpers fail and comforts flee"—
Words so remindful of my own sad plight—
"Help of the helpless, Lord, abide with me."
In silent prayer I view the fading light.

"Abide with me"—the daylight grows apace;
Hard is my lot, doomed to my bed of pain;
Uncertainties of coming hours to face,
The fevered flesh and nick of nerve and brain.

"When other helpers fail and comforts flee"
(How are the comforts it is mine to know),
He then my helper and my comfort be;
"Abide with me" as I more helpless grow.

Practical Christianity.

1 PETER ii. 1.

Practical Christianity is not so much a work in the world, dealing with the open sins of the age, as a treatment and mastery of man's own individualism. This is seen in every epistle of the Apostles. But perhaps the above passage groups the distinct passions of the mind in a way that no other does. Peter addresses these words to the elect. He tells them what their hope is—the resurrection of Christ; then he points out worldly difficulties they will have to encounter, such as grief and manifold temptations, showing that these will result in praise and glory and honor at the revelation of Jesus Christ. Hence there is a great deal of practical Christianity here broached to those who are begotten again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, through the Word of God who liveth. Because of their corruptible and withering nature, apart from the life which Christ has promised, he advises them to put away certain things, something not wanted, and if retained will be an hindrance, and obstruct progress in true fellowship. Five things are made prominent.

1. The misuse of the will. For malice, spite, and ill-will show a disposition to injure others, therefore should be laid aside, put away. What a practical work this is! One of the first things a man who becomes a Christian realizes is the necessity of governing his will rather than letting it control him. Will power is a great power either for good or for evil, and the Apostle recognizes the possibility of men in Christ being able to put aside malice. For malice indulged in groweth into a crop of evils such as vain imaginations, unseemly conduct, and a reprobate mind. 'Brethren, be not children in understanding: howbeit in malice be ye children, but in understanding be men.' 1 Cor. xiv. 20.

2. Curb the mind. For who craftily disguises anything without realizing that guile is a part of the Adamic nature. In fact guile is an outgrowth from malice, for if a man has a grudge against another he must of necessity practice deceit and treachery. Therefore necessity arises for the newly-begotten man to curb this propensity of cunningness, in relation to his brethren in particular and the world in general. It is a terrible experience to find an equal, an acquaintance, one with whom you are accustomed to fellowship, given to practices so contrary to him of whom Peter says, 'Neither was guile found in his mouth.' 'He that would love life, and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil and his lips from speaking guile.' 1 Peter iii. 10. It is very practical Christianity in knowing how to curb the mind and close the gate of our lips.

3. Control your actions. An hypocrite is an adept at concealment of real character. Therefore concealment of real character is a thing followers of Christ must lay aside. Don't imitate the virtuous, but be yourself virtuous; don't counterfeit the good, but be really good; don't pretend to be what you are not; if you can dissemble, you thereby prove your inability to control your actions. Therefore remember God 'shall be my salvation, for an hypocrite shall not come before him.' Job xiii. 16. 'For what is the hope of a hypocrite, though he hath gained, when God taketh away his soul.' Job xxvi. 8. Control your actions by laying aside hypocrisies. Be practical. Think not to entangle, for our Master will perceive the wickedness now as he did among the first century Pharisees, and judge accordingly. Malice wedded to guile gives birth to hypocrites.

4. Govern the eyes. To be filled with repining when we see others possess what we do not is a confession of another's superiority. Hence the Apostle advises the laying aside of envies. Envy can obtain nothing; there is no true energy in envy; it is opposed to all practical effort. Envy cannot give us any other person, beauty, grace, or talents; it has no nutrition in it, and they who feed on it must of necessity become lean and poor, both morally and spiritually. 'Envy is the rottenness of the bones.' True wisdom will enable us to be captivated and carried into error by the eye. Christ was not carried away from his purpose, right principle, or his determination to do his Father's will, when the wicked one attempted to enthral him through the eye, by showing him all the kingdoms of the world. Envy is the forerunner of murder. When Jesus was brought before Pilate by the chief priests it is said that they had delivered him for envy.' How necessary then Peter's advice, lay aside envies. Set your affections on things above—to be revealed in the last times. Looking for and hastening to the coming of the great day. Envy is the grandchild of malice and guile.

5. Restrain the tongue. The further advice is to lay aside all evil speakings. All? Yes, all. Why? Because evil speaking is mischievous, pernicious, destructive. The Psalmist prays, 'Let not an evil speaker be established in the earth.' Can we lay aside this worldly propensity? Well we think so, otherwise the request would not be made. How much bitterness might often be averted by Christians if each would make the attempt to restrain the tongue. Practical effort in this, sustained by watchfulness and prayer, must result in putting it away. If we have entered the new and living way and are in Christ new creatures, then we should have new desires, new affections, a new spirit; consequently will obey the new command—love one another, and look for all things to be created anew, in the new heavens and new earth, where malice, guile, hypocrisies, envies, and evil speaking will be no more.—E. H. Taylor.

Why Jesus Will Come.

Through Jesus Christ—the Christ of prophecy—either directly or indirectly, we learn all that we know concerning the wonderful fact of salvation complete by a resurrection from the dead. A Christ that was simply a matter of past history might produce either by words or works very pleasant and rich material that would add to our present comfort and lofty aspirations, but there would be nothing—there could be nothing—of positive assurance of anything that would go beyond this side of the tomb, which place or event is not very far in the distance, if our Lord tarries.

There have been noble and grand examples of men with high conceptions of truth and of virtue that have come and have gone; they have filled their places in the world's album of race benefactors, but not one of them (outside of God's people) have been able to place a bright halo around the old stanzars, "Hark from the tomb a doleful sound," etc. As far as the testimony of them all is concerned, regarding those whose feet have gone down into sheol, the sound is ever more doleful on account of its being so extravagantly doubtful. To besure they will tell "fairy stories" about the "immortal soul" that will quite equal the "Arabian Nights" yarns, but who of a thinking and questioning mind will believe with implicit, trustful, resting faith such vague ideas of a future existence? A mere Christ of history then, might do the world no more good than any other man with any other name. The Christ of prophecy was a Christ of whom certain very remarkable and prominent acts were demanded beforehand. Such an one had the right to speak and to act with authority. For an historic Christ to be of any special value to humanity in giving them hope for better things than mortal man can possibly give, he must fulfil the requirements of the prophetic Christ. Our Christ demonstrated his divine mission and God-appointed Messiahship by completing the "round of requirements" demanded of the prophetic Christ, even to the taking hold upon immortality, therefore his Word—his Promise—can be relied upon and implicitly believed.

Jesus, the Christ, was the all absorbing central figure of the prophecy. Among other things his mission was to "make known the path of life." He was the One appointed to bring "life and immortality to light," which thing he could not possibly do if the world was in possession of that light already. If any one thinks that the light was shining and that the world was not in darkness concerning the "path of life," or indeed, whether in fact there was a future life at all, let them read the writings of those who pondered over the heavy questions pertaining to a future existence and who professed to teach concerning the life that they hoped was beyond the grave. "Clear as mud" is a critical expression used to properly convey to the mind the brilliancy of their wisdom on this subject.

Jesus, by his literal, physical resurrection, taught by these object lessons the method of obtaining a life beyond the grave. "He broke the bands of death" and forever put to flight all terrors of the tomb for his people. But his simply dying and living again did not give individual encouragement for life, only so far as it demonstrated and emphasized the fact, that life from the dead was possible, for had he not made promises to his brethren concerning this matter we should not have the ground for hope and the unwavering faith that we now have; but, praise God, this One whom the Almighty had so highly honored, "opened his mouth" and said to you and to me: "They that are mine, I will raise at the last day." Blessed fact! Blessed hope! Now the fact of a future life is assured to us individually by the One who has been appointed to give life, providing we will consummate the transfer of our lives and affections "over on the Lord's side."

As we understand that the Church of God from the beginning went down into death waiting for their redemption, it follows that it is absolutely necessary for Jesus to complete that scheme of giving an immortal life, of which his death and resurrection were but parts of the grand whole. Unless Jesus does come, the "Plan of the Ages" will have failed; the Word of God by the mouth of his prophets will have become as a dead letter and the world will continue to live out its existence without a satisfying hope—it will be the same old endless round of argument with vague hypotheses for foundations. It is easy enough to tumble into the grave, but it takes a Mighty Conqueror to lift the unfortunates out. This Jesus will do. His Word for it. Our prophetic and covenant-keeping Lord will come with "power from on high" and raise up the fallen. The historic account of faith and blessed experiences of the Christian church for centuries past add "faith to faith" and "make assurance doubly sure." We await with loving anticipation this most glorious and joyous event, that puts the church in immortality and death in oblivion forevermore.—O. B. Purinton.

Death in Heaven!

In D. L. Moody's Year Book, under date of Dec. 22, he says: "Some day you will read in the papers that D. L. Moody, of East Northfield, is dead. Don't you believe a word of it! At that moment I shall be more alive than I am now. I shall have gone up higher, that is all; gone out of this old clay tenement into a house that is immortal, a body that death cannot touch, that sin cannot taint, a body like unto his own glorious body. I was born in the flesh in 1837. I was born in the Spirit in 1856. That which is born of the flesh may die. That which is born of the Spirit will live forever."

Under July 8th, Mr. Moody says: "As I go into a cemetery I like to think of the time when the dead shall rise from their graves."

Modern orthodoxy teaches us that "death is the separation of soul and body." That "eternal death is separation of the soul from God."

Take the above teaching all together, what can be more contradictory of the words of inspiration? In effect, it contradicts itself. Of course, Mr. Moody's teaching is almost universally endorsed by the so-called orthodox denominations; otherwise they would not have given him such a warm welcome, and have joined him, as they did, in his evangelistic efforts. Notwithstanding he believed he was going to inhabit a glorious, immortal body in heaven, at the time the newspapers should say, "D. L. Moody is dead;" he teaches that at the time of the resurrection his soul will come back to dwell in his resurrected body! If this is true, then his soul must be separated from the glorious, immortal body which he now inhabits in heaven; hence, that will be death in heaven—separation of soul and body. But, as he claims that to be an immortal body, it cannot die and be buried in heaven. So then, after the resurrection, there will be two D. L. Moodys; one with an immortal soul and one without! Will they both be equally intelligent and happy? Is that kind of teaching workmanlike? If so, there is no advantage by means of an immortal soul.

See again what Mr. Moody says on page 313 of "Moody, his Words, Work, and Workers." "Did you ever stop to think what darkness would settle down upon the world if it were not for this doctrine of the resurrection? How I pity those men who try to deny it. They are like Samson, pulling the house down upon their own heads."

In the sixth chapter of John's gospel Christ tells his disciples three or four times, "I will raise him up at the last day." There is then a resurrection for us also. How is it possible for one to believe both of these teachings? If Mr. Moody is now occupying an immortal, glorious body in heaven, like his (Christ's) glorious body, why should he ever have occasion to leave it? He cannot hope for a better body than that of his Lord. While teaching the doctrine of the resurrection, he virtually denies it. But the ancient worthies died, so that a resurrection is absolutely necessary to give them a glorious future life. I will quote a few passages, and ask the reader to meditate upon the subject, and learn and believe the truth.

Gen. xlvii. 29, "And the time drew nigh that Israel must die." Would he be more alive after he should die? Gen. v. 5; "And all the days that Adam lived were 930 years; and he died." Gen. v. 12, "And all the days of Seth were 912 years; and he died." See also verses 11, 14, 17, 20, 27, 30. See Heb. xi. 35: "Women received their dead raised to life again; and others were tortured, not accepting deliverance; that they might [go to heaven when they die? No.] obtain a better resurrection." See 13th verse, "These all died in faith, not having received the promises." John xi. 14, "Then said Jesus unto them plainly, Lazarus is dead." Jno. vi. 49, "Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness, and are dead." Acts ii. 29, "Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried." Ver. 34, "For David is not ascended into the heavens." John xix. 33, "But when they came to Jesus, and saw that he was dead already, they broke not his legs." Rev. i. 18, "I (Jesus) am he that liveth, and was dead." Psa. lxxxix. 7-10, "Wise men die." 1 Cor. xv. 22, "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." Heb. ix. 27, 28, "And as it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment; so Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation."

If we do not believe that Jesus died and rose again, we are without hope and without God in the world. 1 Thes. iv. 14, "For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." Heb. ix. 15-17, "And for this cause he is the mediator of the New Testament, that by means of death for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament, they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance. For where a testament is, there must also of necessity be the death of the testator. For a testament is of force after men are dead; otherwise it is of no strength at all while the testator liveth."

John xiv. 6, "Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth, and the life; no man cometh unto the Father but by me." Jesus Christ is our Mediator. 1 Tim. ii. 5; Heb. viii. 6; ix. 15. We cannot mediate for ourselves. He that despises Christ as his mediator, and seeks to climb to heaven and be in the presence of God by means of an immortal soul born of mortal flesh, "The same is a thief and a robber." John x. 1. Jesus said to his little children (John xiii. 33), "Whither I go; ye cannot come." Are we to believe then that Mr. Moody has found a way to climb up to heaven where the apostles could not go, simply because they and Jesus did not know about the immortality of the soul? Jesus could not have known that the soul is immortal, or else he would not have told his children that they could not go where he was going, neither would he have said, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh." According to Paul (1 Cor. xv. 50) the natural and spiritual do not in fact dwell together—cotemporarily. It is "first the natural, or earthy man, afterwards the spiritual or immortal man. "Who hath ears to hear, let him hear."

Report.

Our Dear Brother and Sister Woodward arrived in Portland, March 26, and began meetings the same evening. They preached in all some twenty discourses. Two were baptized into the all-saving name of Christ. They are surely faithful workers in the Lord's vineyard. We feel grateful to our Heavenly Father that they were directed to visit our church here at Scholls. I know that a great deal of good was done. The different Bible subjects were portrayed in an eloquent and convincing manner.

One of Brother Woodward's sermons was on the Signs of the Times. No one could listen to the convincing statements without knowing that we are living in the perils of the last days when our righteous King will soon take his throne.

One of Sister Woodward's discourses was concerning the Church, "How should we behave ourselves in the Church of God?" Nothing could have been more fitting. Good interest was maintained throughout the meetings.

With sad hearts we had to part, not knowing whether we will ever meet on this side of the kingdom.

It pays to be a Christian; it pays to be a zealous Christian. I want to be one of those when the King comes that may be worthy of eternal life.

My prayer is that their lives may be spared for many years to come and some time in the near future to be with us again.

May the King soon come to set up the kingdom; to raise the righteous dead; to give immortality to them that love him; to break the oppressor and to establish justice on the earth. There will be no more parting then.

Yours in hope of eternal life.

A Request.

In behalf of the Master, and his cause, and his people, we request that some one who has studied the subject show us how to harmonize Matt. xiii. 40-42; xxiv. 37-39; Luke xvii. 26-30, with the idea of mercy for the nations and a growth and expansion of God's kingdom when set up and established on the earth under the whole heavens, at the return of our King. We are aware that the word Probation is not found over there, neither is it found in the Bible. But is its equivalent or meaning found?

T. E. ADAMS.

Persons attending the Conference at Scholls, Oregon, in June will be met at the National Hotel, in Portland. Let all who contemplate going make note of this arrangement.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. The Association of Believers of the Church of God, will meet in connection with the Conference to elect their officers and to transact any business that may come up before the Association.

ALMIRA BROOKS, Sec.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God, in Michigan, will be held [D. V.] at Dutton, Kent Co., Thursday evening, May 29th, 1902, and continue over the following Sunday, [May 29, 30, 31, and June 1st.]

Another year has nearly rolled around since the Annual Michigan Conference was held. Death has been doing its work among us, and some are now sleeping that were accustomed to meet with us. How many more will lay their burdens down e're another year will pass, God only knows. This we do know, that the left ones must work with still greater zeal and energy as the ranks are all the time lessened by sickness and death. So let every lover of the truth, who possibly can arrange to be at Dutton, our old yearly gathering place. Let all come with the one thought to further the cause of Christ. Not altogether to get good, but determined to give as much as we receive, then we will have a good meeting. Let each church send one or more delegates with report of their standing during the past year. The friends at Dutton are prepared to entertain all who may come. Dutton is on the M. C. R. R., ten miles southeast of Grand Rapids.

Yours in hope of life eternal.

EMMA JACKMAN, Sec'y.

A meeting of the Ladies' Tithing Society will be held in connection with the Michigan Conference, on Saturday, A. M. May 30th.

"Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse.....and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not.....pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room to receive it."

Dear Sisters, the question ought not to be with God's children—how great a blessing will it bring me to give my tenth to the Lord, but will this sacrifice bless another, is this offering to God to build up the sacred cause of truth? Then let us give unto the Lord and not to self. Have you ever given your tenth to God's cause? If not, try it one year. You will be surprised how the Lord's pocket-book will fill, and when you wish money to use to help a poor brother, or send a paper to another, or help pay an evangelist to tell the same glad news to others that gave you hope of eternal life, it is ready. O so many ways to help on the cause, and this is the best way I believe, to develop method in the gospel work. Try it, and know some one is blessed by your efforts. Try and be present at the Tithing Society Meeting.

M. A. WOODWARD, Sec'y.

A general meeting of brethren from several States will be held at Shaw, Kansas, beginning Saturday June 7, and holding over until Sunday night, June 15th next. The object of this meeting is that all brethren everywhere, who may desire, may have an opportunity of looking over the grounds, examining the plans and purchase homes for the proposed colony that is to be established at Rollin near Shaw. Bros. Eychaner, Crowe, Prime, Oliver, Foore and other speakers will be in attendance. This meeting promises to be largely attended, as many have written us that they will be there. Shaw is on the Atchinson, Topeka and Santa Fe line running east and west. Persons from Kansas City will take the A. T. S. F. road to Chuncte 125 miles southwest of Kansas City and from Chuncte 10 miles east to Shaw, direct connection. This will prove to be an interesting meeting. Tents will be on the ground to accommodate all.

G. M. MYERS.

The Missouri-Kansas Annual Conference will be held in Kerr's Park, Kansas City, Kansas, Aug. 8 to 24. This is a beautiful park, plenty of shade and good spring water at the terminus of Minnesota Ave. All parties by rail will take the Kansas City, Kansas street cars going west at west door of union depot and run to terminus of the street car line with no change. Tents will be on the ground to accomodate all, but all should bring bedding. Business will begin on the 14th. This meeting should be largely attended as it is central. We hope to see many there from other States. Brethren this will be at a leisure time when many can attend. We expect this to be the best annual meeting we have yet had. Come at the first of the meeting, and come to stay the entire two weeks. Bros. Orem, Darby, Oliver, T. E. Adams, Almus Adams, Eychaner, Crowe and other speakers are expected to be in attendance.

G. M. MYERS, Sec.

To the Brethren of Illinois, Greeting:

The call for means for the support of an evangelist has been some what delayed because of our not having an evangelist in the field. As we now have Brother Crowe at work, and he gives good reports, we beg of you to give your free-will offering. Remember the Lord loveth a cheerful giver.

Remit to me as Treasurer, at Lanark, Ill.

J. M. GLOTFELTY.

THOSE to whom we have sent letters telling about your accounts have not all made response as yet. Brother or Sister, we urge you to be sure and not neglect this matter longer. We want to pay our obligations—this is the reason why we ask you to give us what is due at once. If we could satisfy those we are under obligation to any other way we would not ask you, but as it is the only way we know of, we must bear from you to enable us to do so. We trust all will see the necessity of this and act NOW.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

Poetry.

Call Them In.

"Call them in"—the poor, the wretched,
Sin-stained wanderers from the fold;
Peace and pardon freely offer:
Can you weigh their worth with gold?

"Call them in"—the weak, the weary,
Laden with the doom of sin;
Bid them come and rest in Jesus:
He is waiting—"call them in."

"Call them in"—the dear, the tender;
Bid the stranger to the feast;
"Call them in"—the rich, the noble,
From the highest to the least.

Forth the Father runs to meet them,
He hath all their sorrows seen;
Robes, and ring, and royal sandals
Wait the last one—"call them in."

"Call them in"—the broken hearted,
Covering with the head in shame;
Speak love's message low and tender,—
"'Twas for sinners Jesus came."

See, the shadows lengthen round us,
Soon the day-dawn will begin;
Can you leave them lost and lonely?
Christ is coming—"call them in."

Report of Meeting.

Brother Underwood:

The Newark, Elizabeth and Brooklyn churches had their quarterly union meeting Sunday May 18, at Hart's Hall, Brooklyn, N. Y. The morning was as usual devoted to breaking of bread, etc.; the afternoon to the consideration of the question, "Faith and Works," James ii. This may be considered a threadbare subject, but the sentiments expressed by the brethren in their 15 minute talks, which I herewith send you in the form of a composite address prove beyond a doubt that the subject is one not [illegible] and Brown from Jersey City, Bros. Hodge, Evans and Ross and others from Newark, Bros. Woodruff, Moore and others from Elizabeth, and quite a number from the surrounding neighborhood.

These meetings are profitable if for nothing else but happy result and food for after thought.

Yours in hope,

WM. RENNIE.

FAITH AND WORKS.

Can faith save you? James ii. 14, is a plain question, and readily receives an answer in the negative, no, because to do otherwise would conflict with the plain teaching of the text, nevertheless if asked to define our works and realizing that they were to determine our future well-being, hearts might reasonably fear and tremble.

Faith without works is dead, a plain, positive statement, to which for the same reason we also readily give our assent. As a church we are rich in the knowledge of the Scriptures, and rest perfectly satisfied with our belief, taking pleasure in defining the things to be believed. We have winnowed and passed through a sieve (as it were) the words of this Book, and are proud of our achievements in this respect, and rest with considerable pride upon our laurels. We look with self complacence and with condescending compassion and pity upon those of our brethren (according to the flesh) in other denominations who may not have reached the same standard of excellence, and yet, after all we are assured that knowledge and faith are worthless when alone, and when without works are but the acme of self-righteousness, like unto the miser who strives to obtain that he may gratify his own selfish pleasure to the exclusion of his fellows, both come under the same condemnation, dead to that for which they were created.

"As the body without the spirit is dead so is faith without works," in other words, as the spirit is the life of the body so are works the life of faith. To have knowledge and faith only is to lack the saving element works, works being knowledge and faith applied. Knowledge the key, which faith picks up, works unlocks the door. Faith may be likened to a fountain or more properly a stream of water, imparting life and beauty in its progress down the hillside and through the valley into the great ocean beyond. Its good works may be seen on both its banks, all over the hillside, and far into the valley. The tiny little seedling holding within itself all the elements of life, but for lack of moisture was ready to die, now shoots out the tender blade, then the blade in the ear, the ripe grain, and an abundant harvest, the grist mill in the village driven by this same stream, converts the harvested grain into flour to feed the multitude, gathering strength and volume in its progress. It reaches the great cities and there keeps the wheels of industry and commerce in perpetual motion, and continuing until on its broad crystal bosom it carries the mighty ships fathered with commerce to and from all nations over the great ocean.

The water in the stream is as widely separated from its wonderful results, or its works, as is cause and effect. The blade of grass in the valley, the grist mill in the village, the wheels of industry in the city, the ships on the bosom of the waters cannot in any sense be called the water in the stream, neither are works faith or faith works. The stream is one thing, the results flowing therefrom, its works, are quite another.

Faith may be likened to the little stream issuing from its fountain head in the mountain side, and as the believer grows in grace and in the knowledge of the truth, his faith is increased, and like the stream in its progress gathers volume and power when the greatest obstacles are overcome, and the grandest victories achieved, "and others seeing your good works will be led to glorify your Father in heaven," therefore James asserts positively, "Show me thy faith without thy works, and I will show thee my faith by my works." Noah believed God and immediately followed the work of building the ark and so was it with Abraham, Moses and the prophets.

The question naturally arises here, Are these works which are expected of believers, specifically defined? Or are they simply the promptings of the heart awakened to a sense of the love of God in Christ Jesus without any specific object, purpose or plan? The works of Noah, Abraham, Moses, etc., were plainly specified beforehand, and it was their faith in the God who promised, which prompted and inspired them to do the works specified.

Is it not the same with Christians today, surely he cannot be left to the prompting of his own thoughts and vain imagination (seeing that he is positively informed that the thoughts and imaginations of man's heart are evil continually) so that one might do this and another that, as their fancy might dictate.

The Christ says, "I have finished the work which thou hast given me to do," a work evidently specified before hand.

Paul says, "I have fought the good fight, I have finished the course, I have kept the faith." A defined fight, course and faith which he specifies as the good fight, the course, the faith. It was the same good fight, faith and course of the Master in which you and I are expected to excel.

We may not be called upon to literally build an ark or to leave our native country, or literally sacrifice our son on the altar, or deliver our brethren from the bondage of Pharaoh. Nevertheless we are called upon to do a work as clearly defined and specified and none the less trying or more apparently impossible than the work required of Abraham, when he offered his well beloved son upon the altar.

Take up the cross and follow me is a plain specific statement of the work expected of the believer, and is if anticipating the further question, But what is the cross? We have the reply, "Love your neighbor as yourself;" "Love your enemies;" "Do good to them that hate you;" "And pray for them who despitefully use you and persecute you." It has been said that it is impossible to do this, so Abraham might have said when called upon to offer his son Isaac on the altar, but he did not, and he was a man of like passions with ourselves. It has been said that "Love your neighbor as yourself" and "Love your enemies" are but to be literally understood, but unfortunately for those who so believe, there is no qualification of that kind specified, and on the contrary as if to confirm and enforce the plain teaching of these precepts the same divine teacher says, "If a man strike you on the one cheek, turn to him the other also," "If a man ask you to go a mile, go with him twain," "If he asks your coat, give him your cloak also." It is not because we cannot, but because we can do these things that the divine Master asks us to do them. Obedience or disobedience proving the quality of our faith.

James says, "If ye fulfill the royal law according to the Scripture, thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

Peter says, "Giving all diligence, add to thy faith virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness and charity."

Paul says, "There abideth faith, hope and charity (or love) but the greatest of these is love," (In other words, "Love thy neighbor as thy self" and thus fulfill the law.) Follow after charity, and desire spiritual gifts, that ye may prophecy. Wherefore brethren covet to prophecy, (that is to preach) preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ is simply prophecy of that which will surely come to pass. To preach the gospel may be foolishness, and may be only atmospheric gush air, as one of our brethren has so eloquently said, but let us never forget that it is foolishness only to those who perish, and that it is the power of God to those who believe, so that the preaching of the gospel is not only the gift to be desired and coveted but compared with which, all other gifts are of minor importance. Those who preach are to be counted worthy of the highest honor. The righteous shall shine as the firmament, but they who turn many to righteousness as the stars of the firmament forever and ever."

The Christ was anointed, that he might preach the gospel to the poor .....and the acceptable year of the Lord. He went into every city, village and synagogue preaching the same thing, announcing that such was the express purpose, in the wisdom of God, for which he was sent, and it was because he insisted and continued to preach the gospel that he was put to death. He sends forth his apostles and followers, with instructions to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, baptizing them that believe and teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you. It was surely extreme foolishness to make such extraordinary efforts involving such incalculable sacrifice, if it was all to be discontinued at his death, and that the preaching of the gospel today would be only so much wasted atmospheric gas.

It was for the preaching of the gospel that Paul stood a prisoner in chains before Agrippa, that Peter was cast into prison, when he was miraculously delivered, and for which every one of the apostles and thousands of the church became martyrs, when the remnant were scattered abroad and went everywhere preaching the gospel. As it was in the days of primitive Christianity so is it today, "no cross no crown," no preaching of the gospel no persecution. Do good to all men, speak not of their unrighteousness and of their superstitions, be silent in the things concerning life in the Christ only, and all men will speak well of you, "Woe unto you when all men shall speak well of you," but preach the gospel, contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints, denounce the superstitions and errors of the age in which we live, as did Noah, Moses and the prophets, the Christ, his apostles and followers in their day and the phials of their wrath and indignation will be poured out upon you. It is this testimony and testifying that tries men's faith, has always been so, and will continue so until he comes.

To visit the fatherless and the widows in their affliction, and keeping ourself unspotted from the world is in no sense to be understood as quoted by James from the prophecy of Israel as the Alpha and Omega of "the works." It is pure religion as far as it goes, but if that is all, there would not be widows and orphans enough to keep the church busy, at least it should be hoped so. What about the widowers, the young men and women, and the perishing world on account of whom Christ died, all which are included in the "royal law," "Love your neighbor as yourself." It was the Pharisee who passed to the other side of the street, lest he should soil his unspotted garments in contact with the poor, bruised and dying man who had fallen amongst thieves. It was the Samaritan who made no profession of spotless garments who stopped and put him on his beast and took him to the inn. And so is it today, it is the man who realizes that his righteousness is as filthy rags, that it is only in the righteousness of the Christ that he is saved, who is willing to take up the cross and follow him out of the abundance of a grateful heart. No sacrifice, no service is too great for him who loves because he first loved us.

Conversions under Philip's Preaching. No. 2.

SIMON THE SORCERER CONVERTED.

This case of Simon's has been the occasion of a good deal of controversy; some contending that his conversion at the start was spurious—only feigned; that he was still the same old Simon after baptism that he was before; while others take the position that he was sincere and his conversion as genuine as that of others who obeyed at the same time. It is argued in proof that he was only a baptized hypocrite, from the fact that Peter said that "his heart was not right in the sight of God, that he was in the gall of bitterness and the bond of iniquity," and was ordered by the apostle to repent. This at first sight looks like proof of his insincerity when he yielded obedience to "the form of doctrine." The object of those who urge this in proof of Simon's dishonesty in the matter, is to show that baptism avails nothing; that it is not for nor in order to the remission of sins, though performed in Jesus' name; that pardon of the sinner God is pleased to grant before he reaches the baptismal waters. The objection, if it has any weight, lies with equal force against belief of the gospel having anything to do with the remission of sins. He believed the gospel as preached by Philip, for it is recorded here, "Then Simon himself believed also; and when he was baptized he continued with Philip, and wondered, beholding the miracles and signs which were done." v. 13. These marvelous works wrought in his presence caused this diviner of the secrets of the future (?) to wonder. There was exhibited a power that surpassed any thing he could lay claim to or any thing he had ever before witnessed at the hands of Jewish jugglers. A popular commentator says, that "left without followers Simon thought best to join the man who fairly outstripped him, not without a touch of real conviction." The thought presented by this quotation does not accord with the statement that "Simon believed." Believed what? The gospel of course, or the things Philip preached. The commentator allows that Simon only experienced a "touch of real conviction." The thorough conversion of these Samaritans (not to mention that of Simon) has been questioned on the ground that the Holy Spirit had not been imparted and that the only thing Philip could do in this case was to take their profession of faith as evidence of their renewal by the Holy Spirit, and baptize them. This view assigns to the Spirit a specific and mysterious operation on the heart of man changing it from a sinful to a righteous condition. But according to the history here given it was known that these converts had not, prior to the visit of Peter and John, received the Spirit for the object of these apostles in going down to Samaria was that Philip's converts might be put in possession of the Spirit by the imposition of hands. It was known that the Spirit had fallen upon none of them. So runs the record. Yet with a clear knowledge of this fact they were baptized. Many modern religionists would have regarded them as unfit subjects for baptism.

When Simon saw that by the imposition of the apostles' hands the Spirit was given he offered them money, saying, Give me also this authority, that on whom I place my hands he may receive the Holy Spirit. His witnessing of miracles and wonders prior to this only caused him to marvel, but now his ambition is aroused at what the apostles had done in his presence. By his magical arts he became reputed as some great one—the great power of God. After witnessing the power of the apostles in the exercise of their supernatural gift he coveted the same power, and was willing to pay for it, thinking that it would bring him into greater notoriety than his magical arts could do. It has been thought by some writers that his idea was that he could turn the coveted gift to a pecuniary advantage—make money out of it, as he undoubtedly did out of his sorcery. Peter is shocked at his thought that the gift of God might be purchased with money, and said to him, "Thy money perish with thee." "Thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter; for thy heart is not right in the sight of God." This prerogative and power to confer, by the laying on of hands, the Holy Spirit, belonged to but few, and was only occasional.

The history of this case singles out the one sin and he is commanded to repent of this wickedness and to pray to God, if perhaps the thought of his heart might be forgiven him. Peter wished to impress him with the thought of the sinfulness of his sin; and he further charges: "Thou art in the gall of bitterness, and in the bond of iniquity." v. 23. The whole drift of thought is in reference to this one sin; and no others are even alluded to, not even his sin of sorcery by which he bewitched the people, and acquired gain. He had repented of his former sins as they were, no doubt, shown to be contrary to God's will by Philip as a faithful evangelist.

There is a lesson to be learned from this case of Simon's. Those of my readers, along with myself who have had a half century of Christian experience, and have seen many beginnings in the profession of faith, and watched the progress of Christian life in our own cases and that of others, know something of human weakness, and the power of beset ting sin; and others with less experience but observant, can also bear witness with us of some lapses into sins that were a reproach to the Christian cause, and real damaging to the character and profession of those unfortunately guilty. We have seen men and women enter on the way of life, giving every evidence of sincerity of earnestness and zeal; there was no ground for impugning their motives and no signs of hypocrisy, and yet they fell, fell into one sin perhaps, made one mistake that destroyed much of their influence as Christians, even after consigning them to the background, so to speak. Others, having committed the one sin in the day of strong temptation went on in a course of wrong doing, with no hope of reformation. The man addicted to strong drink in case he breaks off the habit and obeys the gospel is quite liable to fall into the same old habit again. The weak point in his character is this appetite for alcohol, which may be rekindled at any moment at the presence of the exciting cause, even the scent of his accustomed beverage is sufficient to wake into activity the slumbering passion. The communion cup, when intoxicating wine was used, wrecked many a reformed man, and sent him reeling and staggering to a drunkard's grave. Where one side of a street was lined with saloons John B. Gough took the precaution to pass to the other side to avoid the fumes of liquor, which were liable to rekindle the old flame. Where is the ground, for calling in question the sincerity of his reformation? Did he give evidence of hypocrisy? I call to mind one particular case in my own church relationship. A man who had been in the habit of getting drunk became a sober man and after a time, hearing the truth believed and obeyed it. There was no doubt of his honesty of purpose. For several years he led an earnest, consistent Christian life. He loved the truth and showed his appreciation of it in every way possible. But there came a day when he fell back to his former habit. I know not how the tempter approached him. The writer does not believe the Calvinistic doctrine of "once in grace always in grace." The possibility of falling into sin seems an ever present contingency of our history and experience, and God in his mercy and beneficence has made provision for the believer's weakness, but not for those who glory in their own shame, and who will not receive divine admonition. Here is the merciful provision: "If any man sin we have an advocate with the Father Jesus Christ the righteous." 1 John ii. 1. We have the blessed assurance that if we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. 9th vec. and chap. 1.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

What is true of the reformed drunkard who in all honesty has entered on the way of life, with the liability of falling confronting him, and against weakness he is admonished to fortify himself is true of every disciple of Christ in the direction of his strong passions and appetites previously indulged without restraint, and true of Simon the sorcerer. This will account for the sin of which he is guilty; but will not excuse it. In the light of this principle we need not impugn his motives, and say that what seemed to be belief and reformation was all a pretense—a sham. It is true that in requesting the apostles to pray for him he makes no reference to the wicked thought of his own heart, but only to the evils threatened by Peter in the well merited rebuke of his wickedness. It is true he asked the apostles to pray that, "None of these things come upon me." This was very natural, for Peter had by his indignant words wrought him up to a wholesome dread of consequences, and he knew, if he remembered what Philip preached a short time before about sin and its pardon, that the way to avert the evils Peter denounced against him was through pardon of the wicked thought of his heart. So we need not conclude that Philip baptized a hypocrite in this case though it is possible, and even true, that sometimes hypocrites are baptized: but this is no objection to baptism nor to its design as taught in Acts ii.

What I have said in reference to Simon's sin admonishes us to guard well our weak points, it we know what they are, and this we ought to know. When the farmer's cattle break through a weak place in the fence, to guard against future breaches he is very likely to make this point a little stronger than any other.

Not Much Like Christ.

Christ said, "My kingdom is not of this world," and all of his conduct while on earth was in strict keeping with this statement. The Pope of Rome, however, who assumes to be the vice-gerent of Christ on earth sports the retinue and extravagance of the most ostentious royal court, surpassing that of many kings. The following is a summary of this court: It comprises 1,000 persons. There are twenty valets, 120 house prelates, 170 privy chamberlains, six chamberlains, 300 extra-honorary chamberlains, 180 supernumerary chamberlains, thirty officers of the noble guard and sixty guardsmen, fourteen officers of the Swiss guard, and palace guard, seven honorary chaplains, twenty private secretaries, ten stewards and masters of the horse, and sixty doorkeepers.

"Be sure you are right and then go ahead" is not to be interpreted into being sure you are right simply because you have gone ahead.

PLEASE LOOK.

Please look up you account, and see if you are one of those who have neglected to send in your renewal. There are several who have and possibly by remembering next time you are in town to send us a money order you will be in time to render us great assistance. We specially need some little money right away, and will feel thankful if you can aid us.

PLEASE LOOK THIS UP.

When in the presence of others, neither our own time nor that of the company should be wasted in talking upon trifles.

Brethren, we often hear the words, "The Lord is coming," "The signs portend his coming is near," etc. Do we believe this? If we do let us not neglect to assemble ourselves together at stated times, and give and get the encouragement that comes from such association. Several Conference meetings are advertised. There is business to attend to or these meetings would not be called. The Master is not yet here, and how much longer he will tarry we know not. The "unfinished business" requires your attendance and participation—your work is not all done, so go to the meeting, and be found at your post when the angel announces his presence.

On October 11, 1899 the Boers gave their ultimatum to the British, and the day following invaded their territory. Since then the war has been incessant and fierce. Thousands of men have been engaged, and the losses have been severe on both sides. The resources of the English government were superior to the Boers, but it has taken many millions of dollars before the British were able on May 28, 1902, to return an ultimatum to the Boers, giving them until midnight of May 31, to sign the surrender and stop the war. It was 10:30 p. m. of May 31, when the signatures were placed on the paper, and the "Boer war" has ended and peace proclaimed. The exact terms are not yet made public, but there is great rejoicing in England at the result.

War Preparations.

Are we really in "the last days?" If there is anything in "signs" this question must be answered in the affirmative. An exchange speaking of England and her war vessels has the following:

England has 489 ships, large and small, in her navy, representing an outlay of $540,000,000. During the years from 1869 to 1895 inclusive, an average of $7,500,000 per year was spent in building new ships. Since 1895 this sum has risen to the annual enormous sum of $22,500,000, and during the present year $46,250,000 is being spent in new war vessels, in addition to $8,000,000 for repairs and alterations. Its fleet of 489 vessels today has a total displacement of 1,500,000 tons and carries 2,671 guns, manned by 50,000 officers and men. In the last twelve years England has devoted $805,000,000 to the navy.

Oh! Those Middle Ages.

"What a legacy of error they have left us, and how remarkable it is that with all our boasted achievements in philology, criticism, and scientific theology, we never get beyond the influence of that bewildering legacy! Those middle ages rule us yet. They speak from the professor's chair, they preach in the pulpits, and they wield the pen of our religious writers. Everywhere they meet us, casting a dark shadow over the bright and beautiful Book of God, plunging in mystery that which is clear as a midsummer sunbeam, and clothing in perplexing figure, which no one can solve, the plain declarations of outstanding prophecy. The middle ages compose our catechisms, our manuals of devotion, our hymnals and our prayers. Thus the emancipation of the Bible from the thraldom of Popish darkness is a long way from being effected, after more than three hundred years of boasted Protestantism. Doctrines are taught and opinions handed down from generation to generation which are palpably at variance both with the spirit and the letter of Christianity. If all this be so, and, alas! it is only too easy to prove it, how terrible the responsibility which rests upon our public teachers!"

"Eternal to as Many

As thou hast given him." John xvii. 2. This is the ultimate purpose of God in reference to the inhabitants of the world upon which we live by evolving from its mortal inhabitants a race of beings who shall emerge from the death state into the divine nature, and finally inhabit this globe—when every curse has been banished, every tear dried, and every evil rooted up—throughout the illimitable ages of eternity."

Satan.

"Satan, who lived in the second century of the Christian era, agrees with Scripture, that man before he was born had no existence. He also teaches that at death he goes out of existence, as an Adamic creature; and will only come again into being by "Jesus and the resurrection." Thus he practically denies the false dogma of the soul's existence after life in an invisible spirit world. His words are as follows:—"JUST AS, NOT EXISTING BEFORE I WAS BORN, I knew not who I was, and only existed in the potentiality of fleshly matter; but being born after a former state of nothingness, I have obtained through my birth a certainty of my existence; in the same way, having been born, through death existing no longer, and seen no longer, I shall exist again, just as before I was not but was afterwards born."

Brethren, Comfort One Another.

I thess. iv. 13-18.

"Brethren, weep not. Jesus, our Savior, died, and lay for three days in the silent tomb asleep. But his Father's mighty arm broke the bonds of death. Our Savior rose. He lives! He lives! HE LIVES! No more can death attack his spirit-form,—no more can sin assail his spirit-mind; neither can care again furrow his brow. Though centuries have come and gone, eternal life is his. But more than this, he has the keys of death; he can unlock the grave. He only waits his Father's pleasure. Though our brethren sleep, they sleep in Jesus; and he who brought to life the daughter of Jairus, the widow's son at Nain, and Lazarus, is far more powerful now. He sits in heaven, but soon shall come to earth, and from the ground shall call his sleeping saints. Unspoken joy! To hear the welcome from the Savior's lips, 'Well done, thou faithful servant, a crown of life is yours for evermore.' O think of it! This is the glory; this is God's concealed love; this is the salvation we are invited to share:—Eternal life and everlasting bliss, unending glory with the risen Christ before his Father and the holy throng of angels. Yes; the saints shall then partake of nature, divine, pure, incorruptible, and be as the angels. They shall never more be called upon to pass the gates of death; never more be made the sport of pain and sorrow; then the tear no more shall dim the mourner's eye, for God shall wipe away all tears, and there shall not again be found sorrow or sighing. All these former things shall then have passed away, and death itself shall die. All the redeemed ones, with immortal voice, shall stand beyond the grave, and looking back shall cry aloud, 'Oh, death, where is thy sting; oh, grave, where is thy victory?'"

Passing Events in the Light of Prophecy.

"Britain's expenditure for the past year was £195,522,000. The revenue £142,998,000 leaving a deficit of £52,524,000. The deficit was provided for by consuls loans. Out of the total expenditure over 78 millions represented war expenses for South Africa and China. The chancellor of the Exchequer estimates the revenue for the current year, on the existing basis of taxation, at £147,785,000, and the expenditure at £174,824,000.

On the assumption that the war will continue for another year, the chancellor of the exchequer adds to the 40 millions already estimated for the war 18½ millions, thus raising the estimated deficit to the total of 46½ millions. 32 millions of this deficit are provided for by the issue of consols (already largely over-applied for), and the balance by additional taxation and the suspension of sinking fund. Only a few years ago Britain's annual expenditure was about 100 millions. War is a costly game, as the British tax-payer is realizing.

Within a few weeks Belgium has been the scene of extraordinary turmoil. The terrible condition of things in that country is described by the Daily Telegraph thus:—"Brussels has been seething with scenes which have turned that splendid capital into a pandemonium, and have recalled nothing so much as Paris upon the point of throwing up the barricades. Socialist mobs in dense array have swept the streets singing revolutionary songs, and order has only been restored upon each occasion at the point of steel. Disorder and outrage have spread to the other large towns. For a time it looked as if the Socialists were to carry everything before them, but for the present the forces of law and order have prevailed, and tranquility has been restored.

Turning Eastward we see the same elements at work. St Petersburg and Musgrow and other large cities are in a state of turmoil. There have been collisions between the rioters and the troops, and many on both sides have been killed. Matters have been aggravated by the assassination of M. Sipyaghin, the Minister of the Interior. According to Reuter's correspondent at St. Petersburg the indications are that the authorities have to deal not with an isolated assassination committed by an individual acting alone, but with a regular conspiracy directed against several high official personages whom the plotters have condemned to death.

The government seems determined to continue their repressive measures. They are adding fuel to the flame by their ruthless conduct in Finland. There the people were industrious and law-abiding. But the autocratic government of the Czar seemed to think they had too much freedom, and for some time past have been depriving them of many privileges which they enjoyed, and which indeed tended to progress and good will. By a strange fatuity the Imperial government is pursuing a policy that is stirring up hatred and strife. Instead of conquering the people, the action of the government will compel them to join the revolutionary element that is honey-combing the great centres of the Russian Empire.

All over Europe the same elements are at work. At one time they break out here, and at another time there. They are steadily accumulating, and when opportunity arises, the combined elements will result in the "great earthquake," (Rev. xvi. 18) which will be followed not by the rule of the democracy, but by the theocratic government of Jesus Christ and his glorified saints. Rev. ii. 26, 27; xx. 4-6.

In an article on Russia's relations with Britain, the St. Petersburg Novosti says: "In view of the difficulties which England and Japan have placed in the way of Russian attempts to secure a base of action on the shores of the Pacific, Russia must endeavor to open up her way to the Indian Ocean by way of Afghanistan and Beluchistan, even if it should be necessary to destroy the independence of these two countries.

In addition to the financial difficulties of Turkey, which are becoming increasingly embarassing, the Sultan has to face a serious condition of things in his European provinces. Trouble is unquestionably brewing, which it may be difficult if not impossible to quell. The evil day is being staved off by the mutual jealousies and conflicting interests of the different races, although all of them are intensely tired of the Ottoman yoke. The Scotsman says: "The Macedonian question is ripe and over-ripe, for settlement. But who is so bold as to put the hand into such a hornet's nest of jealousies, antipathies, and intrigues?"

At this time of remarkable seismic disturbances it may be interesting to our readers to know what is given by a contemporary magazine in regard to the number of earthquakes prior to the first advent of Christ; according to the record there was one every twenty-nine years. From the first year of our Lord to the end of the 9th century there was one every four years. From the 9th century to the 15th there was one every year. From the 15th century to the end of the 18th there were 9 every year. From the end of the 18th century to the year 1850, 64 every year. From 1850 to 1868 the latest period for which we have data, 277 per year."

Later information from Russia goes to show that the revolutionary trouble is of a very serious nature. Owing to the censorship of the press, it is difficult to get at the facts concerning matters there,—but it is known that there have been risings of the impoverished and sorely oppressed peasants, which are being suppressed by the military,—numbers being shot down, and others flogged to death. Discontent at home is one of the influences which has ever led autocratic governments to seek to divert it by military enterprises abroad.

A new society of Jewish University students with Zionist leanings, called the "Maccabees," has been established at Breslau.

"The Wesleyans in England evidently think they cannot get along without the old doctrine of eternal torments to scare people, although it is practically abandoned by the most intelligent readers of the Bible." The Christian Commonwealth states that Professor Rest, D. D. Principal of Richmond Ministerial Training College, is to be removed from that position by the general committee, which governs the four Wesleyan colleges. It is understood that the gentleman's offence is, that he does not assert the endless torment of the lost. He does not set up any opposing doctrine; but simply says that the Bible does not definitely state what is the ultimate fate of the unsaved." This indicates that the Professor is not so thorough as he should be. Why did he not give the definite Bible statement that the wicked are to be "destroyed," to "perish," and the enemies of the Lord are to "consume away into smoke," and be as though they had not been. The Professor's understanding is evidently beclouded by the idea that man is an immortal soul. He ought to have begun at the bottom, and ascertained what man is, and then he could have treated of his destiny Scripturally—intelligently, they could only have removed him then as they have done; and he would have felt happier in suffering for a positive truth, instead of a negative.

Communicated.

Here and There.

Sometimes the brethren ask me, "What are you doing? How are you getting along in the work?" This is an evidence that they are interested in "the work" as well as in me. And I wish to say that the cause of the truth, as far as my observation goes, is moving along. I am working regularly in four places in Indiana, besides speaking between Sundays at different places as time or circumstances permit or demand. I may safely say that the past winter was the busiest season of my life for me, and I had the satisfaction of seeing at least some "fruit of labor." A goodly number of persons professed faith in "the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ," and were baptized into this faith.

During the meeting at Roll, in January, one of the brethren there, who was born and grew up near Findlay, Ohio, requested me to go with him some time to give a number of discourses in his old home neighborhood, and so bring the truth before his old acquaintances. It was arranged that we would go to that place early in March. A list of subjects to be treated was sent to the trustees of the church in the community—one of the orthodox churches, and permission was given to use the house. The first subject was "The Bible," which was well received. On the next night, when I spoke on "The purpose of God in the Creation of the Earth," and each evening after as long as the meeting lasted, the pastor was present. This did not deter me from presenting the truth. On the third and fourth evenings I spoke on "The creation of man" and "The Kingdom of God." The attendance each evening was larger than on the evening before, and the interest also seemed to have a corresponding increase. It was announced (by myself) on Wednesday evening that the meeting would close on Friday evening, but on Thursday before the meeting, the pastor saw fit to ask me a number of questions about "this Church of God" which I claimed to represent, to which I had not the least objection. After some effort he told me that my remarks were causing "considerable objection," and that they did not wish any "new theories" introduced, to which I replied that it was certainly proper and in order to present the teaching of the Bible, and that if there was any thing "new" in this, the people ought to know it. After some parleying I proposed to see the trustees of the church and to whether they wished to have the meeting closed or not, but the "reverend" gentleman did not seem to find it convenient to do this; and when I insisted he finally told me that he wished to have the meeting closed, and moreover, that the trustees "fully coincided" with him. Thereupon I said, "Very well; we will close the meeting tonight." After the discourse I announced to the congregation that the meeting was now closed, and behold, another surprise was in store for us. Various persons, including four of the five trustees, came to me and demanded to know why the meeting was not held another evening as announced; and when I related to them the conversation between the preacher and myself, they were indignant, saying that they knew nothing of the "dissatisfaction" mentioned, and that they most emphatically did not "coincide" with the preacher or his action. Had I assented, the congregation would have been called to order and meeting announced for the next evening. But my meeting was closed and I went to another place. I have since written a number of plain questions to the "reverend" gentleman who so beautifully succeeded in putting me "out of the synagogue," with a view to elicit some much desired information, but up to date the information has not reached me. Perhaps I shall go back to that place some time to speak in a place where "clerical" animosity to the truth will not be able to interfere.

I spent Easter Sunday with our brethren at Baker Union Church, near Delta, Ohio. The brethren, though not many in number, keep up their meetings. We had three meetings, and on Sunday afternoon baptized Opal, daughter of Bro. Wm. Elton. May she prove faithful and be among those who "inherit the kingdom."

At each of my last three to the church near Hillisburg we had the privilege of baptizing persons into the sin-covering Name. Bro. and Sister Wm. Moore, who live in that community, were baptized March 23rd, Sister Ellen A. Truby, of Hamilton Co., April 27th, and Sister McCreary, of Tipton Co., last Sunday, May 25th. These sisters are both members of the church in Clinton Co., having been baptized there. Living at some distance they made the trip (Sister Truby twice) to be instructed and put on Christ in baptism. Those who have the privilege of meeting with those of like precious faith once or twice a week hardly know how to appreciate their privileges and cannot estimate how much is lost to those who are isolated. Sister Truby not only rejoices in the truth, but is also anxious to have others hear it. At her request I went to Sheridan, her home, last Monday, in company with Bro. Hatch, and gave two discourses on "the things concerning the kingdom God and the name of Jesus Christ." We had the use of the Wesleyan Methodist church. We found several who were interested in the truth, and it is likely that I shall make another trip down there in connection with my visits to the church near Hillisburg.

I have many calls for preaching in other States, which with my present arrangements, I am unable to answer. Since last October I have spoken in Warren, Clinton, Hamilton, Blackford, St. Joseph and Marshall counties, Indiana, and in Miami, Hancock and Fulton counties, Ohio. The work is not grievous but pleasant. May we each do what we can to spread the gospel, and win others to obey it.

Report.

Editor Restitution:

With your permission I will be much pleased to report a very pleasant visit on May 18th of about fifteen of the brethren and sisters of the household of faith of the little village of Fonthill, Ont., about twenty miles west of here. We all enjoyed a very pleasant meeting at which Bro. Mason of Toronto was also present and spoke to us in a very forcible manner. At the close of the meeting it gave us much pleasure to accompany one more believer to the southern shore of Lake Ontario, which was not far distant. On reaching the bank there before us layed the vast plain of ruffled waters, surging and waving with balmy breeze that was then blowing. As we all stood there in that little group Bro. Mason emerged the disturbed waters, and walked to and fro until he found a suitable spot, then he in a very pleasing manner beckoned for this about obedient young brother. The scene called our memories away back to the Jordon of old. The young brother was soon planted in the likeness of the crucified Savior's death and risen to walk in that new life and went on his way rejoicing. This being the second baptism here. We had the pleasure of seeing the baptism of this young man's sister about seven months previous on this same waters. Among the brethren present were Bros. Mason of Toronto, Bro. Bouk, Platts, Reed, Railton and a number of the sisters of the fair hall of Fonthill. In conclusion I will say that the time may not be far distant before we may one and all meet in that glorious kingdom, never again to part. I cannot find words to express my admiration of the glorious results of that coming reign, when those precious promises may be attained and the world ruled in righteousness. With these few remarks I will now conclude by saying, yours in the Abrahamic faith.

The Spirits in Prison.

To us who believe in the present complete mortality of man this text (I Peter iii. 18-21) as it is punctuated in the common version must indeed be a riddle. Efforts at an exposition appear from time to time; yet all seem to cling to the punctuation as it is. None that I have seen are free from criticism. Sometimes in reading these efforts we are reminded of the sign over the door of the man who owned a turning lathe, "All sorts of turning and twisting done here."

While I may not present a solution which will commend itself to all or be satisfactory to all, yet I believe a plain and simple translation, properly punctuated is far later, and plainer than many of these lengthy expositions. I therefore venture to place before the reader the following translation and punctuation of this passage.

"Christ also once suffered on account of sin—the just on behalf of the unjust, that he might bring us to God."

"Having been put to death in the flesh, he was made alive by the Spirit, by which he went and preached unto the imprisoned spirits who once disobeyed."

"The longsuffering of God waited during the days of Noah, while the ark was being prepared, in which few, (that is eight souls) were saved from the water in the figure; so too, baptism now saves us through the resurrection of Jesus Christ."

The first thought is the sacrifice made by Jesus in our behalf. The second is his death followed by his resurrection, which was accomplished by the same Spirit, through which he was [illegible] his patient waiting during the building of the ark, which served as a type of the salvation through Christ.

Reader look at the above as translated and punctuated and there will be no place for the theories of a pre-existent preacher, nor yet for immortal spirits imprisoned to which he could preach. Neither is it necessary to deny that Jesus did the preaching.

Why He Quit Drinking.

A professional gentleman, who was accustomed to take his morning glass, stopped into a saloon, and going up to the bar called for whiskey. A seedy individual stepped up to him and said, "I say, squire, can't you ask an unfortunate fellow to join you?"

He was annoyed by the man's familiarity and roughly told him, "I am not in the habit of drinking with tramps."

The tramp replied, "You need not be so cranky and high-minded, my friend. I venture to say that I am of just as good a family as you are, have just as good an education, and before I took to drink was just as respectable as you are. What is more, I always knew how to set the gentleman. Take my word for it, you stick to John Barleycorn, and he will bring you to just the same place I am."

Struck with his words the gentleman set down his glass and turned to look at him. His eyes were bloodshot, his face bloated, his boots mismated, his clothing filthy.

"Then it was drink that made you like this?"

"Yes, it was; and it will bring you to the same if you stick to it."

Picking up his untouched glass he poured its contents upon the floor and said, "Then its time to quit," and left the saloon, never to enter it again.

Those to whom we have sent letters telling about your account, have not all made response as yet. Brother or Sister, we urge you to be sure and not neglect this matter longer. We want to pay our obligations—this is the reason why we ask you to give us what is due at once. If we could satisfy those we are under obligation to any other way we would not ask you, but as it is the only way we know of, we must hear from you to enable us to do so. We trust all will see the necessity of this and act NOW.

Poetry.

The Song of Songs.

Ah! poet vainly striving for a theme
To voice the unfettered music of the heart,
And catch within the cunning net of art
The faint elusive phantoms of thy dream,

Leave lonely fields; and yet more lonely throngs,
And in the kindly twilight stand before
The meanest cabin—from its open door,
In low, sweet strains, will float the song of songs—

As soft the mother's eyes yearn o'er her child,
And from her crooning lips, like incense rare,
She breathes the vespers of her mother-care
Above the life its music hath beguiled.

Dear brothers and sisters in Christ:

I have had the pleasure of meeting with the remnant of our little band in Salem, O. There are many vacancies; the enemy death has robed us of many jewels. I am glad to tell the scattered ones that I found the little flock true to their trust; meeting regularly for worship and partaking of the emblem, thus showing forth the Lord's death till he comes.

How fitting and becoming the true worshipper, in the appointed way to look back to that death which will bring us life. Yes, till he comes, as oft as ye do this, ye do show forth the Lord's death till he comes.

There are all kinds of "isms," and time settings; many different dates for the yearly, and the lucky-go-easy, just any time; which usually results in no time state; and the stereotyped "it must be at night, so it can be a supper."

Dear friends, it is not the "time" we celebrate, it is the "event." True the paschal supper was at night, but the Lord's supper, pointing to that death till he comes, surely is intended for the time of regular worship.

It costs no little effort to keep up these meetings, and some may think when they read of regular meetings that there must be quite a body of believers, but it is not so, as only a few remain. One aged brother and a few faithful sisters.

To encourage others I will tell how these meetings are conducted. They have a short Bible lesson, after which liberty is given and any who wish can take a part by having something cal[illegible] and [illegible] pers are read on Bible [illegible] Sunday. There is strength in each one taking an active part. I think this is the way laid down in the holy Scriptures. It was never calculated for the minister to do all this, but the Church is to teach and admonish one another, build one another up in the faith.

Our good brethren in Cleveland lend a helping hand by sending each Sunday a paper to be read in these meetings. Truly we are thankful, for it is meat in due season.

The following paper written by Bro. Goss, was much appreciated, and by request of the Church is sent for publication.

Your Sister in Christ.

THE BREAD OF LIFE.

"I am the Bread of Life. He that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst." John vi. 35.

As we meet once more around this, the Lord's table to remember his dying love and to partake of the emblems of his broken body and shed blood, it is well to let our thoughts dwell upon the manifold wisdom and love shining forth in this simple ordinance.

If we turn our thoughts to the words of Jesus just read, we find the most remarkable statements made by him that were ever spoken. Of the multitude at Capernaum be found very few who would hear with patience and learn with humility and meekness the mystery of the wonderful words—"I am the Bread of Life."

"Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness and are dead," said Jesus. This is the bread which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die. I am the living bread which came down from heaven. If any man eat of this bread, he shall live forever, and the bread that I will give him is my flesh which I will give for the life of the world.

"The Jews strove among themselves, saying: How can this man give us his flesh to eat? And many of his disciples murmured at it, and said, This is an hard saying, who can hear it?

The Scriptures say that "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him," and again, the Master said to the faithful few, "It is given to you to know the mystery of the kingdom," and to the faithful of old God has declared all his purpose, and to this agree the words of Jesus in explanation of this, to the natural mind, very hard saying.

He says in verse 63, "It is the spirit that quickeneth, (or giveth life) the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I speak unto you are spirit and are life." Impress this thought—"now are ye clean through the word. The words that he spoke were spirit, and their meaning must be spiritually discerned and comprehended.

The words being spirit, or that which quickeneth or giveth life, how truly must the words of Jesus concerning this doctrine be spiritually understood by all who would learn of him, and how surely we must see the truth of the statement in Rom. viii. 6, to be carnally minded is death, but to be spiritually minded is life and peace.

Throughout his ministry on earth, Jesus continually employed parables, types, symbols and signs. Symbols are the natural language of man, and nowhere do we find the spoken language more filled with imagery than that of the East. Man has the power to communicate all his thoughts and desires by signs and symbols.

God has therefore used the mode of communicating with man which is best adapted to his comprehension. With these thoughts in mind, let us strive to open our minds in the fullest extent to the Spirit meaning—the life-giving meaning in the symbols used by the Master in the words—I am the Bread of Life.

The symbol "bread" is almost as common as the air we breath, and likewise almost as necessary to our existence and nourishment. Surely no other one article is so needful or better adapted to man's requirements. It is long since passed into a proverb that Bread is the staff of life.

Yet while bread made from grain of some kind is acknowledged to be such an important article to the life of the natural man, we find "it is written that man shall not live by bread alone but by every word that proceedeth out of the month of God." Matthew iv. 4.

If we have given the texts quoted close attention, we cannot fail to see that they put the natural or soul life out of consideration—make it of no consequence, but place the spiritual life above all things that are to be sought after.

This brings to mind the words of Jesus—Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on. Is not the life more than meat (natural food) and the body than raiment? Mat. vi. 34.

Unquestionably He is not referring to the same "life" when he says "take no thought for your life," and where he says "is not the life more than meat or drink." One is your life—yours as long as it lasts, but not of long duration at best, and full of care and sorrow at that. The other Jesus calls "the life"—everlasting life, perfect life, the life of God, beyond human comprehension in duration in glory, in that peace which passeth understanding and fadeth not away. Is it any wonder that Jesus makes one life of no consequence and the other important?

The apostle Paul in writing to Timothy says, "Godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come." Here again we see the two lives, or two distinct kinds of life in one creature—one that now is, in actual possession, and another that is "to come."

That was not first which is spiritual, says Paul to the Corinthians, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual. So it is the spiritual life that was the all important one, and it is the natural life which Jesus says "take no thought for," while he declares the life is more than meat or natural food, on which ordinary life depends.

It was to feed this spiritual life in all who would come unto him that Jesus spake the spirit or life giving words and declared himself "the Bread of Life." To such as spiritually discern in him the true bread from heaven he becomes the bread of life—that which is to come. That life is hid with Christ in God, but "when Christ who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye appear with him in glory."

Turning our thoughts once more to the memorial service by which we do show the Lord's death until he come, the Master uses the same symbol, Bread, to represent his broken body with the cup of new, unfermented wine, representing his shed blood. When Jesus spake the words:—"Take, eat, this is my blood of the New Testament which is shed for many"—the words were only spoken for the benefit of such as could see its spiritual meaning. That it had no reference to his real flesh and blood in any other than a spiritual sense is evident, for he stood before them in his own natural form of flesh and blood when he spoke. His body had not been broken nor his blood yet shed for the remission of sins.

But emblematically they stood for his body which was nailed to the cross when he was the despised and rejected of men—when he was wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our iniquities; and can we forget that it was with his stripes that we are healed, when we partake of those divinely appointed emblems?

It is by faith in him as our sacrifice and atonement or reconciliation that we partake worthily or deservingly.

It is by faith in and remembrance of the actual and true sacrifice of his body and shedding of his blood for us that we are benefitted in partaking of these emblems.

The bringing to our minds of the scenes of Calvary and Gethsemane serves to keep our love warm and our faith stedfast.

But the divine wisdom and love did even more than bid us remember those sad closing scenes of his earthly life.

He added yet another motive for assembling around this table strong as they already were. It is found in the words: "Ye do show the Lord's death till he come."

"Till he come" limits the waiting time and marks the beginning of a new era, when the pilgrim's journey is done, when the warrior's strife has ceased, and the rest that remaineth for the people of God is begun. This is the ultimate of the Christian's hope, the center of all his desires. Shall we be satisfied, brethren and sisters, with anything less?

Shall anything less than his coming again cause us to forsake the assembling of ourselves together in his name? Let us exhort one another, and so much the more as ye see the day approaching. Let us each do all we can not only to increase our own faith, but to build each other up in our most holy faith, is my prayer to the Father who is able to make us wise unto salvation.

Announcement.

The fourteenth annual session of the Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus, in Iowa, will be held at Waterloo, Iowa, beginning Friday, Aug. 15, and continuing over Sunday Aug. 24, occupying its beautiful camp ground situated in the Cedar River Park, which is reached in a few minutes ride on the street cars, from all railroad depots in the City.

Board will be furnished all, at a very low rate, at the dining hall—not exceeding ten cents for each meal.

We expect several preaching brethren from abroad, whose names will appear later. Come and enjoy this Conference with us. Matters of importance need your attention. Come, let us reason together, and not forsake the assembling of ourselves together, and so much the more, as we see the day approaching.

We hope for a large attendance this year. Begin at once to prepare for the meeting, and make a special effort to attend the beginning, so that a reduced rate may be assured, as it will save a large amount in railroad fare to the brethren, and will increase the attendance.

Brethren let us awake—the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.

Full particulars as to reduced rates and so on will appear later.

The High Calling.

Paul says, "Forgetting the things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." Phil. ii. 13-14.

We are called to be heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ in his kingdom. Are we, like Paul, forgetting the things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before? Have we believed the gospel of the kingdom and presented ourselves a living sacrifice unto him who is our reasonable service, being baptized (immersed) unto Christ? If so, we are buried with him by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life; for if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection. If we could follow in the footsteps of Christ, we must sacrifice all worldly pleasures, desires and aims; for our wills are buried into the will of Christ that henceforth we should not live unto ourselves, but unto him who bought us with his own precious blood. By the baptismal wave we show to the world that we are dead to sin and would not live any longer therein. "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the Sons of God; therefore the world knoweth us not because it knew him not. Beloved now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him." 1 John iii. 12. True the world knoweth us not, but if we seek to please the Lord we shall be known of him. The apostle says, "Be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind." Rom. xii. 2. "For we know that the whole world lieth in wickedness." 1 John v. 19.

There are two facts right here which I wish to impress upon the mind of every person. First, that man is not immortal; for "God only hath immortality." 1 Tim. vi. 16. Second, that eternal torment is not the punishment of the wicked. Some think that at death the wicked pass into eternal fire and are there tormented forever. If this be, the case man is immortal and cannot die. But we have proven by the Bible that man is not immortal. Therefore when he dies he is dead. His thoughts perish and he knows nothing until Christ raises him from the dead. Immortality is a gift which the Lord promised to give in the morning of the resurrection to those who in this age make their calling and election sure. They will be of the divine nature, like Christ, having life within themselves so that they cannot die. Those who in the millennial age under the righteous government of Christ and his saints, will come into full harmony with those righteous laws, will live forever; but they will not be of the divine nature like Christ. They will have supplied life from him. Immortality will only be given to those who in this age prior to the establishment of Christ's kingdom, give up all worldly pursuits and overcome the world by withstanding the many temptations which Satan, the present prince of the evil world casts around them. For their character is to be tried in every way that they may be fully tested as to whether they are fit subjects to rule the nations. During the millennial age or thousand years of Christ's reign over the nations, Satan will be bound so that he shall not deceive them. Those who then sin wilfully will be destroyed.

We who are running for the prize of divine rulership with Christ, should not set our affections on the things on the earth. For we have here no continuing city but we seek one to come." Heb. xiii. 14. We should seek to "lay up treasures in heaven where moth and rust doth not corrupt, and where thieves do not break through and steal."

We should not seek to possess more of this world's goods than the necessities of life, but rather we should use our means in spreading the gospel and in helping the poor. The apostles of Christ owned very little of this world's goods, and even Christ when he was on the earth said, "The Son of Man hath not where to lay his head." He became poor for our sakes; that we through his poverty might be made rich. 2 Cor. viii. 9.

In Isaiah it is written:

Our sorrows he did bear,
And all our griefs he carried too,
O what a load of care.

"Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows. He was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquity. The chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed." Isa. xliii. 45. Therefore let us walk in his footsteps, patiently enduring all things and strive to overcome evil with good. If we walk thus through life, when our Savior takes his great power to reign he will say unto us, "Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." And we shall with him rule and bless the nations one thousand years. "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ and shall reign with him one thousand years." Rev. xx. 6. "Then cometh the end, when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father; when he shall put down all rule and all authority and power. For he must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet." 1 Cor. xv. 24, 25.

The signs of the times in which we are living, indicate that Christ's second advent is near, when he with his glorified saints will rule the world in righteousness. "Behold a King shall reign in righteousness and princes shall rule in judgment." Isa. xxxii. 1. What a glorious thought. For around us we see sorrow and suffering on every hand, and the whole creation groaning, waiting for the manifestations of the sons of God. Earth's millennial age will not be brought about by earthly kings for they are incapable of establishing a perfect government. The king who is to establish a righteous government is Christ and the princes who are to rule in judgment are those whom the Lord has been calling out from the world to become rulers with him in his kingdom.

"Let us walk worthy of the vocation wherein we are called with all meekness and long suffering, forbearing one another in love." "Let not our adorning be outwardly, but let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the adornment of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price. 1 Pet. iii. 3, 4. "Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go no more out; and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, which is New Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God, and I will write upon him my new name."

"Let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; that in the morning of our resurrection we may sing the song of the redeemed and meet with those who made their calling and election sure and fell asleep in Jesus.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep
From which none ever wakes to weep."

Let me say to the young, "Remember thy Creator in the days of thy youth before the evil days come." Eccl. xii. 1. For he hath said, "They who seek me early shall find me." "Every one that thirsteth come ye to the waters and he that hath no money, come ye, buy and eat; yea come buy wine and milk without money and without price. Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? And you labor for that which is satisfied not? Hearken diligently with me and eat ye that which is good. Seek the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near; let the wicked forsake his way and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and let him return to the Lord and he will have mercy upon him, and to our God and he will abundantly pardon. Isa. l. 2, 6, 7. "Blessed is the man that feareth the Lord, that walketh uprightly in all his ways." Our prayer is: "May thy kingdom soon come when thy will shall be done on earth as it is done in heaven."

Tears that Make Rainbows.

Blessed also are they that mourn, for he who never mourns never mends. Compunction of a godly sort, dissatisfaction with all past attainments and honest grief at falling short of Christ's high standard of holiness, all tend to growth in grace. There are too many dry-eyed Christians in this world. Gloomy, God-distrusting unbelief we have no apologies for. But there ought to be more tears of penitence over neglects of duty and woundings of Christ, more tears of sympathy with the wronged and suffering, and then we would have more gracious bursts of sunshine from Christ's countenance. Rainbows are never painted except upon raindrops. They that sow in the tears of contrition, reap in the joys of pardon and peace. Such tears water the roots of grace. Blessed are they that mourn and [illegible] the higher [illegible] starts from the dust of self-abasement; but for every round we need a fresh grasp on Jesus and a new lift by his loving hand.

Tom is Reliable.

"Are you sure that Tom put that letter into the office this morning?" asked Mr. Downe of his wife.

"Sure," answered his wife, quietly.

"Did you tell him to assure? Did you say how very important it was for it to go? Did you impress the duty upon him?" he asked, excitedly.

"I did not," answered Mrs. Downe, "because I did not know its great importance; but I am sure Tom took it in season, and put it in himself. Tom never fails."

"That is a great thing to say of any body, especially a boy of his age," said he.

"Tom is reliable!" said the lady.

"Reliability is the first and great thing in a business man; and, if Tom has got it to that extent which you give him credit for, he is worth his weight in gold," was the reply.

Mr. Downe went to his office; and in two hours he received a telegram in answer to his letter.

"Tom is reliable!" cried he.

Tom is a hired boy at Mr. Downe's; but his reliability has made him friends willing to do anything to help him on in the world. His reliability will be to him a fortune, a fortune that can not take wings. How many boys who read this are thus rich?

Took Her Religion Along.

A beautiful instance of Christian integrity is given in the Messenger of a distinguished Christian lady who was spending a few weeks at a hotel at Long Branch. An attempt was made to induce her to attend a dance, in order that the affair might have the prestige bestowed by her presence, as she stood high in society. She declined all the importunities of her friends. Finally, an honorable senator tried to persuade her to attend, saying "Miss R——, this is quite a harmless affair, and we want the exceptional honor of your presence." "Senator," said the lady, "I cannot do it; I am a Christian. I never do anything in my summer vacation, or wherever I go that will injure the influence I have over the girls of my class." The senator bowed and said: "I honor you; if there were more Christians like you, more men like myself would become Christians."

Obituary.

Fell asleep in Jesus, my beloved brother, Philip Hess, at Jamesport, Mo., May 1, 1902, aged 64 years.

Philip and I together put on Christ by obedience in the winter of 1861, and he has lived a consistent Christian life, hoping to come forth at the first resurrection, according to the Scripture—"He that believeth in me though he were dead, yet shall he live." He died in full assurance that there is laid up for him a "crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give to me at that day, and not to me only, but to all them also that love his appearing." The dead in Christ shall be raised, and he so often repeated "O death where is thy sting, O grave where now thy victory." "And behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give to every man according as his works shall be." "Surely I come quickly, even so, come Lord Jesus," is my prayer.

My sympathies go out for the dear ones surviving him. Oh, the heartaches of the widow and children and grandchildren. May their Christian faith be strengthened and beautified with years of service to the Lord.

MARY M. RENNER.

It will be noticed that the Antioch meeting programme is given in this issue of our paper. For good reasons the time is shortened this year, but as there need be but little of the time taken with business, as that is mostly done at the Annual Conference, as much as possible is put into the two days. With the talented speakers who have each promised to attend, and the subjects that each have selected, we feel assured that it will be worth while making an effort to be at the meeting. Let each one be sure to be on hand for the very first meeting, and stay till the last. Whoever delays and misses the opening services and sermon will suffer loss; and the person who goes home before the closing address Sunday night will miss a rare treat. Get ready now, and attend each session.

Our time is precious. We have but few, very few days of probation in which to make ready for the future immortal life. We have no time to spend in haphazard movements. We should fear to skim the surface of the Word of God.

The Church of [illegible] meet in Conference [D. V.] at Antioch, three miles north of Argos, and five miles south of Plymouth, Marshall County, Indiana.

The meetings will begin on Saturday, June 7, at 10:00 A. M., and continue over the following Sunday. For the last thirty-eight years the Church has not failed to meet there and hold meetings over the second Sunday in June. The fond memories of many will go back to those good meetings, and the dear ones that we have met there, who are now quietly sleeping in Jesus, awaiting the resurrection morn.

Let every one that can possibly do so, lay aside worldly cares for awhile and gather there to work for the blessed Master. Let us not go there simply to have our own spiritual strength renewed, but also to assist in the work of saving others.

Each congregation is requested to select one or more delegates and send to this meeting. Let us make this meeting the best one ever held in the history of the church.

A general meeting of brethren from several States will be held at Shaw, Kansas, beginning Saturday June 7, and holding over until Sunday night, June 15th next. The object of this meeting is that all brethren everywhere, who may desire, may have an opportunity of looking over the grounds, examining the plans and purchase homes for the proposed colony that is to be established at Rollin near Shaw. Bros. Eychaner, Crowe, Prime, Oliver, Foore and other speakers will be in attendance. This meeting promises to be largely attended, as many have written us that they will be there. Shaw is on the Atchinson, Topeka and Santa Fe line running east and west. Persons from Kansas City will take the A. T. S. F. road to Chanute 125 miles southwest of Kansas City and from Chanute 10 miles east to Shaw, direct connection. This will prove to be an interesting meeting. Tents will be on the ground to accomodate all.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

Poetry.

If We Would.

If we would but check the speaker,
When he spoils his neighbor's fame;
If we would but help the erring,
Ere we utter words of blame;
If we would, how many might we Turn from paths of sin and shame?

Ah, the wrongs that might be righted,
If we would but see the way!
Ah, the pains that might be lightened,
Every hour and every day,
If we would but hear the pleadings
Of the hearts that go astray.

If we step outside the stronghold
Of our selfishness and pride
Let us lift our fainting brothers,
Let us strengthen, ere we chide;
Let us, ere we blame the fallen,
Hold a light to cheer and guide.

Ah, how blessed—ah, how blessed
Earth would be if we'd but try
Thus to aid and right the weaker,
Thus to check each brother's sigh;
Thus to talk of duty's pathway
To the better life so nigh.

In each life, however lowly,
There are seeds of mighty good:
Still we shrink from souls appealing,
With a timid "If we could."
But the God who judgeth all things,
Knows the truth is "If we would."

The Mark and Number of the Beast.

REV. XIII. 17.

"And that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the number of his name." When the image is formed by incorporating into the law of the State, the faith already held by the orthodox churches of our country, then the mark and the number of the beast will be prominent features of the image. And why should we now inquire into the question of what is the mark, and what is the number of his name? The answer is, because in the near future the servants of the Deity will be commanded by the State to worship the image that they have formed on pain of being debarred from buying or selling; and that they should be killed. But on the other hand the wrath of God is threatened against those that "worship the beast and his image, and receive his mark in his forehead, or in his hand." xiv. 9. It is a reasonable deduction from this verse just quoted that the individual has the election in his own power to obey God and secure eternal life; or to comply with the requirements of the State, and thereby become party to receive the unmixed wrath of God;—hence the necessity of perfect knowledge of what it is to receive the mark and the number of the beast. Now in the light of the holy writings, what is the mark of the beast? We have already seen that the one receiving the mark, or rejecting it does it by his own election, that he has power to receive or to reject. Therefore he individually is responsible and amendable to judgment. It is also reasonable to conclude that the mark of the anti-christian power; the power that persecutes the saints, the little horn of Dan. vii., the leopard beast of Rev. xiii. 1, Paul's man of sin, the son of perdition, the mystery of iniquity whose coming is after (or according to R. V.) the working of Satan, 2 Thes. ii. 1-9. It is reasonable to conclude that the mark of this power is some heinous sin; and in direct opposition to the revealed truth and law of God.

John, the beloved, gives us the key to unlock this mystery of iniquity, where he writes, "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits..... every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God; and every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God; and this is that spirit of antichrist, whereof ye have heard that it should come; and even now already is it in the world." 1 Jno. iv. 1-3. The fact that the spirit of antichrist was already in the world, cuts the ground entirely from under the feet of those who teach that antichrist is yet from our day to be a future manifestation. The same truth is taught by Paul where he says, "The mystery of iniquity doth already work; only he who now letteth will let (or hinder) until he be taken out of the way; and then shall that wicked one be revealed, etc. John gives us a touch stone whereby we can discern the genuine in doctrine from the spurious. Further more in his communication to the church in Ephesus he approves their actions when he says, "Thou hast tried them that say they are apostles, and are not, and hast found them liars." Rev. ii. 2. Now antichrist as Luther said, "is known the world over" and all we have to do is to compare the doctrine taught by Rome, with the teaching of the apostles and prophets, and we shall thereby for a surety discover the genuine from the spurious;—in fact all we have to do is to ascertain what Rome teaches us to how Christ came, in the flesh or in the spirit. We all know that Rome teaches that Christ was a pre-existing Spirit—the second person of the trinity; therefore according to the rule given by John the doctrine of the trinity denies that Christ came in the flesh, and therefore it is the spirit of antichrist.

Now, do we find any account of such a doctrine being taught in John's day, which caused him to warn the Christians of his day, and to give them a test whereby they could avoid the evil doctrine? Yes, Mosheim and Gibbon give us the history of Cerinthus who taught just the doctrine concerning Christ that John warned the beloved against. "Cerinthus by birth a Jew, he combined the doctrine of Christ with the errors of the Jews and gnostics.....God sent upon earth one of the ever happy aeons, whose name was Christ, that this Christ chose for his habitation the person of Jesus, a man of the most illustrious sanctity and justice, the son of Joseph and Mary, and descending in the form of a dove, entered into him while he was receiving baptism from John in the waters of Jordan; that Jesus after his union with Christ.....was crucified by the Hebrews: and that when Jesus became a prisoner, Christ ascended into heaven, so that the man Jesus alone was subjected to the pains of an ignominious death." Mosheim ch. v. sec. 16, p. 82.

Gibbon's account of Cerinthus is very similar to that of Mosheim, he says, "Such were the fleeting shadows of the Docetus. A more substantial, though less simple, hypothesis was contrived by Cerinthus of Asia, who dared to oppose the last of the apostles." Gibbon Vol. 4, p. 494. This doctrine taught by Cerinthus has in it the germ of the doctrine of the trinity, in both of which pre-existence of Christ is taught. Any person that will read the history of the church during the early centuries will know that the doctrine that caused the most and the bitterest contention, was the doctrine of the trinity, which was opposed by the Arians, but constantly taught by the Catholic or orthodox party. When we come to the time of the Emperor Justinian who labored to exalt the bishop of Rome; three of the Arian princes were destroyed because they opposed the doctrine of the trinity taught by the orthodox party. Thus before the little horn, "Three of the first horns were plucked up by the roots." Dan. vii. 8.

In the year 1553 Michael Servetus was committed to the flames as a heretic at Geneva, because he wrote and spoke against the trinity, and that by Calvin and other Protestant reformers. The Unitarians in Poland in 1565 "were persecuted by the united efforts of Catholics, Lutherans and Calvinists to crush their infant sect." Mosheim p. 505. We can safely, and without fear of successful contradiction, make the statement that the doctrine of the trinity, in preference to any other dogma, is entitled to be called the "mark of the beast."

The orthodox edicts of the Emperor Theodocius A. D. 380 show that the doctrine of the trinity at that time was the mark of the apostasy. "It is our pleasure that all the nations, which are governed by our clemency and moderation, should steadfastly adhere to the religion which was taught by St. Peter to the Romans, which faithful tradition has been preserved; and which is now professed by the pontiff Damasus, and by Peter, bishop of Alexandria, a man of apostolic holiness.

According to the discipline of the apostles, and the doctrine of the gospel, let us believe the sole deity of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost under an equal majesty and a pious trinity. We authorize the followers of this doctrine to assume the title of Catholic Christians; and as we judge that all others are extravagant madmen, we brand them with the infamous name of heretics; and declare that their conventicles shall no longer usurp the respectable appellation of churches.....they must expect to suffer the severe penalties, which our authority, guided by heavenly wisdom, shall think proper to inflict upon them." Gibbon Vol. 3, p. 80-81.

"In the space of fifteen years he promulgated at least fifteen severe edicts against the heretics; more especially against those who rejected the doctrine of the trinity." p. 92.

Soon after those edicts by Theodocius many suffered death for their faith; and let it be remembered, that this is long before the time of the rise of the little horn of Dan. vii., or of the Papacy as a civil power. "The theory of persecution was established by Theodocius, whose justice and piety have been applauded by the saints; but the practice of it, in the fullest extent, was reserved for his rival and colleague, Maximus, the first among the Christian princes to shed the blood of his Christian subjects on account of their religious opinions. The cause of the Priscillianists, a recent sect of heretics, who disturbed the provinces of Spain, was transferred by appeal from the synod of Bordeaux to the imperial consistory of Treves; and by the sentence of the Praetorian praefect, seven persons were tortured, condemned and executed. The first of these was Priscillian himself, bishop of Avilla in Spain; who adorned the advantages of birth and fortune, by the accomplishments of eloquence and learning. Two presbyters, and two deacons, accompanied their beloved master in his death, which they esteemed as a glorious martyrdom. Gibbon Vol. 3, p. 93 94.

How prominently the doctrine of the trinity, by the orthodox edicts of Theodocius, comes to the front in causing the death of the first martyrs, at the hands of the socalled Christian princes. This same doctrine, first and last, holds the first rank in the councils of the apostasy; and in order for a latter day power to make an image of the former, this same doctrine must hold first rank as the mark of the first and latter apostasy.

Seventh day Sabbatarians think they have a strong position in favor of Sunday being the mark of the apostasy, because its observance is in violation of the fourth commandment of the decalogue. But they seem to forget that the Master gives first rank to the Word, which says, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." Gen. xx. 3. Jesus when asked by one of the scribes, "Which is the first commandment of all?" And Jesus answered him, "The first of all the commandments is, Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is one Lord.....And the scribe said unto him, Well, Master, thou hast said the truth; for there is one God; and there is none other but HE." Mark xii. 29-32.

In the nature of things, there can be but one Supreme Being—one Almighty. The apostasy by worshiping the triune God, lost sight of the first principle of divinity—the unity of the Deity; and also they have a multitude of intercessors. Thus denying what Paul says, that "There is one God, and one mediator between God and man, the man Christ Jesus." If we examine the foundation of the fourth or Sabbath commandment we find that it rests on the positive command of God to Israel; and they being under obligations to him as their Creator and deliverer from bondage, were in right and duty bound to obey; but had he said, Thou shalt hallow any other day instead of the seventh day, they would have been under the same obligation to obey. But let us see how about the other command, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." The violation of this commandment as they did under Aaron, when Moses remained in the Mount. They made a calf and worshiped it, saying, "These be thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt." Ex. xxxii. 4. It will be readily seen that was a lie, and in the very nature of things immoral, and not resting as a positive command on the Word of God, which he may change at will. "Thou shalt not kill. Thou shalt not commit adultery. Thou shalt not steal. Thou shalt not bear false witness.....Thou shalt not covet .....anything that is thy neighbor's." These commandments are founded on moral principles that cannot be changed by the change of dispensations. The difference in the nature of the commandments is readily seen when we consider what the Master said, "And he said unto them, The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath; therefore the Son of Man is Lord of the Sabbath." Mark ii. 27-28. Now what would you think if our Lord had said, that he was Lord of the command, "Thou shalt not bear false witness." No, no, he never taught such doctrine, "Righteousness was the girdle of his loins." But it remained for the head of the apostasy to teach that he "could of wrong make right." It speaks volumes to me, that God brought the followers of Mahomet as a scourge against the Christians, who had departed from the truth of the oneness of the Deity, and were worshiping the triune or a strange God. Then came the [illegible] the prophet crying out, "There is one God, and Mahomet is his prophet."

THE NUMBER OF HIS NAME.

In ancient times when letters were used as numerals, those found in a man's name were said to be the man's number. And in speaking of the number of the beast, in the last clause of verse 17 we read, "The number of his name." So that the enigma 666 is to be found in the name of the beast; and we find by verse 18 that it is the number of a man," that numbering being the number of his name. Inasmuch as it is said to be the number of the beast, and that is the number of a man—the man must be the representative of that kingdom or power symbolized by the beast. The name that answers to the requirements of the prophecy, and to which no objection can fairly be urged is, the title which the Pope applies to himself, and wears in jeweled letters upon his miter or pontifical crown. That title is "Vicarious Filii Dei," "Vicegerent of the Son of God." Taking the letters contained in this official title, which is claimed by all the popes alike; making it not only the official title of each of the pontiffs, but of them all, and thereby constituting it the name or title of the beast, as representing them all, and as Latin is the language of that power, we should find the number from the letters used as numerals by the Latin. Thus we have v. 5, i. 1, c. 100, (u and v not used) i, 1, M formerly the same as v. 5, (s and f not used) i. 1, l. 50, i. 1, l. 1, D. 500, i. 1. Added together 666. This title is a blasphemous one, inasmuch as it invades the province of God. Some fail in making the prophecy apply to the Papacy, because they think the Papacy has not spoken reproachfully, nor irreverently of God; but the Papacy has blasphemed God by arrogating to itself the prerogatives of the Deity. In assuming control over the consciences of men; it assuming to itself infallibility; and to forgive sins before they were committed; thus giving indulgence to commit sin. Now, ask yourself the question, How many ministers have you heard claim to be ambassadors of God, who were ignorant of the first principles of the oracles of God? Do they not commit blasphemy by arrogating to themselves the prerogatives of God? which is blasphemy according to Webster.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JUNE 11, 1902. NUMBER 22.

Genesis. Chap. 47.

1. And Joseph went and told Pharaoh saying, My father and my brethren and their flocks and cattle and all their chattels have come from out a land of Chanaan, and lo, they are in a land of Gesem.

2. And from his brethren he took with him five lending men and stood them in the presence of Pharaoh.

3. And Pharaoh said unto Joseph's brethren, What is your employment? And they said unto Pharaoh, Shepherds of sheep are thy house-servants both we and our fathers.

4. And they said unto Pharaoh, we have come to sojourn in the land; for there is no pasturage for the flocks of thy house-servants; for the famine became strong in the land of Chanaan; now then we would take up our abode in a land of Gesem.

5. And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, Let them take up their abode in a land of Gesem; and if thou knowest well that there are men of ability among them, establish them as rulers over my flocks: and Jakoob and his sons came into Aiguptos; and Pharaoo, king of Aiguptos, heard and Pharaoo spake unto Jooseeph, saying, Thy father and thy brethren have come unto thee.

6. Lo, the land of Aiguptos is before thee. In the best of the land cause thy father and thy brethren to dwell.

7. And Jooseeph led Jakoob his father and stood him in the presence of Pharaoo and Jakoob blessed (invoked a blessing on) Pharaoo.

8. And Pharaoo said unto Yeoob, How many are the years of thy life?

9. And Jakoob said unto Pharaoo, The days of the years of my life in which I am sojourning are one hundred and thirty years; few and wicked have been the days of the years of my life been, they have not reached unto the days of the years of the life of my fathers during which they sojourned.

10. And Jakoob blessed Pharaoo and withdrew from him.

11. And Jooseeph caused his father and his brethren to take up their abode and gave them an acquisition in a land of Aiguptos in the best land, in a land of Hramessees even as Pharaoo had directed.

12. And Jooseeph measured out food for his father and his brethren and all the house of his father, food for each body.

13. And there was no food in all the land; for the famine had become very strong; and the land of Aiguptos and the land of Chanaan failed by reason of the famine.

14. And Jooseeph gathered all the silver (money) that was found in the land of Aiguptos and in the land of Chanaan for the food which they were marketing, and which he was measuring out to them. And Jooseeph brought all the silver into the house of Pharaoo.

15. And all the money from the land of Aiguptos and from the land of Chanaan failed; and all the Aiguptioi came unto Jooseeph, saying, Give us bread, and why are we dying in thy sight? For our money hath failed.

16. And Jooseeph said unto them, Bring your domestic animals and I will give you bread for your domestic animals if your money hath failed.

17. And they led their domestic animals unto Jooseeph, and Jooseeph gave them bread for their horses and for their sheep and for their cattle and for their asses; and he supported them with bread in return for all their domestic animals that year.

18. And that year passed by, and they came unto him the following year and said unto him, Are we going to be worn out by our lord? For if our money and chattels and domestic animals be with thee the lord, and there be nothing left to us in the sight of our lord except our bodies and our land.

19. That we may not die in thy sight and the land be left desolate, do thou acquire us and our land in return for food, and we and our land will be house-servants for Pharaoo; give us seed, that we may sow and live and not die and the land will not have gone to waste.

20. And Jooseeph acquired all the land of the Aiguptioi for Pharaoo. For the Aiguptioi sold all their land to Pharaoo: for the famine got controlling hold of them, and the land became Pharaoos.

21. And he reduced the laity to bond-service as house-servants of his from one end of the boundaries of Aiguptos to the other.

22. Except the land of the priests alone: this Jooseeph did not acquire; for in giving he gave it as a gift to the priests of Pharaoo; and they ate that which Pharaoo gave to them as a gift; for which reason they did not sell their land.

23. And Jooseeph said unto all the Aiguptioi, Lo, I have acquired you and your land today for Pharaoo; take for yourselves seed and sow the land.

24. And there will be products therefrom, and ye shall give the fifth portion unto Pharaoo; and the four portions shall be for yourselves for seed for the land and for food for you and all those in your households.

25. And they said, Thou hast saved us; we have found favor in the presence of our lord, and we will be Pharaoo's house-servants.

26. And Jooseeph made it a statute unto this day for the land of Aiguptos, to pay a fifth to Pharaoo, excepting only the land of the priests. It was not Pharaoo's.

27. And Israel took up his abode in a land of Aiguptos, namely in a land of Gesem; and they inherited thereon, and grew and multiplied exceedingly.

28. And Jakoob lived on in a land of Aiguptos seventeen years; and the days of the years of Jakoob's life became one hundred and forty-seven.

29. And the days for Israel to die drew nigh? And he called his son Jooseeph and said unto him, If I have found favor in thy sight, put thy hand under my thigh, and do for me an act of mercy and truth in not burying me in Aiguptos.

30. But I would lie down to sleep in the midst of my fathers, and do thou take me up out of Aiguptos and bury me in their burying-place; and he said, I will do according to thy spoken word (it proved an oracular word).

31. And he said swear me, and he swore him; and Israel bowed in homage upon the top of his sceptre (not a walking staff).

COMMENT.

Last clause of the 31st verse R. V. reads "and Israel bowed himself upon the bed's head" should read "bowed in homage on the top of his sceptre." This passage is quoted in the 11th chapter of Hebrews and "sceptre is translated in the C. V. "staff."

The variations from the 5th to the 10th verse are unnatural; but it is evident that the translators have not followed the best text. Also in the 29th and 31st verses the same is true.

It is interesting to note how many passages in the simple narrative of the history of Joseph are quoted in the new as oracular deliveries, and their Messianic import pointed out and explained. The reader will do well to trace them out as a help to faith.

To believe in Christ is to be like him. All other faith is a mere mist of words dissolving into empty air. To live our human lives as he lived his—righteous, pure, loving—is to share his eternity. —Lucy Larcom.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

DEBT and grace cannot live together.

THE Martha's miss many opportunities of sitting at the feet of Jesus.

READER, are you one of the jealous lovers of truth who would like to keep it to yourself?

HORACE in his "Art of Poetry," says that a whetstone, though itself incapable of cutting, is yet useful in sharpening steel."

OUT of suffering comes serious thought, out of the salvation from it comes the grateful heart; out of the endurance, fortitude; out of the deliverance increase of faith.

IT was a singular oversight to have omitted the address of Bro. J. O. Woodruff in calling attention to his book last week. The address in full is, "J. O. Woodruff, 1158 Mary Street, Elizabeth, New Jersey.

SOME one has said, "In travelling through a country partially settled and explored, it is wise to make use of charts, and of high-roads with direction posts as far as these will serve our purpose; and to reserve the guidance of the compass or the stars for where we have no other helps.

CHRIST is coming! Do you believe it?
Christ is coming! Do you expect him?
Christ is coming! Are you awaiting him?
Christ is coming! Will he receive you?

THE spirit in Paul says: "Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith, —prove your own selves." 2 Cor. xiii. 5. The Spirit in Jesus tells us how to examine ourselves: "If a man love me he will keep my words; and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him. He that loveth me not keepeth not my sayings." John xiv. 21, 23. It is as clear as crystal.

Will Jesus Come Again?

Yes; he certainly will. But says one, "How can you speak so confidently?" Because he said he would, John xiv. 3, 18, 28. "If I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again,.....I will not leave you comfortless [orphans] I will come to you.....ye have heard how I said unto you, I go away, and come again unto you." "And while they looked steadfast toward heaven, as he went up, behold two men stood by them in white apparel, which said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus .....shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Acts i. 10. "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and the trump of God." 1 Thes. iv. 16. "And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you, whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution." Acts iii. 20, 21.

"Unto them that look for him, shall he appear the second time." Heb. ix 28.

"Yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry." Heb. x. 37.

"Looking for that blessed hope." Titus ii. 13.

"Behold he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him, and they also that pierced him; and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him." Rev. i. 7. "Behold I come quickly" (Jesus). "Amen, even so, come Lord Jesus." Rev. xxii. 7, 12-20. These are but a few out of some 500 passages of Scripture, relative to the coming of Christ. This voice rings through the Bible, especially in the New Testament, which contains 7950 verses. The appearing of our Lord is made mention of in no fewer than 318, once in every twenty-five verses. And once, at least, on every page this despised doctrine is thrust before the righteous and the wicked to warn the one class and comfort the other.

We are glad to know there are a few to whom the doctrine of the coming and kingdom of the Lord is a living power; whose hearts are kindled with the blessed promise of his coming; and who are contending for this portion of the faith once delivered to the saints; but the mass of christendom scoffed, has no sympathy with them, but though laughed at by men they are honored of God."

The Gift of God.

Paul has written that "the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Rom. vi. 23. The whole human family have forfeited the life which they now possess by continual disobedience to the laws of God, and in consequence of their sin, which is the transgression of the law," 1 John iii. 4, are doomed to their original condition—dust of the ground. To whomsoever we yield ourselves servants to obey, his servants we are; and servants always expect, and should receive wages. Sin, the great master of the human race, has brought all into subjection to itself, and Paul says, "the wages of sin is DEATH!" Sooner or later it must come, and we must receive the wages to which as servants of sin we are entitled. The history of this fatal service is summed up by Paul in Rom. v. 12, where he says: "By one man sin entered into the world and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." Generation after generation has passed into the grave, and the present generation will in a few years be gathered to sleep the last long sleep with their ancestors. But God has a purpose with the earth, which requires that it be inhabited by a race who are freed from the effects of sin, and on whom death has no power. "As truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord." Num. xiv. 21; and the prophet Habakkuk, chap. ii. 14, declares "that the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." The creatures who are to be the means of flooding the earth with God's glory are the sons of Adam, who, although sentenced to death on account of their sin, have a glorious offer of redemption from the grave. Seeing that they are utterly hopeless and undone, and could not purchase release from death God himself provided the sacrifice that was needed to enable us to obtain remission of our sins. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Jno. iii. 16. We lost life in Adam,—and God offers us life as a gift—everlasting life. We cannot purchase it nor merit it by our works! It is God's gift, and as a gift we must accept it. Faith in what Christ has done for us, and obedience to his command to be baptized in water, and henceforth live a life of godliness, is what is required of us in order to partake of his gift.

What Jesus Says.

This is what Jesus says, and we trust the reader will make note of it; and ponder it well in the light of the practice of many religionists called revivalists:—"When the unclean spirit has gone out of a man, it walketh through dry places, seeking rest, and finding none. Then it saith, I will return unto my house, from whence I came out; and when it has come it findeth it empty, swept and garnished. Then it goeth and findeth seven other spirits more wicked than itself, and they enter in and dwell there, and the last state of that man is worse than the first." Matt. xii. 43. The Jews were going from bad to worse,—and we understand that Jesus here makes use of an illustration founded on the common belief in demoniac possessions. There can be little doubt that he employed opinions and even superstitions familiar to the people which he did not believe, to illustrate his doctrines. There is nothing strange about this. We often speak of the rising and setting sun, though we know it is philosophically incorrect. The whole imagery of this parable is Jewish, and we must not look for a moral correspondence in all particulars,—but the general import. We understand the "seeking rest" to describe the uneasy state of one who has to some extent reformed, but who could find nothing that satisfied him, —nothing but what left an aching void, and so gave up the search; though it is the spirit, and not the man that is represented as perturbed. But it is very noticeable that while for the time the man had been rid of the unclean spirit,—no good spirit had entered him,—no radical change of mind had taken place, no transfer of the affection had taken place, no sound principles had been adopted; something had caused a house-cleaning that left it empty and ready for other tenants; and so the former unclean inhabitant returned with seven fouler companions and occupied the old quarters without any impediment. And so it is that a vacant, undecided or unsatisfied mind is always an exposed one. "It was the belief of the times that spirits which had been exercised might return re-inforced to their old haunts. But what follows proves that Jesus did not countenance this belief—"The last state of that man is worse than the first." An attempt at reformation by means of human agencies, to the neglect of the saving power of God fails, and leaves people in some respects worse than ever. We do not mean as men of the world of business, or as citizens,—but that a religious fraud has been perpetrated upon them that leaves them really as hopeless, as godless, as Christless as before, and in addition to this their ears are closed tighter than ever to the Word of the living God, and are oblivious of the fact, or insensible to it, that Jesus says in Matt. xv. 9, "But in vain they do worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men:" and again at verse thirteen, "Every plant which my heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up." The Jewish people had been cleansed of idolatry by their captivity in Babylon, as some understand it; but we think it refers to the religious awakening under John, but which soon relapsed into a worse condition than before. And now they were about to be guilty of greater wickedness than their fathers. The words "even so shall it be also unto this wicked generation," seem to us to be Jesus' own interpretation of the parable. Essential to salvation is the gospel of the grace of God received into good and honest hearts. "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness."

Conference Notes.

Brother Calvin Beagles of Oswego, Ind., used to attend meetings at old Antioch many years ago. He is now over ninety years of age, but was so anxious to again meet old friends as well as new ones, that he ventured to come once more. While it gave him enjoyment it was no less a pleasure to talk with our old brother, and listen to his exhortations to faithfulness. All were glad to see him.

Brother and Sister George Bennett and Sister Crickmore of Noblesville, attended the meetings, and we were truly glad to have them come and to form acquaintance with them. We trust it will not be their last visit.

Brother J. S. Hatch of Scircleville, who has not been with us for a number of years, being 79 years old and somewhat feeble, was another of the old veterans that made many hearts glad to see and hear him once more. His mind is clear and active, and he is as firm or firmer than ever in his determination to press on to victory with Jesus our King. His daughter, Mrs. Azorah Scroggs, was with him. Not since she was a little girl and used to accompany her father when he was out preaching, had she seen many of the friends who were there, and their faces as well as hers, have seen time's changes. To mention names brought old recollections to mind, and greetings were hearty.

Brother J. E. Hatch, Editor of the Kempton, Ind. Chronicle, a son of J. J. Hatch, also attended this Conference, and we hope to have the pleasure of seeing him at future meetings.

Letters were sent to the Conference by Bros. Richard Corbaley of Waterville, Wash. A. J. Eychaner of Glad Brook, Ia. Sisters S. R. Wince, Pierceton, and Flora Harris, of Rensselaer, which will appear in these columns in due time. While all were glad to hear the words written by each it was with extreme pleasure that we listened to that sent by Bro. Corbaley because of old associations. It is now 39 years since Antioch meeting house was built on the ground given by Bro. Corbaley from the farm he then owned. Forced on account of health to leave the old home and go to the Pacific coast, and being now 82 years of age, all present realized that not many, if any, times shall those who assemble here be permitted to listen to words written by our aged brother. He is nearly blind, and were it not for his thorough knowledge of the Scriptures and his wonderful memory, he could not now preach as he does.

In this connection it may be noted that Brother John Corbaley of Indianapolis, a son of Richard, while at the meeting was busy showing a picture lately received, of a family group, the aged father and mother, surrounded by the others.

An accident to Bro. Isreal Roberts, that while bad enough, could have been worse, happened on Saturday night. It was very dark, and by some means the harness of his horse became entangled, he turned the wrong way, and was thrown from the buggy falling on his head and shoulders, and was badly bruised and shaken up. Brother Roberts is getting on in years, is a pretty heavy man, and is somewhat troubled with rheumatism, and the wonder is he was not killed by the fall. We fear he will feel the effects of this injury for some time.

It was with great pleasure that many old friends greeted Brother and Sister Willey who have so lately returned from Australia. Their joy at being able once more to attend this meeting was only matched by the gladness of others who were there to greet them.

We might go on with many notes of happy meetings and incidents that occurred, but to mention all would be impossible. It is due to say that this last meeting at Old Antioch was as largely attended as ever, the order was exceptionally good, and the universal testimony is that we never had a better meeting, where such universal good fellowship and harmony prevailed. Truly it was good to be there.

Married.

On Thursday evening, June 5, 1902, Bro. George Neill, son of our Bro. and Sister P. Neill, and Sister Sarah Nichols, were united in marriage at the residence of the bride's mother, Sister Nichols, Wabash Avenue. The event had been anticipated with pleasure by our young people for some time. Nearly all of them were present and lent interest to the occasion. These, together with the relatives of both families, and several of the older members of the household of faith, taxed the capacity of the house.

As both of the contracting parties have been raised in the truth, and for several years have borne the sin-covering name, we cannot see how they could have launched their barque on the ocean of life under more favorable auspices. And that they may faithfully witness for God and truth till the end of life's journey and meet the approving smile of the Lord when he makes up his jewels, is the desire of all in association with them.

Conference Report.

Conference assembled at Antioch, Ind., June 7, 1902, as per time announced, Bro. D. T. Halstead presiding. Services opened by a song and reading of a portion of Scripture by Bro. Halstead and prayer by Bro. J. S. Hatch. A short address appropriate to the occasion, and full of good will and brotherly love, was made by the President. After which a little business was attended to, viz., the Conference Secretary, Sister Railsback, not being able to be present, on motion E. E. Barnhill was elected Secretary pro. tem. The minutes of last Conference, as published in THE RESTITUTION were adopted. There being no further business, Bro. Halstead addressed the fair sized assemblage, principally of brothers and sisters from various localities, on the subject as per programme, "Worshiping God," and it is proper to say, that the subject was most ably, entertainingly and instructively handled, after which we adjourned for dinner.

At 1:30 p. m. met in business session, services opened by song and prayer by Bro. Wince. The roll of churches being called, the following were represented: Argos, Antioch, Bracken, Burr Oak, Inwood, Plymouth, Rensselaer, South Bend, Scircleville and Olio.

The evangelist committee made report of the work they had done, which was not large. The committee on Ways and Means had no report to make, or plans to suggest. The President, Bro. Halstead, made some statements respecting his work as solicitor of evangelist funds, and changes in that line, and that by resignments, there is now no one whose business it is to solicit evangelist funds. Verbal report shows there is about $300.00 in the treasury, though the Treasurer was not present to report definitely. Some remarks were made by different ones respecting the system of raising funds and the manner of learning where work can best be done, but no action was taken and the matter was passed over to next Conference. Bro. Halstead handed in his written resignation as President of the Conference. Some remarks were made urging Bro. Halstead to continue in office until the Annual Conference, but considering his wishes it was moved to accept his resignation, which motion was lost, the unanimous vote being to have him remain, which however he declined to do, whereupon it was moved that the 1st Vice President act until next Conference, which motion was carried. Bro. Underwood then reluctantly took the chair. Bro. Geo. Smith reported concerning a tent which could be bought cheap, but no action was taken, and on motion the business meeting adjourned for preaching by Bro. Wince as per programme. "The apostolic church," which was very instructively and ably handled.

Assembled as was announced for evening social meeting, led by G. W. Smith, which was interesting, but short owing to the lateness of the hour. At 8 p. m. Bro. Wagoner took the pulpit and most grandly portrayed the subject, "The hope of the Church of God. What is it?"

SUNDAY JUNE 8.

Assembled for social service as per programme promptly on time, Bro. R. C. Railsback conducting the service, which was truly a feast of good things spiritually. 10:30 a. m. Bro. Zilmer took the stand, and spoke most eloquently and instructively on the subject of "the call to God's Kingdom and Glory" commanding diligent attention of the very large audience. One sister made the good confession and was immersed into the all-saving name.

After the noon hour, the audience again assembled and listened to an interesting discourse by Bro. J. S. Hatch on "Our High Priest." After which the communion service was observed, conducted by Bro. Wince and participated in by about 125 of those of like precious faith.

Evening service, social meeting led by Bro. Willey, many testifying of their love for God and his Son, our Savior and their hope in the soon coming of Jesus the Life giver. 7:30 Bro. F. L. Austin addressed the large audience on the subject, "Thy will be done," and to say the subject was well handled, would be expressing it but feebly, the audience was grandly entertained.

$24.00 was raised by collection, which with $5.00 from the evangelist fund was divided among the preaching brethren, except $1.00 for expense of water. The weather, although a little showery on Saturday, was fine on Sunday, and the assemblage was fully equal to the old crowds at Antioch.

Dutton, May 29 to June 1, 1902. Thursday evening, and the Church of God in Michigan is again convened for the purpose of holding another Annual Conference. A goodly number of the good Father's family are gathered together. The hearty hand shaking and the earnest questions about the truths of the gospel, shows where the heart is, and already gives an impetus of inspiration for the coming days. In the absence of President and Vice President, the Conference chose Bro. J. Good as President pro. tem. Ministers present were J. F. Wagoner, L. C. Chase, F. L. Austin, C. D. Gill, C. Winchester, W. J. Cummings, O. R. L. Crozier, B. W. and M. A. Woodward.

Meeting called to order by B. W. Woodward, with a few words of welcome, after which F. L. Austin gave a very able sermon on "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God."

Bro. J. F. Wagoner did not reach Dutton until Friday evening. It was indeed a pleasure to us all to have Bro. Wagoner with us, and all who listened to his beautiful words of truth could not help being convinced.

Saturday 1:30 p. m. Bro. L. C. Chase has come. Glad hand shakes are being passed around, a happy contented look shines from all eyes, for now three extra champions of truth are among us. All were very much pleased to see and hear Bro. Chase as it had been two years since he could meet with us. Saturday a. m. business meeting. Minutes of the last meeting were read and accepted. The following were elected as officers for the ensuing year: President H. C. Hammond, Vice President C. D. Gill, Sec'y Emma Jackman, Treasurer A. K. Richardson, State Evangelists B. W. and M. A. Woodward.

Evangelists report from June, 1901 to June, 1902. Number of days work by B. W. Woodward 46, by M. A. Woodward 50; sermons preached through the year by M. A. Woodward 103 and B. W. Woodward 91. Baptized ones during meetings 16, funerals 9.

Treasurer's report shows money received during the year $100.43; paid out to the evangelists B. W. and M. A. Woodward $155.65, paid out for other expenses $26.50, leaving in the treasury $8.28.

The social meetings were much enjoyed by all, and the singing was very good at all of the meetings. Mrs. Emma Mansfield of West Millbrook, presided at the organ. Those from out of the State were Elder J. F. Wagoner, Rochester, Ind., F. L. Austin, Argos, Ind.; visitors from Chicago, Ill., Mr. Martin Asleksen and wife, Mrs. Julia Dean, Mrs. Harriet Richter, and Miss Ruth Smith. We were glad to become acquainted with the brethren from Chicago, and hope they will come again.

The report from some of the churches was good, and some forgot to send in any report. During the meeting six were baptized into the all saving name of Jesus. May they prove faithful to their trust, that they may reap the rich reward due all those that love his appearing and kingdom. The ordinance was administered Sunday afternoon by Bro. Woodward. Those baptized were, Mrs. J. M. Wynne, Watson, Mrs. Alice Tice, Caledonia, Miss Ruby Peck, Richland, Mrs. W. Bloss, Dutton, Leverene Winchester, Byron Center, Mrs. Joe Bradly, Dutton. After the baptism Sunday the Lord's Supper was administered by Bro. Woodward. Sister Woodward and Bro. Chase.

The preaching was good and well received by attentive audiences—never before did we have such a grand, good meeting. We can certainly say our meeting was a love feast. All were filled with enthusiasm, ready and willing to do any thing to make the meeting a success, talking of the blessed hope, tears of love mingled together. May the time now be far in the future when God's dear children can meet never to part, where the gates of endless joy shall be open and they bask in the sunlight of endless day. The attendance was good and good interest, and all were royally entertained by the brethren at Dutton.

Your Sister in hope of life eternal.
EMMA JACKMAN, Sec'y.

REPORT OF L. T. S.

Ladies' Tithing Society convened for business meeting Saturday at 1 P. M., electing their officers and transacting such other business as came before the house.

Officers elected for ensuing year as follows:—

President,.....Emily Barnum.
Vice President,.....Addie Fisk.
Treasurer .....Emma Jackman.
Secretary,.....Mary A. Woodward.

Money now on hand in treasury, $26.50 of tithe money was paid in at this meeting, and only a very few of the members were present; some sending their tithe by mail. A motion was made and carried that we invite the brethren to join the societys, trying in this way to establish order or system in giving for gospel work.

We were so thankful to receive the little love messages from Sister Parkhurst and daughter, Sister West and Sister Wince.

May the young members especially be more deeply impressed with their duty to save a portion of their money for the cause of truth.

Yours for his service.
M. A. WOODWARD, Sec'y.

Query.

Will some one who has knowledge please explain why so many of the brethren, when mentioning the partaking of the emblems quote 1 Cor. xii. 26, "Ye do show forth the Lord's death till he come;" when the word "forth" is not in the text. It is a very frequent occurrence, both in speaking and writing, and shows how easily we may fall into careless habits. Let us strive to be accurate in quoting Scripture even when no doctinal point is involved. S. T. BLESSING.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

NIGHT.

I lay me down to sleep,
But my heart waketh;
Mine eyes would vigil keep Till God draw breath;
If but thy presence bless,
O Lord, to-night
The vision matchless
Which day conceiveth.
The quieting silence thrills
In waves supreme,
Enfolds me, and unveils
God's love eternal.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

Shall we be ready when the Master comes? Surely not if we are not more in earnest than many of us have been in the years gone by; spending all for self, of time and talents, and nothing for the Lord. Readiness consists in occupation. "Occupy till I come," is the command of the Master. But back of this and urging thereto is genuine love for the Lord, and that spirit of consecration that would sacrifice all for the glory of his name and the good of humanity, and that loving, alert watchfulness, that takes note of every sign of the nearing advent. "Let your light so shine!" Let it burn bright and clear. Let others know how precious Jesus is to your soul. Tell "the old story of Jesus and his love." It may cost something to meet the almost certain sneers of the careless ones. And yet you cannot be loyal to Jesus, while making no personal effort to win men and women to him. He has set us in the church for this very purpose; has given us the flaming torch of truth that we may bear it forward. If the work of Jesus was to seek and save the lost, then is it emphatically our work, for he has gone on a journey and has left it to us to complete the task so gloriously begun.

A timid woman, felt one evening in a revival meeting, that she ought to speak to two young men, and entreat them to consecrate their lives to the service of the Lord. She shrank from the task, but love constrained her, and she went, and in an "odd, hesitating way," told them they ought to become Christians." They laughed in her face, and sobbing as if her heart would break, over what she supposed a mortifying failure, she went back to her seat, thinking she would never speak to any one again.

The young men were room-mates, and in the night one of them was awakened by a groan from his companion. He anxiously enquired the cause. The other answered, that he was ashamed of himself "for the way he had treated that good, old lady, and for laughing in her face as he did;" that "it wouldn't do for any body to behave to his mother as he did to her," that she wanted to do him good, and he should have been civil to her at least. His mate assented to all this and was soon feeling as bad as he, and both were soon on their knees praying. The outcome was, that they were "soundly converted" after the fashion of our fathers, the one to become a minister of the gospel, and the other an active, earnest Christian worker.

There are pins and nails and bolts, and all can be of use. Some of us may be only pins, but just as useful as our more pretentious fellows. God has a place for us all, and blessed is the man who steps into that place to be used of God, as the poor, old woman stepped into her place and was used.

The awful happenings of the present day ought to awaken us. Already has it become as it was in the days of Noah. They have been "eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage" and have known not until the flood of waters, or the flood of lava has engulfed them all. An army as it were, of men, women and children destroyed in a few seconds of time! We who are far away from these great disasters do not realize the terribleness of them, but let even a small hurricane come near, or the rushing cyclone sweep across our path, and we begin to understand that we have not "an arm like God," and that we cannot "thunder with a voice like him." We feel the awe of his presence, the truthfulness of his Word. We remember that "sudden destruction" is to come upon the ungodly, that "the Lord is to come as a thief in the night," that the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements melt with fervent heat, the earth also," and that the works that are therein (the earth) "are to be burned up." We see these judgments already begun, and tremble lest we may not be ready for the solemn event that is just in the future. "Who shall stand when he appeareth?" is the burden of our cry. More fearful things are before us. The things that have already happened, are only a prelude to what is coming.

"Nevertheless, we brethren, according to his promise, look for a new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness, wherefore beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot and blameless." "Watch, for ye know not what hour your Lord shall come." Be faithful and wise; take care of your influence. Let it not be against the truth; let it not dishonor Christ and ruin souls. Then will you be ready for the Master. Then will you meet him without fear. Then will you hear from his loving lips, "Well done! good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord!"

What We Believe. No. 5.

The Bible teaches us that "nations" are to be "judged, ruled, governed." Of this government of the nations" Jesus "the Christ" (Anointed) is to be the Head, and "the immortal saints" joint rulers with him. If nations are to be governed, there must be nations to govern after the return of Christ. So we believe. But the question is not one primarily of belief, but of Bible teaching. If the Bible predicts a government of the nations under a righteous rule (as it has foretold other things that have manifestly come to pass), then we may reasonably look for such a government in the world. The prophecies already referred to (Dan. ii. 44; vii. 27) imply and indirectly state that such a condition will obtain; for if "all dominions shall serve and obey" the Most High, it is evident that "the government of the nations" is executed righteously; and who could the Executor be but he upon whose shoulders "the government" shall be, "of the increase of whose government and peace there shall be no end upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice henceforth, even forever?" Isa. ix. 6, 7. With him there shall be those of the "little flock" for whom the "Father's good pleasure" designed "the kingdom" (Luke xii. 32), as it had been "appointed" (or covenanted) to him. Luke xxii. 28 30.

When once this government or kingdom is in operation it will be an attraction to the "nations," they will gravitate in that direction, and "flow into it." Isa. ii. 2-4. They will say to those of Israel who form the nucleus of the people to be governed, "We will go with you, for we have heard that God is with you." Zech. viii. 20-23. "Many people and strong nations" there will be to "seek the Lord of Hosts in Jerusalem," which shall be called "the throne of the Lord, and all the nations shall be gathered unto it, to the name of the Lord, to Jerusalem." Jer. iii. 17. Will there be any need of the nations being gathered around one common center after the coming of Christ? If the world is to be "converted" before and without this event, all this is purposeless and futile; but if nations continue to "learn war" and create the most deadly implements of destruction, as they have been and are still doing, there is need of going somewhere to unlearn the things making for discord and unrest, and to learn true peace based upon righteousness. "He shall judge among the nations." Isa. ii. 4. Who? "The God of Jacob." Will he do this in person? "He hath appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness by that Man whom he hath ordained"—who is that?—"whom he hath raised from the dead." Acts xvii. 31. When will this gathering of the nations be? "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory; and before him shall be gathered all nations," etc. Matt. xxv. 31, 32. It is not only evident from the foregoing Scriptures, but is manifest from conditions today, that this judgment of the nations has not yet taken place. "Peace on earth, good will to men," was sung by the angelic choir at the birth of "the Prince of peace," but the time for this peace will be when the proper Person is at the helm, when he whose right it is (Ezek. xxi. 27) shall sit on the throne of David (Luke i. 32, 33), and judge (rule) the world in righteousness. Acts xvii. 31. How helpless and futile the efforts of men to bring about the conditions to be witnessed when the Man of God's own appointing shall with mighty hand execute judgment and justice. What a time of rejoicing it will be and what anthems of praise will ascend to "the Most High," when the "King of kings" shall "judge the poor of the people, and save the children of the needy," in whose days "the righteous shall flourish," when the oppressor shall be broken to pieces. Psa. lxxii. 4. 7.

In the succession of the kingdoms of men, beginning with Babylon, and coming down to the present, the kingdoms were broken, destroyed, one by one, to be succeeded by others, but the subjects of each kingdom continued to live, and became subjects of the next. So with the kingdom of Christ when it comes; while it will "break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms (Dan. ii. 44) which at the time of its establishment shall be in existence, this is not to be understood in the sense of destroying the people then living.

I well remember how we used to be startled at the frightful pictures drawn by theologians of the destruction of men to take place at the coming of Christ. Little wonder that people that have such ideas associated with that glorious event, could have any but feelings of horror at his contemplation. The object, or one of the objects, of the coming of Christ is to establish a divine government on the earth by means of which to bless the nations. It will be the means of fulfilling one of the items of promise made to Abraham, that "in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed." Gen. xii. 3; xxii. 18; xxvi. 4. The law to govern those "nations" shall issue from Zion, and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem. Isa. ii. 3. The nations that submit to that law will enjoy the "blessings" contemplated in the plan of God, while those that stubbornly refuse submission to the rightful authority shall be visited with punishments that will be adequate to the demands. Zech. xiv. 17-19; Isa. lx. 12.

That will be "the day of the Lord," so often referred to in Scripture, which will be a day—not of 24 hours, but a great day which has the seasons of "summer and winter" in it, and its duration continues "from year to year." Zech. xiv. 8, 16. It is "the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men, the day of the Lord, and day of God," mentioned in 2 Pet. iii. 7, 10, and of which the apostle says, "that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day." ver. 8. It is the day for which God's people in all ages have been looking. That will be the true "millennium" (from mille—one thousand; annus—years), the reign of subjugation lasting a thousand years, the fulfillment of thousands of prayers indited by the Spirit in Jesus (John iii. 34), "helping our infirmities and teaching us what we should pray for as we ought" (Rom. viii. 26), saying, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done upon earth, as it is in heaven." Matt. vi. 10. Then "the nations" will take lessons and "learn," not how to destroy one another, but the useful arts of peace—a peace brought about not by compromise and promises never intended to be carried out, but peace which has its foundation in righteousness, the proper adjustment of the relations of man to man; a work for which Christ, who hated iniquity and loved righteousness (Heb. i. 9) as well as the "saints" who learned righteousness in the school of suffering for the kingdom of God, (2 Thes. i. 5) will be eminently fitted. What a glorious work, what a bright prospect before the child of God.

A. H. ZILMER.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I greet you in the Anointed One. I wish to tell you what we saw and heard while we were in Michigan at the Annual Conference.

We found a neat little church-building; we found some warm and loving hearts; we found one dear Brother Crozier, who put me so much in mind of the beloved disciple as he spoke in the social meeting of "little children, love one another," and how much there is in those words, dear ones, the 13th of 1st Corinthians, "love thinks no evil, love wounds not itself;" we also found our beloved Brother J. F Wagoner there, who gave us some good, practical lessons, one of which was in the Sunday night's social meeting, when he gave us his experience while he was going through the Studebaker's wagon works, where he saw a man making wedges, and if it is all we can do to drive wedges of God's truth into peoples' minds and let some one else come and do the finishing, and that brings to my mind a dear sister who has a Mission at 984 Hall St., Grand Rapids, Mrs. Clara Chaffee, who depends on the Lord for her support, who may, by the grace of God put a wedge of truth into some one's mind that would not go to any other place to hear. Let us then remember the words of our Savior, "He that is not for us is against us; he that gathereth not scattereth abroad." We also met our dear Bro. Austin. Praise God for his manliness and his Christian fortitude. He gave us a good discourse on "What are You Worth?" Yes: I would echo the words to every one when you read these lines; not in dollars and cents, but, What are you worth to the Lord? My brother, my sister, we can be worth all we allow the Word of God and his favor to make of us that we may shine as lights amidst the pleasure-seeking generation holding forth the Word of light.

Your Brother, in the blessed hope.

M. T. ASLAKSEN.

Just Three Things.

I once met a thoughtful scholar, says Bishop Whipple, who told me that for years he had read every book he could which assailed the religion of Jesus Christ, and he said he should have become an infidel but for three things.

"First, I am a man. I am going somewhere. To-night I am a day nearer the grave than I was last night. I have read all such books can tell me. They shed not one solitary ray of hope or light upon the darkness. They shall not take away the guide and leave me stone blind.

"Second, I had a mother. I saw her go down into the dark valley where I am going, and she leaned upon an unseen arm as calmly as a child goes to sleep on the breast of its mother. I know that was not a dream.

"Third, I have three motherless daughters"—and he said it with tears in his eyes—"They have no protector but myself. I would rather kill them than leave them in this sinful world if you blot out from it all the teachings of the gospel."

Perhaps there are other persons who would do well to think of these three things. Infidels think they can destroy the Bible. What of it? Many good things have been destroyed. A child can smash a crystal vase, which all the power of men could never restore. An incendiary can, with a match that does not cost a hundredth part of a penny, burn down a palace on which thousands of men have toiled [illegible]. A slanderer can smirch a spotless name with stains that may never be effaced; but what is gained by such exploits?

Infidels have vainly tried for ages to destroy the Bible and Christianity. They have not succeeded. Suppose they now give us a rest, and go to work and produce some better book and some better religion.

Jeremy Taylor well said that every man rejoices twice when he has a partner of his joy; a friend shares my sorrow and makes it but a moisty, but he swells my joy and makes it double. For so two channels divide the river, and lessen it into rivulets, and make it fordable, and apt to be drunk up by the first revels of the Sirius Star; but two torches do not divide but increase the flame. And though my tears are the sooner dried up, when they run on my friend's cheek in the furrows of compassion, yet when my flame has kindled his lamp, we unite the glories and make them radiant, like the golden candlesticks that burn before the throne of God, because they shine by numbers, by unions, and confederations of light and joy.

THOSE to whom we have sent letters telling about your accounts have not all made response as yet. Brother or Sister, we urge you to be sure and not neglect this matter longer. We want to pay our obligations—this is the reason why we ask you to give us what is due us. once. If we could satisfy those we are under obligation to any other way we would not ask you, but as it is the only way we know of, we must hear from you to enable us to do so. We trust all will see the necessity of this and act NOW.

Obituary.

Henry Judson was born in Canandaigua, New York, April 4th, 1842.

At the age of 9 years he moved to Chesterfield, Fulton Co., Ohio, with his mother, his only surviving parent. When a young man he united with the Disciple Church of Chesterfield. He was married to Audilucia Fenner, April 8th, 1867. In 1870 he moved to Riga, Lenawee Co., Michigan, where he united with the "Church of God."

In the year 1881 he with his family moved to LaBarge, Kent Co., Mich., where he has since resided.

On May the 11th, 1902, wishing to return a gun to a neighbor of whom he had borrowed it. He went to the room, reached behind the door for it, not knowing that it was loaded; the trigger caught, the terrible work was done, the poor man's brains were scattered all over the room, the head and face torn all to pieces. The wife, two sons and four daughters left to witness the awful scene were nearly crazed with grief.

His age was 60 years, 1 month and 7 days. Though death came so suddenly it found him prepared, he was ever honored and respected by all, setting a Christian example before his family and friends, and if ever so tired he always turned to the Word of God for counsel before retiring. Elder R. W. Woodward was called to preach the funeral sermon, text chosen by the family, 1 John iii. 2. May God still be the Comforter and Counselor is our prayer.

Jay Elmer Moses, born May 24th, 1878, at Somerset, Hillsdale Co., Mich., died at the C. B. O. Home, Grand Rapids, Mich., May 16th 1902, after an illness of five weeks. He was 23 years, 11 mo. and 23 days old.

Jay was the eldest son of four children, the other three children, two sisters and a brother, with his mother having preceded him to their little narrow places of rest. The father, the only remaining one of the family is very sick.

Jay came to Byron with his father about 15 years ago and this was his home since. He enlisted as private in Co. K. 30th Regiment of U. S. Infantry on July 18th, 1899, and after participating in several expeditions, and skirmishes was discharged at Camp Wallace, Manila, P. I. Feb. 18th, 1901; and was commended by his Captain for his good character, honorable and faithful service [illegible] his command. Jay was a member in good standing in the I. O. O. F. also D. of R. Elder Woodward was called to preach his funeral, speaking to a very large congregation in the Methodist Church.

Albert L. Moses was born in Somerset, Hillsdale Co., Mich., April 26th, 1857. Mr. Moses with his little motherless family came to Byron 15 years ago. He has buried them all, one by one, and while his last remaining child (Jay of above notice) was being laid to rest, the weary father was finishing life's battles, breathing out his soul unto death, and two days later Elder Woodward again met with the bereaved friends, to speak of the mysteries of life and death. The deceased was 45 years and 22 days old. He was married to Mary McAllister in the year 1876. Four children were given to this union, Jay, Berton, Lois and Bertha. All are sleeping, God will care for all, rewarding as seemeth good in his righteous sight. May he comfort the brother, and poor aged, sick father, left to finish life's work.

Levi W. Chase was born in 1848 at Eagle Harbor, N. Y. He was the son of Brother Artemas and Juliana Chase. He moved to Michigan in 1865, settled near Adrian, Lenawee Co., Mich. He with 16 others made the good confession during a series of meetings held several years ago by Brother and Sister Woodward, at Raisin Center, having been faithfully taught for years by our beloved Bro. L. C. Chase.

He with his wife now left alone buried their only child, Earnest, about five years ago, but they rejoiced that he also had at the same time with the father taken the obligation of service to the Master, and ever after was found earnest in his service until death ended the earthly work. The death of our esteemed Brother Chase, although heralded by disease, came so unexpectedly to the dear, lonely wife left behind.

The immediate cause of death was valvular disease of the heart. He passed away on the morning of the 20th of May, 1902, without any warning to friends and apparently without any serious struggle. Services was Elder Woodward called to the house of mourning. He tried as best he could to administer comfort to the weary ones from the only source that all our comfort comes, even the Word of God. When will all this cease? When Jesus comes. Until then, oh may we patiently wait and endure.

Margaret Mattica was born in Niagara Co. N. Y. Aug. 15, 1826. Was married to Hiram Williams Oct. 28, 1846. They came to Michigan in 1855 and have since resided here. She fell asleep May 25th, 1902 after an illness of about three weeks. She was the mother of five children all of whom survive her. About 11 years ago she embraced the faith and never gave it up.

M. A. Woodward was called to this house of death, speaking from 1 Cor. xiii. 12. Paul's riddle of life, when will it be solved? When Jesus comes. May God show the children left, now fatherless and motherless, the need of God's love and help, is our prayer.

M. A. WOODWARD.

Report of Labor.

Believing that those of the blessed hope will be interested in the spread of the truth I report the result of a meeting I have just held in Sistersville, West Va. Two months ago I received a letter from W. M. Farley asking that I come there and preach a few discourses and immerse him and his wife. We arranged to have the preaching Saturday evening, May 24th and Sunday morning and evening. We spoke in the town hall on the subjects of the "Nature of man," "the gospel of Christ" and "the covenants of promise."

Our audiences were rather small but we were not surprised as the world is insane on the subject of entertainments, and do not care to hear the Bible preached as it is written. Brother Farley has been investigating the doctrine of life only through Christ and the gospel of the kingdom as taught by Christ and his apostles for some time, and I found him and his wife well prepared in the knowledge of the Lord Jesus, and therefore fit subjects for being baptized into the name of Christ. Therefore after services Sunday morning we went to the Ohio river and they were "planted together in the likeness of his death and arose to walk in newness of life." Bro. and Sister Farley are young people and remarkably intelligent in the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ. Besides this they have been diligent searchers for the truth and very earnest in presenting it to others. I can truly say that the Lord has two faithful witnesses in Sistersville who are ready to give a reason for the hope within and will do it with meekness. While attending this meeting it was our good fortune to meet Bro. Wm. D. Root of Gracey, Ohio, who is a veteran in the cause, and is sound in the gospel as taught by Paul and the other apostles. Bro. and Sister Root have been alone for a number of years. Scarcely has it been my lot in life to meet with those who have studied the Scriptures so studiously as have these two brethren and their wives. Their whole object seeming to have been to get the truth as it is in Christ Jesus. After preaching Sunday evening we, Brother and Sister Farley, Brother Root and myself, broke bread at the home of Brother and Sister Farley. I need not say that this proved to be an enjoyable hour for all, as we have been isolated from church privileges for a number of years. Monday morning came too soon for us all as it called for a parting of recently formed ties, which were as strong as the love of brethren in Christ. In our parting we pledged ourselves to meet in the kingdom of God if we should never meet in this life. It was remarked by Brothers Root and Farley that though we had formerly been strangers, yet we spoke the same things. We found ourselves in the unity of the Spirit, speaking the same things spoken by the prophets, Christ and the apostles. Finally brethren, let us be diligent in speaking and writing of the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ. Could not some of our older members of the body of Christ write a letter to Brother and Sister Farley and Brother and Sister Root. They are surrounded as we are with all forms of wickedness and the opposition of the different sects. A few words will give them great encouragement. We close with the assurance that the Master will soon appear. Yours in hope of eternal life.

Didn't Know it was There.

A well-to-do-deacon in Connecticut was one day accosted by his pastor, who said:

"Poor Widow Green's wood is out. Can you not take her a load?"

"Well," answered the deacon, "I have the wood, and I have the team, but who is to pay me for it?"

The pastor replied, "I will pay for it, on condition that you read three verses of the 91st Psalm before going to bed tonight."

The deacon consented, and at night opened the Word of God and read the passage:—

"Blessed is he that considereth the poor; the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble. The Lord will preserve him and keep him alive; and he shall be blessed upon the earth; and thou wilt not deliver him unto the will of his enemies; the Lord will strengthen him upon the bed of languishing; thou wilt make all his bed in his sickness."

A few days afterwards the pastor met him again.

"How much do I owe you, deacon, for that wood?"

"Oh, do not speak of payment. I did not know those promises were in the Bible. I would not take money for supplying the poor widow's necessities."

Liquor Bill Largest.

A startling exhibit has been made by Alonzo E. Wilson in a carefully prepared table which shows the comparative expenditures for different purposes. For instance, the yearly ment bill of the United States is but $915,000,000; iron and steel $600,000,000; sawed lumber $530,000,000; tobacco $525,000,000; flour $370,000,000; public instruction $175,000,000; church expense $150,000,000; all foreign missions $5,000,000. Greater than any of these expenditures is the amount paid for liquor, which aggregates somewhat over one billion dollars.

We need what is due us on subscriptions, and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O

The fourteenth annual session of the Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus, in Iowa, will be held at Waterloo, Iowa, beginning Friday, Aug. 15, and continuing over Sunday Aug. 24, occupying its beautiful camp ground situated in the Cedar River Park, which is reached in a few minutes ride on the street cars, from all railroad depots in the City.

We expect several preaching brethren from abroad, whose names will appear later. Come and enjoy this Conference with us. Matters of importance need your attention. Come, let us reason together, and not forsake the assembling of ourselves together, and so much the more, as we see the day approaching.

We hope for a large attendance this year. Begin at once to prepare for the meeting, and make a special effort to attend the beginning, so that a reduced rate may be assured, as it will save a large amount in railroad fare to the brethren, and will increase the attendance.

Brethren let us awake—the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.

Full particulars as to reduced rates and so on will appear later.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LI. Dead PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JUNE 18, 1902. NUMBER 23.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, prerequisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

One Thing.

I have no claim on any day but this:
I know not what one hour of this may bring;
Nor what life holds for me of bane or bliss—
But he who leads me knoweth every thing.

He holds the ocean in his hollowed hand,
He guides the stars, he notes the sparrow's fall:
He plans the paths I cannot understand,
And he will take me safely through it all.

But this I know, that Jesus died for me
And lives again those mansion's to prepare—
Where his redeemed his glorious face shall see,
And there the wonders of His love shall share.

—Helen A. Goodwin.

Read at Indiana Conference.

To the Conference of the Church of God assembled at Antioch, Marshall Co., Greeting:

In imagination we see an assemblage of brethren and sisters seated in that old house which is so dear to us in memory. Alas! how few are left of the dear ones today who were present at the dedication of the house to God, and many who were present at the June Conference in 1880, have gone under the power of the enemy—death, or removed to other places.

Some who are now present may be here for the last time in this life.

How dearly we would love to be with you at this meeting; but we can not. We trust we will be remembered in your devotions.

The great thing before us is, by faith and obedience to secure the right to live again when the Lord comes to gather his jewels. If we succeed in this all will be well with us in the eternal world.

It seems to us that the gospel of the kingdom of God, and the things which relate to our Lord Jesus Christ, and the conditions upon which immortality and eternal life can be obtained, should be the themes for preachers to dwell upon, together with the admonition to watch the signs preceding the second coming of the great Life-Giver.

Some writers and preachers are spending much time in trying to figure out by human wisdom many things which are not revealed in God's Book.

We need have no fear as to the justice of God, or of his Son, who will rule the world in righteousness. The Word of God clearly teaches the final destiny of Adam's family; and this Word is to judge us. The Word of God to us will be a savor of life unto unto life, or of death unto death. Each one will be saved or lost in accordance with their character or work. It is of the greatest importance that we live so that our names shall be in the Book of Life. Others cannot be righteous for us. We may rest assured that God's plans will all be faithfully consummated. Man's opinions are worthless when arrayed against the Word of God.

We hope your meeting may be a happy one with good results.

My wife and I send Christian greeting to all the brethren and sisters. There will be no dimness of sight when we put on immortality.

Your Brother and Sister in Christ,
RICHARD & JANE CORBALEY.

Church of God of Indiana, Greeting:

We notice your announcement for the Conference at Antioch, and the very interesting programme provided for the occasion, and we very much desire to be with you personally. This we cannot hope to do now, but we assure you we are with you in mind and our best wishes and prayers are in your behalf. May all that you do be to the honor and glory of Jesus and of God the Father.

Wince and Wagoner and Willey and Austin and Zilmer and Halstead and VanVactor and Smith! What a feast! I thought of Gray, the poet where he says:

"Full many a gem of purest ray serene
The dark unfathomed caves of ocean bear;
Full many a flower is born to blush unseen
And waste its sweetness on the desert air."

Understand me. I do not mean to say that Antioch is a dark unfathomed cave, nor yet that it is a desert, but I mean only to call attention to this array of gems that sparkle there and the flowers of thought that will bloom at that meeting, and I trust that the "sweetness" will not be "wasted."

How I would like to be with you. There are two strangers on the list, Zilmer and VanVactor, and while I have never seen them I accept them as genuine coin; for they have the true meaning of the gospel. So I take them in without introduction and feel acquainted.

My earnest wish is that union and especially love may be a part of the program. Let the life of each preacher be put into each sermon—then if the life is all right the sermons will be.

To be plain with you—I do not like a delegate conference. I like to have the whole membership of the Church the Conference. A deeper interest among the churches at home is the direct fruit, but whether by delegate, or by the whole membership let all before union, love, peace and advancement.

Can there be any action to obtain the complete membership of your state—names and address? Such a list would be important. Also action looking toward a General Conference to be held either this fall or next year?

Plans for the future year's work and the Lord's business, ought to be carefully considered at our conferences and all sermons ought to be along that line whenever possible. Long-winded sermons to brethren wherein the speaker goes over doctrines familiar to all the delegates and brethren present while they may be pleasant to listen to, leave the work just where it was at the beginning of the Conference and there is no advance.

The Lord's business should be carefully planned at these meetings by the united wisdom and experience of the delegates and ministers, and faithfully carried out during the year.

With the great truths we as a people have, with a system of work appropriately connected with it, we ought to do much for God.

True, it will cost effort. It will cost money. It will cost sacrifice, but the cause is a worthy one. Everything grand, and glorious and good has been built up at the cost of energy, earnest work, and even tears and blood. Jesus is the pattern. There were tears for his fidelity, and death for his life of toil, but he triumphed in the end and is seated upon a throne now.

All hail to our Chief. If we suffer with him we shall also reign with him.

God bless the meeting. And when you go home may the principles and sermons and impressions abide in the life for good.

"The Lord bless thee and keep thee. The Lord make his face to shine upon thee and be gracious unto thee. The Lord lift up his countenance upon thee and give thee peace. The Lord recompense thy work and a full reward be given thee of the Lord God of Israel, under whose wings thou art come to trust."

Lovingly, your Brother,
A. J. EYCHANER.

TITLES OF CHRIST.

A title is an appellation of dignity, distinction or pre-eminence given to persons. Throughout the history of the world mankind has striven for supremacy; some from a selfish motive, seeking only the honor or name, while others lose all thought of personal gain, but strive for a high standard in their chosen work, that they may be of the most service to their fellow man. We often times judge a person by the prefix or the number of letters or abreviations added to his name.

In sacred and profane history we read of noble and grand characters, whose names will ever be memorable and sacred to us, but there is one character that stands above all, whose name is above every name—Jesus, the Christ. His aim and motive was to do his Father's will, regardless of all the honors that the world might bestow upon him. Though obedience to the Father cost his life, "God raised him from the dead and highly exalted him, and gave him a name which is above every name." And not only one name, but many names, and each one has it own particular significance. From a close study of his various appellations, we may better understand the mission of Christ in the world.

In Bethlehem of Judea was born a babe of the Virgin Mary—made of woman—the Son of Man. Begotten by the Holy Ghost, or by the power of the Spirit, "born not of blood, nor the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God," to carry out Jehovah's great plan of salvation—the Son of God.

He was first called Jesus, which means Savior, or one who saves. The Son of Man came to save his people from their sins, to save that which is lost. Because of Adam's disobedience we are under sin, and we read that "sin when it is finished bringeth forth death," therefore we are under the condemnation of sin and death. "By man came death, by man came also the resurrection from the dead," for "as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." Christ the second Adam come to save us from that which we lost through the first Adam's transgression, and even more than that, he saves us from our own sins and transgressions, if we believe in him. And then we have the blessed promise of the gift of life eternal.

The significance of the term Savior should mean much to us, for only through belief and obedience to the professor of that name, will we obtain eternal salvation. His life, our great pattern, was full. He went about doing good, healing the sick, preaching the gospel and explaining by parables and from the Scriptures his part in carrying out his Father's plan of redemption, and how his followers might be workers with him. He was tempted on all sides, suffered many trials, even death on the cross. But it was through this suffering that the Captain of our salvation became perfect. The apostles, and in fact all believers, were and are commissioned to preach the gospel and assist in the salvation of souls, but Jesus is the chief or captain. He it was who suffered the greatest and bore our sins on the cross. "He was led as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, he opened not his mouth." The sacrifice of lambs without spot or blemish, symbolical of innocence and purity for a sin offering was an ancient custom. This was a type of Christ, the pure spotless character. Hence he is called the Lamb of God.

Another custom of olden times was the consecrating or setting apart of certain ones for their office by the anointing of oil. This oil made from the costliest of perfumes, oils and spices was poured upon the head of the one chosen for priest or King. Christ, the Messiah, which means anointed, is chosen of God to be King and anointed with the Holy Ghost. When asked by Pilate if he was king, he replied, "To this end was I born and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth."

God made a covenant with David that his seed—the Christ—should sit on his throne and rule his people. Jeremiah says, "Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous branch, and a king shall reign and prosper, and execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved and Israel shall dwell safely; and this is the name whereby he shall be called the Lord our righteousness." In connection with this let me quote from Isaiah. "Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulders, and his name shall be called Wonderful Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government there shall be no end, upon the throne of David and upon his kingdom, to order it and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever." Also Matt. xxv. 31. "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory." These tell us very explicitly when Christ will take the throne of his father David, where it will be, and over whom he will reign.

Happy are those who are found watching and faithful till Jesus comes, for they shall inherit this kingdom. Those who have part in the first resurrection will assist in the reign and restitution of all things. We could have no hope of a resurrection, had not Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits, to an immortal life, of them that slept.

To Martha he says, "I am the resurrection and the life, he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." He ascended into the heavens to the right hand of God, there to make intercession for us, as mediator between God and man. Christ is also called our great High Priest, to whom we may go with our sins and seek forgiveness. For he was tempted in all points like as we, yet without sin, and can be touched with our infirmities.

FLORA HARRIS.

THE COMING OF THE LORD.

Dear brethren, sisters and friends:

I cannot be with you save in thought and in prayer, and yet I am happy to meet with you even in this way. I feel uplifted as I cry to God on your behalf, as I did this morning. Things may look dark. Those whom we had expected to come up "to the help of the Lord against the mighty" have refused to come. Their offerings have not been laid with ours before the altar, as were the offerings of the princes of Israel in the day when the tabernacle was fully set up. But shall we for this become discouraged? Have we forgotten Gideon and his three hundred men? The Lord does not always work by the many, but by the faithful few, and when defeat seems certain, then he steps in to give the victory. We need to look back at the path our fathers have trod. How often in their history has it seemed as if everything was lost. Not a Christian seemed to be left in all the world. And yet in a short time the whole earth was filled with their noise, and shoulder to shoulder they were pressing forward against the enemy, exalting the name of the Lord and filling all lands with his praise. And so, though whole regiments in our day be faithless, God's cause is not going to go by the board. Did not the Lord say to David, "I was with thee whither soever thou wentest?" And has he not in like manner been with us? How forgetful we are! He was not to leave Jacob until he had performed that good thing he had spoken to him of, —to bring him again into the land of Canaan, and as we being the children of Abraham, and also the children of Jacob, he will not leave us until he has brought us safely into our inheritance in the fatherland.

"We are going home, no more to roam,
No more to sin and sorrow;
No more to wear the brow of care,
We're going home to-morrow!"

Yes, going home! Our days of suffering, of discouragement, of patient seed-sowing, are nearly over. The pillar of fire leads on; it nears the Jordan, and Jesus—our Joshua—will be with us at the crossing! The message entrusted to our keeping has been duly proclaimed. Far and near have we gone as heralds of the nearing advent of our Lord and King. Over and over have we told the dying sons of men the story of the cross, and have urged them to seek safety in him who died thereon. As "a witness" have we borne the gospel of the kingdom to all nations. The precious truth has leavened the churches. It has not been a failure! The many may not heed, but some will be ready when Jesus comes. And instead of feeling discouraged and thinking the Church is going to pieces because things do not move as we want them to move, we ought to be all the more in earnest in exhorting, warning and entreating men and women to come to Christ and when in him to stand fast, that they "may escape the wrath that is to come," and "come off more than conquerors, through him that hath loved them." All the more earnest ought we to be in view of the direful entanglements that are overwhelming so many of our fellow beings in sudden destruction. The cyclone, the flood, fire, famine, pestilence and volcano are doing their fearful work. Already is it becoming as it was in the days of Noah. We cannot misunderstand the signs about us. They all say that we are in "the time of the end," that solemn period during which the dear God, "not slack concerning his promises, as some men count slackness," delays the fall of the avenging sword, that others may come to repentance and be saved. He has been "long-suffering, not willing that we should perish," but this "time" of long-suffering is vanishing, or shall we not rather say, has vanished? 360 years constitutes a "time," and if "the time of the end" began in Luther's day, it has already run out, and only a brief space between, that "time," and the coming of the Lord remains. It is a period of judgment and of trouble, as any one with open eyes can see. The fear, the awe of this awful time can only be shaken off by fleeing to the living God for refuge. The path of the storm has come near to us. We have seen the rushing winds, have heard their noise, and have known not what moment we might be swept away as our neighbors have been. "Creep close, close, O closer still to the side of Christ!" Wake up! Wake up! Be not overcharged with the cares of this life. Get ready for the coming of Jesus. Even in this short period of delay he may come. The time allotted to the rule of the four great monarchies of Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece and Rome has run out and God's kingdom is due. If our faith is genuine, we must rejoice. The dead know not anything. Our only hope is in Christ's return to give eternal life to his own, to put aside "man's balance of power forever" to stretch over all nations the sceptre of righteousness and reign as "Prince of peace." Be faithful, be watchful, for you know not when he may come. He is nigh, even at the doors!

S. ROXANA WISER.

What Do You Understand Faith To Be?

I regard it as the basic principle which underlies every thoughtful reasonable action in life. In harmony with this we have the Bible declaration: "Faith is the substance of things hoped for; evidence of things not seen."

Credulity is sometimes mistaken for faith. There is, however, this difference between the two. Credulity may thrive upon ignorance, superstition, and emotion; but rational faith, requires "evidence." You may ask a Trinitarian for rational evidence to sustain his belief that three gods make one god, and he will doubtless tell you that "it is a great mystery, we cannot explain it, we must take it on faith." Faith is the wrong word in this case, you must accept it upon credulity.

When a farmer sows his grain, he does so upon faith. He expects to harvest a crop. He has the "evidence" of past experience which gives him confidence.

Again, should you loan money to a person who from observation and experience you have found to be honest and truthful, you have the "evidence" of past experience which gives you faith or confidence that he will return your money according to his agreement. But should you lack this "evidence," you could have no faith. Your faith will be either strong or weak, just in proportion as the "evidence" is strong or weak. Faith is the effect of a cause.

In the text above quoted, faith is said to be the "evidence of things not seen." Now, the evidence with regard to these "things not seen," is in the Word of God. "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God." Heb. xi. Then in order to have faith we must have 1st, The faculty of hearing.

2d, The Word of God must reach the mind through the faculty of "hearing."

If a man has no avenue through which this evidence can reach his mind, he could not have any faith. If a person's brain is diseased, so that he cannot discern evidence, he can have no faith. But says an objector, is not faith the gift of God? Why, yes. An able writer on this line said: "Faith is not the gift of God in any other sense, than that of the power to walk, to talk, to think, to reason, to love, to hate, to taste, to smell, or to exercise any organ or faculty of body or mind, is the gift of God. God is the author of these faculties and organs, but not of their development or exercise. It does not follow because God made my eyes, that therefore he sees for me, or because he made my brain, that therefore he thinks for me, or because he made the organ of faith, that therefore he believes for me. God is only the author of faith in that he made the brain with which man thinks and is the author of the Word, by which faith is developed. Man possesses a distinct intellectual faculty of faith. If he had not this faculty of faith, evidence would no more affect his mind, than if it were a stone."

The faith must reach us through the mind. "Faith cometh by hearing," it is conveyed to the mind by hearing instruction—by being taught. See Col. ii. 7: "Rooted and built up in him, and stablished in the faith as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thanksgiving."

Faith grasps the substance of things hoped for, and the things hoped for are the things we have a reasonable prospect of realizing, because they were promised by one who is not only able, but always has made good his word. Hence, faith attaches to the word of the reliable promisor, and hope anticipates, and exults in the prospect of realizing the things promised.

Faith may be described as the root, and hope as faith in bloom, and the fruit, the realization of the things perceived by faith, and anticipated by hope. Faith is also the bridge which spans the chasm between mortality and immortality. Again, resting upon faith, we have the beautiful bow of hope which is the grand arch that spans the heavens between the vale of tears, and the evergreen shore. Furthermore, faith was planted amidst the leafy bowers of the Garden of Eden, and hope (its bloom) has flourished throughout the succeeding ages, and will culminate in perfected fruitage amid the glories as described in the Apocalypse. When the dark cloud of adversity overcasts our sky, faith lays hold upon the strong arm of Yahweh; and then hope, like the glorious sun, peers out from beyond the storm-cloud, and laughs at the storm, and fears not its power.

Faith is a picture of future blessedness, the magnificence of which the natural eye has never seen, no ear heard of, nor the heart of man conceived; while hope, anticipates the realization in fact of the things pictured by faith.

Faith as a mighty conqueror has invaded the domain of death, burst the bars of the grave, dissipated its awful gloom, robbed it of victory, and extracted death's venomed sting, while hope converts the gloom into glory, and shouts Victory! Victory!! Victory!!!

"Blessed hope! the bright star of the morning,
That shall herald Jesus' coming to reign;
Oh the glory that waits its fair dawning,
When we meet with our loved ones again."

Men judge of our hearts by our words and works; God judges of our words and works by our hearts.

"Give and it shall be given unto you." is a promise that shows how anxious God is to make us all rich.

"Rest in the Lord: wait patiently for him." In Hebrew, the learned say, it is "Be silent to God, and let him mould thee." Keep still, and he will mould thee to the right shape.

To be full of goodness, full of cheerfulness, full of sympathy, full of helpful hope; causes a man to carry blessings of which he himself is as unconscious as a lamp of its own light.

In the report of Michigan Conference in last issue Alice Tine should be Alice Tim, Mrs Joe Bradley should be Joe Bradley, and in the Tithing society report Addie Lake is vice president instead of Addie Fisk.

"However strong a man's resolution may be, it costs him something to carry it out now and then. We may determine not to gather cherries, and keep our hands sturdily in our pockets, but we can't prevent our mouths from watering."

"He that dwelleth in the secret place of the Most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty." Psa. xc. 1. To all such sorrows are not evil's, sicknesses are not plagues; the shadow of the Almighty extending far around those who abide under it, alters the character of all things which come within its influence."

Thoreau says: "I saw a delicate flower had grown up two feet high, between the horses' path and the wheel-track. An inch more to right or left had sealed its fate, or an inch higher; and yet it lived to flourish as much as if it had a thousand acres of untrodden space around it, and never knew the danger it incurred. It did not borrow trouble, nor invite an evil fate by apprehending it."

Kelly says, and we think wisely, "In vain will you let your mind run out after help in times of trouble. It is like putting to sea in a storm. Sit still and feel after your principles; and if you find none which furnish you with a stay and prop, and point to quietness and silent submission, depend upon it, you have never learned Truth from the spirit of truth, whatever notions thereof you may have picked up from this and the other description of it."

It does us good to see that our contributors are realizing more than they have seemed to, for some time past, that "the gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believes it." If it be true,—and not to our knowledge do any of our brethren question it,—that the Lord is at hand to come,—there are two matters which are of supreme importance,—first, to work out our own salvation with fear and trembling,—and the second is, to make strenuous efforts to win souls while mercy lingers. The night cometh when no man can work. Beloved in the Lord, let us not forget, the announcement from heaven says Jesus will bring his reward with him when he comes; and the rule for its distribution is, "according to works." "To him that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations."

The following item dated from Denver on June 10, will be of interest to our readers:

Baron von Oppenheim, commissioner from Germany to investigate western irrigation, has completed a tour of northern Colorado and is enthusiastic over the application of water from the mountains and the results derived. He proposes to adopt the same form of storing storm water for the reclamation of the valley of Babylon, which is largely owned by German capitalists along the line of a railroad under construction from Constantinople through Bagdad to the Persian gulf. Upon the site of Babylon there is now being built a small city which will be touched by the railroad, and Baron von Oppenheim believes that once the water is stored and again turned into the canals the land will become productive and resume its former prosperity.

It is good to prize inward exercises, griefs and troubles, and let faith and patience have their perfect work.

Troubled, isolated, fearful ones, the Psalmist has a word for you that will do you good. He says:—"The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? The Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?" Psa. xxvii. 1. From this it appears that whatever may come on you, of mind, body or estate, from within or without, from friends or foes,—whatever your trouble be, being children of a heavenly Father, you have no need to be afraid. What can harm you if you are enclosed in God—it must touch him before it touches you.

The Church at Salem.

During the past ten years the great enemy of our race has played sad havoc with the Church of God at Salem. In quick succession the old defenders of the faith dropped out of the ranks,—and, as may be expected under the circumstances, the weak ones became weaker,—could not stand alone, and gradually drifted clear out of the way. Some removed to distant parts of the country, till at last our beloved Brother Townsend was the only male member to be depended upon, and he lived several miles in the country. Notwithstanding these adverse circumstances the sisters and the aged brother have kept up meetings at their commodious house for worship in summer, and at the residence of Sister Baker during the inclement season. Not long since they were cheered by the accession of a newly begotten one,—and more recently by the return of Sister Nancy Barber from Kansas. Sunday June 8, was the day appointed for the re-opening of the house for the proclamation of the truth and the worship of the household; and fourteen brothers and sisters from Cleveland went down to cheer them by their presence and words of comfort; and to speak of the things concerning the kingdom and the name of Jesus the Anointed to the alien. It was a day long to be remembered. Tears of love, gratitude and anticipation flowed freely as we gathered at the table of the Lord; we thought of the coming One and being made like him; we thought of him who has already done so much for us, and is still doing much for us,—we thought too, of his coming forth and causing us to be seated at his table,—and girding himself and serving us; we also comforted ourselves with the words that tell us that "the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first, then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air,—and so shall we ever be with the Lord." Oh, what a meeting! O what greetings! May the glad day soon roll around! May it find us ready! In the mean time let us be sure to avail ourselves of all present tense blessings,—not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together as the manner of some is, but exhorting one another and so much the more as we see the day approaching—the Lord having promised to be in our midst every time,—and bless his dear name, his Word was never known to fail.

We know that Paul may plant and Apollos may water but only God can give the increase, but we trust this effort of the faithful few in Salem to witness more publicly for God and truth, may be owned and blessed of him. Amen.

Spiritualism!

For M. K.—you are aware we do not believe in spiritualism, and therefore you should not ask us to first discuss that system, and then you will discuss with us the question of the soul. We decline to do that, because the belief of spiritualism is based upon the assumption that the soul of man is immortal. We hold that assumption to be unwarranted; that there is no evidence either in nature or revelation that the soul is immortal and survives the dissolution of the body. Prove to us that the soul or real man never dies, and it will be time enough then to consider whether or not certain "manifestations" claimed to be seen by Spiritualists are due to the conscious existence of the soul or spirits of the departed.

To make our position clear we will briefly state it:

We believe the teaching of the Bible to be that man is a soul or breathing creature. "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul.' Gen. ii. 7. Man is over and over again spoken of as a soul. And we grant that the word soul is sometimes applied to the life of a man, as for instance in Luke xii. 20, "Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee,"—margin of Revised Version "thy life." Life and soul are frequently used interchangeably, and soul is often applied to the body, but it never says that the soul is immortal.

As to the Spirit,—we have the word applied to the disposition of man, to his physical energy, and even to his breath, but generally speaking the spirit is that which characterizes the man. Underlying all this is the universal spirit or power of God, which is the

and by which man is preserved in being. The same spirit of God sustains the lower creation as well as man. In Psalm xxxvi. 6, we read, "O Lord, thou preservest man and beast." In Psalm civ. 30, "Thou sendest forth thy Spirit, they are created,"—verse 29, "Thou hidest thy face, they are troubled; thou takest away their breath, they die and return to their dust." In Job xxxiv. 14, "If God set his heart upon man, if he gather unto himself his spirit and his breath, all flesh shall perish together, and man shall TURN AGAIN INTO DUST."

So according to the Scriptures man is composed of body, soul and spirit, but not one of these is the man—all three combined constitute the man, and when they are separated the man dies,—ceases to be.

But we do not believe that death ends all. What we deny is the present immortality of man. We believe in immortality in a future life, by being brought back from the grave, hence the Bible doctrine of resurrection. That future life—beyond the grave—will be life manifested, not through a corruptible body as now, but an incorruptible, as Paul expresses it, "a spiritual body;" one as tangible, as corporeal as this, but incapable of decay.

This, in brief, is our position, and as yet it remains untouched by spiritualists. It has often been assailed, but never taken. We are Bible believers, and discuss the subject on Biblical lines, and prove thereby what makes viz; that "the dead know not anything." Spiritualists make quite a showing in contention with religionists of the popular theory, because they believe the soul to be inherently immortal, and cannot make use of the testimony we do. Spiritualists in controversy with the popular theorists undertake to prove by the Bible, that spiritualism is true,—but when we confront them with the statements, that "the dead praise not the Lord;" "the dead know not anything," and a score of others, then they have to show their true colors and throw the whole book away.

There are plenty of assertions as to the truth of Spiritualism and its wonders,—but they have never been demonstrated,—let them come to the light with it. Do not ask us to go to darkness. Our Lord's miracles were not done at seances, in cabinets, or behind screens but were done openly. How can apologists for that system hold up their heads,—after the exposure made in a justice's court in Cleveland recently, where a woman paid heavily for directions how to perform the trick, and becoming disgusted with the affair, wanted her money back, failing in which, she retained the articles of clothing by which she was to personate persons long since dead? The lawyers crowded the instructor in the case so hard, that he made a full confession of the fraud.

Reader.

"It is the neglected wheel that capsizes the vehicle, and maims for life the passengers. It is the neglected leak that sinks the ship. It is the neglected field that yields briars instead of bread. It is the neglected spark kindling near the magazine whose tremendous explosion sends its hundreds of mangled wretches out of life. The neglect of an officer to throw up a rocket on a certain night caused the fall of Antwerp and postponed the deliverance of Holland for twenty or more years. The neglect of a sentinel to give an alarm hindered the fall of Sebastopol, and resulted in the loss of many thousand lives. And it will be neglect of the offer of the salvation which is in Christ Jesus, which will drown you in perdition if you do not repent!"

Truth will stand the battering rams of opposition, while the crumbling walls of preconceived ideas and superstition will fall beneath the blaze and flash of the cannon of solid facts.

The Missing Ones.

Yes! Our June Conference in Michigan was indeed good, but if I had taken time to meditate, it would have lost all its blessing for me. Why? The missing ones. The dear faces of former years, so many, where were they? Bro. Lorenzo Decker and family, moved to the northern penninsula; Bro. Moses and family having already passed through so much sorrow are still caring for the sick and aged father and could not leave him, how they were missed. Dear Sister Miller with her white, saintly face, detained at home by cause of feeble health. Sister Barnum always such a help in the social meetings home with the sick. Sister Nichols with her inspiration in the song service, away in Naples, New York, caring for a dear niece suffering with a broken limb. Our own dear father and mother, where are they? Mother sleeping in the "windowless palace of rest," the dear father, how could he come without her? But O, how we missed them all, and how we longed to once more look on the dear faces of yore. And so many more, we can see them in imagination, filling their places, they were nearly always at their post of duty, where are they? Some sleeping, others too far removed, still others prevented by business, sickness, lack of means, all perhaps wishing to be present, and while at home their prayers are being heard at the Father's throne for blessings to rest on the meetings, doing all they can, but O, how they were missed, and the sad thought comes—some who sent their words of cheer with regrets that they could not come, will no more be seen at these gatherings, anticipating all this we can only pray, "Come Lord Jesus, come quickly." The familiar face of old Bro. Hoyt, so long a warrior for the truth, comes before us, but it too is a face of the past, and he "sleeps in Jesus." But while these sad thoughts come in retrospection, we must not let them fill and spoil the present hour for the Master's work. It rejoiced all to see Sister Hoyt, feeble though she is, occupy the rocker always used by Mother Woodward, and to hear her testimony for truth. Bro. and Sister O. R. L. Crozier, whose absence from these gatherings had long been felt, neither of them physically strong, Bro. Crozier especially feeble, both with us once more; long will we remember his testimony Sunday morning, as he slowly rose from his chair to give his impressive words. Brethren, let love be the ruling passion of your lives, for "God is love". A few more briefly added but thrilling words, and he sat down, while we quickly asked ourselves the question, Will this be his last testimony in Conference meeting? Then I thought of my own dear husband who has given the best part of his life battling for truth, now past 71 years, and I can realize with his failing health his work will soon be done. How little the world appreciates a faithful life until it is beyond the toil, then how loud their praises, when ears are too dull to hear, lips too mute to answer back. It was for his sake and the truth I gave my life, may God accept the offering. How many silent lips could speak these words. Bros. Miller, Simonds, Lyons, Claplin, J. B. Cook, O scores who died in the faith, and are awaiting their reward. May we too be faithful, and receive the "well done" in God's good time.

Yours in the work,

M. A. Woodward.

The Day of Crucifixion.

Dear Restitution:

I have given quite a good deal of attention lately to the subject of Christ's crucifixion with special reference to the actual date upon which it occurred. If we accept the popular notion that the crucifixion occurred on Friday, and that the Master became victor over death and the grave early Sunday morning, I fail to find in it the fulfilment of the prophecy found in Matthew xii. 40.

"For as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly; so shall the Son of Man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth."

I did not, however, start out with the thought of asking for a solution of the problem involved in the above, for I find that those who have made a careful survey of the subject are almost unanimous in their belief that there is no Scriptural ground for belief in Friday crucifixion.

In Mark xv. 42-45, we read, "And now when the even was come, because it was the preparation, that is, the day before the sabbath, Joseph of Arimathea .....went in boldly unto Pilate, and craved the body of Jesus."

Superficially read, one would conclude from this reading that Jesus was crucified on the day which preceded the Sabbath (Saturday) which would be Friday. By reference to John xix. 31, however, you will find that this sabbath which followed this preparation day was a high day—a special sabbath—not one of the seventh day sabbaths—else why the need on the part of John to make special mention of this particular sabbath? Add to this the fact that Israel had other sabbaths during the year than the seventh day sabbaths, or Saturday, and we can easily see that when the word "sabbaths" is used it may have reference to any of these as well as to the seventh day sabbath.

Referring now to Exodus xii., read the chapter carefully. Here we find the type of which Christ is the antitype. The Paschal lamb was to be slain on the fourteenth day of the month in the afternoon. In this chapter also we find the account of the week of unleavened bread, which began with a holy day (the fifteenth), a rest day, which was as much of a sabbath day as any God had commanded them to keep. This week was to close with a sabbath (or rest) day. Coming on a certain day of the month, this sabbath would not necessarily come on the same day of the week each year, no more than any other event celebrated on a certain day of the month would come on the same day of the week each year. Take the Fourth of July for example. John xix. 14 says distinctly that this day was "the preparation of the passover."

The point which perplexes me in this investigation is this: The Israelites were to put away from their houses all leaven beginning with the evening of the fourteenth of Abib, or Nisan. The fifteenth, then, would be the feast of unleavened bread. In other words, the passover week, in which no leaven was to be eaten, was ushered in on the even (going down of the sun) of the fourteenth. Then the first day of unleavened bread would be the fifteenth day of Nisan or the day following the slaughter of the lamb. If Jesus, in fulfilment of the type in every particular, was crucified on the fourteenth of Nisan, what does Matthew xxvi. 17 mean in his reference to a dialogue which took place between Jesus and his disciples "the first day of the feast of unleavened bread?" The first day of the feast of unleavened bread would be the fifteenth of Nisan and for Jesus to fulfil the type as to date it were necessary that his crucifixion should take place on the even of the fourteenth. If Jesus was crucified on the fourteenth, then this dialogue must have taken place not later than the thirteenth. Then the feast of unleavened bread must have begun at least two days before the "seven days" of unleavened bread mentioned in Exodus xiii. I confess that there seems to be a tangle here. Who will unravel it?

Papers Sent to Michigan Conference.

Members of Church of God in Conference assembled:

Circumstances prevent me from meeting with you and hoping that you will pardon me for asking the privilege to occupy a few moments of your time, I wish to offer a few suggestions for your consideration. As Christians it is necessary to understand what a Christian's duty is. The Lord said, "If ye love me ye will keep my commandments." Turning to the old records we find the ten laws or commandments that came from God and penned by an inspired hand. These laws have ever since been the base of all law and spanned the ages until the time of Christ. He added two more on which he declared hung all the laws and the prophets. The first law endeavored to mete out exact justice while the added ones bestowed love. If we as Christians neglect to study the laws of our government, and the social influences that surround us we are committing a grievous error. Methinks I hear some one say, "It is a Christian's business and those things are too earthly for my consideration." When God created heaven and earth and all that in them dwell, he pronounced it very good. He placed man on earth because he wanted him there, and gave him dominion over all living things that moveth upon it and the Lord said, "Occupy until I come." Hence it is our place of business, and it is our duty to use the talents that God gave us, to make our laws and our social conditions conform as nearly as possible to the divine teaching. It is things we can do, instead of things we cannot do, that demand our attention, and our efforts will determine our reward. The Lord does not require us to do work that is impossible, if we act well our part, there we find the honor lies, and we will feel that "Blest is the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love, and that the fellowship of kindred minds is like to that above."

Ida Shaffer.

Dear Ones in Christ:

I wish to speak for Jesus, and have been wondering ever since receiving notice of the Conference meeting, what can I write that will cheer or comfort one. All I can say is, Look up, look around you at all the wonderful happenings in the last few months. What do all these things say to us? Dear ones, does it not say our blessed Master will not long delay his coming? Then let us look up and rejoice for he is soon coming, and then we will clasp glad hands, and again behold our loved ones that are sleeping in Jesus. Pray for us dear ones that we may be faithful. Your brother and sister in Christ.

William & Olive Covell.

Dear Sisters:

I wish I could say brothers too of the Tithing Society. It is three years since I met with you, but I have not forgotten to lay by the tithe, and will send a part of it to be used as the Lord may direct. How much I would like to be with you words cannot tell, but it seems impossible for me to leave home this time, but I will ask God to be with you, and that the meeting may be a blessing to you all; that each one may be so strengthened and built up in the hope of the gospel that they may return home to strengthen and encourage the churches to which they belong for there is much need of it. Dear sisters, let us be careful and keep ourselves unspotted from the world, do not join any worldly organization and thereby become unequally yoked together with unbelievers. The Christian has enough to do to attend to their Master's work, and if we become entangled with the different orders or societies of today the Lord's cause will be sure to suffer, because we have a divided interest. I am determined to be for God and he does not want a divided heart. Pray for me. Your Sister in Christ.

Addie West.

The apostle, drawing to the conclusion of one of his grand and mighty arguments says, "If God be for us who can be against us?" "If God is for us we can withstand the world; if he is not for us we are fighting in our own strength, and if he is against us we cannot prosper. If we would have God for us we must be for him; and if we would have him for us we must do things which will be pleasing in his sight. If the world is for us we cannot expect the help of God. If our lives are not in accordance with the will of God we cannot expect that God will be for us, but if we stand for him in truth and in righteousness, do his will from the heart, and obey his commands, then we may be sure that God will be for us; and in this assurance we may resist evil and smile at all the power of our adversaries, knowing that God will never leave us nor forsake us.

Brotherhood.

Say not, "It matters not to me;
My brother's weal is his behoof;"
For in this wondrous human web,
If your life's warp, his life is woof.

Woven together are the threads,
And you and he are in one loom;
For good or ill, for glad or sad,
Your lives must shed one common doom.

Conversions Under Philip's Preaching.

CONVERSION OF THE ETHIOPIAN EUNUCH.

After Philip had accomplished his evangelical labors in Samaria, "The angel of the Lord spake unto him, saying, Arise and go toward the south by that road leading down from Jerusalem to Gaza, this is a desert." Acts viii. 26. Gaza was the southernmost town in Palestine in the territory of the ancient Philistines. To go from the field of labors in evangelizing, where his hands were full of work and make a journey along a desert road with no stated object before him must have been staggering to his faith. But like Paul he was not disobedient to the heavenly vision; and like Abraham he went out not knowing whither he was going. An opportunity of preaching or rather giving instruction to one who was both willing and anxious to learn, was afforded him. A man of Ethiopia or upper Egypt, a eunuch of great authority under the queen of that country, had come to Jerusalem to worship, was returning, sitting in his chariot reading Isaiah the prophet. "Then the Spirit said unto Philip, Go near and join thyself to this chariot." The history says Philip ran. This was necessary in order to overtake the chariot moving in the same direction. As he drew near he heard the eunuch reading the 53 chapter of Isaiah according to our division into chapters. He was reading these words, "He was led as a sheep to the slaughter, and like a lamb dumb before his shearers, so opened he not his mouth; in his humiliation his judgment was taken away; and who shall declare his generation? for his life is taken from the earth." This chapter in Isaiah has given the Jewish Rabbinical interpreters no little trouble and has taxed their exegetical skill to find a character to which all these prophetical particulars would apply. It is needless to say they have not found the counterpart to these predictions nor will they until they find the crucified and risen Messiah, the one they rejected against the testimony of miracle and prophecy. This chapter with some others belongs to the Scriptures, the reading of which and hearing read is interdicted to the laity among the Jews. Parents will not read nor suffer their children to read these passages.

Philip on hearing what the eunuch was reading put the question, "Understandest what thou readest?" This man was not worse off than thousands are today in reference to plainly revealed doctrine of the Bible. False notions and the spiritual mode of interpretation have closed the eyes of the understanding. To Philip's question the man replied, "How can I, except some man should guide me?" Fortunate for him the right man had joined his company. Philip, being an inspired evangelist could give him the necessary instruction to "make him wise unto salvation." So ignorant was this man, though a Jewish proselyte, that he did not know whether the prophet spoke of himself or of some other man. Then Philip began at the same Scripture and preached unto him Jesus—showing him to be the glorious burden of this prediction and interpreting it in the light of the facts of his history—the things that had occurred so recently at Jerusalem. He showed how this Jesus was truly the Son of God, attested to be such by miracles, wonders and signs wrought through him in the midst of the Jewish people. The eunuch, no doubt heard in the city strange things about this reputed prophet, what he said and did and his tragic end at the hands of his countrymen; but it is not likely that he heard the report of his resurrection on the third day. Sharing the unbelief of the Jews, he regarded it as false. But Philip showed how completely the facts of history so recently occurring had met the predictions of the prophet. All the specifications here given as far as they related to current times had been fulfilled. It was of primary importance that every apostle and evangelist should show the claims of Nazareth as the Messiah of the prophets. But the instruction of Philip without doubt embraced the future kingdom, like his message at Samaria; although in his brief history no mention is made of it. That the gospel of the kingdom was proclaimed on this occasion is a foregone conclusion inasmuch as every apostle and evangelist was under orders to preach it. In that period of pure truth no one would think of leaving it out. Isaiah 53 chapter read by the eunuch and forming the text of Philip's talk covers about the whole ground of the gospel. Christ's sacrificial offering for sin is here taught, his living again is implied in the words, "He shall see his seed, he shall prolong his days;" and in the language following, his lofty official dignity as conqueror and king is clearly implied. The man has heard enough. The heart that was athirst for knowledge is now resolved on obedience and looking for the opportunity to show his faith by that first overt act, baptism. Water of sufficient depth is near. "Here is water what doth hinder me to be baptized?" Philip had instructed him on this point. He knew what it was, and its design. And they both went down into the water, both Philip and the eunuch, he "immersed him." Dinglott rendering, immersed him, that is it, and no ground for modes. When men begin to talk about modes of baptism they betray their ignorance or else their dishonesty. Some contend that because the Greek preposition eis is in some cases rendered into English by "unto" therefore Philip and the eunuch only went down to the water's edge and he (Philip) sprinkled him. Then how could they both come up out of the water if neither were in it. Others, letting the language stand as translated, take the person into the water and there sprinkle him. How unreasonable to thus act—wetting the clothes of both administrator and candidate, when sprinkling could be done on dry land. In the case of the eunuch, his servant or attendant could have brought the water in a cup with which travelling parties were supplied, and the act performed in the chariot with the greatest convenience and dispatch. Had sprinkling been the thing demanded by this man there would have been no going down into and coming up out of the water, be assured of this. In modern times it is but the shallowest pretense of conforming to the language by going into the water to do a little sprinkling. If ever the rule of "fitness of things" applies, it is here. If a man is to be buried in water it is very natural to go into the water to effect this. If he is to be sprinkled it is natural to keep away from rivers, lakes and pools as most Pseudo-Baptists administer sprinkling or pouring "high and dry." I have read several articles from the pens of sprinklers, in which the position was taken that baptism in apostolic practice was not uniformly by immersion, and yet before they got through there was not found water enough in all Asia to bury a person, except at Jerusalem, and here to baptize in the pools with which the city abounded would have spoiled the water for culinary purposes; or as another objection the number to be immersed was too great for the few who were properly qualified to do the work in one day. This is a very silly objection to urge against a practice based upon the well established usage of a word familiar to every Greek speaking inhabitant of the world of that day. The writer of the article on baptism in Smith's Bible dictionary thinks it "hardly likely that immersion was possible" at that Pentecostal ingathering and says this after having said, "Baptism properly and literally means immersion," and that, "the language of the New Testament and of the primitive fathers sufficiently point to immersion as the common mode." Men seem determined even at the risk of sound argument and fair criticism to maintain a practice that came in centuries after the Christian religion was founded.

Genesis. Chap. 48.

1. And it came to pass after these events recounted, that it was told that Jooseeph, Thy father is disquieted; and taking up his two sons Manasse and Ephraim he went unto Jakoob;

2. And it was told Jakoob, saying, Lo, thy son Jooseeph is coming unto thee; and Israeel strengthened himself and sat upon his bed.

3. And Jakoob said unto Jooseeph, My God appeared unto me in Louza in a land of Chanaan, and blessed me,

4. And said unto me, Lo, I shall increase thee and multiply thee and make thee into synagogues of nations and I shall give thee this land, and to thy seed after thee in age-lasting possession.

5. Now then thy two sons who were born to thee in a land of Aiguptos before I came unto thee into Aiguptos, are mine, Ephraim and Manasse, as Hroubeen and Sumeoon shall they be mine.

6. And whatever progeny thou shalt beget after these shall be in the name of their brothers; they shall be called upon the lots of these.

7. And when I was coming out of Mesoputamia of Suria, Hrucheel thy mother died in a land of Chanaan, as I was drawing nigh towards the hippodrome of Chabratha of the land to go to Ephratha: and I buried her on the highway of the hippodrom. This is Bethlehem.

8. And when Israeel saw the sons of Jooseeph, he said, Who are these of thine?

9. And Jooseeph said unto his father, They are my sons whom God gave me here: and Jakoob said, Lead them unto me, that I may bless them.

10. Now Israeel's eyes were heavy with old age, and he was not able to look (that is to raise the lids), and he drew them nigh unto him, and kissed and embraced them.

11. And Israeel said unto Jooseeph, Lo, I have not been bereft of thy face and God hath shown me thy seed also.

12. And Jooseeph led them out from between his knees, and did homage with his face upon the ground.

13. And Jooseeph taking his two sons, Ephraim by the right hand and at Israeel's left hand, and Manasse by the left hand, and Israeel's right, he led them unto him.

14. And Israel extending his right hand put it upon the head of Ephraim, and he was the younger, and his left hand on the head of Manasse crossing his hands.

15. And he blessed them and said, May the God in whose sight my fathers Habraam and Isaak were pleasing, the God who supporteth me from youth unto this day.

16. The angel who delivereth me from all the evil things, have blessed these boys; and may my name and the name of my fathers Habraam and Isaak have been invoked upon them; and may they have been multiplied into a vast multitude upon the earth.

17. And when Jooseeph saw that his father had placed his right hand upon the head of Ephraim it seemed a grievous thing to him; and Jooseeph intervened to remove his father's hand from the head of Ephraim to the head of Manasse.

18. And Jooseeph said unto his father, not so father; for this is the first-born. Put thy right hand on his head.

19. And he was not willing; but said, I know, child, I know, and this one will be for a laity, and he will have been exalted; but his younger brother will be greater than he, and his seed will be for a multitude of nations.

20. And he pleased them on that day, saying, In you will Israel have been blessed people saying, May God have made thee as Ephraim and Manasse; and he placed Ephraim before Manasse.

21. And Israeel said unto Jooseeph, Lo, I am dying, and God will be with you and will return you into the land of your fathers.

22. And I give thee Sikima as a preferred gift above thy brethren, Sikima which I took out of the hand of the Amorraites with my sword and bow.

COMMENT.

In the 3rd verse R. V. "God Almighty" is "my God" in the text. And "Luz" is "Louza."

In the 4th verse R. V. "A company of peoples" is "synagogues of nations" a much stronger statement the reader will observe.

And "this land to thy seed after thee" in the text is "thee this land and to thy seed after thee"—an important omission this word "thee" would be in a deed of inheritance I think.

In the 7th verse R. V. "Paddan" is "Mesopotamia of Suria." We still know where that country is.

In same verse "thy mother" is omitted in R. V. Why?

Also R. V. omits any mention of the "hippodrome of Chabratha" in this verse. The importance of this omission is emphasized in the last clause of this verse, where "the hippodrome" (and not "Ephrath" R. V.) is identified as the site of the later "Bethlehem."

The 10th verse makes Israeel blind with old age, which also is not according to the text. Inability to raise the lids of the eyes is not want of vision and is a disease incident to people in middle life even sometimes.

In the 14th verse R. V. "guiding his hands wittingly" should be and is in the text "crossing his hands"—another instance of the early appearance in Scripture of the symbolic cross touching.

In the 19th verse R. V. "he also shall be great" should be "he also will have been exalted."

In the 22nd verse R. V. "one portion" should be the proper name "Sikima." The importance of this error or perversion is emphasized by the Psalmist's reference to this "preferred gift" and its Messianic significance thus indicated. Psalm 59 (60 C. V.

What is Life?

One author said our lives are what we make them. How many can realize the truth in this proverb, but they who have reached advanced years, those who have traveled one half century of life's rugged road may look back o'er the hills of time and sigh with many a deep regret, if I could but retrace my steps and smooth out those rough places, how different would have been life; but no there is no retracing, no backward turnings, only a blotting out, only a dirty spot can be seen as we erase the mis-givings of life. As we start out on life's journey we have pictured out one vast expanse of beautiful landscape covered with grass and with flowers, dotted every where, smooth as a floor, with not even a hill to break in on the genial splendor. This fine portrait can always be seen hanging in the distance, but it seems not to be stationary as we journey toward it. Gradually settles back out of reach, but still hopeful we are continually longing and seeking the road to this our enviable goal, only to be met by disappointment, sorrow and death. Life is not one long sweet dream, the curse has been planted, and until it is removed we may expect to travel up hill with this grim monster beckoning to us on every hand. Let us prepare ourselves to battle with him; this should be our greatest aspiration, arm yourselves boys and girls with loyalty and be able to meet temptation with bold defiance. Don't expect that some time in this life you are going to reach a garden of paradise and have smooth sailing enroute, but rather turn and clasp hands with him whose path was rough, but whose life was one of peaceful content, not in gratifying self, but doing for others and doing his Father's will. We are naturally selfish and we rush on through this world promising ourselves the fulfilment of honest intention, yet the time slips by and the opportunity for doing good is always just a wee bit ahead. We think we pass through this world but once, why not have a good time. If this sentiment could be reached through the sentiment of the poet we would be safe, for he says I want to give the oil of joy for tears. The faith to conquer doubts and fears, beauty for ashes would I give always, I am sure I shall not pass again this way. Rig I takes up too prominent a part in our lives, sooner or later we find the natural longings of a carnal heart cannot be satisfied, the more it participates in the changing scenes of this world the more it craves like a spoiled child, the more it is honored and indulged the less it appreciates. The shortest road to contentment is by sacrifice. Don't expect every one to bow to you, but sometimes bow to others. Have moral courage and moral courage means self mastery. Did some one call you a liar? Did it require moral courage to deal the person a blow for the offense? Not at all, you only responded to the animal nature it aroused in self. Did it require moral courage when asked to taste the glittering stuff to yield? No, moral courage would have refused in the face of a thousand taunts and jeers. Then I say again moral courage means self mastery, and if you have a reasonable amount of moral courage you have opened up in life a wide channel for heroic deeds, successes, manliness, virtue, character. Start right while young is the time to lay foundation for character. We sometimes hear folks say, I got up late this morning and could not do much today. So in life we spend the better part of it napping. Why not wake up, have an aim in life, shoot at it, hit it. Young people too often think this serenelliness belongs to older people, they think when I reach that stage in life I will be sober, I will lay aside carelessness and all bad habits. It will be much easier then, but just now it does not matter much, I have plenty of time. Days, months, years slip by, we have now reached the milestone we had pointed out too away back there in youth. We stop at the cross road of life and look back, surely this isn't the place we had pointed out too where there was a cross erected we meant to take up and carry on. Yes, there can be no mistake, but I have such a big load already. Yes, we find carelessness takes root in our lives, grows blossoms and bears fruit tenfold, and too late we find it a difficult task to rid ourselves of it. It is not so hard a matter to rid a field of small weeds, but when they have grown large, fastening their roots secure in the ground it takes a hard pull to loosen them. Then young people heed this warning cry, get rid of the small weeds.

Illinois Work.

I went to Hazel on May 20th, and was driven to the home of Alfred and Keturah Rogers.

The few brethren in that locality are scattered many miles apart, but some come regularly to meeting from eight to eleven miles. We feel happy to speak of the zeal, loyalty and faithfulness to truth manifested by most of the believers there, without encouragement by preaching.

They decided to try to keep up meetings at the Old Union Church once a month.

We had good attendance and interest considering adverse circumstances. Brother and Sister Rogers were rejoiced to see their daughter, Alta Rogers, and their son-in-law Charlie Kepley, obey the Lord's command in baptism. After baptism we partook of the Lord's supper at Bro. Rogers' home, and from there we went to the church building where we gave them a farewell talk on the "True Ecclesia, and the False Church."

They handed us $12.75 on time and expenses and bade us an affectionate farewell.

From here we went to Ripley, where we have a meeting house and a fair sized membership. We held meetings there for a week with a fairly good attendance.

Miss Florence Lanning and Miss Mabel Kendrick obeyed the gospel by baptism, and we take pleasure in introducing the above four noble young people to all who love the coming of Jesus.

On Decoration Day we went to the cemetery, where a crowd had assembled to show honor to the dead soldiers by placing perishable flowers over their graves. Their "deeds of valor" were portrayed with flowery speeches and vehemence of gesture and loud hand-clapping, to inspire in the youth who listened, the glory of war. But on the hillside in that cemetery we looked upon one lonely grave of perhaps the only true soldier sleeping there that was unnoticed by that ardent throng, unmarked by any dead stone monument, unstrewn by earth's quick-fading flowers, the unadorned and dark, silent sleeping place of J. M. Stephenson. We could not smother a fullness of heart, nor stop the silent tear, as we thought of these significant words:—"Therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew not him." And yet as we thought of the gulf between the true ecclesia and the world, the end of the way, and the present lesson it should teach, while we know that a short appeal to brethren would in a few days secure money enough to purchase a costly stone monument for that grave; yet, as we thought of how much better monument he has in his imperishable writings, and in the hearts of many he enlightened on eternal things, and on the glorious plan of salvation, we felt a wish that his grave might remain as it is, unmarked and undorned, as an example of the true soldier's fate and glory in this present evil cosmos; knowing that without a name carved on any lifeless thing, his resting place and his work will not be forgotten, neither by friends on earth nor our heavenly Father.

In the evening I offended some soldiers in my talk on Christian Citizenship. I contrasted the carnal and spiritual soldier, and modern patriotism with Christian patriotism. I reminded them of Jesus' rebuke to Peter for simply cutting off an ear:—"Put up thy sword, for all who take the sword, shall perish with the sword;" and also how, instead of advising his followers to fight for their homes against the Romans in the coming seige of Jerusalem he told them to run away to the mountains and hide!

It was a hard task to undertake after the grand speeches and declamations of the day, among whom the chief speaker was a "Reverend" of the so-called "Church of Christ!" I felt that it was my time and duty to show those who came to hear me, that neither bloody war nor rotten politics can mix with Christianity.

We received $15.00 from the brethren on work and expenses, and left for Kansas, June 5th.

May God's blessing rest on our efforts to declare all of the counsel of God, as far as light and time permits.

Obituary.

Sarah Moore died at Shelbyville, Neb., June 2, 1902, at the age of 72 years, 9 months and 23 days. The deceased was born in Muskingdom County, Ohio, August 9, 1829. She moved with her parents to Licking County, and was reared upon a farm. She was united in marriage with Henry Metheny, Sept. 23, 1852. To this union were born seven children, three having preceded her, the four remaining were present to mourn her loss. She moved with her husband to Carroll County, Ill., in the fall of 1863, and settled on a farm, and with the efficient labors of Bro. T. J. Whitesit and Bro. John Arnold she was instructed into the faith of the promises made to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, with David and his royal Son, the heir to his throne and kingdom. Being well versed in the gospel of Christ and the things concerning the kingdom of God, she with her husband in August, 1866, with the assistance of Bro. J. M. Stephenson, were baptized into the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of our sins. In the fall of seventy-one she received injuries that rendered her a helpless invalid and a great sufferer for the remainder of her days. She removed to Nebraska in 1880 with her husband, and in 1886 settled permanently at Shelby, Neb. For the past year she has been gradually declining until all realized that her days of suffering were few. The end came peacefully at last, and she sunk away as in a sweet sleep. She bore her long suffering with a meek and Christian spirit, never complaining, always cheerful, being asked of her hope would reply, all will be well in that day when Jesus comes to be glorified in his saints. I will here copy what was published by the editor of Shelby Sun.

Mrs. Metheny has been a sufferer for many years, but rallied at times when hopes were entertained of her recovery. She was a woman whom to know was to love. Enemies she had none, always living in harmony with those around her. She will be missed by all her friends, but by none so much as those who knew her best. Her grief-stricken husband by whose side she has lived so many years, and by the children they jointly reared to usefulness in life. She has gone and darkness came to those who love her but may the darkness of their grief be lost in the brightness of God's promised day of eternal rest. Her funeral was held at the family residence conducted by Rev. Beveridge of the United Brethren Church. He asked the husband if he had any choice of Scripture, to which he replied, no, all was good. The minister selected for his reading 1 Cor. xv., for his text Romans viii. 18, both proved to be favorite selections of the deceased; when the holy Word was read to her these were always read first. A large number of friends assembled to pay their last tribute of respect to their departed friend. The remains were interred in Shelby cemetery, there to quietly rest till the morning of the resurrection, when she will come forth again to die no more.

Announcement.

The fourteenth annual session of the Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus, in Iowa, will be held at Waterloo, Iowa, beginning Friday, Aug. 15, and continuing over Sunday Aug. 21, occupying its beautiful camp ground situated in the Cedar River Park, which is reached in a few minutes ride on the street cars, from all railroad depots in the City.

Board will be furnished all, at a very low rate, at the dining hall—not exceeding ten cents for each meal.

We expect several preaching brethren from abroad, whose names will appear later. Come and enjoy this Conference with us. Matters of importance need your attention. Come, let us reason together, and not forsake the assembling of ourselves together, and so much the more, as we see the day approaching.

We hope for a large attendance this year. Begin at once to prepare for the meeting, and make a special effort to attend the beginning, so that a reduced rate may be assured, as it will save a large amount in railroad fare to the brethren, and will increase the attendance.

Brethren let us awake—the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.

Full particulars as to reduced rates and so on will appear later.

O. J. ALLARD, Pres.

SADIE CLARK, Sec.

Shirking duty is robbing one's self of growth. It may be true enough, for the present moment, as the shirker says in trying to justify himself, that it does not matter much to the world whether he does his little part or not. The point is not so much whether a man will be missed as what he misses. It need not have mattered much to the world if David had shirked the battle with Goliath. God could have had the burly Philistine done away with by some other means. But all of David's subsequent history might have been told in a sentence, in that event. It is a poor investment to buy a moment's ease at the expense of untold manliness.—S. S. Times.

Do you like to get THE RESTITUTION each week and read the articles and letters it contains? Did you ever think that your brother who sits near you would get a like benefit and enjoyment if he had it also? Get him to subscribe for 1902. it will cost you very little to ask him, and you may be the means of doing him good.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

Poetry.

Awake, Thou that Sleepest.

The watch towers gleam, the lights are bright,
The day of Christ appears;
Throw off the languor of the night
And banish all your fears.

Rejoice today, lift up your voice,
Proclaim the precious word;
Exhort the nations to rejoice
And serve the coming Lord.

The fields are white, 'tis harvest time,
The reapers—where are they?
The Master comes; Oh, hope sublime.
Awake and watch and pray.

The Bridegroom comes; the King draws near;
Arise, repeat the call.
The Lord is nigh, his voice we hear;
Arouse, ye servants, all.

He comes to fill the earth with joy;
He comes to banish pain;
Arise, and enter his employ
To speed his glorious reign.

What We Believe. No 6

Another subject prominently mentioned as an article of belief in the Church of God, and intimately related to those treated in former articles, is "the restoration of Israel." By the term "Israel" we understand the descendants of the twelve sons of Jacob, later named Israel. The form of this article at once reveals that Israel is not now in the condition in which it once was, and is again to be; and also that a "restoration" to a former state is in prospect.

There is no people that presents so unique a history as the people commonly known as "the children of Israel." They are an interesting people because descendants of Abraham, the "friend of God" (Isa. xli. 8; Psa. cv. 6), and the part they have played in the world's history, from their sojourn in Egypt down to the present. The Bible is strictly an Israelitish Book, for all the writers engaged in its composition, were Israelites. These people, among all the nations, God chose (Deut. vii. 6; xiv. 2; xxxii. 9; Psa. cxxxv. 4) to entrust to them his oracles (Rom. iii. 2), and to employ them in giving the world a revelation of his will concerning mankind. Deut. vii. 7, 8; x. 15. In the land of Egypt, "the house of bondage," they learned some bitter but much needed lessons. From thence the Lord delivered them and led them "with an outstretched arm," bringing them after years of wandering in the wilderness, into the land previously pledged to Abraham and his seed for an everlasting possession. This was apportioned among the different tribes, and here they dwelt for about five hundred years after entering in, until the days of Jeroboam and Rehoboam, when ten of the tribes refused to submit to the lawful king, and they were divided into two nations; one consisting of the ten tribes, being called "Israel," while the two tribes remaining loyal to the house of David, constituted the kingdom of "Judah." In this condition they continued until B. C. 721, when the northern kingdom—Israel—was invaded by the Assyrians, and the people were deported to Assyria, from which they never returned to their own land. Later—B. C. 607—the southern kingdom—Judah—became the object of attack by the Babylonians by whom the Jews were carried into Babylon, where they remained seventy years. At the expiration of this period, as predicted by the prophet Jeremiah (c. xxv. 12; xxix. 10), they were returned to the land of their fathers, but their former glory never returned to them.

To these varied experiences of this people, and their relation to God's purpose, I wish to devote my attention in this article. We often sing, "God moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform;" and this is true of Israel. From among these people God purposed to raise up the Prophet like unto Moses (Deut. xviii. 15-19), which is Jesus of Nazareth. Acts iii. 6-22. The Ruler (having "the sceptre") and Lawgiver was to come out of Judah (Gen. xlix. 10); and many hundreds of years after this prophecy the fact is recorded that "it is evident that our Lord sprang out of Judah." Heb. vii. 14. Bethlehem was to be the birth place of him "that is to be Ruler in Israel" (Micah vii. 2); and at his birth the angels related to the shepherds upon the hills of Judea, that "unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord." Luke ii. 11. See also verse 4 same chapter. How applicable in every sense are the words of Paul, "of whom (the Israelites), as concerning the flesh, Christ came." Rom. ix. 4, 5. Here call special attention to the literality of the fulfillment of these predictions relating to Christ.

We may here also record some of the threats God made against the Israelites in case they should turn from his commandments. The attentive reader will turn to Deut. xxviii. and read verses 15 to 68. Did these things literally come to pass? Not only were they visited in the land with the curses denounced against them, but the Lord also, by means of the nation he brought against them (ff. 49-53), plucked them from the land whither they had gone to possess it, and scattered them "among all people, from one end of the earth even to the other." 63, 64. Many had been the judgments of God visited upon these people up to the time of Christ; they were then only "few in number," and it was said concerning this remnant that they should "fall by the edge of the sword, and be led away captive into all nations; and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles (nations) until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." Luke xxi. 24; xix. 41-44. These predictions of Jesus had a most signal fulfillment in the siege and destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans in A. D. 70; and those relating to the treading down of Jerusalem by the Gentiles are still in process of fulfillment. Now, if God so literally carried out his threats against these people, what good reason is there for holding that his promises concerning the same people, of which there is a great abundance, should not be just as literally fulfilled? I will cite several of these promises of restoration. "And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall set his hand again the second time, to recover the remnant of his people, which shall be left, from Assyria, and from Egypt, and from Pathros, and from Cush, and from Elam, and from Shinar, and from Hamath, and from the islands of the sea. And he shall set up an ensign for the nations, and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth." Isa. xi. 11, 12. Where shall they be gathered?" "In those days the house of Judah shall walk with (marg. "to") the house of Israel, and they shall come together out of the land of the north to the land that I have given for an inheritance to your fathers." Jer. iii. 15. "Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land." Ezek. xxxvii. 21. What is the object of this gathering? "And I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel; and one king shall be king to them all; and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all." Ezek. xxxvii. 22. Will they ever again be removed after this gathering and establishment in their own land? "And they shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob my servant, wherein your fathers have dwelt; and they shall dwell therein, even they, and their children, and their children's children forever, and my servant David shall be their prince for ever." Ezek. xxxvii. 25, 26. "And I will plant them upon their land, and they shall no more be pulled up out of their land, which I have given them, saith the Lord." Amos ix. 15.

Nor are we confined to the Old Testament for statements like the above relating to the restoration of Israel. We may read in the angel's message to Mary that "He (Jesus) shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David; and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Lu. i. 30-33. The same sentiment finds expression in the words of Jesus to the apostles, "Ye are they which have continued with me in my temptations. And I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me; that ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel." Luke xxii. 28-30. These Scriptures supply the inference that "the twelve tribes of Israel" had, at the time those words were spoken, not yet been regathered and restored according to the divine plan. But we are not confined to conjecture, for the Epistle of James was addressed "to the twelve tribes which are scattered abroad" (or, "the twelve tribes in the dispersion," as some translators give it). Jas i. 1. The time for this sitting on thrones and judging the twelve tribes of Israel is "in the regeneration when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of his glory." Matt. xix. 28. This sitting in the throne of his glory will be after "the Son of Man shall come in his glory." Matt. xxv. 31. It is after their gathering into their own land that there shall be "one King to them all; and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all." Ezek. xxxvii. 22.

I submit in all candor that if the threats made against Israel, resulting in their scattering among the nations, were so minutely carried out, why should not the promise of restoration be just as faithfully and literally fulfilled? Our God not only makes but also keeps covenants. He said that for their disregard of his judgments and statutes the land should be left of them. "And yet for all that, when they be in the land of their enemies, I will not cast them away, neither will I abhor them, utterly, and to break my covenant with them; for I am their God." He made a covenant with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob concerning the land of Canaan (Lev. xxvi. 41-43), to give it to them for an everlasting possession, and this possession has never, up to the present, been enjoyed, as is evident from the frequent references to the certainty of the fulfillment of these promises. Micah vii. 20; Luke i. 72, 73; Acts xxvi. 6, 7. Would God by his holy prophets and his own Son inspire hopes and anticipations in the minds of his people that he never intended for them to realize? What was the meaning of that anxious looking for "redemption at Jerusalem" (Luke ii. 38); redemption for "Israel" (Luke xxiv. 22); "waiting for the kingdom of God" (Mark xv. 43); the "hope of the promise made of God unto the fathers?" Acts xxvi. 6, 7. When properly interpreted it means not only that God made promises of redemption to Israel, but the most devout among them at all times implicitly believed in and confidently looked for the fulfilment of those promises. Let God be true, though every man be false.

But why this gathering of Israel? Because they will be the first to recognize the rightful King when once he has assumed his reign, and will be the first subjects in the future kingdom. The law will go forth from Zion and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem (Isa. ii. 3), and thither will men of all nations go saying to the favored ones of the house of Israel, "We will go with you; for we have heard that God is with you." Zech. viii. 20-23. That glorious time will be after the gathering of Israel, after the coming of Christ in power and great glory, after the immortalization of the righteous. Then Christ shall "reign over the house of Jacob," the twelve tribes regathered; and with him in his kingdom will be the saints who, like him, have been made perfect through trial and suffering. Heb. ii. 10; 1 Peter i. 7.

The eyes of multitudes of Israelites today are longingly turned toward their own country. "His own" (Jno. i. 11) to whom Jesus the "King of the Jews" (Matt. ii. 2; xxvii. 37) came in lowly servant's form (Phil. ii. 7), did not recognize his claims, because, while they somewhat apprehended the glory of Christ, did not take into account his sufferings, of which their own prophets spoke in ages before. 1 Pet. i. 11. And the nominal church of today is committing an error equally as grave and hurtful; for although it lauds the suffering of Christ, it misapprehends "the glory that should follow," and its manner of following. The spirit of Christ recognizes both the suffering and the glory.

Brother Underwood:

Five more have confessed faith in the establishment of the kingdom of God upon the earth with Christ as King of kings; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous at Christ's coming, they to reign with him as joint heirs, and eternal life through Jesus Christ as the Christian's only hope. On the evening of June 17, the brethren and friends met at the home of the writer and after a brief service reviewing the history of baptism, its significance, and what it means to walk in newness of life, all repaired to the bank of our beautiful Rock River where were planted in the likeness of Christ's death the following named persons: Mrs. Sarah Eychaner, Mrs. Margaret Waite, Henry S. Stroh and Minnie his wife, and Mrs. Ella McClarvie.

How it rejoices the heart to see those who think on these things coming out and taking a determined stand for the truth. These all, though not rich in this world's goods, are rich in faith. Brethren, let your prayers assist these who are now our brothers and sisters. May God bless them and keep them until he sends his Son to claim those who are his and then be caught up to meet him in the clouds of heaven.

S. J. LINDSAY.

Brother Underwood:

We wish to say a few words of encouragement through THE RESTITUTION. We hope that when the Conference meets at Kansas City that Oklahoma will be remembered. That there is a grand work here. Brother Oliver has preached the gospel of the kingdom here. The first night of the meeting four souls came out to hear; at the last of the meeting the house would not hold the people. Some gladly received the Word; some said they were sorry that they did not hear of the meeting sooner; some want to know when he will be back again; some that never heard him speak and hearing others speak of him have requested me to let them know when he comes. My wife said she wished the world could hear it.

We expect Brother Oliver to be with us in the near future. We also want to make arrangements to have Bro. George Kidwell of St. Paul, Ark. to be with us at the next meeting. We hope to have a good meeting. My wife and I are the only ones of the faith here. We stand for the faith with our face to the foe.

Yours, in hope of ieternal life.

MR. & MRS. J. M. DEFFENBAUGH.

Dear Restitution:

The well-beloved paper has been a great joy to me in my declining years. I do think that Brother W. H. Wilson answers Bible questions so plain and so biblical that a fool need not err in understanding the truth. Perhaps the reason why I think they are so plain is because I communicate with our heavenly Father every day for an understanding of truth. Bro. Joblin writes such splendid and soul-cheering articles. May God bless them all and may their lives be long upon earth. Also THE RESTITUTION to send the gospel news to all the world for a witness, then may the glorious time come when we with heads up will see the King come in all his beauty. How I long for that time to come when sin will cease to be.

Yours, watching and waiting for the kingdom.

MRS. SARAH BOWMAN.

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ:

I thought I would write a few lines to let you know that I am still in the land of the living, and I thank the good Lord for it. I am all alone here. I have no preaching but read the dear old RESTITUTION. I am strong in the faith and enjoy reading the good encouraging letters from the brothers and sisters. How plain they make it, so that any one might understand. Oh, how hard they have been working and searching the Scriptures to get the truth before the people, yet they will not read nor heed the warning. Surely we are nearing the end. All signs show it plainly. It is now as it was in the days of Noah. They would not heed his preaching and they all went down to an awful destruction. Dear brothers and sisters, let us keep ourselves unspotted from this sinful world and keep in the straight and narrow path that our Lord laid out for us.

Your Sister, in hope of meeting you all in the kingdom of God when Jesus comes.

MARY A. VERMILLION.

Editor Restitution:

We could not get along without this dear paper in our household, as it gives information on some points that we would hardly find out any other way as we are, properly speaking, isolated from any of the brethren of the "One Faith" and when we are through reading our paper we give it to some one who may be "an alien from the commonwealth of Israel," and who need the "kingdom of Christ" preached to them instead of a "kingdom in their soul" as is preached to them now, and many here believe it, not having the light of the gospel of Christ preached to them. I so much wish that one of our gospel preachers could come up here, (Eastport, Mich.) and preach the truth as it is so much needed here, as in many other places.

Wishing you every success in the faith, I am your Brother in Christ.

F. C. STEMMEN.

Dear Waiting Ones:

The time for rejoicing is surely here. "What!" some one will say, "Rejoice over earth's calamities?" Ah, it is the time that the Bible tells us to lift up our heads, for our redemption is nigh. If each of us was sure our redemption was nigh, I think the rejoicing would be spontaneous. Well, if we are doing our duty in full we may be pretty sure it is near at hand; for the signs indicate it very surely. Earthquakes, famines and volcanoes, killing people by the thousands is getting to be a common occurrence, and the Lord says, "When ye see these things coming to pass, lift up your heads." Yes; you will have to lift up your head if you see; for he has promised the faithful few that "it shall not come nigh thee, only with thine eyes shalt thou behold." Oh, how diligent we should be if we hope to escape the terrible judgments God has prepared for the careless ones. I use the word, "careless," because they are the ones to whom God will show the least mercy; for does he not say for us not to be lukewarm. Yes; he would rather we were cold. We advise the brothers and sisters everywhere be diligent while you have any being. If you are only able to pay for one paper let it be THE RESTITUTION. If you are able to get up on Sunday morning and make yourself tidy enough to go visiting, you could go to meeting first if you have one to go to, and if you have no preaching you can have Bible reading every Sunday (as we do here) in the absence of a preacher, but be sure to go to it every time you can, this is a duty no one else can perform for you. If we go anywhere else on the one hour in the week appointed to the Lord's service, let the text ring in our ears all the way, "What! can you not watch with me one hour?" Now one hour in the week is not asking much and you can give as many more as you think best; but try to feel it your duty to give that at least.

In love to all the faithful.

LAURA SKEELS.

Do you like to get THE RESTITUTION each week and read the articles and letters it contains? Did you ever think that your brother who sits near you would get a like benefit and enjoyment if he had it also? Get him to subscribe for 1902. It will cost you very little to ask him, and you may be the means of doing him good.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JUNE 25, 1902. NUMBER 24.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, prerequisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

A Voice From Moriah.

The brethren at Moriah, Ill., have decided to hurry up and build a church house, to be ready for a Conference there in October. Most of them are poor and cannot go to the Oregon Conference, but they say they can furnish plenty to eat for those who go to Moriah, and some who live 20 and 30 miles away will drive there, so we look for a good, old-fashioned time. But they need about $200.00 help, which I have told them we could get by asking for it through our papers. I baptized eleven there, and we have many sympathizers in the vicinity.

We need a building as a centre for work in that locality, and for a place of membership and assemblage together. I have confidence that the brethren will respond promptly, so that in a few weeks the work on the building may begin.

Dear brother or sister, send it, if it be but a mite, to our faithful brother, Lewis Weaver, Moriah, Clark Co., Ill., but draw your order on Casey, Ill., as Moriah is but a country Post Office.

Help the willing, struggling church at Moriah. I know you will.

W. L. CRAWL.

Obituary.

Mrs. W. J. Beebe was born at Painsville, Ohio, October 28, 1835, where she lived until she was married to W. J. Beebe in 1859. Since then has lived in Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa and Nebraska. Came to Nebraska in 1892, died June 10, of heart trouble. Was ailing for some time but was only bedfast about three days and unconscious when the end came. She has been a member of the Church of God for the past 34 years. Was baptized at Walkashma, Mich., by Bro. Carter, and has lived a Christian life ever since, nobly defending the faith on all occasions. And she went down unto the dark enemy death with a firm hope of a resurrection from among the dead at the appearing of the Lord and Master according to the promise of the Master, that he that believeth in me though he were dead yet shall he live. And her only wish was to be able to live until the coming of the Master, which wish grew stronger as she saw the day approaching. She leaves two sons, a daughter, a daughter-in-law and a niece besides many friends to mourn her loss. She was buried at Redington, Neb. Sermon delivered by Bro. Charles Endsley, text 1 Cor. xv. 50-55, who very forcibly and ably explained to the people the belief and hope which we have. A hope of the promise made unto the fathers, for which hope's sake our twelve tribes, instantly serving God day and night, hope to come.

Yours in hope,

H. G. BEEBE.

Prevailing prayer aims at a mark, and knows what it is after. When we enter a store or shop we ask the salesman to hand us the particular article we want. There is an enormous amount of pointless, prayerless praying done in our devotional meetings; it begins with nothing and ends nowhere. The model prayers mentioned in the Bible were short and right to the mark, "God be merciful to me a sinner!" "Lord, save me!" cried sinking Peter. "Come down, ere my child die!" exclaims the heart stricken nobleman. Old Rowland Hill used to say, "I like short ejaculatory prayer; it reaches heaven before the devil can get a shot at it."—*T. L. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JUNE 25, 1902.

AN earthquake shock was felt in Italy on June 22.

"A DRAGGED cross is heavy, but a carried cross is much lighter."

CHOLERA is on the increase in the Philippines. Numbers of the United States soldiers are dying from it, and many of the natives.

"SINCERITY is to speak as we think, to do as we pretend and profess, to perform and make good what we promise, and really to be what we would seem and appear to be."

"LOVE feels no burden, thinks nothing of trouble, attempts what is above its strength, pleads no excuse of impossibility, for it thinks all things lawful for itself, and all things possible."

"COMING nearer and nearer to Christ," we say. That does not mean creeping into a refuge where he can be safe. It means becoming better and better men; repenting or reproducing his character more in ours."

KING Albert of Saxony died June 19. The German Emperor says of him: "He was the last of the great captains of a great time. His was a heart which esteemed that which was German above all else. He was a model of all that a ruler should be, and a father to his country and to his people."

BROTHER J. S. Hatch has been visiting the friends in and about Plymouth since the Antioch meeting, and was able to preach for the Church on last Sunday. It is quite a number of years since our aged brother has visited us and we are glad of the pleasure to all concerned, and trust he will carry to his home pleasant memories of the time spent among us.

OFFICIAL figures given by the British government show that in India from September 1896 to March 1902 there have been 852,000 recorded deaths from the plague. Making an allowance for untraced and unreported cases the number will not be far short of one million. The worst feature is that with all the effort made to check it, the disease is increasing.

TURKEY is in trouble within herself. The Sultan has been assailed by certain writers and now has prohibited the printing of any books of any kind. This will have a contrary effect, as the authors of lithographed pamphlets will use language that no common printer would dare to print or sell. There are also stories of further plots in the army, and the rulers do not know how far they can trust the men to obey orders.

KING Edward's coronation is set for next Thursday, but he has been sick for some days, and could take no part in the exercises that were to precede the event, and many rumors have been sent out that he would not be able to be crowned. Contrary reports deny this, but the fact that he has not appeared for some days lent strength to the ill reports. An old prophecy made by some one that he would reign but never be crowned, give superstitious minds something to feast upon.

Passing Events in the Light of Prophecy.

We take it for granted that all who have become acquainted with God's revealed purpose with man and earth, are eager for information which points to the time of night we are living in; and, as often before, we cull from Glad Tidings a number of paragraphs with that object in view, and some from other sources:

A number of articles have recently appeared in magazines and the daily and weekly press on the present restless condition of Europe. One of the most comprehensive appeared in the Expansionist. The writer first deals with Italy, the unrest in which he attributes to two causes—first, the efforts of the Papacy to recover its temporal power; and second, the economic condition of the people. He alludes to Spain, and "the ill-assorted union between Austria and Hungary." He dwells at length upon Russia, Great Britain and France. But his treatment of the condition of things in Germany is the most significant. He points out the enormous growth of Socialism in that country, the Socialistic vote having risen in twenty-one years from half a million to considerably over two millions. His general summary is very interesting:—

"A glance at the condition of Europe suffices to show that coming events are casting their shadows before. The strikes and rioting, the social unrest and commercial strife, are but the twentieth century counterparts of the nationalistic and political agitations in the 19th century that culminated in the movements of 1848. The great difference is that the causes of the present upheaval are not local but universal;—not political but social. They are found in the condition of the masses, and are due in large part to the system of militarism that weighs upon the European nations and devours their substance. The manifestations, however, differ in some respects in the various countries, although they have a common cause."

The financial crisis in Turkey is very extensively discussed on the other side of the water. Reuter's correspondent at Constantinople states that the financial position in Turkey is steadily going from bad to worse, and the government will undoubtedly soon be compelled to seek relief in extraordinary measures. Since the arrangement in 1881 there has been a constant annual deficit of from one to three millions. Since 1896 the government has managed to subsist by borrowing from Peter to pay Paul as occasion required. This hand to mouth policy cannot be continued indefinitely, and the moment is not far distant when the government will find itself face to face with a serious crisis."

The distress and unrest in Russia are very great. Enormous numbers of peasants from the provinces of Central Russia are flocking to Moscow, having been driven from their homes by the frightful misery and absolute dearth of work everywhere prevalent in that region. A state of great unrest continues in St. Petersburg and Moscow.

The President of the French Republic, who is accompanied by the Minister of Foreign Affairs, has received a cordial welcome from the Czar. He seems to have been well received by the Populace. The Parisian press look upon the visit to Russia as a renewal of the Franco-Russian Alliance. It is a strange spectacle to see democratic France joining hands with autocratic Russia.

In connection with the accession of the young king of Spain a plot was discovered to kill the king. Several men were arrested, and some of them are said to have admitted that they hold anarchist views.

In the Balkan the unrest is as great as ever. Bulgaria, Roumania and Servia have recently failed to raise much needed loans. The financial condition of all three is said to be well-nigh hopeless.

A despatch from Vienna says it is announced from Sofia, Bulgaria, that M. Saratoff, the Macedonian leader has issued a proclamation calling on the Macedonians in Bulgaria to join in a general rising. Bands collecting on the Turkish frontier are to co-operate and invade Turkey at different points.

The times we live in are imminent. It becomes us to redouble our diligence to make our calling and election sure. We must endeavor not to be numbered with those who our Lord says can forecast the weather by the faces of the sky; but cannot discern the signs of the time. We are all familiar with the words of the Lord Jesus in the 21st of Luke, which say Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, UNTIL the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. We think it is generally understood that Turkey has been treading down Jerusalem for over 1260 years, but that since the destruction of its fleet about 1821, the decadence of that power has been so marked that it bears little resemblance to its former state. And we submit that if one-half of what we hear of it week after week be true,—it will not much longer tread down Jerusalem or any other province of its empire. Only yesterday (June 14) our attention was called to a despatch from a person lately from Constantinople, who is one of the few persons who have of late been admitted to the private apartments of the Sultan. It says for three years the Sultan has been so oppressed by fear of treachery that he has had three rooms constructed in the palace with a passage encircling them, and guarded by a hundred special police agents. In these rooms he lives. His doctor and two attendants of high rank are forced to eat plentifully of every dish before he touches it. He never sleeps in bed, but on a long chair, and only for an hour at a time, —ever starting up in affright. He carries two loaded revolvers. And the continued strain has so affected his health that he is becoming quite crazy, and a plaything in the hands of the few whom he trusts. The informant believes that "before the year closes all Europe will be startled one morning by a coup de main, sudden as successful."

For some time we have been expecting that the Sultan's financial straits would bring him to terms with the leaders of Zionist movement, and for a consideration, give the Jews a franchise of Palestine, and in that way cease to tread down Jerusalem, and allow Abraham's seed to return to their own land. We know they will return, at any rate, Jehovah has repeatedly said it; and, whether this is the way it will be brought about or not, we are confident our Father is at the helm, and is silently and surely preparing to set his King upon the Holy Hill of Zion. Let us watch and be sober, but at the same time be eager to hear his voice."

Lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God was one of the characteristics predicted of the last days, 2 Tim. iii. and one of the things that constitute the times perilous for those who have determined not to be classed with the world. The tide flowing in that direction is carrying almost everything with it. Only last week the Cleveland papers advertized a theatrical performance for the benefit of a church, and from the trend of things religious we have no doubt the debt will be lifted in that way, although other efforts have failed.

Word comes from Germany that another monster gun has been invented, tested, and the exclusive right to use it secured by the government of that country. It is claimed that it will penetrate a foot of iron at a distance of fifteen miles. Wireless telegraphy seems to be a fact. Horseless carriages travel eighty miles an hour; and the very latest scientific achievement we have heard of is that of utilizing the electricity of the atmosphere with little or no expense. Surely this must be the day of preparation.

Since writing the above a paper has come to hand informing us that Lord Kelvin, the great physicist, more familiar to the world under his earlier title as Sir William Thompson, is quoted as saying that the most interesting and important thing he saw during his recent visit to America was the evidence presented at Niagara Falls that electric power was bringing within reach of practical agricultural work the production of nitrogen from the air so that it might be used for the enrichment of the soil. Perhaps this will cause some to believe after all, that the picture of the good time coming, in Psa. lxvii. 6, may come true, seeing man has discovered the way to accomplish it.

Of Jesus of Nazareth.

Geikie says, "He is the man. Of all the race there is none to be so gazed on and persistently studied. We ponder the thoughts of others; we smile at their weaknesses; we allow for their prejudices; we condemn their errors, but in this man there are no weaknesses, nor prejudices, nor errors. His judgments are always accurate; his morals are ever perfect; his emotions are ever pure. No personal ambition, or hatred, or love, or interest sways him at any time. He thinks as before God. He weeps as before God. He denounces as before God. He rejoices as before God. All he does is right. By him alone was the precept everfulfilled: "Whether ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."

"The Millennium."

Dr. R. S. MacArthur of the Calvary Baptist Church N. Y., on Sunday last said the ushering in of the millennium has been partly accomplished. He predicted a federation in the near future of all the nations on earth on the basis of the golden rule, and with this country and Great Britain as the dominant factors, saying these were the days of "gigantic enterprises, of large mergers, and world-wide undertakings. Doubtless many trustees are mercenary, but there may be a selfless, altruistic and spiritual trust. There may be an imperialism of love which will one day dominate the world. God is raising up a love trust to offset the self trusts which are menacing our civilization."

Instead of speaking lies in the name the Lord and assuming the roll of a prophet, the doctor should believe God's prophets; but it is another sign of the times.

Genesis. Chap. 49.

1. And Jakoob called his sons, and said unto them, May ye have been led together (the leading of the Lord implied) that I may tell you what will meet you during the last days.

2. May ye have been led together and may ye have hearkened unto me, ye sons of Jakoob; may ye have hearkened unto Israel, may ye have hearkened unto your father, (father on earth and Father in heaven).

3. Hroobeen my first-born, thou, my strength and authoritive head (as well as beginning) of my offspring (by birth-right) hard to bear with and stubbornly hard.

4. Thou didst run riot like water, mayest thou not hold over; for thou didst go up unto the couch of thy father; then didst thou pollute the bed unto which thou didst go up.

5. Simeeon and Leui as brethren consummated an iniquity of their choice.

6. Into their counsel may my soul not have come; and at their conspiracy may my feelings not have come to strive; because in their passion they slew men and in their inordinate desire they ham-strung a bull.

7. Accursed be their passion because it was self-willed and their fury because it became relentless; I am apportioning them in Jakoob and dispersing them in Israel.

8. Joodas, May thy brethren have praised thee; thy hands upon the neck of thine enemies, the sons of thy father will do thee homage.

9. A lion's whelp is Joodas: from a shoot from a roof mayest thou have gone up, my son, reclining mayest thou have lain down to sleep like a lion and like a lion's whelp: who will awaken him?

10. A ruler from out of Joodas and a leader from out his loins will not fail until the things laid away for him shall have come; and he is an expectation of nations.

11. Tying his colt to a vine and his ass's colt to its tendrils he will wash his priestly undergarment in wine and his outer-garment in grape-blood.

12. His eyes more gracious than wine and his teeth whiter than milk.

13. Zabooloon will take up his abode by the sea-coast and he will be along side a rush of ships, and he will extend as far as Sidoon.

14. Issa[illegible] good when resting between allotments.

15. And when he saw that the rest was good and the land was rich, he put his shoulder to the painful toil and became a husbandman.

16. Dan will judge his laity as though also one tribe in Israel.

17. And let Dan become a serpent in a highway, seated in a path, biting a horse's heel; and the horseman will fall backward,

18. When he waiteth for the salvation of the Lord.

19. Gad, piracy will pirate him; but he will pirate it down to his feet.

20. Aseer, his bread is fat, and he will give sustenance to rulers.

21. Nephthali is a tree-trunk that hath ascended upward yielding beauty also in its generic product.

22. Jooseeph, my enlarged son, my enlarged zealot son, my youngest son, mayest thou have returned unto me.

23. Thou whom slanderers scoffed at, and lords of bows aimed at.

24. And their bows were broken with controlling power, and the sinews of the arms of their hand were relaxed because of the hand of Jakoob's Able One; therefrom was he who strengthened Israeel, from God thy Father.

25. And my God responded to the call for help, and blessed thee with a blessing from the heavens above, and with a blessing of an earth that hath all things, on account of a blessing of breasts and a womb.

26. On account of the blessings of thy father and thy mother; he made it stronger than blessings of solitary mountains and above blessings of age-lasting sand-hills; upon Jooseeph's head and upon the crown of the head of him who became the leader of his brethren.

27. Beniamin is a ravening wolf; in the morning he will eat and in the evening tide he will give sustenance.

28. All these are Jakoob's twelve sons, and these things did he talk to them, and he blessed them; each one according to his blessing did he bless them.

29. And he said unto them, I am being added unto my laity; bury me in the midst of my fathers in the cave that is in the field of Ephroon the Chettaite.

30. In the double cave over opposite Mambree in a land of Chanaan, the cave which Habraam acquired from Ephoon the Chettaite in the way of an acquisition for a memorial-tomb.

31. There they buried Habraam and Sarra his wife; there they buried Isaak and Rebekka his wife; there they buried Leia.

32. In an acquisition of the field and the cave that is in it from the sons of Chet.

33. And Jakoob ceased directing his sons, and lifting up his feet upon the couch he left off, (life understood) and was added to his laity.

COMMENT.

I published in THE RESTITUTION this chapter some years ago with comment at considerable length and will therefore not recover the same ground again; but would say that time and fuller investigation since more than confirms what I said then. The reader will do well to critically compare this translation with both the C. V. and R. V. For the passage is especially obscure and the variations are unaccountable except in accordance with the now well-attested historical fact that the original Hebrew was tampered with after the Greek translation was made, a fact that the old school Hebraists are slow to admit for the reason that this whole school have argued and seemed to believe and in fact do still that the Greek was a loose and inaccurate translation from original Hebrew and that although the original Hebrew was lost they have been able to restore it to its pristine purity, both of which assumption's modern scholarship have proved to be mere assumptions and both contrary to the actual fact.

Dear ones of like precious faith:

Through the kindness of my aged father, J. S. Hatch, I with him was permitted to attend the annual June meeting at Old Antioch, and how very much I enjoyed it. I used to attend these meetings with my father when I was a girl, before I was interested in these precious truths as I am now, and but few of the older brethren and sisters that I met then were in attendance at this meeting, but we see from the interest manifested that the truth is ever present and there are those who are willing to accept it, so that as the ranks are being thinned by the enemy death, there are younger ones to take their place and I may say older ones too; for quite recently we have had the pleasure of adding to our band here at Hillisburg, two white-haired sisters, whom we so much love. To God be all the praise, and we know that stars will be added to the crown of those who have so nobly and truthfully sounded the Word of God to a perishing world. This meeting will be a pleasant memory to me. It is so seldom I am permitted to attend them. My heart goes out in love to those who so kindly entertained us. I trust it will be our pleasure at some future time to return the favor. I pray God that we may so conduct ourselves that we may gain an entrance into the everlasting kingdom, where it is one continual praise meeting with no sad farewells.

Your Sister, waiting the return of the Nobleman.

The Bereans Column.

[Under this heading the society of "Bereans" of Illinois, will supply the copy, and endeavor to fill the space once a month.]

Dear Bereans:

"He that hath ears to hear, let him hear." Luke viii. 8.

It is always puzzling to me to see so many use the Bible as they do. They turn and twist and make something else out of a plain statement. I have tried to talk with people to tell them the good news; but they turn a deaf ear. Then is the time I think, why will you not hear? the gospel is so plain and simple.

We read in Mark xvi. 16, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Peter in Acts ii. 38 entreats every one to "repent and be baptized for the remission of sins." Still some think if they are only sprinkled with a little water, they will be saved just as much as though they were buried beneath the water.

I attended a funeral not long ago, and among other texts the minister read were these: "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth." "Behold, I show you a mystery, we shall not all sleep but we shall all be changed in a moment, in a twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised incorruptible and we shall be changed for this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory." I wondered if this minister really believed what he was reading. If he does believe it, why does he send people to heaven, to their "eternal glory" as they say?

The above quotation does not say anything about going to heaven at death. Why dont people take the Bible as it read?

I was talking with a friend sometime ago about the resurrection. My friend asked me where I expected to go after I died? and I said I would be taken to my grave and stay there till Christ should come to raise me from the dead. Her mother said. Do you expect to stay there till your bones are rotted away? I said, Yes, if Christ does not come before. My friend thought it would be so lonesome to lay in the grave so long, she would rather go to heaven and be happy. I told her it would not be lonesome, for it says in Ecclesiastes "the dead know not anything." Such a belief was a mystery to them.

Why will not people come to hear the "good news?" The gospel is the power of God unto salvation. It has many wonderful promises and if we accept Christ through the waters of baptism and live accordingly, we shall receive these promises.

May it be yours and mine dear brother and sister to receive these precious promises when our Lord comes.

Your Sister in Christ.

JESSIE M. WILSON.

Dear Bereans.

If we would secure the crown of life, enjoy the true riches, be rulers over many things, we must be faithful.

What is it to be faithful? We will find the word to mean—firm in adherence to a promise or contract—true and constant in allegiance to a person to whom one is bound by vow.

Do we not, when we become children of God, by the act of baptism which makes us such, promise or contract to serve our Savior, and it is our desire to be firm in the observance of that duty. We will find the test of faithfulness, not in the great things we do, for Jesus says, "He that is faithful in that which is least, is faithful also in much." It is the little every day duties faithfully performed, opportunities which we daily meet, improved, which prove our faithfulness and fit us to be entrusted with greater ones. In the lesson of the unjust steward, Jesus said, "If therefore, ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon or riches, who will commit to your trust the true riches?" If we are not faithful in the improvement of opportunities given us in this life, would we be worthy to be trusted with the true riches in the life to come? Does not our future reward, the realizing of the great and precious promises, all depend upon our faithfulness in this life? Is it not worth every effort?

ANNA E. DREW.

Dear Bereans:

It has been suggested by two or three that we introduce a new feature into our work and we would like an expression from any and all Bereans who read our column. How would you like to have questions asked and answered through our column?

If this is done you will have to trust to the judgment of your committee and allow them to withhold any question or answer that they fear will provoke controversy. It is an honest seeking for the truth that we wish, not contention. Remembering this condition let us hear from all of you. Say whether you wish it or whether you do not, and then the committee can report the desire of the members at the conference. My address is:—5428 Ontario St., Austin Station, Chicago, Ill.

Poetry.

They Are Not Lost.

The look of sympathy, the gentle word,
Spoken so low that only angels heard;
The secret act of pure self-sacrifice,
Unseen by men, but marked by angels' eyes—
These are not lost.

The happy dreams that gladdened all our youth,
When dreams had less of self and more of truth:
The childhood's faith so tranquil and so sweet,
Which sat like Mary at the Master's feet—
These are not lost.

The kindly plan devised for others' good,
Be seldom guessed, or little understood,
The quiet, steadfast love that strove to win
Some wanderer from the ways of shame and sin—
These are not lost.

Not lost, O Lord! for in thy city bright
Our eyes shall see the past by clearer light,
And things long hidden from our gaze below
Thou wilt reveal; and we shall surely know
These are not lost.

Respected Friend:

In reply to your question in regard to the sights that I saw when in Palestine, and also to your suggestion that the Mosque of Omar stands over the place where our Lord was buried; I will say the Mosque of Omar evidently stands where Solomon's temple stood, and where Christ when he comes will take his father David's throne. Solomon's temple was thrown down and the stones were used to build that immense structure, thus fulfilling the Savior's prediction that not one stone should be left upon another that shall not be thrown down.

The sepulchre of Christ is evidently outside the city wall on the north. There is a hill which is round on the top, which might resemble the imagination of a skull, also a cavern, a socket for an eye. This is called Jeremiah's Grotto; and is the place where it is supposed the prophet wrote his book of Lamentations.

Beneath this cavern is a horizontal cavern about two feet high and six or eight feet in length. There are two stone steps to get down to this cavern. Since I was there I have learned that Selah Merrill, our Consul at Jerusalem, supposes this to be the identical place where our Lord Jesus Christ was buried.

A little poem from an old scrap-book may not be out of place in this connection.

THE CRUCIFIXION OF CHRIST.

I asked the heavens, what foe had done
This unexpected deed? the heavens exclaim'd
'Twas man; and we in horror snatched the sun
From such a spectacle of guilt and shame.

I asked the earth, the earth with discontent,
With wailings deep, and groans replied against,
'Twas man, and such strange pangs my bosom rent,
That I still groan and shudder at the past.

I asked the sea, the sea in fury boiled,
And answered with her voice of storms, 'twas man;
My waves in panic at the deed recoiled,
Disclosed the dark abyss, and fled the centre ran.

I went to man, gay, thoughtless, smiling man;
And asked him next, and he, with scornful eye,
Turned him around, nor stopped the past to scan,
Shook his proud head, and deigned me no reply.

I asked the saint, and he replied with joy,
'Twas God's decree to curb the power of sin;
To bruise the serpent's head and to destroy
His promised life to sinful man.

The blood of Christ was shed for me,
O let me take the proffered grace,
And by obedience I shall see
That brighter world, and Jesus face to face.

DANIEL HOWARD.

To the brethren and sisters:

Brother W. L. Crowe came here and held a weeks meeting at Union Chapel Church, preaching eight discourses. Attendance was good considering that the rain hindered some. The interest was good. Two were added to our number by being buried with Christ in baptism, and my prayer is that they may walk in the footsteps of Jesus, and make their calling and election sure. Brother Crowe is an able defender of the truth, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth, and may he be blessed with health and strength that he may help fulfill the great commission of our blessed Lord; for the gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, and it should be preached among all nations. We feel that the time is short, the work must soon be done, the golden sheaves will soon all be gathered in and the harvest past. Brothers and sisters, let us stand firm in the faith and keep ourselves unspotted from the world. Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness (but rather reprove them) for the friendship of the world is enmity to God. Whosoever, therefore, will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God, and we must sacrifice all worldly pleasures and desires and show to the world that we are dead to sin and would not live any longer therein; for we know the whole world lieth in wickedness, and if any one love the world the love of the Father is not in him. Then, dear ones, let us turn our back to the world and the pleasures thereof which is to soon vanish away; but seek to please our blessed Lord and be known of him when he comes to make up his jewels. That we may receive a crown of righteousness that he hath promised to all that love his appearing.

Your Sister in Christ.

KETURAH ROGERS.

Selected.

Words from the Bible.

Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned. Rom. v. 12.

Man that is born of woman is of few days, and full of trouble. He cometh forth like a flower, and is cut down: he fleeth also as a shadow, and continueth not. As the waters fail from the sea, and the flood decayeth and drieth up; so man lieth down, and riseth not till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep. Job xiv. 1, 2, 11, 12.

But man dieth and wasteth away; yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he? Job xiv. 10.

And no man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of Man which is in heaven. John iii. 13.

If a man die shall he live again? all the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come. Thou shalt call, and I will answer thee; thou wilt have a desire to the work of thy hands. Job xiv. 14-15.

If I wait, the grave is my house; I have made my bed in the darkness. Job xvii. 13.

Verily, verily, I say unto you, the hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear shall live. Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and come forth. John v. 25, 28, 29.

While I live will I praise the Lord; I will sing praises unto my God while I have any being. Psa. cxlvi. 2.

The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence. Psa. cxv. 17.

For in death there is no remembrance of thee; in the grave who shall give thee thanks?" Psa. vi. 5.

For the grave cannot praise thee, death cannot celebrate thee. Isa. xxxviii. 18.

Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest. For the living know that they shall die; but the living know not anything. Eccl. ix. 5-10.

His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish. Psa. cxlvi. 4.

If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men the most miserable. But if there be no resurrection of the dead then is Christ not risen; and if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain; yea, and we are found false witnesses of God, because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ; whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not. For if the dead rise not, then is Christ not raised. And if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished. But now is Christ raised from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept. For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order; Christ the first fruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming. Then cometh the end, when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father; when he shall have put down all rule, and authority and power. For he must reign, till he hath put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death. Cor. xv. 13-20.

Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation. Heb. ix. 28.

To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne. Rev. iii. 21.

But when the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory, and before him shall be gathered all nations. Matt. xxv. 31 32.

He shall be great; and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David. And he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end. Luke i. 32-33.

And he shall speak peace unto the heathen: and his dominion shall be from sea even unto sea, and from the river even to the ends of the earth. Zech. ix. 10.

And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to people of the saints of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all the dominions shall serve and obey him. Dan. vii. 27.

As truly as I live all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord. Num. xiv. 21.

And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever. Dan. ii. 44.

His feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east. Zech. xiv. 4.

For I know that my Redeemer liveth and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth. Job xix. 25.

And the Lord shall be king over all the earth; in that day there shall be one Lord, and his name one. Zech. xiv. 9.

Thus saith the Lord; I am returned unto Zion, and will dwell in the midst of Jerusalem. Thus saith the Lord of Hosts; there shall yet old men and old women dwell in the streets of Jerusalem, and the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof. Thus saith the Lord of hosts; Behold, I will save my people from the east country and from the west country, and I will bring them, and they shall dwell in the midst of Jerusalem; and they shall be my people, and I will be their God in truth and in righteousness. Zech. viii. 3, 4, 5, 7, 8.

[redacted] dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them. And the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp; and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain; for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea. Isa. xi. 6, 8, 9.

For then will I turn to the people a pure language that they may call upon the name of the Lord, to serve him with one consent. Zep. iii. 9.

Yea, many people and strong nations shall come to seek the Lord of hosts in Jerusalem, and to pray before the Lord. Zech. viii. 22.

Sing and rejoice O daughter of Zion; for lo, I come, and I will dwell in the midst of thee, saith the Lord. And the Lord shall inherit Judah his portion in the Holy Land, and shall choose Jerusalem again. Zech. ii. 10-12.

And the name of the city from that day shall be, the Lord is there. Ezek. xlviii. 35.

Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth, is Mount Zion, on the sides of the north, the city of the great King. Psa. xlviii. 2.

And many people shall go and say, come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths; for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people; and they shall beat their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. Isa. ii. 3-4.

Then if any man shall say unto you, lo, here is Christ, or there; believe it not. For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall show great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible they shall deceive the very elect. Behold I have told you before. Wherefore, if they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in the secret chambers, believe it not. For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west; so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be. Matt. xxiv. 23-27.

For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first. 1 Thes. iv. 16.

Behold I show you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed. In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written. Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? 1 Cor. xv. 51-55.

And I, John, saw the Holy City, Jerusalem, coming down from God, out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away. And he that sat upon the throne said, Behold, I make all things new. And he said unto me, write; for these words are true and faithful. Rev. xxi. 2-5.

Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the Tree of Life, and may enter in through the gates into the city. Rev. xxii. 14.

As I live, saith the Lord God, ye shall not have occasion any more to use this proverb in Israel. Behold, all souls are mine; as the soul of the father, so also the soul of the son is mine, the soul that sinneth, it shall die. Ezek. iii. 4.

For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Rom. vi. 23.

Take Heed.

It is a personal warning for he says "take heed to yourselves"—and that means you, dear reader. In these perilous times there is great danger that we may be lead into carelessness and indifference, and found among those who are exclaiming, "My Lord delayeth his coming." It is a time when many hearts are overcharged, and made heavy with the "cares of this life." People, yes, even Christian people, fume and fret over troubles that never come to pass. They are troubled and anxious about many things, and the reason is, because their heart is not single enough.

They who truly trust in God have no doubts and fears about anything. To trust is to be not afraid. The Master has a very tender message for his people who are troubled. Listen: "Therefore I say unto you, Be not anxious for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, nor yet for your body what ye shall put on .....For your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things. But seek ye first his kingdom and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you. Matt. vi. 24, 32, 33.

It is, indeed, comforting to know that he knows our needs and has promised to supply them. It removes all cause for fear and anxiety. To trust in God, and to depend upon him, is to be free from the cares of life, and this is just the experience our heavenly Father wants each of his children to have.

Let us get right with God; claim his promises for every need, and watch for the coming of his Son from heaven, when we shall see him as he is, be like him, and be with him for evermore.—C. F. Ladd.

The Blessed Hope.

"Thine eyes shall see the King in his beauty" has been the sweet endearing hope of many a wayworn traveler as the years of care and toil and travail sped on. We shall see him face to face. The hand pierced for us will yet hold our own in its palm, and we shall hear the wonderful voice that could still Gennesaret. These are real experiences waiting before us, and we can well train our hearts to faithfulness, though the tasks set for us may be hard, and the world fail to appreciate or understand."—The Contributor.

The Second Coming of Christ.

"He which testifieth these things saith, Surely, I come quickly." Rev. xxii. 20.

Here, in the last words of the book, the Savior himself sums up the all-comprehending substance of the whole in this one brief sentence.

Who that has ever looked carefully into the subject, but has been struck with the towering prominence which the Scriptures everywhere assign to the coming of the Lord Jesus?

The New Testament has more references to this particular topic than it has pages. Of all the seven or eight thousand verses of which it is composed, one out of every twenty-five points forward with eager gesture to the appearing again of the Lord Jesus.

Again and again is it set forth as the great hope of the church. There is not a Christian grace or virtue for the enforcement of which appeal is not made to it. Nor is there another subject upon which more stress is laid in all the Word of God.

To many, indeed, it is anything but welcome. There are many professing Christians who would rather not hear about it, and who, if they could have their way, would erase it from the creed, and silence all preaching concerning it. But the religion of such is much aside from the Scriptures, and occasion is urgent for them to bestir themselves to re-examine and re-lay their foundations.

Christian faith and hope have no outcome but in the glorious Apocalypse of Jesus. And only when we come to understand that the coming again of Christ is the fulfillment of the thing described in this book, can we appreciate why so much is referred to that coming, and why the venerable apostle should here, at the end of his book, bow his hoary head and say and write his solemn "Amen; even so, come, Lord Jesus."

The truth is, my friends, there is no greater or gladder promise in all the Book of God than this last word of Jesus to his people, "I come quickly."

It is the promise of promises—the crown and consummation of all promise—the coronation of all evangelical hopes, the sum of all prophecy and prayer. Nature and grace alike proclaim a glorified Messiah, coming again from heaven in his all-mightiness, as indispensable to complete their up-reaching pointed course. Nature calls for this, they that it seems strange sometimes that God permits us to have anything to do with his great plans. If we give a sigh of relief when our secret prayer and reading of the Bible are over, we may be confident there is something wrong about our spiritual condition, and under these conditions, whatever Christian work we are engaged in is sure to suffer. Half-hearted service of any kind is to be deplored; but when it comes to half-hearted Christian work it ought to startle us. Half-hearted work for perishing souls! Just think of it, and pray that we and others may be kept from a half-hearted Christian life and work.

A week filled with selfishness and a Sabbath stuffed full of religious exercises will make a good Pharisee but a poor Christian. There are many persons who think Sunday is a sponge with which to wipe out the week. Now God's altar stands from Sunday to Sunday, and the seventh day is no more for religion than any other. It is for rest. The whole seven are for religion and one of them for rest.—Henry Ward Beecher.

In every furnace there is One like the Son of Man. In every flood of high waters he stands beside us—staying the heart with promises, instilling words of faith and hope, recalling the blessed past, pointing to the radiant future, hushing fear, as once he stilled the dismay of his disciples on the lake. —F. B. Meyer.

Solemn Facts.

"You may be clothed in purple and fine linen, and fare sumptuously every day, as Dives did—and not be saved. You may rule vast provinces, and command vast armies, as Pharoah and Nebuchadnezzar did—and not be saved. You may belong to a church, poor and simple, and apostolic, and blessed with holy ordinances, as Ananias and Sapphira did—and not be saved. You may live under the highest blaze of gospel-teaching, as Judas did; nay, you may bear witness to the truths of Jesus, as he did—and not be saved. You may be exalted unto heaven in privileges and opportunities, as Chorazin, Bethsaida, and Capernaum were—and not be saved. You may have the shrewdest intellect, as Ahithopel had—and not be saved. But you cannot believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, and fail of salvation. The Word abides forever, 'Whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life.' John iii. 16. Let the rich man believe, and he is saved. Let the poor man believe, and he is saved. Let the old believe—let the young believe—let the wise believe—let the ignorant believe—and all is safe. Christ is theirs, and Christ is salvation."—Dean Law.

Volcanoes and War.

The world is naturally shocked at the terrible catastrophe at Martinique. But if an equal number of men had been destroyed in war the feeling of horror would not have been half so great.

Yet volcanoes have killed but a small fraction of what war has destroyed. And the waste of life in battle has often been more reckless and inexcusable than that inflicted by volcanoes.

The eruption that destroyed St. Pierre did its work in three minutes, and all sufferings were ended. A battle that takes the same number of lives leaves many of its victims to suffer in agony for hours.

The volcano is a dreadful scourge on the earth, but war is still more dreadful and destructive. The volcano is beyond the reach of man. War might easily be suppressed by arbitration.—Boston Globe.

Half-Hearted Service.

A great deal of our work for the Master is done in such a half-hearted pointed course. Nature calls for this, they that it seems strange sometimes that God permits us to have anything to do with his great plans. If we give a sigh of relief when our secret prayer and reading of the Bible are over, we may be confident there is something wrong about our spiritual condition, and under these conditions, whatever Christian work we are engaged in is sure to suffer. Half-hearted service of any kind is to be deplored; but when it comes to half-hearted Christian work it ought to startle us. Half-hearted work for perishing souls! Just think of it, and pray that we and others may be kept from a half-hearted Christian life and work.

Announcement.

The fourteenth annual session of the Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus, in Iowa, will be held at Waterloo, Iowa, beginning Friday, Aug. 15, and continuing over Sunday Aug. 24, occupying its beautiful camp ground situated in the Cedar River Park, which is reached in a few minutes ride on the street cars, from all railroad depots in the City.

Board will be furnished all, at a very low rate, at the dining hall—not exceeding ten cents for each meal.

We expect several preaching brethren from abroad, whose names will appear later. Come and enjoy this Conference with us. Matters of importance need your attention. Come, let us reason together, and not forsake the assembling of ourselves together, and so much the more, as we see the day approaching.

We hope for a large attendance this year. Begin at once to prepare for the meeting, and make a special effort to attend the beginning, so that a reduced rate may be assured, as it will save a large amount in railroad fare to the brethren, and will increase the attendance.

Brethren let us awake—the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.

Full particulars as to reduced rates and so on will appear later.

O. J. ALLARD, Pres.
SADIE CLARK, Sec.

The Missouri-Kansas Annual Conference will be held in Kerr's Park, Kansas City, Kansas, Aug. 8 to 24. This is a beautiful park, plenty of shade and good spring water at the terminus of Minnesota Ave. All parties by rail will take the Kansas City, Kansas street cars going west at west door of union depot and run to terminus of the street car line with no change. Tents will be on the ground to accomodate all, but all should bring bedding. Business will begin on the 11th. This meeting should be largely attended as it is central. We hope to see many there from other States. Brethren this will be at a leisure time when many can attend. We expect this to be the best annual meeting we have yet had. Come at the first of the meeting, and come to stay the entire two weeks. Bros. Oren, Darby, Oliver, P. E. Adams, Abnas Adams, Eychner, Crowe and other speakers are expected to be in attendance.

G. M. MYERS, Sec.

Those to whom we have sent letters telling about your accounts have not all made response as yet. Brother or Sister, we urge you to be sure and not neglect this matter longer. We want to pay our obligations—this is the reason why we ask you to give us what is due at once. If we could satisfy those we are under obligation to any other way we would not ask you, but as it is the only way we know of, we must hear from you to enable us to do so. We trust all will see the necessity of this and act NOW.

Jesus Is Coming.

The Savior warns—"Be ready,"
With garments clean and bright,
He says that true believers
Shall walk with Him in white.

He's coming soon in glory;
His own will then arise,
And with the living be caught up,
To meet him in the skies.

Then to your home in glory,
An entrance wide you'll find.
The ties that here were severed,
In heaven he will bind.

Then count light, all the trials,
For they will soon be o'er.
With him 'twill all be gladness,
We'll sorrow never more.

Obedience to the Faith. Rom. i. 5.

To earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints, as required by the apostle, is to contend for obedience to the faith. How is that? Well, because there is no such thing as perfected or complete faith (see James ii. 22, Diaglott) or saving faith apart from obedience—good works. "Faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone." So also good works apart from the faith, avail nothing in the sight of God as a means of salvation. For salvation is by or through faith. "Thy faith hath saved thee," said Christ. But it must be "faith which worketh by love." Gal. v. 6, which produces obedience through love. If a man love me, saith Christ, he will keep my words.

The object of faith then, is to produce love to God, that love may produce obedience—righteousness—"the righteousness of faith." Rom. iv. 11; Gal. iii. 6. Nothing else will entitle any person to salvation. Goodness alone—either natural or acquired goodness alone—will not save any person, even though he be a "devout man and one that feareth God and giveth much alms to the poor, and prays to God always." Even all that goodness was not sufficient in the case of Cornelius—all that did not entitle that good man to salvation. For he was required to "hear words whereby he and all his family should be saved." Were they to hear the words only? Were they not to understand the words, believe the words, to render willing, loving obedience to the faith in the words? Most certainly.

What were the all-important saving words necessary for Cornelius to hear? Acts x. 43, 38; xi. 14. They were and still are, "that through his name (whom Peter said God had raised, and ordained to be the judge of the quick and dead) whosoever believeth into him (eis, Gr. Dia.) shall receive remission of sins." While Peter was yet speaking these words they were sanctioned by the Holy Spirit. Then Peter, by the authority of the Lord, commanded them to be baptized. Having heard and believed "the word," they were then, and not till then, prepared to be baptized that they might "receive remission of sins"—baptized in the likeness of Christ's death, burial, and resurrection into the "one body," the members of which bear his all-saving name, which signifies, "shall be mighty ones," even the household or family of God, ultimately to be partakers of the divine nature, of which family Christ is the beginning, the elder brother, the head.

Peter said on that occasion other very important words, viz., verse 35, "In every nation he that feareth God and worketh righteousness is accepted with him." The condition is very plain—worketh righteousness, "the righteousness of the faith," obedience to the faith, which begins by believing into him through the means of baptism.

To Peter were given the keys of the kingdom. He here used them. This record shows very plainly how we Gentiles can get into the kingdom. Let us give heed to it.

We have another similar record, Acts xvi. 23 and onward; another Gentile, when he discovered the necessity of doing something in order to be saved, and not knowing what to do, he asks that most important question that can possibly be propounded by man, "What must I do to be saved?" And they, Paul and Silas, said, believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved, and thy house. And they speak unto him the Word of the Lord, and to all in his house. And he took them, the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes, and was baptized, he and all his straightway. And when he had brought them into his house, he set meat before them, and rejoiced, believing in God with all his house." It will here be seen that believing in God, and believing in the Lord Jesus Christ, was the same thing, and that it was simply by believing "the Word" spoken to them by Paul and Silas. As Cornelius and his family had to hear the Word and believe it, and then be baptized in order to be saved, so also the jailor and his family had to do the same. It was simply "obedience to the faith."

Is it possible that any person with "an honest and good heart" can fail to see and understand the way of salvation as here in these two cases so plainly revealed and so carefully and particularly put on record? But let us inquire further: what is this "word" which both Cornelius and the jailer were required to hear, believe and obey in order to be saved? Is it the whole Bible? Surely no one is so foolish as to think that. Is it necessary then to ask such a question as the following? "Where in all the book do we learn that all Scriptural knowledge is essential to salvation?" Who ever knew any person to claim that? I have never known or heard of any one holding such an absurd view.

What, then, I ask again, is "the word?" Paul calls it "the word of faith which we preach," and then in the same connection he shows that he means "the gospel," and that the faith cometh by hearing it. Rom. x. 8-17. Peter says, "This is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you," and that it is the incorruptible seed, the Word of God, by which his children are begotten. 1 Pet. i. 22-25. Paul also tells the brethren in Christ, that it is "the Word of the truth of the gospel." Col. i. 5. He also says to the churches of Galatia, that there is "not another gospel" than the one he preached as the Word of faith. The Master himself said it was "the Word of the kingdom," the gospel, and that it must be understood and believed and produce fruit, obedience to the faith, (Mark i. 14, 15; Matt. xiii. 19-23), and that the first thing for a person to do after believing the gospel was to be baptized, the first step of obedience to the faith, and that this is the way to be saved. Matt. xxviii. 19; Mark xvi. 16. In harmony with this, Paul says the gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. The gospel of the kingdom then (not all the Bible) is the word of salvation, "the word of life," which John personifies as Jesus Christ the living Word. 1 John i. 1-3.

But, says one, cannot a person have faith in Christ and be saved without believing the gospel of the kingdom? Let us see. Philip went down to the city of Samaria, and preached Christ unto them;....."When they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and women." Acts viii. 5, 12. Can any person fail to see by this, that to preach Christ was to preach the gospel of the kingdom and name, and therefore to believe in Christ is to believe the gospel—the word? Is there more than one gospel, "the gospel of Christ?" Is there more than one Christ—the Word? In the same chapter, verse 26, it is called "the Word of God," and in verse 35, "the gospel," the same "word" that was preached to Cornelius and to the jailer who by believing it believed on the Lord Jesus Christ as the apostle said. Then again, Christ himself said, he that believeth not the gospel shall be condemned. That decides it, no believing into Christ with saving faith without believing his gospel and being baptized in obedience to the faith.

What, asks one, is that more than all other duties and commands? Oh, no, no, no. Who could be so foolish as to think that? But first faith and baptism which is God's own appointed means or way to put on Christ, to put on the sin-covering name, to get remission of past sins, to become a Christian, to become one of "the household of faith," a member of "the household of God," one of his children, the God-family. Then after that comes the great command to all thus constituted children, brethren and sisters and mothers of Christ, "teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded." So then, without faith it is impossible to please God, and without holiness shall no one see the Lord. The faith and the obedience, good works, are inseparable. But the commands of Christ are not to the millions of outsiders who know him not, but to his "brethren" inside the household, "his own house, whose house are we," said Paul. Heb. iii. 6.

But, although the way of life is pointed out so plainly, and although we are distinctly informed and shown by no less than ten examples in the one book of the Acts of the Apostles, that both Jews and Gentiles, in order to be saved, were required to believe the word, believe in Christ, believe the gospel and then be baptized into the one saving name for the remission of sins, to "wash away their sins" and be thus constituted righteous ones in Christ; yes, ten examples of obedience to the faith by baptism in Acts, and yet there are some who doubt, demur and cavil, professing to have the faith of Abraham, but are not "fully persuaded." They raise all sorts of objections and quibbles. One thinks it is not necessary in all cases to believe the gospel, thus doubting Christ's own words, he that believeth not shall be condemned. Another thinks those words are a questionable portion of Scripture, although the proof of its genuineness is ample. Another thinks baptism might have been needful for the Jews, but for us Gentiles it is not essential, and imagines he sees something repugnant in such a narrow way of life. Well, it is hardly likely that we poor, ignorant, finite, conceited creatures know better than God. But it seems sad although true, that "few there be that find it," and still more sad that "many shall seek to enter in and shall not be able."

Another says, surely you do not think baptism is a saving ordinance! Let us see. In the ark, "eight souls were saved by water: the like figure whereunto baptism doth now save us." 1 Peter iii. 20. Do you not believe this? Again, "According to his mercy he saved us by the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Spirit"—Greek, through the bath of a new birth. Titus iii. 5. Jesus said, except a man be born of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God. And again, he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved. Yes, every command is a saving ordinance.

And yet another, in the face of all these Scriptures, says, "We may differ in opinion as to baptism being necessary to salvation, but we must all agree that faith is necessary: "Without faith it is impossible to please God." My dear brother, I do not, in the light of all the Scripture I have quoted and referred to in the ten examples in Acts, I do not see how we can differ as to baptism any more than as to faith? Is not baptism just as distinctly a command by Christ and the apostles as is faith? Does not the faith which pleases God include and positively require the obedience? Is it possible think you to please God without the obedience to the faith? Can faith be complete and saving faith, and pleasing except it obeys? Is not the first step of obedience, baptism, then the observance of all things commanded? Where then is the difference in importance between faith and obedience? The command is first, go teach all nations, enlighten them, make known to them the necessary knowledge that they be able to believe, obey and be saved. As has been ably shown, it is not possible for any one to believe without first having been "taught," and "learned," and so acquired a knowledge of the things necessary to be believed—the things of the kingdom and name. Hence the Savior said, "They shall all be taught of God. Every man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me." John vi. 45. In this way all who come to Christ are, as he said, "drawn," attracted to him. John vi. 44; xii. 32; Acts xx. 30. It begins by being taught and getting the necessary knowledge and understanding; then faith, then obedience, which includes repentance, baptism, and all other commands. Hence enlightenment, knowledge, is the beginning, sine qua non of Christianity. It seems to me this fact itself ought to put a quietus on the raillery against "knowledge."

Again, it would be just as consistent to ask, is the "one faith" a saving ordinance, as to ask is the "one baptism" and every other command a saving ordinance.

Again, another trying to find an argument to show that baptism is not essential, refers to the case of the robber, or thief on the cross, who was assured by the Lord, that he should be with him in paradise when he cometh in his kingdom, and yet, say they, there is no evidence that he was baptized. Yes, how many have produced that to me as proof that baptism is not really necessary. But this argument, like all the others, is easily shown to be without foundation. Every Bible student who understands the way of life, the revealed plan, should know that Christian baptism into the name was not appointed, required nor commanded until after the resurrection of Christ. Neither could it be, for baptism into Christ for the purpose of making disciples into Christians, was in the likeness of his death, burial and resurrection, and could not be therefore until after the death and resurrection of Christ. See Luke xxv. 45-47; Matt. xxviii. 19.

Jesus submitted to be circumcised, and to be baptized, in order to fulfil all righteousness, or as worded by the Diaglott, to establish every ordinance; not for himself, but as an example for us, in our behalf; just as he submitted to death on our behalf. John's baptism was not into Christ's death, nor into the name of Christ, hence not Christian baptism; therefore those who had been baptized by John, had to be afterwards baptized "into the name of the Lord Jesus." Acts xix. 45.

Again, would a person to believe a little, or pretend to believe, and then be baptized with an impure wicked motive as did Simon the magician, with no change of heart, disposition or character, they would deserve to perish unless they repent. Baptism, unless it be in obedience to the faith, and therefore result in a renewed mind, a new disposition, and character as a whole—"the new man"—is of no avail in the sight of God.

Again, another is ready to ask, does all self-sacrifice, noble deeds and good works count for nothing, except a person believe the gospel? I answer, I am intimately acquainted with more than one (and there are thousands) but will illustrate by one in particular. He is an educated man and was a member of the Canadian Parliament, a noble man, and one of the most moral, the most honest and upright in deal, one of the most affectionate husbands, the kindest of fathers, the most liberal to the poor, and the most self-sacrificing towards the sick and suffering. But he openly and distinctly declares his total unbelief of the Scriptures. He rejects not only the gospel, but the entire Bible as being a revelation from God. He is an out-and-out infidel. How foolish to ask, is all the goodness, and are all the noble deeds of a person who thus repudiates God and his revelation, and great salvation, counted for nothing. And yet might not a person just as safely reject the whole Bible, as to reject the gospel? Will mere natural or acquired goodness without the faith please God, or save any person? Or will not humble, self-sacrificing persons be as sons because they belong to the children which have not the faith, but totally ignore it?

Again, another is anxious to know who are the saints and martyrs. Well, all martyrs were not saints. By no means. Even that great man, Bruno, the unveiling of whose statue at Rome lately, caused the Pope to feel bad, and to utter such denunciations,—history informs us was an atheist; and yet he was a martyr. He was burned at the stake on Feb. 17, 1600. What for? Why simply because he opposed Catholicism. Not because he was a saint, for saints are not atheists. Thousands of martyrs were doubtless like him. But thousands of other martyrs were doubtless saints—true obedient believers of the gospel of the kingdom. God has always had a true people on earth. Both saints and atheists opposed Catholicism. And why not, for the so-called Christian Church—the mother of harlots—there were and still are, persons worse than atheists, who, although members of the church, say as did Ryan in his speech at Philadelphia, viz., "The Church tolerates heretics where she is obliged to so do, but she hates them with a deadly hatred, and uses all her powers to annihilate them. She still holds, and where she has the power, claims her right to persecute and kill all who protest against her errors." And yet she claims to be the best of all the churches.

I close with a very important question. Who are the daughters of this mother of harlots?—L. C. Thomas.

The Restitution.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JULY 2, 1902. NUMBER 25.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Original.

Genesis. Chap. 50.

1. And Joseph fell upon the face of his father lamented and kissed him.

2. And Joseph directed his house servants, the undertakers to bury his father; and the undertakers buried Israel.

3. And they fulfilled forty days for him; for in this wise are the days of the burial-rite numbered; and Aiguptos mourned for him seventy days.

4. And when the days of the mourning had passed, Joseph talked with Pharaon's men of ability, saying,

5. My father made me take an oath saying, in the memorial-tomb which I dug for myself in a land of Chanaan, there shalt thou bury me; now then will I go up and bury my father and return.

6. And Pharaoo said unto Joseph, Go up and bury thy father even as he swore thee to do.

7. And Joseph went up to bury his father; and there went up with him all the house-servants of Pharaoo and the elders of his house, and all the elders of the land of Aiguptos.

8. And all the household of Joseph's and his brothers and all his patriarchal household and his kindred; and their sheep and cattle they left behind in a land of Gesem.

9. And there went up with him also chariots and horsemen, and the encampment became a very great one.

10. And they arrived at the threshing floor of Atad, which is across the Jordan, and made a great and very strenuous public mourning for him; and he sorrowed for his father seven days.

11. And the inhabitants of the land of Chanaan saw the mourning at the threshing-floor of Atad and said, This is a great mourning for the Aiguptoi. Therefore he called the name of it sorrow of Aiguptos, and it is across the Jordan.

12. And his sons did in this wise for him.

13. And his sons took him up into a land of Chanaan, and buried him in the double cave, which Habraam acquired in the way of an acquisition for a memorial-tomb from Ephroon the Chettaite over opposite Mambres.

14. And Joseph returned into Aiguptos, he and his brethren and those who had gone up with him to bury his father.

15. And when the brethren of Joseph saw that their father was dead, they said, Perchance Joseph will remember evil (hold a grudge) against us, and repay us for all the evil things which we showed towards him.

16. And they went to Joseph and said, Thy father swore us before he came to his end saying,

17. In this wise shall ye have said unto Joseph, Remit unto them their injustice and sin, because they showed themselves wickedly (owaris thee) and now accept the injustice of the courtiers of the God of thy father; and Joseph lamented while they were talking to him.

18. And coming unto him they said: Appointed that we are members of thy household.

19. And Joseph said unto them, Fear not; for I am of God (or I belong to God).

20. Ye did take counsel wickedly against me; but God counselled for good concerning me, that ye might become as ye are today a vast laity and might be supported.

21. And he said unto them, Fear not; I will support you and your households on through (the famine understood) and he comforted them and talked to their heart.

22. And Joseph took up his abode in Aiguptos, he and his brethren, and all the household of his father; and Joseph lived to be one hundred and ten years old.

23. And Joseph saw Ephraim's children unto a third generation; and the sons of Machir, the son of Manasser were brought forth in the lap of Joseph.

24. And Joseph spake unto his brethren, saying, I am about to die; and God will take an oversight of you (visit you) and will lead you up out of this land into the land which God swore unto your fathers Habraam, Isaak and Jakoob.

25. And Joseph made the sons of Israel swear as follows, In the visitation with which God will visit you, ye shall also bring up my bones with you from here.

26. And Joseph came to his end one hundred and ten years old; and they buried him and put him in the coffin in Aiguptos.

COMMENT.

Notice they put him in "the coffin" not "a coffin" R. V. The word for "coffin" is not the ordinary word then in use for "a coffin" either but might be "an urn" or "sarcophagus," and there is a good deal of evidence to sustain the supposition of the Anglo-Israelites of these days who argue that the "stone coffer" found in the great pyramid of Egypt with its lid removed was in reality Joseph's coffin from which his bones were taken by the children of Israel when they went up out of Egypt under the leadership of Moses.

"Undertakers" instead of "physicians" R. V. There is nothing about "embalming" in the 1st verse. The Israelitish obsequies for a ruler were forty days, and Egyptian seventy.

In 4th verse "men of ability" instead of "house."

In the 7th verse R. V. "all the servants" should be "the house-servants" or "courtiers."

There is nothing about "little ones" in the 8th verse as given in the R. V.

Also "camp" instead of "company" R. V. in the 9th verse.

In the 11th verse R. V. gives the name of the place "Abelmizraim" which should mean "sorrow of Egypt." Does it in modern Hebrew?

In the 13th verse there is no word that can by any stretch of the imagination be made a proper name like "Machpelah" in the R. V.

14th verse R. V. "after he had buried his father" not in the text at all.

16th verse R. V. "sent a message" should read "went to."

17th verse R. V. "servants" should be "courtiers and in 18th "servants" should be "members of thy household."

In the 19th verse R. V. has "in the place of God" which should be "of God" or "belonging to."

20th verse R. V. "to save much people alive" should read—"that ye might become a vast laity."

20th There is nothing about "embalming" in this verse either. The word so translated in the R. V. is the usual word for "bury."

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JULY 2, 1902.

As the air rushes to a vacuum, so God fills the soul emptied of self. •

KING EDWARD of England was not able to be crowned last Thursday. He is improving and some hopes are entertained that he may yet live to go through the ceremony.

IT is not death, but life that the godly long for when they sigh to flee away and be at rest. It is not that they would be unclothed, but that we would be clothed upon, like Paul. •

A WISE man is one that knows how to turn to good account the knowledge which he has. He is not wise who has mastered all languages, all science, if he lacks the ability to use this knowledge. He is only stuffed. •

"GROW in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ," is the Spirit's injunction. From this we infer that God desires us, and expects us to find it easier and easier to obey his commandments,—so that at last the acts that were sore self-denial become a pleasure." •

"BLESSED are the peacemakers for they shall be called the children of God." On the other side, cursed be the peace-breakers, quarrel-pickers, whisperers, back-biters, sowers of discord, dispraisers of them that be good, to bring them out of favor, interpreters of evil of what is done for a good purpose, finders of fault where none is." •

"PLUCKING faults is the most discouraging work in the world. When corn and other crops reach a certain height few weeds can grow among them. The crops overshadow them and grow them down. The lesson is, let men make their love, purity and kindness grow up like corn that every noxious weed may be overshadowed and die." •

BRETHREN and sisters,—the apostle Paul enjoins us to rejoice in the Lord always. Do we do it? If we do not, it is in order to enquire why not! If we live in any known sin, we need look no further. No one can rejoice in God under such conditions. And we are convinced that even a DOUBTFUL principle of life harbored in the heart, will prevent us from being always joyful in the Lord. It is strange that those having tasted that the Lord is good, should think it incompatible to rejoice in the Lord while in heaviness from other causes. •

Great Babylon.

Rigland says, "Babylon far surpassed in extent the largest of European cities; and in that particular, as its form was nearly square, was equal to any two of them; but as the houses were not contiguous, and the streets wide and far apart, forming by their intersections large squares of garden, and arable and meadow ground, it cannot be supposed to have been nearly equal to either London or Paris in population.

"The plan was grand, beautiful and useful, and equally conducive to the security, the pleasure, and the health of the inhabitants. The Babylonian monarchs, desiring to make their capital impregnable to every mode of attack at that time known or thought of, had surrounded it with walls of an immense height and thickness, and ditches of a proportionate width and depth, constantly supplied with water by the Euphrates, which ran through the middle of the city. The streets were laid out in right lines the length and breadth of the city, crossing one another at right angles, so that, from every intersection four gates of the city may be seen, every street forming a magnificent vista, very unlike the narrow and crooked streets of European cities. The vast extent of the place admitted large squares of garden and arable land between the intersecting streets, so that every house might have a small field behind it.

This contrivance contributed exceedingly to render the city proof against the assaults of famine, if it was blockaded, and its supplies intercepted, as its impregnable walls and unfordable ditches rendered it invulnerable against the assaults of the enemy."

So thought its founder, doubtless, and its builders. But for all that Babylon was taken. From a human point of view, it was impregnable. But God had a controversy with Babylon and found a way to take it. Cyrus has the credit of taking the great city of Babylon,—but the great Jehovah selected him to subdue and punish nations; he was anointed for that work, and his right hand was strengthened for that purpose. It is not for us to say, but we are persuaded that his campaign was planned for him, or skill imparted for the seemingly impossible task. We quoted the above paragraphs to encourage parents who are isolated to gather their children around them and endeavor to interest them in the God of the Bible by the many beautiful stories of which this is a sample,—out of which ways will develop to lead them to regard him with love for his wisdom, power, goodness and mercy, that may result in their salvation. We greatly fear our people do not feel the responsibilities resting upon them after bringing children into the world: or there would be fewer of the children of believers found in the broad way. We do not see why the promise of Proverbs xxii. 6 is not as absolute as any in the Book: "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." It may be that precepts of the right sort and plenty of them are given,—but the example set before them may not agree with them. To a great extent children of this generation appear to do about as they please, if they do not exactly rule the house; and under such circumstances the training is done in company with rough, rude, disobedient children of unbelieving parents. Observation teaches us that the attempt to train children God-ward is often not made till bad,—very bad,—habits have been formed. And we would tenderly call believing parents' attention to the divine instruction given Jewish parents, and ask them if they can claim the promise in Prov. xxii. 6 if they do not do likewise? "Bring them up in the nurture,—training, education—and admonition of the Lord;" that is, warn and reprove them as the Lord directs. In Deut. iv. 9, 10, we read the words of Moses the servant of the Lord to Israel, "Only take heed to thyself, and keep thy soul diligently, lest thou forget the things which thine eyes have seen, and lest they depart from thy heart all the days of thy life; but teach them thy sons, and thy sons' sons; specially the day that thou stoodest before the Lord thy God in Horeb, when the Lord said unto me, Gather me the people together, and I will make them hear thy words, that they may learn to fear me all the days that they live upon the earth, and that they may TEACH THEIR CHILDREN." Again in Deut. vi. 7, 20 we find this language, "And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might. And these words which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart; and thou shalt teach them diligently unto THY CHILDREN, and shall TALK OF THEM when thou SITTEST in thine house, and when thou WALKEST by the way; and when thou LIEST DOWN, and when thou RISEST UP.....When thy son asketh thee in time to come, saying, what mean the testimonies, and the statutes, and the judgments, which the Lord our God hath commanded you?" Then follows the answer they are to make, see ver. 21-25. Plainly the family was the agency for the perpetuation and glorification of God's name and truth in the earth. We want to leave it on record that we believe Eph. vi. 4, and 2 Tim. iii. 15, and many other Scriptures show the law of the Lord is as exacting in this respect now, as in past ages. In a word, it expects all called out ones who have children to train them for God,—with an absolute promise of success. And we add, that when men or women who profess to love and obey the truth do not train for God their own offspring for God, we think it very questionable if they know anything of the blessedness of those whose iniquity is pardoned and whose sin is covered. If we succeed in inducing one believer to try himself or herself by the divine plumbline given to Israel and to those of the name, we will be thankful to God. •

What We Believe. No. 7.

The Church of God believes and teaches "the literal resurrection of the dead." It firmly holds that dead men are really and literally dead; and the only way they can live is to be made alive by the resurrection of the dead. If death is real, so is the resurrection; if it is not "literal," neither is the resurrection. The Church of God insists upon teaching and emphasizing the resurrection of the dead, because this is plainly a Bible doctrine. But why use the word "literal" in connection with "the resurrection of the dead?" This is a qualifying term, and tells what kind of a "resurrection of the dead" we hold, in distinction from other kinds of resurrection. The word is defined as meaning "according to the letter: primitive, real, not figurative or metaphorical."—Webster. So we believe in a "resurrection of the dead" which is "according to the letter"—that is, the letter of the word "resurrection." Of this latter word the "literal" meaning is, "A rising again; chiefly the revival of the dead human race, or their return from the grave." Such, then, is our faith with regard to "the dead." But why so particular, so "dogmatical," as we are sometimes charged with being? Because there are those in the so-called "religious world" who deny "the literal resurrection of the dead," but, assuming the immortality of the human race, hold that when the so-called "immortal soul" (of which the Bible knows absolutely nothing) is released from the body it takes its flight to heaven or hell: and this, especially the former, constitutes a "resurrection." We deny this, since it is perfectly plain that this could by no means be regarded as a resurrection; for, in the first place, it is assumed that the soul can not die, in which case resurrection cannot possibly pertain to it (since "the dead" are to have a "resurrection"); and secondly, it is assumed that the soul of good men goes to heaven at death; and that, surely, is not a resurrection, a "return from the grave." And the soul of bad men goes to hell, in other words, receives its doom immediately at death, there can be no thought of resurrection. It is because of this erroneous and very mischievous teaching of the immortality of the soul and its necessary effects on other vital truths, that the Church of God maintains that dead men, in order to live again, must "revive" and "return from the grave," and that if they do not so *re*live, they "are perished," even those who have "fallen asleep in Christ," as Paul said. 1 Cor. xv. 18. It would never have been needful to use the term "literal" in connection with "the resurrection of the dead," had not the un-Scriptural theory of immortality, without and apart from Christ insinuated itself into and vitiated the doctrine of the Church. "Resurrection" would have meant resurrection "according to the letter" of that word.

I will cite only a few of the many Scriptures that might be cited showing the mortality of the human family—the mortality of THE MAN in his entirety. Take as a criterion to Scripture teaching on the subject of death, Paul's reference to the genesis of death in Rom. v. 12. "By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." Sin is the transgression of law, of a known commandment—"disobedience." Rom. v. 19. How did it "enter into the world?" And the Scriptural answer is, "By one man." In its wake, as a natural and necessary result, came "death." This was not confined to the "one man," the first transgressor, but "passed through to all men," the entire race was involved. Was or is this death "literal?" Did Adam, and does his posterity, really "die"? The divine command was, "Eat not, for in the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Gen. ii. 17. Adam ate of the forbidden fruit. What was the result? The record says that "Adam lived 930 years; and he died." Gen. v. 5. How was the death penalty executed? By man's exclusion from the tree of life, "lest he.....eat of the tree of life and live forever." Gen. iii. 22. Thus it is plain that the capacity to "live forever" (which God claims for himself. Deut. xxxii. 40) was not inherently in Adam, but was contingent upon his observance of God's righteous requirements, and so soon as he became guilty of an infraction of these, he incurred God's displeasure and drew upon himself the penalty pronounced against transgression. It is an idle waste of words and time to say that it was Adam's "body" that died, for the record plainly says that Adam died. Adam, the man, was not to eat; he was dust, he would die, and for his disobedience "returned to dust." Gen. iii. 19. Only a corrupted theology would try to evade the force of these facts by such a play upon words as the one here noted. This result "passed through to all men." "Man" is "mortal," subject to death (Job iv. 17), and when dead totally oblivious of things past, present, or future. In short, "The dead know not anything." Eccl. ix. 5.

It will be observed that in Scripture "the resurrection" pertains to "the dead." If men did not die, they would have no need of a resurrection, and could not appreciate it if it were set before them. But let them once understand that death is the "enemy" he is in the Scripture said to be (1 Cor. xv. 26), "the king of terrors" (Job xviii. 14) who "reigns" over them (Rom. v. 14) until compelled by a Mighty One to yield them up: such, I say, can appreciate the meaning of the resurrection.

Another subject, already referred to in these articles and connected with the present one, is the second coming of Christ. What thoughts does the mention of the coming again of the Life-giver awaken in the minds of most "religious" persons today? Small indeed is the number of those who, at the mention of this most glorious subject, do not think of the coming of death. Funeral "sermons" are preached, and those who mourn the loss of loved ones, who have been torn from them by the icy hand of death, are "comforted" (?) with the thought that "the Lord came and took" the persons just deceased. It is taught from the pulpit (and few take the pains to enquire why) that death is the coming of Christ. That the return or second coming of Christ does not mean death, must be apparent to every one who has given John xxi. 20-23 even the most casual thought. Jesus said to Peter who had expressed some anxiety as to the disciple whom Jesus loved, "If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? Follow thou me." What was the effect produced on the minds of the by-standers? Did they imagine that that disciple should "tarry" until he died? On the contrary, "the saying went abroad among the brethren, that that disciple should not die." Such a calamity would be prevented if he tarried until the coming of Christ; for "the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first: Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord." 1 Thes. iv. 16, 17. Of the resurrection Christ is "the first fruit; afterwards they that are Christ's at his coming." 1 Cor. xv. 23. If "they that are Christ's" are to be "raised in incorruption, in glory, in power, a spiritual body," "at his coming," then it is plain there can never be a resurrection unless the Lord comes. He is "the resurrection and the life." John xi. 25. "Christ our life" is to "appear;" then they who through the spirit put to death the deeds of the body, shall "appear with him in glory" (Col. iii. 4), "be like him" (1 John iii. 2), "partakers of the divine nature" (2 Pet. i. 4), "fashioned like his glorious body." Phil. iii. 21.

May we put forth every possible effort to attain unto "the resurrection from among dead ones" (Phil. iii. 11), "the first resurrection." Rev. xx. 5, 6.

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ:

Thinking some one might like to know something more of the little Gospel Mission, 984 Hall St, Grand Rapids, Mich., which Brother Aslakson mentioned in his letter, after attending conference at Dutton.

It is the result of a movement made a year ago to get a place in this City that the Gospel might be preached, which had been my prayer for years. Money from the Tithing Society was given me to use as I saw fit. I was told to get a place to hold meetings and some one would come and preach when convenient. I secured a comfortable place for [illegible] dollars a month, fitted it up with the means given for the work. As some know, who will read this, that I am not a preacher, only one of God's simple, obedient, trusting ones, willing to do anything for his sake.

The 7th of last July found us here, a little company of believers. Sister Woodward came to preach for us, and came as often as circumstances would permit. Brother Winchester came and preached sometimes when he could, and Brother Crozier came a time or too; but his condition of body would not allow him to come very much, and I felt I was standing alone in the work which was gaining in interest and no one to preach. I gave a Bible reading and conducted the prayer meetings until the time came when I thought I must have more help, and with no other object in view than the salvation of souls "not immortal," asked ministers of other faith to come and give a practical talk which they did sometimes. Then some of the brothers and sisters in the faith thought they could not stand by any thing of the kind, and withdrew their support from the work; but the dear Father knew how to care for his own and raised up friends for the work. I dare not withdraw from a work I knew God had given me to do, so here I stand doing the best I can, waiting for the dear Lord to send the help needed, or that he wants here. I do not ask any one to preach or take up collections, simply trusting Father more than ever before. I have just taken this deeper step of faith which God has honored so far. This is a rent test to know if God wants me here, and my way is pleasing to him. All the support is by free-will offerings. He promised me before the work began to "withhold no good thing from them that walk uprightly," and it is true yet.

A mother and her 16 year old daughter have just been baptized into the name of Jesus, as a result of my feeble effort to tell the gospel message to them. Mrs. Clement and her sweet-faced daughter, Myrtle, were baptized by Brother F. L. Austin, just after the conference, and dear ones, God is adding his blessings daily.

I will correspond with any one about the work here at any time.

Yours in Christ.

C. J. CHAFFEE.

[The above letter is about all we know of this work in the city of Grand Rapids, and if it is of assistance to Sister Chaffee to have it published, well and good, provided she is working in the proper way. This opens the way for a remark that may be taken for what it is worth. Our faith and hope is so much different, and the work we are engaged in as preachers of "the gospel," and "the gospel" we preach is so radically unlike that of other denominations, that in some places we build separate houses, or hire halls, or maintain tents, or meet in homes: have a separate line of ministers, and different publications.

There is a spirit of "liberality" dominating this age, which has created a false conception of "charity," and given "love" a wrong definition. This sentiment carried to its logical conclusion makes all our separate institutions useless, for if we can go hand in hand in "union" meetings, and say "amen," "the Lord bless," to all these exactly opposite denominations, it were but nonsense to keep up separate organizations, when so much more could be done at less cost if we were united in one.

Our private opinion is that we should stick to our "peculiar" faith and hope, and if we are not located in reach of others of "like precious faith" then stand alone and you can be certain the Lord will bless your efforts. Joining hands with error does not bring a surety of approval from the Father. Rather the reverse it seems to us.—ED.]

In regard to Bro. Adams' request in THE RESTITUTION of 4th ult I will say Matt. xiii. 40, 42, has reference entirely to the kingdom after the kingdom is set up and this cannot take place until after Christ comes. Matt. xxiv. 37, 39 has reference to the suddenness of Christ's coming and taking the world unawares. Luke xvii. 26, 30, cannot be taken literally in all its parts—historically; it only refers to the suddenness of the coming of Christ; but we know that there will be probation after Christ comes and sets up his kingdom. See Acts xv. 16, 17. Here it is plainly stated that men may seek after the Lord, after the tabernacle of David is set up. If think not "probation over there," or at least its equivalent, I cannot see how language can be framed to teach it.

See also Isa. ix. 7, "Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end." Evidently children will be born after the kingdom is set up; and even indefinitely for the command was given to Adam before he sinned; "Be fruitful, multiply and replenish the earth." I would refer Bro. Adams to all the prophets, for all have spoken of probation after the coming of Christ, see also Zech. xii. 10, this is after the coming of Christ, for "they shall look upon me (Christ) whom they have pierced." See also xiii. 1, 6.

Submitted in love to Bro. Adams and the cause of truth.

On Thursday, June 26, 1902, occurred the marriage, at the home of the bride's parents in this city, of Mr. Arthur T. Underwood the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Underwood, and Miss Cora F. Leonard the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Leonard.

Infidelity Gone to Seed.

Professor Bakunin, one of the recognized leaders of the atheists on the Continent, in a political address at Berne, is reported as having propounded the following horrible doctrines:

"Tear out of your hearts the belief in the existence of God; for, as long as an atom of the silly superstition remains in your minds, you will never know what freedom is. When you have got rid of the belief in God, and when, moreover, you are convinced that your existence and that of the surrounding world is due to conglomeration of atoms in accordance with the laws of gravity and attraction, then, and then only, you will have accomplished the first step toward liberty, and you will experience less difficulty in ridding your minds of that second lie which tyranny has invented. The first lie is God; the second lie is the idea of right. And when you have freed your minds from the fear of a God, and from that childish respect for the fiction of right then all the remaining chains which bind you, and which are called science, civilization, property, marriage, morality and justice will snap asunder like threads. Our first work must be the destruction and annihilation of everything as it now exists. You must accustom yourselves to destroy every thing—the so-called good with the bad."

Of this fearful infidel manifesto the London Literary World says: "We will not insult modern thought by presenting this as an average statement of its attitude towards religious truth, but it does exhibit in nervous language the inevitable abyss towards which agnosticism travels."

Good Security.

"Mister, do you lend money here?" asked an earnest young voice at the office door.

The lawyer turned away from his desk, confronted a clear-eyed, poorly-dressed lad of twelve years, and studied him keenly for a minute. "Sometimes we do—on good security," he said.

The little fellow explained that he had a chance "to buy out a boy that's cryin' papers." He had half the money required, but he needed to borrow the other fifteen cents.

"What security can you offer?" asked the lawyer.

The boy's brown hand sought his pocket and drew out a paper, carefully folded in a bit of calico. It was a cheaply printed pledge against the use of intoxicating liquor and tobacco.

As respectfully as if it had been the deed to a farm the lawyer examined it, accepted it, and handed over the required sum.

A friend who had watched the transaction with silent amusement laughed as the younger borrower departed.

"You think that I knew nothing about him," smiled the lawyer. "I know that he came manfully, in what he supposed to be a business way, and tried to negotiate a loan instead of begging the money. I know that he has been under good influences, or he would not have signed that pledge; and that he does not hold it lightly or he would not have cared for it so carefully. I agree with him that the one who keeps himself from such things has a character to offer as a security. —Christian Observer.

Seize the Opportunity.

If you would win a golden crown,
Don't waste the moments small;
A time for some grand single deed
May never come at all.

You need not wait for fortune's smile,
Your hero-traits to show,
But seize each opportunity
For labor as you go.

If you would do a noble work;
In this sin-hardened earth.
Remember that the smallest deeds
Of kindness are of worth.

Some few great souls, with wonderous gifts,
May seem to out-run you:
But most of all the daily tasks
The many hands must do.

If you would serve the Master well,
Heed well his written word.
No other motive-rule so pure
As his were ever heard.

By them ye well may learn to live;
By them learn how to die.
Then often read and meditate,
As more its hasten by

There's always something you may do,
Some kindly word be said by you.
Some one may crave your sympathy.
Then seize the opportunity,
Before it hurries by.

Did Jesus Eat the Passover?

Says Dr. Hale: "Having recently re-read some of Mr. W. H. Wilson's articles in RESTITUTIONS of 1895; I am always instructed by his writings, but wish to know a little more about the day of crucifixion and days relating to it. If my information is correct, the Passover (Jesus) was slain on Wednesday, the 14th of Nisan, "between the evenings" or about 3 o'clock P. M. The Passover week was the seven days beginning Wednesday 6 P. M. (which was Thursday "eve" on the 15th of Nisan) and extended to Wednesday, the 21st at 6 P. M. Now this being so—how could Jesus eat the Passover on Tuesday the 13th, if Passover week did not begin until Wednesday night the 15th? Where do we learn that the time of the slaying the lamb extended from Tuesday to Wednesday. Again: If the lamb was to be taken on the 10th of the month and was slain on Wednesday 14th, then does not Palm Sunday come on Saturday, (the 10th of the month)? The first of these questions seems to me particularly important. I trust that I may have a reply. Respectfully, LORENZO HALE, M. D.

The above enquiry was made a long time ago. It was laid away with the intention of answering, and passed my memory.

From a closer study of the question I have found clear Scripture evidence that he did not eat the last passover. I will present the evidence for your consideration.

In the first place, the law governing the passover was unchangeable. If any one presumed to change the rites, ceremonies, or the appointed season that soul must be cut off. See Num. ix. 1, 2, 3, 13: "And the Lord spake unto Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, in the first month of the second year after they were come out of the land of Egypt, saying, Let the children of Israel also keep the passover at his appointed season. In the fourteenth day of this month, at even, ye shall keep it in his appointed season: according to all the rites of it, and according to all the ceremonies thereof, shall ye keep it. And Moses spake unto the children of Israel, that they should keep the passover. But the man that is clean, and is not in a journey, and forbeareth to keep the passover, even the same soul shall be cut off from among his people: because he brought not the offering of the Lord in his appointed season, that man shall bear his sin."

The "appointed season," for the preparation when the lamb must be slain, was toward sundown on the 14th of the first month Abib, or Nisan, and the passover must be, eaten on the 15th. See Deut. xvi. 1-6; Lev. xxiii. 5-8; Exod. xii. 1-6; 2 Chron. xxxv. 1.

The Scripture evidence is clear that Jesus was dead and buried and in his grave, when the "appointed season," to eat the passover arrived. Consequently, if he did eat the passover at all he did violate the law as to the "appointed season." The law demands that all such shall be "cut off," "that man shall bear his sin." If Jesus did eat the passover out of its "appointed season," he was guilty of "SIN," for says the law, "that man shall bear his sin." How then could it be said of him, "he knew no sin," was "without sin"?

I will now give the Scripture evidence both as to the day of the month, and the day of the week upon which he was crucified.

FIRST, THE DAY OF THE MONTH.

See John xii. 1: "Then six days before the passover came Jesus to Bethany."

1. The evidence that the passover was on the 15th of the month is clear. Now, subtract six from fifteen, and the result will be nine. Therefore Jesus came to Bethany on the ninth of the month.

2. Enters Jerusalem "next day," the 10th. John xii. 12.

3. Returned to Bethany at evening. Mark xi. 11; Matt. xxi. 17.

4. Second visit to Jerusalem the 11th. Mark xi. 12.

5. Again returned to Bethany. Mark xi. 19.

6. Third visit to Jerusalem the 12th. Mark xi. 20.

7. "Next day" hid himself until evening, the 13th. John xii. 36.

8. Arrested Tuesday evening, and crucified next day (Wed.) at noon, and buried on evening of the 14th. Matt. xxvi. 27; John xix. 14-36; Matt. xxvii. 57.

9. First night in the grave the 14th.

10. First day and second night the 15th.

11. Second day and third night the 16th.

12. Third day the 17th.

I have now given the Scripture evidence from the ninth of the month, "six days before the passover," accounting for each day from the 9th to the 17th, the day of his resurrection.

THE DAY OF THE WEEK.

This is ascertained from the declaration of Matt. xii. 40, that "the Son of Man shall be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth," and also from Matt. xxviii. 1: that he was raised "in the END of the Sabbath (Saturday evening), now the "end of the Sabbath," could not be early on the first day of the week. Matthew is the only evangelist who gives an account of the resurrection, the other evangelists simply record appearances and an empty grave, the resurrection having already taken place.

I will now give other translations confirming the C. V. translation—"In the END of the Sabbath."

"In the end of the Sabbath." Latin Vulgate.

"Late in the week" (not early in the week). Rotherham.

"Now late on the Sabbath," (not early next day). R. V.

"Now late on the Sabbath as it was getting dusk," (the twilight of evening). Interlinery.

"Late in the Sabbath." Bible Union.

"Upon the evening of the Holy Sabbath," (not early morning.) Cloverdale.

"The Sabbath at even," Tyndall.

"About the end of the Sabbath," (and not about the dawn of early morn). Lange.

"At the close of the Sabbath," Robinson.

Now this evidence fixes Saturday evening as the day of the week. Now date back "three days and three nights," (the length of time the Scripture fixes for his abode in the grave), and we will find the day of the week upon which he was crucified and buried.

1. Saturday Nisan 17th, third day.
2. Friday Nisan 16th, second day and third night.
3. Thursday Nisan 15th, first day and second night.
4. Wednesday Nisan 14th, first night.

Now, when we consider that Matthew alone fixes the day of the resurrection, and that is given as "the end of the Sabbath," and the Scripture assertion that his abode in the grave must be "three days and three nights," most definitely fixes Wednesday, the 14th, as the day of his burial. And Wednesday is proved to be the 14th, from the fact that Jesus came to Bethany, "six days before the passover," the ninth of the month.

This is also confirmed by John xix. 38-42; Luke xxiii. 51-54; Matt. xxvii. 62-66, which prove that he was crucified and buried on the "preparation day," and the law fixes the 14th as being "preparation day."

John xix. 13-16, shows that the "appointed season" for eating the passover had not arrived when Pilate condemned Jesus, and verses 27 to 30, show that the disciples had not yet bought the things necessary for the passover festival, so that could not have been the first day of the festival.

WHEN DID JESUS EAT THE LAST SUPPER?

The information we gather from some of the evangelists seems somewhat cloudy relative to the above question. But John states it clearly, and so in my opinion the others must be construed in harmony with the statements by John. I will quote a few verses from John xiii., from the Twentieth Century Translation: "Before the passover festival began Jesus knew that the time had come for him to leave the world * * * The devil had already put the thought of betraying Jesus into the mind of Judas Iscariot. * * * He (Jesus) poured some water into the basin, and began to wash his disciples' feet * * * Jesus was deeply moved, and said very solemnly: it is one of you who will betray me * * * Who is it Master? It is the one to whom I shall give a piece of bread after dipping it. * * * (and) gave it to Judas the son of Simon Iscariot. * * * Jesus said to him, do what you are going to do at once. No one understood why he said this to Judas. Some thought as Judas kept the purse, that Jesus meant that he was going to buy some things needed for the festival * * Judas immediately went out. It was then night."

Now according to John this conversation and supper took place "BEFORE THE FESTIVAL," and also up to the night after the supper they had yet "to buy some things needed for the festival." This same night Judas betrayed him, and when before Pilate the Jews would not enter the judgment hall because it would disqualify them from eating the passover, thus showing it was still the preparation day.

Next morning after the supper, about noon, the Jews said to Pilate that he made himself a king (John xix. 14, 14): "It was the passover preparation day, and it was about noon. Then he said to the Jews: Look! here is your king!.....Pilate handed Jesus over to them to be crucified." It was still the "preparation day, and it was about noon," the 14th of the month.

After crucifixion (John xix. 41, 42) Joseph begged the body, "And so because of its being preparation day, (the 14th) and as the tomb was close at hand, they laid Jesus there." Hence Jesus was enclosed in the tomb while it was yet "preparation day," the 14th of Abib, and three days and three nights from this time would terminate "in the end of the Sabbath," and not the morning of the first day of the week.

W. H. WILSON.

Open Letter to J. N. Scholes.

I was much interested in your discourse of this morning. The theme chosen for consideration was the difference in effectiveness of the gospel in saving souls (people I would say) as promulgated by the early church and by the church of the present day.

You stated that the difference was very great, but that it was easier to recognize existing conditions than to trace the causes that produce those conditions often times, and illustrated by saying, that the physician would come into the home, where sickness obtained and perhaps easily make a diagnosis, but might be; and often was very uncertain as to the causes producing the morbid conditions found.

You stated, and truly I think, that the opposition encountered by the promulgators of the gospel, in the days of the apostles, was much more formidable, than that which confronts those who would make known the way of life to their fellowmen in this day and age of the world. You then in eloquent language drew a parallel, or rather I should say a contrast, between the facilities at the disposal of those who first went forth in obedience to the command of Jesus, to preach the gospel to every creature, and those enjoyed by those whose duty it is as followers of his in our day to proclaim the good news to their fellowmen; showing great advantage to the latter, in matter of facility.

Then as to the cause of this difference in effectiveness, you ventured an opinion. You called attention to the fact that the promulgators of the gospel in the days of the apostles were so filled with the Holy Ghost as to be led by it; and this you made very emphatic repeating as to be led by it. And this you conceived to be the reason of their effectiveness, and if I understood correctly you believe that if the followers of the Christ in this day and age, were so filled by the Holy Ghost, as to be led by it, the preaching of the gospel would be as effectual as in the times of the early churches. And you remarked by the way but did not dilate upon it, that in order to present the gospel one must have the gospel.

Now I have given this brief synopsis of your discourse, not to find fault with it, for I agree with it in the main, and accept your explanation of what you mean by the Holy Ghost. Indeed I am so heartily in accord with your last remark as above given that my object in writing this is to remark further upon it, and to say that in my opinion, in making this remark you have touched upon the chief etiological factor in the case. In order to preach the gospel successfully one must know what it imports, and present it in its purity. That the popular religious teaching of this day has not failed to do this I firmly believe. The importance of presenting it in its purity becomes apparent, when we consider that it is "the power of God unto salvation, to the Jew first and also to the Greek." It is God's remedy for man's infirmity. When a physician prescribes a remedy for a disease he will insist upon having the article prescribed pure and unadulterated, and if an impure article is administered, he will object to being held responsible for the failure that is sure to follow.

That Paul attached great importance to the purity of the gospel is apparent from his declaration, that "though we or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel than that which we have preached unto him let him be accursed;" and he makes this very emphatic by adding, as we said before so I say now again. If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed."

The reason he assigns for attaching so great importance to the preaching of the true gospel is, that he received it not from man, but that he was taught it by the revelation of Jesus, saying also that he sought not to please men, for adds the apostle, "If I yet please men I should not be the servant of Christ."

I appeal to you my friend, is not much of the popular preaching of today designed more to please men, than to instruct them and acquaint them with those truths that will make them "wise unto salvation." I am happy to know that this does not hit you.

In order to determine whether or not the gospel as presented in most of the so-called orthodox churches of this time is the same as that preached by the apostles, we have but to compare the two. To do this thoroughly would altogether exceed the limits of a letter like this, but we may notice one or two points of difference.

The apostles made frequent mention in their preaching of the kingdom of God and the resurrection. Both these themes are largely ignored in the preaching of our day. We read that they (the Samaritans) when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and women. Paul dwelt two whole years in his own hired house and received all that came unto him, preaching the kingdom of God and teaching those things that concern the Lord Jesus Christ. They preached Jesus and the resurrection. xvii. 18; iv. 2; xxiv. 15, 21. Paul taught that if the dead rise not then the saints that have fallen asleep are perished. Many other passages might be cited did time and space permit.

The Platonic doctrine of the natural immortality of the soul, which is now so almost universally believed in, in all so-called Christian and enlightened countries, has not only obscured the doctrine of the resurrection, but it is largely responsible for the apathy and indifference to the claims of the gospel of our Lord and Savior that everywhere obtains at the present time.

If one were to approach an individual who firmly believes that he has an immortal soul, that cannot die, and urge upon him the importance of obedience to the requirements of the gospel, we may imagine his mental process to be something like the following: I have an immortal soul, I am sure of a future life, and as to punishment in the future, that old doctrine or eternal torment in hell nobody believes that now, and it is so utterly inconsistent with the character of a wise and merciful heavenly Father, that it cannot be true; so there is nothing to fear on the score of punishment, and as I am sure of life, I will take the chances as to the conditions under which that life is to be enjoyed. Why should I join the church and enter upon a life of self denial?

Paul anticipated this danger to the church and uttered a warning in 2 Cor. xi. 3, "But I fear lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtility, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ." How did the adversary corrupt Eve? He said, "Ye shall not surely die;" and he is still whispering the same seductive and corrupting doctrine into the ears of the human race, "Ye shall not surely die." Was it a prophecy of this [illegible] trine, when the prophet [illegible] "With lies ye have made the heart of the righteous sad, whom I have not made sad; and strengthened the hands of the wicked, that he should not return from his wicked way, by promising him life."

Has not the doctrine of eternal life in misery made the hearts of righteous, humane and kind hearted people sad. And have I not shown that the promise of life, independent of the Christ, operates to prevent the wicked and indifferent man from seeking life at its true source.

This letter is already too long so that the way in which the gospel appeals to those who have been taught that they are mortal and subject to death; and that there is life in Christ only, will have to be considered some other time.

I am cordially and respectfully yours.

J. T. SMITH.

Editor Restitution:

"If a man die shall he live again?" Job xiv. 14.

Here is a question to the point, asked by that good man, Job, (a man is equivalent to any man) thus embracing the human family to resurrection of life or denying that any man who dies will live again. No judgment or condemnation. Job does not ask the question (if a good or bad man die shall he live again, but if a man die shall he live again?) touching a resurrection or no resurrection for the human race, "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." 1 Cor. xv. 23. (The same all whom sentence passed because of Adam's transgression will be restored to life by Christ. That the wicked is reserved to the day of destruction they shall be brought forth to the day of wrath) yet shall he be brought to the grave and shall remain in the tomb, Job xxi. 30-32, showing plainly that the wicked shall come forth and be judged, then return to the tomb to remain throughout eternity. "Marvel not at this; for all that are in their graves shall hear my voice and shall come forth. They that have done good unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation." John v. 28, 29.

Here is a thus saith the Lord, spoken by our King of kings and Lord of lords, and should be received with meekness, hoping to be led into all truth and righteousness.

Paul to his Corinthian brethren says, "Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you, there is no resurrection of the dead? but if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen; and if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain. Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God, because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ; whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not. For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised, and if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which have fallen asleep in Christ are perished."

The foregoing is a question of resurrection or no resurrection in Paul's great argument as to the dead, showing even those that have prepared themselves for future life will perish with all of mankind if there be no resurrection.

"And I saw thrones and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them, and I saw the souls of them that was beheaded for the witness of Jesus and for the Word of God, and which had not worshipped the beast neither his image neither had received his mark upon their forehead, or in their hands and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years (this is the first resurrection) but the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished." Rev. xx. 4, 5.

Here is the Groom's elect. They are the first to rise from the dead because they belong to the first-fruits, or to Christ which is the first sheaf of the harvest. "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection, on such the second death hath no power. And I saw the dead, small and great stand before God, and the books were opened, and another book was opened which is the Book of Life; and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books according to their works. And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them and they were judged every man according to their works; and death and hell were cast into the lake of fire, This is the second death. And whosoever was not found written in the Book of Life was [illegible] Please notice this is the general resurrection of time when the "rest" of the dead shall live; prior to this it will be seen that those raised at the first resurrection have been joint heirs with Christ, and reign with him one thousand years among the nations of earth. I want to say before going further, this chapter grasps the two resurrections, first and second. Now will all of the human race that shall reap eternal life come up at the first resurrection, understanding the gospel, and being justified by faith and obeying the great command which we as a people hope to understand.

It may look as though I am straying from my subject, but this point comes to my mind. If those books are opened at the general resurrection, then there will be a part of the race saved by their works, ignorant as a babe of the law of grace.

The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished. 2 Pet. ix.

Does dying in Adam complete the penalty of the wicked without a resurrection? If so it seems too bad that a righteous man has to suffer the same penalty in Adam. When the All-wise Creator has judged every man according to his works, when all small and great have stood before God, and judgment is executed, then shall the righteous enjoy an eternity of bliss, praising God throughout the cycles of time. Then there will be no wicked—they are extinct, quenched as tow. Isa. xliii. 17.

Obituary.

Alice M. B. Alger was born in Stowe Vermont, in Oct. 1882. Her father and mother both died before she was twenty months old. She was then adopted by her uncle and aunt who both died while she was a mere child. Since then her home has been with her relatives.

She was a niece of O. B. Cleveland, and came to their home in Anthony, Kansas, March 14, and died June 19, of cancer of the stomach, aged 19 yrs, and seven mo.

Sister Alice embraced the glad news of the kingdom of God, and the restitution of all things, and was looking for the soon coming King, by an upright Christian life, always manifesting a cheerful and loving disposition, that won for her the respect and love of all whom she associated with. We had but a short acquaintance with her; but she had only to be seen to be respected and loved.

Words of comfort were spoken by the writer to a large and sorrowing audience, assembled in our church, in the city of Attica, predicated upon the resurrection of the dead, "For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead," showing that death does not end all; but that there shall be a glorious future by a resurrection to an endless life.

We laid her in the Attica cemetery, to await the call of the Redeemer: "Thou shalt call, and I will answer thee."

May this bring the solemn thought home to us, that we are mortal, and soon must rest with her in the silent grave. May it prompt us to a closer walk with God, ever manifesting the life and character of the lowly Jesus. Let us not sorrow as those that have no hope; for we shall meet Alice in the new earth where there shall be no death, no partings, no pain, no sufferings. Tears will be wiped from all faces. What a glorious meeting that will be, freed from all care, no curse there; but the throne of God and the Lamb will be there. The good and pure of all ages will be there. Glad day, may it soon come.

The Cosmopolitan has undertaken to present a series of brief sketches of the men who are leaders in finance, manufacture and commerce, not prepared in an offhand way, but by writers of the greatest ability who have an exact knowledge of their subjects. The series thus far produced has attracted the widest attention. The industrial changes which have of late been occurring with such rapidity have the widest possible interest for all classes. The knowledge of these men, their derivation, leading characteristics and weaknesses throws much light upon the news of the day in which their names constantly recur.

The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Poetry.

Jesus Crucified.

"God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ." Gal. vi. 14.

Perish every human story—
Every system taught or tried;
God forbid that I should glory,
Save in Jesus crucified!

Here let faith repose, and cherish
Jesus crucified for me;
Should I the whole creation perish,
I am safe beneath the tree.

Here my soul by faith would enter,
Pleased no more with fancy's dreams;
Here is love's resplgent centre:
Here are mercy's brightest beams.

Here is wisdom in perfection;
Here's an end of fleshly strife;
Lord, be thou my resurrection!
Jesus, be my spirit's life!

Thy sweet love to me revealing,
Dwell within this worthless heart;
Let thy wounding be my healing,
Let thy death new life impart.

Lord, thy love can ne'er be measured;
Half thy mercy can't be told:
Thou hast more within thee treasured
Than the sinner's heart can hold.

O that I should ever wander
From the sinner's sweetest friend!
O for grace that I may ponder
All my steps, and walk in Him.

Earth is old, and time is hoary;
Systems in confusion slide;
God forbid that I should glory,
Save in Jesus crucified.

The Kingdom of God, What Is It?

It appears that the Church of God has reached a crisis in its history, when it must determine whether or not "the kingdom of God" spoken of in the the New Testament, is a kingdom already come or yet in the future. It has been generally conceded by the church throughout this country, and elsewhere, that it is altogether in the future, the doctrine has never been questioned, and has been preached and received as a part of "the faith once delivered to the saints," and with great assurance, have the following Scriptures been advanced in proof thereof, "Hath not God chosen the poor of this world rich in faith, heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him." "We must through much tribulation enter the kingdom," "who waited for the kingdom," "Heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ" of the kingdom. "Certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom and to return," and when we pray to say "thy kingdom come."

These with many other passages from the New Testament have been the strong foundation upon which the Church of God have rested their faith and hope, never doubting, yea, always willing to contend for that which they believed to be "the faith once delivered to the saints."

Of recent years there has arisen amongst ourselves, particularly in the east, brethren, equally responsible, able and enlightened, men of presumably sound judgment, honest and of good report, who claim and teach with all candor, that "the kingdom" (which they also affirm is now the kingdom of Christ) has already come, that it was inaugurated at the preaching of John the Baptist, the Christ and his apostles, and in proof thereof refer to the following New Testament Scriptures, "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand," "If I by the Spirit of God cast out devils, then the kingdom of God has come," "The kingdom of God is within you," "The law and the prophets were until John, since that time the kingdom of God is preached and all men press unto it," "Delivered us from the power of darkness and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son."

These and other New Testament Scriptures of a similar import are the stronghold of those amongst us, who contend, and that earnestly, that the kingdom has already come, and that this kingdom is the church, much after the manner of the Campbellites.

Thus have we brought prominently to light, from the same book, by the same church, two distinct lines of adverse teaching, which at first sight seem to be self evident contradictions. It is not enough to simply contend that one is right, and the other is wrong, and there let the matter rest. These seeming contradictions must be capable of being harmonized, and it is our imperative duty to do so, or remain for ever silent as to the authenticity of "the book."

We have as a church, successfully and indisputably brought order and harmony out of chaos, in the things pertaining to the nature of man, and kindred subjects, by simply comparing Scripture with Scripture, why not resort to the same means in this question? One thing is certain, the Scriptures being the Word of God, cannot contradict themselves, and by all means in the consideration of this question "let brotherly love continue" and endeavor to build up, not cast down, feeling assured that if there is any seeming contradiction, it is not in "the Word," but rather our lack of understanding it, as was very truthfully stated in a recent RESTITUTION, "We have been left a legacy of superstition and error from the dark ages," and we have manfully cleared away much of the debris, which hid from sight the beauty of the gospel. "Let us not be weary in well doing," we have yet much to do; and especially, it would appear in those things "pertaining to the kingdom."

It is an undeniable fact that John the Baptist, the Christ, and his apostles preached "The kingdom of God is at hand," that the Christ said "it had come" that "publicans and sinners pressed unto it" that "it was amongst them" and that "he would take it from them (the Jews) and give it to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof."

It is also equally true that the Christ instructed his disciples to pray for the coming of [illegible] that his apostles declared that they were but heirs and joint heirs with Christ of the same kingdom, etc.

The question therefore arises, What was that kingdom which the Jews possessed, which could be taken from them and given to another, and concerning which the church is said to be only "heirs, joint-heirs with Christ."

The Scriptures teach but one kingdom of God, there is no first and second kingdom, and that this term the "kingdom of God" Scripturally speaking is synonymous with the "kingdom of Israel." "Thus saith the Lord which giveth the sun for a light by day and the ordinances of the moon and stars for a light by night. If these ordinances depart from me, then the Seed of Israel shall also cease from being a nation before me forever." "Moreover the Word of the Lord came to Jeremiah saying, Considerest thou not what the people hast spoken, saying, the two families which the Seed hath chosen (the house of Judah and house of Israel) he hath even cast them off, thus have they despised my people, that they should be no more a nation before them, thus saith the Lord, if my covenant be not with day and night, and if I have not appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth, then will I cast away the seed of Jacob and David my servant, so that I will not take any of his seed to be rulers over the seed of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob for I will cause their captivity to return and have mercy on them."

When John the Baptist came preaching "the kingdom of God is at hand," the house of Judah having their minds thoroughly imbued with the teaching of those Scriptures, received him as a prophet, believing that the time to favor Zion had come, that the restoration of the overturned kingdom of Israel was about to take place. They knew of no other kingdom, to them the kingdom of God and kingdom of Israel were one and the same thing, and there went to him (John) Jerusalem and all Judea, and all the region round about and were baptized of him in the Jordan, confessing their sins as preparatory to the restoration of the kingdom of God, the kingdom of Israel, as they thought the kingdom of God should immediately appear, and this with observation. The Christ in no way disabused their minds of their belief that it was the overturned kingdom of Israel which had come, and he continued where John left off, to preach "the kingdom of God is at hand, repent and believe the gospel," and instructed his disciples to go and do so likewise, and they went everywhere in city, village and synagogue preaching and showing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God. So thoroughly had they been taught and believed, that the kingdom of God which they preached was none other than the kingdom of Israel (not realizing or understanding that it was at first but as a grain of mustard, or as a small stone from the mountain of Israel, and gradually develop to a great mountain) their hopes were blasted by the death of the Christ and when brought again to a lively hope by his resurrection from the dead the first question asked, the burning question, the great question was, "Wilt thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel," receiving the answer "it is not for you to know the times and seasons" the kingdom was to be restored, but they did not seem then to understand that it had already began as a grain of mustard seed, and that it would grow until it filled the whole earth, a kingdom prepared for his second advent. And in confirmation before hand of this great truth we learn that "Zacharias being filled with the Holy Ghost, prophesied, saying, Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, for he hath visited and redeemed his people.....to perform the mercy promised to our fathers and to remember his holy covenant, the oath which he swore to our father Abraham.

The promise and covenant made with Abraham and the fathers, had not at that time been remembered or performed, which are as follows: To Abraham, "a father of many nations, [illegible] de thee." Sarah was to be a mother of nations, kings of people shall be of her." To Jacob "a nation and company of nations shall be of thee, kings shall come out of thy loins." To Joseph, "Manasseh shall be a people, he also shall be great." Ephraim "shall become a multitude of nations." All which Zecharias informs us, God was in his day about to perform, had not been remembered or performed before, and as there is neither place nor opportunity for the performance of them, after Christ's second advent, we are perforce compelled to believe with Zecharias that in the remembering and performing of them began in the days of John the Baptist, the Christ and his apostles continuing in their enlargement as taught in the parable of the mustard seed tree. We have the kingdom of God of the New Testament, and that agreeably with the words of Jacob to his twelve sons, all Israel, Gen xlix. 1, "Draw near and I will tell you that which shall befall you in the latter days" of which Paul says," Heb. i. 2, "God hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son." The second advent of the Christ will be the beginning of a new day, not the latter days.

Such being the case it was right and proper and agreeably with the teaching of the Old Testament Scriptures that John the Baptist, the Christ and his apostles should preach and teach "the kingdom of God is at hand," "the kingdom of God has come." It was the first step towards the restoration of God's kingdom, the kingdom of Israel, all which the apostles and the people did not quite understand, and for which they may perhaps be excused, but the abundant fulfillment of divine prophecy in our day in evidence of divine truth, leaves us with but little excuse.

WM. RENNIE.

What We Believe. No. 8.

The Church of God, unlike almost the whole of modern "Christendom," believes and teaches "the final destruction of the wicked." That sin is "transgression of a known law," and almost heinous evil, loathsome to God, and deserving of punishment, is admitted by all who lay claim to belief in Bible teaching; and it is also granted that this "punishment" will affect the sinner in some way or another. It is further conceded by all who have given the subject any consideration, that the Bible threatens the finally wicked with "destruction." But not all are agreed that "destruction," when denounced against the sinner, properly means what that word conveys when applied to other objects—destruction, extermination. Some, inheriting the belief in the immortality of the soul, and unable to escape from the logic of this view, hold that the sinner must be tormented for his sins world without end; while others, falling in with the specious arguments of Universalism, go to the other extreme, and say that, while sin is a great evil, and will receive punishment that is adequate to meet all the demands of justice, the sinner will at last be thoroughly purged by the purgatorial fires of "judgment," and all men will, as Origen, the originator of Universalism, taught, finally be "restored to the unity and fitness of things." Both systems have many earnest and respectable adherents; yet both are equally wide of the mark, for while the one insists on the certainty and severity of the punishment of sin, and the other exalts the goodness of God, both take a false view of the language employed in Scripture denouncing against rebellious creatures their just and final doom. The one class maintains that the term destroy, as applying to the sinner, conveys the idea of torment, suffering; and since frequently qualified with such adjectives as "eternal" and "everlasting," the torment of those persons, must therefore be endless. The other contends that "destruction" means the destruction of the sinful propensities of the sinner, while in the end the latter will be [illegible] upheld. These are the two extremes of religious teaching on the [illegible] disposition of the wicked; and they cannot possibly both be right; one or the other must be wrong—in fact, both may be. The Church of God sides with neither of these theories, but holds that they are alike erroneous and un-Scriptural. The one puts a blot upon God, because it attributes to him the creation of a being which, though it may sink to the lowest depth of degradation, and rise to the greatest height of assumption and rebellion, is nevertheless destined to live as long as God lives, though consigned to an eternity of excruciating torment; while the other puts a premium upon sin by minimizing the evil, and in addition to this violates the plainest requirements of language by saying that God will destroy sin when he has announced that he will destroy the sinner. The Church of God firmly believes and persistently teaches "the final destruction of the wicked." Why? Because in his Word of truth the Lord says that "all the wicked will he destroy." Psa. cxiv. 20. If destruction, when threatened against "all the wicked," means that he will torment them endlessly, the query would be, why did he not so announce to the world; or if it means that he will only destroy their wickedness, who can tell but that he will also only "preserve" the love of "them that love him," while they themselves are not at all concerned? The only reasonable way to determine this matter is to ascertain the historical meaning of terms as they are employed in Scripture. If, according to this rule, "destruction" means torment, we are obliged to abide by it; if it means the destruction of something else than the object of destruction, as in the case of "the wicked," we are bound to accept this view. "Words should be used in their primary or historical sense, and in the meaning in which they can be proven historically to have been used." This is a fundamental principle of Scripture interpretation as well as law; and we contend that departure from this rule is responsible for much of the false teaching we hear at the present day. It will be observed that we believe in "the final destruction of the wicked," that is, their destruction will be final, enduring, there will be nothing beyond it, as also in the case of the obedient, whose salvation will be "final." "The wicked" are the willful disobeyers of God's requirements. "What shall be THE END (the finality) of them that obey not the gospel of God?" 1 Pet. iv. 17. What does this "gospel" offer them? Eternal life (zoe aionian), and as a condition to obtain this life it enjoins obedience. What will be "the end," the final outcome, of such who stubbornly refuse obedience to the requirements of the gospel, who are "enemies of the cross of Christ, whose god is their stomach, whose glory is in their shame, who mind earthly things?" Paul solemnly avers that the "END" of such is "destruction." Phil. iii. 18, 19. Thus it is seen that the destruction of this class, whatever it proves to be, is clearly final.

We will now consider a number of instances where "destroy" is applied to objects animate as well as inanimate. It was said to the Israelites, "Ye shall drive out the inhabitants of the land from before you, and destroy all their pictures, and destroy all their molten images, and pluck down all their high places." Num. xxxiii. 52. Hezekiah "destroyed" high places. 2 Kings xxi. 3. God threatened to "destroy" chariots. Micah v. 10. "Thus saith the Lord; I will also destroy the idols, and I will cause their images to cease out of the land of Memphis." Ezek. xxx. 13. Here, then, are "pictures, molten images, high places, chariots and idols," that were subject to "destruction." They could not have been tormented in the orthodox acceptation of "destroy," for such objects are insensible of suffering. They could not undergo the purging process of "judgment," contended for by Universalism, for they did not possess those mental and moral characteristics that needed correction. Destruction, cessation of being, as in Ezek. xxx. 13, was the object in this procedure.

Animate objects, men, were destroyed. John invited all the prophets, servants and priests of Baal together "that he might destroy the worshipers of Baal." 2 Kings x. 19. What was done with them? Were they tormented, or were they subjected to the refining fires of "judgment?" Neither of the two. The record tells us they were slain, smitten with the sword. ver. 25. This was their destruction. In Dan. ii. 12, the king of Babylon threatened to "destroy all the wise men of Babylon" because they were unable to interpret his dream. How was this threat understood by Daniel? Did it mean that they were to be tormented for their inability to solve the king's problem? Or did he suppose they were to be subject to a series of purgatorial judgments which would eventually remove the existing ignorance from the minds of those wise men? Not so; on the contrary, he knew it meant that all concerned would "perish" if the order were executed (v. 18), and hence his importunate entreaty before the executioner to "destroy not the wise men of Babylon." v. 24.

One more example. By reference to Gen. xviii. 23, 28, 31, 32, 35; xix. 13, 14, 17; Luke xvii. 29, it will be seen that the inhabitants of Sodom and Gomorrah were "destroyed," the destroying agency in this instance being fire. Now, it must be perfectly plain that those persons are neither now agonizing and cursing God in conscious torment, nor are they passing through a refining process which will convert them at last into "shamefaced sinners over whom angels will rejoice." They were destroyed. And they are still, though unconsciously, "undergoing the decree of aionian fire" (Jude 7), "an ensample unto them that after should live ungodly." 2 Pet. ii. 6.

The Spirit.

"Except a man have the Spirit of Christ he is none of his."

There are no two ways to this all important subject, we either possess the Spirit of the Master or we do not; if we possess this spirit we are his, and if we do not we are none of his. "For he that is not for me is against me." No subject should more interest those who are desirous to know what the spirit is and how we can come in possession of it, for on it hinges our eternal life. The Holy Spirit is the bosom companion, teacher and guide of every Christian through life. It is the medium through which God communicates with Christian minds, also the medium through which God's children communicate with him. Then how necessary that you and I understand this important subject, for it is the only way we can know and do God's will. And the only way for us to know any thing about the Holy Spirit is in the Word of God, which has not left us in darkness in respect to any of its teachings, if we endeavor to get its true meaning in the simplest Bible way. So let us lay aside all our preconceived ideas and opinions, for they must be obtained from the Bible on all Bible subjects if we are to rightly understand its teachings, which all honest minds will do, and we will talk about this subject in the simplest Bible meaning, comparing the Spirit of God with the spirit of man. Paul in 1 Cor. ii. 10, 12 used the same comparison and why not we? "But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit, for the Spirit searcheth all things, Yea, the deep things of God. For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him. Even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God. Now, we have received not the spirit of the world, the spirit which is of God, that we know the things that are freely given to us of God." This is Paul's comparison and not mine so if you have any criticism you and Paul for that.

"Even let the Spirit of God." "The spirit of man knoweth the things of a man." "So the Spirit of God knows the things of God." But we must have the spirit of the man whose manner of life, intentions and purposes, we would know, and how do we can we get that spirit? We obtain it by associating with him until we become filled with his ideas, actions and conversation, in fact until we become very much, if not entirely like him in all our ways. Then we know the man, we know his ways and purposes, because we have partaken of his spirit. "Even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God," and we come in possession of the Spirit of God, the same way as we do the spirit of man as Paul has shown. By associating with God and reading his Word we learn of his purposes and promises to man and thus partake of his spirit. This is Paul's way of telling how we obtain the Holy Spirit when used in the light of the gospel.

Let us look at one more Scripture, seemingly very difficult, but really one of the simplest, Rom. viii. 26, 27, "Likewise the spirit helpeth our infirmities; for we know not what we should pray for as we ought, but the spirit itself maketh intercessions for us with groanings, which cannot be uttered, and he that searcheth the heart knoweth the mind of the spirit; because it maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God."

Now, if we will let God's Word explain itself, all will be plain, nothing will seem obscure. We have learned already how one man partakes of the spirit of another man, and thus we understand his ways, purposes and nature of man, and it is in this same way, if interested in the Word of God, we search the Scriptures, and partake of the Spirit of God and his Word, and come in possession of the Holy Spirit. Paul in this text speaks of a class who have the Holy Spirit, and it is this spirit in them that intercedes with God, while the groanings or being unable to pray as we ought is on our part. But God knoweth the mind of the Spirit in us. He knows what we need before we ask. Nothing but un-Scriptural ideas can hinder our understanding the plain and simple teaching in regard to the Holy Spirit. In our short and brief study we have learned how we come in possession of the Holy Spirit.

M. JOBLIN, SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JULY 9, 1902.

As rays that come from the sun are not the sun, even so our love and pity, though they are not God, but merely a poor weak image and reflection of him,—yet from him they come. "Love is of God."

JEROME said, "I give thanks to my God for this,—that I am found worthy to be among those whom the world hateth." And Luther once said, "I am getting rather proud; for I see that my character is more and more defamed.

ON last Sunday Bro. F. L. Austin assisted two of our young Sunday School scholars to put on Christ by baptism. Ray Smith, who lives with his aunt, Sister A. C. Roberts, and Miss Bertha Head, youngest daughter of Bro. and Sister B. F. Head, were the two who were brave enough to thus pledge their young lives to their Savior. We pray that the strength they will need day by day will be given, and that after faithful lives they will be accorded an abundant entrance into the kingdom when Jesus comes.

IT will be seen by reference to another column in this issue, that Bro. W. H. Wilson proposes taking a trip and visiting the churches throughout the country. Such an evangelizing tour, with the view of edifying and building up the brethren and sisters, as well as telling the good news to those who have never heard it, cannot be otherwise than beneficial to the cause at the points visited. Let all who wish to have Bro. Wilson with them on his proposed tour write promptly and make the necessary arrangements.

Seasons of Life.

"At a festival party of old and young it was asked: 'Which season of life was the happiest. After discussion by the guests, it was referred to the host, who was 80 years old. He asked if they had noticed a grove of trees before the house, and said, 'When the spring comes, and the buds are bursting on the trees, and presently covered with blossoms, I think how beautiful is spring! And when summer comes and covers the trees with heavy foliage, and singing birds are in the branches, I think how beautiful is summer! When autumn lends them with golden fruit, and their leaves bear the gorgeous tint of frost, I think how beautiful is autumn! And when it is near winter, and there is neither foliage or fruit, then I look up, and through the leafless branches as I never could until now, I see the stars shine through."

May we not say in view of this that the happiness or unhappiness of old age is often nothing but the extract of a past life?

The Hem of his Garment.

We sometimes wish we could have had personal contact with Jesus and heard his ineffable words fall from the lips,—but many thousands heard those words without profit. How many thousands will be judged by those words! O beloved in the Lord, if we but touch him by faith it is far better than it would have been to have handled him with our hands. "It was no great thing to touch him manually. The Jews touched him thus when they arrested him, bound him, crucified him, and by their evil touch lost what they touched. What a precious thought it is that we can every day, and every hour of the day, so to speak, touch the hem of his garment and be healed. O what a consolation this is, when waves of trouble roll over our heads. Let us always keep within faith's touching distance, and he will as surely feel virtue (power) go out of him to sustain us as he did when the twelve years afflicted woman touched the hem of his garment. Mark v. 30.

"In Him are Yea, and Amen."

2 Cor. i. 19, 20.

The passage selected as a foundation for remarks this morning is found in 2 Cor. i. 18, 19, 20. "But God is witness that that word of ours towards you was not yea and no; for that Son of God, Jesus Christ, who was proclaimed to you by us,—(by me, and Silvanus, and Timothy) was not yea and no, but was yea in him; for whatever be the promises of God, they

[(Jesus Christ) ... to the glory of God t[hrough us]. ... circumstances which led ... are as follows:—he had written ... that he intended to make them another visit, that they might have a second benefit from his labors; but as for some reason he changed his mind about it, some brethren at Corinth accused him of lightness or levity, and inconstancy, thus blemishing his character and reflecting upon his conduct, and it would seem that they even reproached his person or appearance, besides discrediting his preaching. He gives them to understand that his intention to come was sincere, —and he was not slow to speak out in defense of himself. It is plain to see that he was nettled by the

and whisperings of those who had been called out of darkness into the marvelous light by him. He had not lightly made his decision to visit them. He had not acted from an impulse or any low worldly consideration, though they might think otherwise. His no, was still no; and his yes, still yes. It would have been grossly inconsistent in him to preach Christ whose Word was never known to fail, and he himself be vacillating between yes and no,—saying one thing at one time and something else at another, and thus disregarding his promises. Hence he says:—But our word toward you was not yea and nay. He ventured to think, after the wonderful gifts bestowed upon them through him, that not many of them would think him guilty of crookedness,—or that the gospel exerted no influence over his own character. No one could be established in Christ without being established in veracity. One could not proclaim Christ without being rebuked and smitten at every utterance; if he should say what he did not mean, or should falter in and stability. This must suffice for the occasion of the words of the text, and now I will consider the words themselves. What do the words, "For all the promises of God in him, are yea, and in him amen, unto the glory of God by us," mean?

First, God is said to be true in the 18th verse. His Son, Jesus the Christ, manifested God to us in his life, offices, words, works and death; and as the very way, the truth; that is, the very embodiment of the truth of God, was preached by Paul, Sylvanus and Timothy. It was one complete, harmonious system of truth, never crossing its own track or conflicting with itself,—never annulling any of the covenants of promise: never varying any of the conditions imposed. In a word, it was one set of promises, and hence there could be but one faith and one hope. This, in a general way, must suffice.

Secondly, it means that he is the central figure of Jehovah's saving scheme. It says, "For all the promises of God in him are yea, and in him amen, unto the glory of God, by us." The sum of all the inducements. God offers to mortal men, to faith and obedience, are in him—the Son. He is heir of all things. Every one who ever realizes or inherits the promised blessings must first become a joint-heir with the Son, Jesus Christ. Not to speak of his eternal pre-eminence. I remark, that from the first ray of hope, —the very first promise to guilty man, looking to his redemption from death,—contained a direct reference to him as the

that should bruise the head of the serpent. The work laid out for him required two missions. He came exactly on time,—came in just the way the prophets said he should come, came at the very place it was predicted for ages he should come. He did exactly what the prophets said he should be anointed to do at his first advent. He fulfilled every promise to be fulfilled at that time, and became the pledge of the fulfillment of every promise of God to be fulfilled at his second advent. Paul in Romans xv. 8 says he was the minister for the truth of God to the Jews,—to confirm the promises made unto the fathers—Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and David,—and so was the living amen,—or so be it with which God rounded out and crowned all he had intimated or declared to arouse or excite expectations through prophets and law-givers and psalmists. Had the Jews had the least spark of faith in the covenants of God to the fathers they could have had them abundantly confirmed by Christ. But as he said, they did not really believe Moses, in whom they boasted, and therefore could not believe in him of whom Moses wrote. He it was that [was to]

EXHIBIT GOD TO MAN

[ly attributes; interpret God, ... God to children of a mortal race ... uld not see God and live. The apostle John sets Jesus over against Moses, and puts what he did to make God known to the world in sharp contrast to what the great lawgiver did, when he says, "For the law was given by Moses, but favor and truth came by Jesus Christ." The law was indeed a revelation of God,—it was what Paul styles a school-master, or pedagogue to conduct or educate them, or prepare them for a vastly greater disclosure, or manifestation of God. Being utterly without faith, they were not capable of comprehending more of God than the law revealed; for they did not comprehend that much, as Jesus' words show. I have wondered again and again at the moral obtuseness of the Jewish people after existing some 1500 years as with a priesthood and ordinances that typified a better state of things to come. In the first chapter of Romans Paul distinctly shows that the things that are seen to have been made, exhibiting proof of design, and wisdom, together with unlimited power were sufficient to make men accountable to God. His eternal power and God-head being thus manifested they were without excuse for their unrighteousness and uncleanness. But after all it is made very clear in the Old Testament that along one line of descent from the original ancestors of mankind, and for century after century, there was a well-defined, and lofty idea of God maintained. Abel, Noah, Abraham, Moses, Samuel, David, Isaiah, Daniel, Malachi and John the Baptist were exponents, each in his peculiar way, of divine ideas. God in the personality of his Being, in his essential Oneness, in the infinitude and sovereignty of his power, and the

as well as in certain aspects of his love, was cherished in the Hebrew mind. We must be careful not to underestimate what was known of God before Christ came. Men who have points to score are in danger of not giving sufficient credit to those patriarchal and Mosaic times. We must not be forgotten that the gospel began to be preached in Paradise before the expulsion and exclusion. And all along the centuries the gospel among the seed of Abraham was the power of God unto salvation to every one that believed it. And the statements of some of those who knew the blessedness of those whose iniquities were pardoned and whose sin was covered, were most exalted and elevating. Indeed some of their expressions regarding the greatness, wisdom, majesty and might of God found in Genesis, Job, the Psalms and Prophets challenge rivalry. "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth," is a statement and tribute which admit of no improvement. At the same time the disclosure which Jesus made of God, and the interpretation he gave of the

was so much in advance of anything the world of mankind had ever known before, so that it might be truly said: "No man hath seen God at any time; the only Begotten Son which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath revealed him," not his person but the holy attributes of his character. I now want to deal more specifically with the service rendered by our Lord in this sphere. "The conception of God by the only nation upon earth among whom his name was recorded, or with whom he corresponded;—yea; the conception of God among the Jews had lost most of its vital force. There was no living pulse in it; the knowledge was a dead knowledge—an empty, mocking knowledge. The idea of God amongst the Gentiles had become so dwarfed and debased in the common apprehension that they ascribed to him the same appetites and passions which controlled their own lives. They first degraded themselves and then they degraded God. "The

was like a glorious sunrise upon a world which had somehow forgotten to turn its face to the day, and was weltering in darkness which was all the time growing deeper and deeper. Had he not come when he did, with a revelation of God fresh and vital, and one which common minds could comprehend, it looks as if the nations would have lapsed into utter barbarism, or rolled down into a loathsome mass. In the popular and ruling thought there was no God,—there was Atheism, Pantheism and Polytheism. To avow any faith was to become a target for the shaft of ridicule. Christ in his marvelous teaching and example made men who could hear him, sensible of the beatings of the divine heart; he unfolded God to man. God was in Christ reconciling the world to himself. He made it distinctly understood to those who had ears to hear that God is love,—demonstrated that the compassion of God was measureless, and flows out to man in boundless currents. And to further particularize, I remark that when Christ made his appearance, the idea that God is pure, had been almost lost out of the conceptions of men; but it was amongst

THE EARLY IDEAS OF GOD

Almost every page of the Old Testament flashes with divine holiness. It is in the law, the ceremonies, the prophets, the approbations, the punishments, and whatever else there is to show forth the character of the Supreme Being. This idea was enlarged, illustrated and enforced by Jesus. Purity and holiness were great words with him. "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." But he did not stop with this idea. While magnifying holiness, as in the Sermon on the Mount and other discourses, by showing how interior, how penetrating, how wide-spreading are all the commandments. He also showed how the holiness of God is warmed and illuminated by a wealth of affection in the divine heart, of which men had only the vaguest notion until the blessed Son of God set this wealth of loving interest forth on the lip and in the life. Not till Christ came and in his own personality made the world see and feel it, was there ever any adequate comprehension of the length and breadth and height and depth of

THE LOVE OF GOD.

Prophets had said it, but the overwhelming demonstration of it awaited the matchless scene of the Son of God dying on the cross at Calvary. Take this word Father; our heavenly Father,—Max Mueller has said that he found heavenly Father to be a name for God among all the original Aryan peoples, and he traced the name to the ancient mythologies of India, Greece, Italy and Germany. But it has been shown that the Word father did not mean in its early use what it came to mean under the teachings of Christ. As the [illegible] to the relative paternity. It did not in the least imply affectionate paternity. It represents supremacy only. It was applied by poets to those they honored,—by slaves to their masters and patrons. When applied to their gods it meant paramount authority; or superlative dignity. But how different the teachings of Christ. Christianity shows the fatherhood of God, in his love, as well as in his authorship of finite intelligence extending to all who partake of his life,—and becoming intense toward those who come into moral or spiritual fellowship with him. To them he gives gifts which the world at large has no conception of. And brethren and sisters, does not this make the thought grow upon us, that only those who have seen the Son, hath seen the Father? More and more may we see the Son.

And O, what stores of moral and spiritual wealth has come to us by the nearness into which the Father has been brought to us by manifesting himself to us in the Son of Man, who interpreted him to those who could discern; those who had ears to hear. Until he stooped down to us and manifested himself to us in our own flesh and blood, it was but dimly suspected that God was immanent in all facts—transcendant, but still immanent,—and in all laws, and in all life, and that he is immanent to instruct, to guard, to guide, to purify, to save unto the uttermost all who come unto him through Christ,—and that he is immanent in love?

Happy are we if we have fully realized that Christ is not a vague uncertainty; not a fascinating but illusive dream; that he is the teacher sent from God to tell about God, and open the way to God; and through whom God pours his light and love upon our hearts and minds, so that we can have rest and peace and joy,—and our hands find their way and hold and be held. Happy are we this morning if we fully realize that no soul of the countless millions of our race who have lived and died, or who now live, has ever found rest and peace or satisfaction in an attitude of denial or negation. How can a soul feed itself into strength and beauty and peace on negation? The region where the answer to every question is no: or I don't know, is not a region of life, but of spiritual death. Men can build nothing upon nay! If they build any sort of enduring structure, it must be on yea. The universe is one of affirmations. Yea is written everywhere across earth and sky. The world under our feet is yea. The sun flooding our atmosphere with light, and kissing every valley and plain and hillside into beauty is yea. The stars circling in their orbits and greeting each other across the spaces, are yea. The human mind and heart is capable of light and truth and righteousness; and the whole person capable of attaining to immortality and eternal glory are yea. God over all and in all is yea. And as face answers to face, so the eye of the pure in heart for yea, is answered by the yea of God in Christ. Thank God, in him is yea, and because he is yea, we can rest in him for ever.

Beloved, in this view of Christ as the yea of God, that is the seal of all his promises,—the affirmation of his thought of his character; there is some thing clear and positive and helpful for us to commend to others. God is so certified to us in Christ that we can build our hope of immortality upon him. God in Christ is as clear as sunlight, and just as self-demonstrative; so that we can speak of him with much assurance.

GOD IS CHRIST

is as positive as the law of gravitation, and we can talk of him as scientists speak of the force that holds the globe together and keeps stars and systems of stars moving on in majestic harmony. O, beloved, God in Christ is eternal truth!!! Solid, vital truth that gives bread to hungry souls, and water to thirsty souls, and will by and by give life to dead souls.

No one who has ever read the gospels with a half open eye can have failed to see how positive Christ was in all his preaching. He was a yea, and not a nay-preacher. He put forth certainties, and not doubts. God the Father! What a verity he was to the Son. There was never any question about sin in his teaching, nor of the peril in consequence of sin. Not a word did he utter to warrant one to think he might go on masquerading full of fun and frolic out of life; nor to think it unnecessary to be born of water and of spirit. And then, he dwelt upon and magnified the love of God, free and abounding from beginning to end? [illegible] manufactured to endure for ever—justice at the heart of things,—life, death, responsibility, judgment, duty, how to please God,—how to develop his image,—how to of God with eternal life. These were the themes, the certainties of Jesus. On this basis it is worth while to preach and worth while to listen. It makes music for the heart bewildered and distressed when the yea of God answers every question sent up to him! Have we a Father in heaven who knows us, who loves us, who is thoughtful of us and broods over us in the tenderness of divine pity? Yea! May we, weak and finite as we are, come into a sense of sonship and know this heavenly Father, and walk in close communion with him? Yea. If one has wandered far away and has bruised and defiled himself, is there any way in which he may be restored and find peace and joy once more? Yea, after the struggle is all over, is there through rich grace,—yes, is there a crown of life beyond, ampler, better, more glorious, to be lived in the presence of him who redeemed us to himself? Yea, it is all yea; if we have been reconciled to God by his blood. Yes; blessed be God "the birth was yea, the life was yea, the teaching was yea, the death was yea, the resurrection was yea, the promises are yea, the hope is yea, the beckoning splendors are yea, the rewards are yea; so let us, dear ones, trust in Jesus,—move forward hand in with him, till we come in his own good time to the crowning year of all, when we stand face to face with him, and experience the joys and fellowships and glories of the kingdom, out of which we go no more out. Amen and amen.

A heathen who stood in a crowd at Calcutta, listening to a missionary disputing with a Brahman, said he knew which was right, though he did not understand the language. He knew he was wrong who lost his temper first. For the most part, this is a very accurate way of judging. Try to avoid debating with people. Tell your opinion and let them tell theirs. If you see that a stick is crooked and you want people to see how crooked it is, lay a straight rod down beside it; that will be quite enough. But if you are drawn into controversy, use very hard arguments and very soft words. Frequently you cannot convince a man by tugging at his reason, but you can persuade him by winning his affection.

Earnest Work Needed.

I presume no reader will take exception to the statement that real earnest heart work is very much needed amid the trials and perplexities incident to the close of this Gentile age. But, beloved in the Lord, are you personally willing to co-operate? Is your heart burdened for the salvation of sinners, who are perishing because they know not what they must do to be saved? Are you willing to offer yourself upon the altar as a living sacrifice that the perishing may be rescued? If you are, then I am willing to join hands with you, that we may together "throw out the life line," that the perishing may be rescued.

For many years through the channel of the pen and printing press I have published glad tidings, God has blessed both me and the work. I still intend to continue this work, but I now desire to add the living voice to the pen, and come in personal contact with my auditors. Now this can be done only through your personal sacrifice and co-operation. Are you willing to do it?

My purpose is, if you co-operate, to take a trip throughout the United States and the Dominion of of Canada, proclaiming the gospel of the kingdom to the perishing, and do what little I can in assisting to encourage, strengthen and build up those who have already become obedient to the faith. I can do this only by your aid. Are you willing to share the work?

Now, if any individual or congregation would like to have me hold a series of meetings in your neighborhood, in any place between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, and the Dominion of Canada, please write and say so, as soon as convenient. My purpose in desiring to receive all calls at once is that I may arrange the trip with appointments lying nearest to each other, in order that traveling expenses may be saved, in going from place to place. When I find I am nearing your place, by having the appointment in advance, I can then write and make definite appointments as to time.

If you would desire a visit from me when near your neighborhood, please write at once and say so. Address 420 North Willow Avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Ill.

W. H. WILSON.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

I thought I would let you know that we had a splendid meeting. Bro. J. T. Prime of Edison, Neb., came June 21 and preached in the evening and on Sunday morning and evening. Oh, how it fills our hearts with joy to meet and talk with those of like faith, but it is only a foretaste of the joy that awaits us, when the Life-giver shall come. Brothers and sisters, I sometimes feel very weak, but he has promised to be our strength. Let us therefore put on the whole armor of light. Let us not for one moment turn our back, or the enemy may come on us unawares. May we always stand with our face to the foe. Let us turn to Heb. xiii. 5, 6. Oh, what a blessed thought that he will never leave nor forsake us. Trials and temptations are many, but we would not be overcomers if we had them not. I pray the Lord I may always live so that when he comes I may hear his voice and live, and that I may see the King in his beauty. James v. 10, says pray for one another. Brothers and sisters, pray for me that I may be an overcomer and meet you all.

Your Sister in the faith.

LAVINNIA STEDMAN.

The devil got the better of Adam and Eve by pretending to be their friend and informing them how they could become wise enough to know evil from good. In the same way today he is misleading young people by inducing them to visit saloons and low dives, just to see for themselves what is there. "There is no harm in that, you know." He is still the same sly old serpent. Look out for him, young friends; take the apostle's advice, and shun the very "appearance of evil."

Use the minutes, children. You know the boy who throws away his pennies will never have any dollars, so if you spend your minutes in idleness you will lose many precious hours you never can call back. The child who will not study, but spends his time in idleness, will never move the world, unless he by his idleness gets into wickedness, and perhaps commits a crime that creates a great sensation and sends him to the prison. Remember children, that "Satan finds some mischief for idle hands to do."

Poetry.

No Time to Pray!

No time to pray!
Oh, when freighted with earthly care
Ought it to give to humble prayer
Some part of day?

No time to pray!
Must care or business' urgent call
So press us as to take it all,
Each passing day?

What thought more dear
Than that our God his love should bid
And say, thro' all life's swelling tide,
No time to hear!

Come not to pray!
Oh Jesus, on your all, rely,
Would you live happy—happy die?
Take time to pray.

The Day of Crucifixion.

Dear Restitution:

I read you every week with much interest. In your issue dated June 18, 1902, I find an article from the pen of Bro. S. J. Lindsay, entitled "The Day of Crucifixion," in which he seems to get lost as to the correct time of that event and connecting incidents, and asks who will unravel the tangle? I will do what I can in a short article, and you may either publish it or forward it to Bro. Lindsay, as you see fit. I do not have his address.

From April, 1867, to December, 1871, I lived in southern Iowa, with a branch of the people styling themselves, "The Church of God," the same who now publish The Bible Advocate. My father, Samuel Davison, who had previously been a Baptist minister from his early manhood, and Bro. E. S. Sheffield, preached alternately, but every other week we had a general Bible class instead of preaching, and my father always led that, as he was considered extra good in that position. In one of our lessons, in which the institution of the Lord's Supper was included, the question arose, why did Jesus and his disciples eat the passover supper the night before the Jews at large ate it? My father took the ground that they did not eat the passover at that time, for the reason that they could not get their lamb slain at the temple, as was the custom, until the next day, which was the general preparation day for said supper and the Passover Sabbath.

Read the different accounts of the three evangelists, Matt. xxvi. 17-30; Mark xiv. 12-26; Luke xxii. 7-20.

Bro. Sheffield and myself contended that those accounts show that they eat did the passover at that time. A few days later we were working together, and talking the matter over, when he said he would write to Mr. Lederer, a Christianized Jewish rabbi, who was then publishing in Philadelphia, a little magazine called "Nathaniel; or the True Israelite." I urged him to do so, and the answer he received was substantially as follows.

Prior to the Babylonian captivity there were no sects or divisions among the Jews. They had little knowledge of astronomy, and their mode of fixing the time for several of their festivals, which were regulated by the moon, was to send several men out to different points, to watch for the new moon, and when they came in they were examined separate and apart, and when two agreed in their statements as to seeing the new moon in a certain position, that was the time of the new moon to them. It is easy to be seen that in cloudy weather the moon might be several days old before it was seen. But while they were captives in Babylon some of them learned astronomy sufficiently to calculate the exact time of the new moon, and therefore on their return to Palestine, they regulated themselves by such calculations. Although the old custom of sending out men to watch for the new moon was kept up at the temple, after their return from captivity, the rule for slaying the lamb at the temple at a certain time was so far relaxed as to furnish the slain lamb whenever those who were guided by astronomical calculations desired it. Hence there was sometimes as much as three days difference in the observation of festivals regulated by the new moon, between those who were governed by astronomical calculations and those who clung to the old temple customs.

To cut the matter short, it appears then, that Jesus and his disciples might, and undoubtedly did, eat the passover on what we call Tuesday night, and that he was crucified on Wednesday, dying just at the time when the passover lambs—of which he was the great type—were being slain at the temple. He was laid in the tomb that evening, as it was contrary to the Jewish law for it to hang over the passover Sabbath, which was on Thursday. The women who came with him out of Galilee followed and saw him laid in the tomb. This was in the end of the preparation day before the passover Sabbath—Thursday. On Friday they prepared spices with which to embalm him, and then rested on the weekly sabbath—Saturday—according to the commandment. Luke xxiii. 54-57.

Late on the weekly Sabbath—Saturday afternoon—as it began to dawn, or draw near the first of the week, which began with the setting of the sun. See how the days are said to begin in the first chapter of Genesis, and when Nehemiah commenced the sabbath, Neh. xiii. 19; also Lev. xxiii. 32. The two Marys went to visit the tomb, the same as we go to visit the grave of a friend, and about that time there was a great earthquake, and when they reached the tomb they found it open, and an angel of the Lord on guard there, who told them Jesus had risen and gone, and bid them go and tell his disciples. See Matt. xxviii. 1-7.

Now count three days and three nights from Wednesday evening, and you will see that Jesus exactly fulfilled the specific sign he gave to the Jews. Matt. xii. 39. If he had not done so they would be justified in calling him an imposter, but now they were left without excuse. It does not appear that the Galilean women who had prepared for the embalming knew of his resurrection until they went to the tomb very early in the morning of the first day of the week, now called Sunday, (Luke xxiv. 1-6) unless Mary Magdalene was one of them; and, if so, she evidently could not bring herself to realize that Jesus had really risen from the dead, for John says (chap. xx. 1, 2) she went to the tomb so early on the morning of the first day of the week—Sunday—and finding it empty ran and told Peter and the disciple whom Jesus loved—John. I have heard and read many attempts to harmonize the accounts given relative to the crucifixion and connected incidents, but the above is the only explanation I can make agree with itself and the predictions connected with it. If any person has a better one I would be glad to see it.

Yours for the truth in love.

ALBERT DAVISON.

Our Letter Department

To the Household of Faith, Greeting:

It has been 15 years since I have had the privilege of hearing our faith preached, until our Brother G. W. Smith, assisted by sisters S. J. Williams and Allie Brothers of Ross, Ind., came to our place and held a meeting. The gospel, or our faith has never been preached in this place, and you can imagine how much we need some one to preach the Word of God. Bro. Smith has awakened a deep interest in the people here, so much so that they are anxious to secure his services and get him to locate here. Brother Wells of this place has made a liberal offer, also will assist in seeing the people and get as much as possible, and I hope they will be successful, although I am doubtful if the required amount can be raised; for we as a community, have not much of this world's goods.

Trusting all things to the Almighty Father, I remain, your Sister in Christ.

MRS. E. MYERS.

Brother Underwood:

Trusting that you will allow me space in your valuable paper to announce that Brother G. W. Smith, well known to many of your readers, has been in our midst and held a ten days meeting, and so complete has been the satisfaction of his hearers that an effort is being made to procure his services, and have him locate among us and proclaim the gospel in its purity and truth. The result of our efforts will be communicated in the near future to THE RESTITUTION, and earnestly urge that religious literature be circulated and that much good be done in this vicinity.

J. H. WELLS.

Dear Restitution:

Believing as I do that we are amid the storms and breakers of the last days, I wish to send greetings of love and hope to all those who love the Lord Jesus, and his appearing. For a time my address will be Prescott, Kansas. I would be glad if those who are hoping for an inheritance in the kingdom of God, would write to me. When we attain unto threescore and ten, and five added, we know that the last mile-stone of this life is nearly through. If we could step over into the kingdom of God it would be pleasant; but better men than I have gone down to the dust, and I may sleep for a short time with them. I believe the Lord will come before the fallen race has made a complete wreck of itself; for if the Deliverer does not come to the rescue, the old Adam seems bent on committing suicide. Creations groans will be heard. The New Birth-day will come.

Pray for me, that my faith fail not.

J. C. KINSEY.

Dear Restitution:

I rejoice to know and hear through THE RESTITUTION, that a few are still holding to the one faith, one hope, one promise; and while the great enemy, death, thins our ranks, may there be more volunteers to take their places.

"Oh, the good we all may do, while the days are going by."

Let us walk in the light of him that said "I am the resurrection and the life." Again he said, "He that believeth in me, though he were dead yet shall he live." It is a blessed thought that if we prove faithful to the end, if we sleep in the dust of the earth when he comes, he will awake us and give us life and immortality. Then will death be swallowed up in victory. I am still firm in the gospel, the promises made to the fathers. It cheers me up to read the reports of the good meetings. How I would like to be where I could hear the gospel preached. There are but few scattered ones here. We have not the privilege of going to meeting and hearing the gospel. The people want every thing else but gospel. My son-in-law lent a preacher one of Wiley Jones' books, "The Gospel of the Kingdom." When he returned it he said that "It was his belief right out." My son-in-law asked him why he did not preach it? He replied that he "Had tried it once, and it did not suit the people." The same man told me that he "Could not preach what he believed." What a shame; for a man to sacrifice the truth for pride and popularity, and hide his light under a bushel, to get praise of men. We are living in a fast age. People are running to and fro seeking pleasure and amusements, unaware of the evil that will overtake them. Oh, the cries that will go up from them; for the rocks and mountains to fall on them and hide them from the face of him that sits on the throne. As it was in the days of Noah, he warned them of the flood; but they heeded not, and the flood came; then it was too late; for God had shut the door of the ark. And so, when the bridegroom raises up and shuts the door, many will come and knock at the door and say, Let us in; but it will be too late. He will say, Depart from me, I never knew you. Oh, then what weeping and gnashing of teeth there will be. Brothers and Sisters, let us strive to be among them that shall come from the east and the west, and sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, in the kingdom of God. Let us praise God, and march on with a firm tread under the banner of King Emanuel, and he will lead us into the sweet haven of rest, where all our sorrows will end.

Yours, watching and waiting for the kingdom.

JESSE HARROLD.

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ:

After the close of the meeting at Antioch I visited at Argos, Plymouth and Bourbon, with the brethren and sisters and enjoyed the visit very much. After leaving Argos I went to Plymouth where I remained over Sunday, and heard Brother Wince preach, then on Monday to Bourbon, where I visited with Brother and Sister Isaac Roose and their daughter and her husband until Saturday. I found them sound in the faith, also visited Bro. J. L. Barnes at his place of business. I enjoyed these visits very much. On Saturday I went to Plymouth, where I remained until Monday. I preached on Sunday at Plymouth. Brother Israel Roberts came after me on Monday, where I visited until Tuesday, when I went to visit his son Andrew and remained until Wednesday morning when Brother Israel took me to Argos, where I called on Brother and Sister Bryan. I then took the train for home. These visits will be remembered by me quite often on my short journey through life, and I trust if we are not permitted to meet again in this life we will meet in the kingdom.

Your Brother in Christ.

J. S. HATCH.

Brother Underwood:

The articles in THE RESTITUTION do me so much good. I write, thinking it may do some one good. I read a Millennial Dawn tract. The author thinks that he proves by Scripture that all of the dead will be raised, and live under Christ's reign on earth, Sodomites and all. I read an article written by another man, just the opposite extreme. I believe that if a man spends too much of his time and thought on any one topic, (especially if non-essential) it will cause him to forget many of the things that are indispensable to eternal life. If a man tries to ride a wild colt, and is thrown off and killed, that will not keep him out of the kingdom of God. Though I believe in being very persistent in riding a hobby, will many times make a man uncomfortable in this life, and shut him out of the kingdom of God altogether. There are things that are indispensable to salvation, and the greatest of these is charity—love. I believe that any man that reads the 13th Chapter of I Cor. often enough to keep it fresh in his mind, will never say, that a brother is trying hard to wrest the Scriptures, especially a man who sticks so close to God's words, as Brother W. H. Wilson does when writing on Christ's return and the restoration of Israel. Dear brothers and sisters, can we think too often how we are favored in this land of plenty and of freedom, where we can learn to read God's Word, and study it unmolested, while so many thousands of human beings have none of the advantages that we have. They cannot read God's Word, and would be happy if they could have one meal of the plainest food each day. Reader, take a little time and think over the conveniences and luxuries that we have that many thousands do not have, and then ask ourselves the question, (after being so highly favored) is it possible for me to get into the kingdom of God by just going to church and help in the singing, if we dont happen to have company or an invitation to an ice-cream party, or if it is not too cold, or too hot, or too fur, and if we think our clothes are suitable, and there will be a good speaker, and a large congregation. I would say, No. See what Christ says in the 15th Chapter of John, every branch that beareth not fruit, he taketh away. 5th verse "I am the vine, ye are the branches. Every branch that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down and cast into the fire." Matt. vii. 16, 20.

A peach and nectarine tree look alike, and the only way to tell them apart is by their fruit. I understand that it must be so with Christians, that they will be known by their fruit. The branches on a grape vine bare fruit when they are less than a year old. It should be so with a person that becomes a branch, or is grafted into the true vine by faith, repentance and baptism; they should commence to bring fruit the first year.

Dear brothers and sisters, I think we all have a work to do. We are not all good speakers; but does that excuse us from doing our share spreading the good news of the kingdom of God? Are some of them that can preach doing too much, by spending a good portion of their time studying and preaching the gospel, paying their own expenses? I think we all say No. A verse of a song comes to mind:

Must I be carried to the skies on flowery beds of ease,
While others fought to win the prize, and sailed through bloody seas.

I think we should all again say No. I do truly believe if each of us that have been baptized into Christ would do our part, all good proclaimers of the Word could quit working with hands, and the Editor of THE RESTITUTION would have to hire more help in his office, and would have money to pay them, and our numbers would increase faster.

Paul said to the Corinthians to examine themselves, whether ye be in the faith, prove your own selves. If we would obey Paul we would have no time for politics, and would not be in danger of being bound up in one of the bundles spoken of in Matthew. I believe the bundles spoken of are to be bound by oath, instead of rope or binding twine.

In conclusion I refer you to Psalm cxlvi. 3, 4.

Your brother in Christ, hoping to meet you all in the kingdom, which I hope will soon come.

G. W. CALDER.

Obituary.

Died, near Dunnville, Ont., Mrs. Dashwood, aged 81 years. She died on Friday, June 27, and was buried on Monday, June 30th. We trust she sleeps in Jesus. The writer spoke to an attentive audience who had assembled on that occasion, on the subject of the origin, nature and destiny of man, also the importance of obeying the gospel, in order to be amongst those who shall inherit the earth, and delight themselves in the abundance of peace.

Chapter 11—The angel's measuring rod and things measured; angel's two witnesses, forty and two months, a lesson in prophetic numbers; a study of the symbols employed in connection with the two witnesses.

The seventh trumpet, the kingdom of God, the resurrection and rewarding of the faithful.

Part second.—The seven signs or wonders. This part of the natural division of the symbols introducing a new series begins with chap. xi. 19.

Chap. xiii. The sea monster, points of identification, wounded and healed head, close relation to and similarity to the dragon, blasphemy, its meaning.

The application—Read Church and Roman history, Gibbon's Rise and Fall of the Roman Empire preferred, from Constantine to Charlemagne. Two horned beast and the image of the first beast, its characteristics and points of identification, relation with the first beast, rehabilitation of first beast, miracles, worship, mark in fore head and hands, 666 the mystic number of his name.

Application.—Read history of the Latin and Greek churches and their intimate relation with the revived Roman empire as rehabilitated by the Pope and Charlemagne.

Chap. xvii. This should be studied in connection with the last, giving as it does in another form symbols representing these same two formidable powers designated as the beast and his image. Characteristics and points of identification, symbols, seven heads of the image, ten horns of the dragon and first beast and of the image, ten horns of Daniel's fourth beast, these horns uprooted by the stout blasphemous horn.

Chap. xiv. Symbols, the ram on Mt. Zion and the singing multitude, the 144,000, the gospel angel, Babylon and its doom. Fire and brimstone. The blessed dead. The great harvest.

Chap. xv. The seven last plagues. The multitude on the sea of glass. The seven vials of wrath.

The time allotted to this study will probably be consumed before reaching this point, but if not, the study will be continued to the closing scenes of this great vision of the ages, outlining the mighty drama of [illegible] with the closing scene, the final triumph of the righteous and righteousness.

Brethren of the Northwestern Conference:

It has pleased the brethren to again select me as your evangelist. I see the importance of devoting the entire year to the work in order to reach all localities where evangelizing should be done. The States of Oregon and Washington embrace a large territory of labor. I expect to begin the work of holding a series of meetings near Astoria early in August and wish to have all that shall want my labor during the coming year to open correspondence with me at an early date so we may determine plan and time of work. Address Scholls, Oregon.

Come, let us reason together, and not forsake the assembling of ourselves together, and so much the more, as we see the day approaching.

We hope for a large attendance this year. Begin at once to prepare for the meeting, and make a special effort to attend the beginning, so that a reduced rate may be assured, as it will save a large amount in railroad fare to the brethren, and will increase the attendance.

Brethren let us awake—the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.

Full particulars as to reduced rates and so on will appear later.

Thy Kingdom Come.

Thy kingdom come! From year to year
Thy waiting church uplift their prayer:
Tarry in whose hearts thy grace has wrought
Breathe forth the cry thy lips have taught:
Thy kingdom come! let every knee
Bow down and own thy majesty.

Thy will in earth like heaven be done;
O'er every foe the victory won;
Till earth and heaven again shall be
One with each other and with thee,
Our Father let thy kingdom come!
Thy will on earth like heaven be done.

Where now beneath wrath's gathering cloud
The sacred head in anguish bowed;
Where thou didst bear thy cross in pain,
Oh come, in glorious might to reign!
Rejoice, O earth, and hail your King!
Ye morning stars, together sing!

Thy kingdom come from day to day
Thy loyal church shall ever pray;
And wait the hour in joyful hope
When angel hands shall bear them up
Thy bliss to share, thy glory see,
And reign o'er all the earth with thee.

What We Believe. No 9.

It is a fact that God has clearly threatened, not only in the Old Testament writings, but also in the New Testament, as the examples already cited show, that the wicked shall be destroyed. Let us now examine this branch of Bible teaching a little more closely. If men were immortal, and hence indestructible, he could not be destroyed, and not even God could terminate his existence. But we have the repeated and emphatic statement of Scripture that there is One who is "able to destroy." Matt. x. 28; Jas. iv. 12. And this ability rises from the fact of man's mortality. Let this be thoroughly understood, and the foundation of both eternal torment and Universalism is gone; for both are founded on the assumption of human immortality.

It is said concerning the wicked, "He shall perish forever like his own dung; they which have seen him shall say, Where is he? He shall fly away as a dream, and not be found: yea, he shall be chased away as a vision of the night." Job xx. 7, 8. Thus Peter speaking of "the unjust," says, "These, as natural brute beasts ("mere animals."—R. V.), made to be taken and destroyed.....shall utterly perish in their own corruption." 2 Pet. ii. 12.

"Evildoers shall be cut off.....Yet a little while, and the wicked shall not be; yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place, and it shall not be." Psa. xxxvii. 9, 10. Lesser's rendering on this last, which I regard as more accurate, is, "For yet for but a little while, and the wicked shall be no more; yea, thou wilt look carefully at his place, and he shall not be there." God wants, and will eventually have, an earth in which there is neither sinner nor sin. "Let the sinners be consumed out of the earth, and let the wicked be no more." And the Psalmist finds occasion in this prospect to "bless the Lord. Hallelujah." Psa. civ. 35. "The upright shall dwell in the land, and the perfect shall remain in it. But the wicked shall be cut off, and the transgressors shall be rooted (marg. "plucked up") out of it." Prov. ii. 21, 22. "The righteous shall never be removed: but the wicked shall not inhabit the earth." Prov. x. 31. These are a few samples from the Old Testament writings on the destruction of the sinner. Language could not be stronger to express the extermination of any species of noxious vermin than that foretelling the utter destruction of the wicked. The New Testament statements are, if this were possible, stronger than those just considered. "Every soul that will not hear that Prophet (Christ) shall be destroyed from among the people." Acts iii. 23. The original verb here employed for destruction, exolothreuo, is the strongest word the Greek language has to express the thought of complete extermination. It was used by Josephus when speaking of the attempt of Haman to compass the extermination of the Jews. Esther vii. 4; Jos., Ant. xi. 6, 7. It is the same word used in the LXX. in Ex. xxx. 33; xxxi. 14; Deut. vii. 23, 24. Extermination complete and entire, is what was meant in these instances, especially the last named. Then why should this identic term, when levelled at the wicked, mean eternal torment or universal salvation? Reason and the ordinary use of language demand that we allow this term to express what it says—total extinction. This is the "everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord," of which Paul speaks 2 Thess. i. 8, 9.

I said in the former article that the gospel offers eternal life (zoe aionian) to men upon condition of obedience. And I will say that there is not a single promise, either in the sayings of Jesus or the writings of the apostles, which in any way encourages the hope that sinners or wicked persons shall ever have this life. The life (zoe) is in the Son (1 John v. 11, 12), and he gives it (John xvii. 2) to those who believe on his name. John iii. 15, 16; xx. 31. "He that believeth not the Son shall not see life" (zoe). John iii. 36. To the Jews who were contemporary with him, Jesus addressed the complaint, "Ye will not come unto me that ye might have life" (zoe). John v. 40. They, like others later on, judged themselves "unworthy of everlasting life" (zoe). Acts xiii. 46. While in this condition they are still as they were before the offer of life (zoe) came to them, under sentence of death, and are reserved for the "day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men" (2 Pet. iii. 7), to which "day" they shall be "brought forth." Job xxi. 30.

The Church of God is sometimes charged with teaching the "annihilation" of the wicked, and labored "arguments" (?) are brought forward to show that this is impossible, that matter cannot be annihilated, etc. But all this is to no purpose, since we do not teach annihilation (which means "to reduce to nothing" the matter composing those persons), but their destruction, so that they shall cease to be. This view the Scriptures not only justify, but they demand it. Any other view is fraught with mischief, and is a source of confusion.

The doctrine of eternal torment necessitates the view that God will not be able to put an end to sin; that it and sinners will be while he lives; that suffering will be endless. The position of Universalism, failing to recognize, and to reckon with, the fact of man's power of choice, makes man an irresponsible tool that can only act when acted upon; and if he fails it is not due to any preference or neglect on his part, but because he did not have the proper impulse. "Life" (zoe), as we have seen, is dependent upon human volition and co-operation with the divine element, and this human element is everywhere in Scripture recognized as a very potent factor in man's salvation. Without God's assistance man cannot be saved—he cannot save himself; but without man's co-operation God cannot save him. There were those in the apostles' days who, when they knew God, glorified him not as God, and stubbornly continued in their vanity (see Rom. i. 1-32), who are "worthy of death." And there are men living at the present time whose knowledge far exceeds their actions. Shall they have another opportunity? The theory of a "fair chance" in another life is a most sorrowful evidence of fleshly thinking for which there is not the least shadow of excuse in the Word of God. It becomes us as members of the Church of God to be on our guard against these latter day evils, to "try the spirits whether they be of God," and to hold forth the Word of life. Let us not lull dying men and women to sleep in carnal security by promising them that if not in the present, then in another life the light will shine so that they will see and be saved. Neither will we frighten them with fears of a hell of endless torture. "He that speaketh (let him speak) as the oracles of God" (speak). 1 Peter iv. 11. Where these announce a truth, we should proclaim it, though ever so repugnant to the flesh: but where they are silent, we can well afford to hold our peace.

Jews and the Bible.

Bro. A. P. Lautermann sends us the following extracts taken from a sermon by Mr. W. P. McCorkle on the Jews and the Bible. We are glad to have anything concerning God's ancient people to give our readers. The account says:—

Dr. McCorkle took for his text Psa. cxlvii. 20: "God hath not dealt so with any nation," and a part of Acts iii. 18: "Those things which God before had showed by the mouth of all his prophets * * * he hath so fulfilled."

"The Jew," he said, "has been the 'standing miracle of the Christian Church' in all ages, and a witness to the Christian Scriptures under all dispensations. For thirty-five centuries, this ancient and noble people has been in all its phases, whether of gloom or glory, an exact literal fulfilment of ancient prophecies. 'Holy men of old spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost,' and in their utterances they professed to be looking through the glass of futurity. The lapse of ages has brought within the field of our vision the scenes which they described. Events now transpiring, and facts recorded in the annals of the past, alike present the reality of visions recorded upon the deathless page of Holy Writ thousands of years ago.

"These predictions of the Jewish prophets concerning the future destiny of their own nation are unique. Such a fate was never prophesied to any nation by its seer, and such a fate in all its dire horrors, has never fallen to the lot of any other people. Neither in blessings, nor in judgment, nor in specific relations of their future, has God dealt so with any nation.

When the poet sings,

"Woe to the land, to hastening ill a prey,
Where wealth accumulates and men decay, he is not prophesying, but preaching in rhyme. He has for his guide the principle that righteousness exalted a nation, while sin is a curse to any people, and besides this, the history of all the ages to justify his prediction. When certain men a few years prior to the late war between the States, predicted that fearful struggle, and its general result they were judging by the trend of events transpiring before their own eyes, and it required no extraordinary mental vision to foresee the inevitable sequence of events. But the predictions made by the Jewish prophets were so many and so peculiar that they cannot be accounted for on the ground that they were the predictions of ordinary human foresight, or mere coincidences between guesses and their fulfilment.

"In contemplation the verification of prophecies so numerous, so peculiar, and so unlikely in their nature, we are compelled to ask with Jeremiah, 'Who is he that saith and it cometh to pass, and the Lord hath not commanded it?' It is easier to accept the doctrines of inspiration than to believe any such coincidences possible without the agency of superintending providence, vindicating the word of Jehovah's prophets. Today the Jew stands, a monumental witness to the divinity of the book which foretold his doom in the past, and foretells his glory in the ages that are at hand."

Mr. McCorkle enumerated "a few out of scores of specific predictions." "First," he said, "the apostasy of the Jewish nation from their pristine faith and their rejection of their promised Messiah were both foretold. Said Moses, 'The Lord shall smite thee with madness, and blindness, and astonishment of heart, and thou shalt grope at noonday, as the blind gropeth in darkness.' Joshua predicted that they would 'serve other gods' and 'transgress the covenant.' In all the splendor of the golden age of the Jewish commonwealth, when their holy city was the 'glory of all lands,' their sovereign the wisest who ever occupied a throne, and their nation second to none in wealth and importance, when the mysterious shekinah glory, the visible manifestation of the divine presence, was still beaming in their temple, that predicted apostasy began.

"Solomon, at first a saint, as well as a sage, an enlightened statesman and an accomplished scholar, a poet, an orator and a man of science, led the way. Pursuing the path too common with those who have unlimited wealth, he became first, a sensualist, and then a sceptic, and then an apostate. Israel speedily followed his example. Jeroboam found it easy to convert ten tribes to idolatry, and the efforts of the few righteous kings of Judah were only sufficient to bring about an occasional temporary revival of national piety. The greatest prophet felt himself alone, when in all the nations, there was found but 7,000 who had not bowed the knee to Baal, and the ministry of his successors was for the most part, a ministry of denunciation, which, instead of rousing the people to repentance, seemed rather to intensify their hatred of pure religion and their stubborn attachment to idolatry. They persecuted their prophets, and went madly toward their doom. Thus did they manifest a fearful blindness, and transgress their national covenant with Jehovah as the prophets had foretold.

"Looking forward to the time when God would be manifest in the flesh, Isaiah cried, 'Who hath believed our report, and to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed?" This 53rd chapter of his prophecy is a prophetic account of the character, the sufferings, the rejection and the death of the sinless One who should pour out his soul an offering for the sins of his people. He is despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, and we (his people) hid as it were our faces from him. He was despised and we esteemed him not.' John records the fulfilment of the prophecy in the words, 'He came unto his own, and his own received him not.' Paul, recalling the words of Moses, declared that blindness had happened in part to Israel, and strange indeed was that blindness which prevented them from recognizing in Jesus, him of whom 'Moses, in the law, and in the prophets, did speak.'"

It was foretold that they should be chastised by being brought under the yoke of a foreign nation, and led into captivity. Many nations have suffered the captivity of a part of their people and had this been all the prophecy, there had been nothing particularly remarkable about; but the captivity of Israel was unique in that it was prophesied as a captivity of the whole nation, a remnant only being left in their native land. "The Lord shall bring thee, and thy King into a nation which neither thou nor thy fathers have known.' 'The stranger which is within thee shall get up above thee very high, and thou shalt come down very low.' These prophecies and many others of similar import were fulfilled, first in Assyrian and Babylonish captivities, in the first of which ten tribes were carried away, and the land colonized with foreigners, and in the second of which the remaining two tribes were deported.

"When the Jewish commonwealth had been restored under the mild reign of Cyrus, and continued until it burst into the final glory of its passing under the Asmonean princes, whose reign was terminated after one of the grandest defences known to history, the Romans at last fulfilled the fear of all patriotic Jews, and took away their place and nation.' Hadrian's famous edict forbade them to set foot on Judea, or even to approach the country round about.

Jesus declared that in the fearful overthrow which was to come upon them soon after his time, 'Jerusalem should be trodden under foot of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles should be fulfilled."

"And from that ancient day until now, Judea has been governed by aliens, and the chosen people, for long centuries past few among the inhabitants of their own country, live as strangers there in sorrow and humiliation. The wailing place of the Jews, where they were wont to meet to bewail the degredation of Zion, is familiar to every traveler who has ever visited Jerusalem.

Their future conquerors were described. The Lord shall bring a nation against thee from afar, from the end of the earth, as swift as the eagle flieth; a nation whose tongue thou shalt not understand, a nation of fierce countenance, which shall not regard the person of the old nor show favor to the young. A partial fulfillment of this prediction is recorded in 2 Chronicles, but it was under the Roman Conquest that the subjugation of Israel was completed. The Romans were truly brought from far, since Italy was beyond the sea, and especially since Vespasian and Hadrian, the two great conquerors of the Jews, came from commanding forces in Britain. The Roman standard, too, was the eagle with outstretched wings, so that as fast as the Roman eagle flew, the victorious armies of Rome advanced. And the Latin language was an unknown jargon to the Jews.

"Their sufferings in subjugation and captivity were foretold with fearful minuteness. It was foretold that in the stress of privation the people would disregard the instincts of natural affections, and mothers should eat their own children. Fulfilment of this prophecy was quoted from the Scriptures and from Josephus.

They were to be left few in number, and multitudes were to perish from starvation, and they were to be sold as slaves after being transported in ships to Egypt, until the market was glutted. 'The Lord shall bring into Egypt again with ships, and there shall ye be sold unto your enemies, * * * and no man shall buy you.' One million one hundred thousand were destroyed in the siege of Jerusalem by Titus, and nearly 2,500,000, in all Judea. Ninety-nine thousand two hundred prisoners, according to Josephus, were taken. Multitudes were transported to Egypt, the market was overstocked, and 11,000 starved to death. Two thousand five hundred were exposed to wild beasts on Domitian's birthday. Not only in Egypt, but in many lands did they serve, as Moses had foretold, 'in hunger and in thirst and in want of all things.'

"Their ultimate dispersion over the whole world was foretold. 'I will scatter thee among the heathen;' 'the Lord shall scatter thee among the nations, from one end of the earth to the other.

"What is now true of the Jews? There is no country on the face of the earth where the Jews is unknown, and they are the only people of whom, unless in quite recent years, as much could be said. They are citizens of the world. Neither mountains, nor rivers, nor deserts, nor oceans have terminated their wanderings.

"Though wandering far and wide they were to suffer still wherever they went." The speaker gave a graphic account of the persecution of the Jews during many ages. "It had been said to them, 'among the nations shalt thou find no ease, neither shall thy foot find rest: but the Lord shall give thee there a trembling heart, and failing of eyes, and sorrow of mind, and thy life shall hang in doubt, and thou shalt fear day and night.' During many centuries together these words were an accurate description of the condition of the Jews. Their condition was aptly described in most of the countries of the world, even in the earlier part of the last century, in the words of Byron:

"Tribes of the wandering foot and weary breast,
How shall ye flee away and be at rest?
The wild dove hath her nest, the fox his cave,
Mankind their country—Israel, but the grave!

"Notwithstanding all their persecutions they were to continue a distinct people. 'I will not cast thee away to destroy thee utterly.' 'Lo! the people shall dwell alone, and shall not be reckoned among the nations.' 'I will command, I will shift the house of Israel among the nations, like as corn is sifted in a sieve, yet shall not the least grain fall upon the earth.' 'I will make a full end of all the nations whither I have driven thee, but I will not make a full end of thee.'

"So spake the prophets, and Lo! we behold the Jewish nation today, homeless and kingless, living among the ruins of mighty empires, themselves a monument of indestructibility. The Jews as has been said by a great preacher, 'are the aristocracy of the Scripture, reft of coronets, princes in degradation. A Babylonian, a Theban, a Spartan, are names known only in history; their shadows alone haunt the world, and flicker on its tablets: but a Jew walks every street, dwells in every capital, traverses every exchange, and relieves the monotony of the nations of the earth: the race has inherited the heir-loom of immortality, incapable of extinction or amalgamation.'

"Like the bush at Horeb, ever burning, yet never consumed. Israel, begirt through whole millenniums with the flames of persecution, is green and flourishing still: and like the Gulf stream, which sends its mighty current athwart the broad Atlantic, passing through but mingling not with the surrounding waters, Israel's life-blood has surged through the great sea of humanity's existence, yet remains the same, unchanged and unchangeable."

Concluding, the speaker urged upon his Christian hearers the duty of kindness to all Hebrews, because they are Hebrews. "Our forefathers persecuted them through many centuries without a cause," he said "and it should be both our duty and our pleasure to show these heirs of whole millenniums of unjust hatred that the religion of Jesus is really a religion of love. They have been wronged, cruelly, foully, perennially, in the name of Christ. Let us strive to show them that it is the triumph of that name in Christian nations, and in Christian hearts that has given to the Jew the rights so long denied him, and which guarantees to him in this Christian land, the privilege of being accounted a man and a brother by his Christian neighbors. Let us pray for them, day by day. The greatest blessings prophesied for the church are bound up in the glory of the Jewish race.

"And to my Hebrew brethren, I would say, as said the man of Nazareth: Search your Scriptures. In them ye think ye have life eternal,' and these same Scriptures which foretold so wonderfully the future of your noble race, described the Savior who is yet according to our faith, to be your Savior, as we most humbly trust he is ours."

Editor Restitution:

Since my article, "The Day of Crucifixion" appeared in the columns of THE RESTITUTION, I have received several tracts treating upon the subject in its various phases; a letter from a good brother, Norton Gould of Florence, Nebraska, and I have the article in answer to mine in the last issue. In all these the question which I asked has failed of an answer. Please read my article again. I did not think that I left the question of the day of the week on which Christ was crucified open to a question. It occurs to me that Wednesday must be the day. I will repeat my other question, however, and if you will examine the last paragraph of my former writing I think you will find it there.

In Matthew xxvi. 17, I find this: "Now the first day of the feast of unleavened bread the disciples came to Jesus, saying unto him, Where wilt thou that we prepare for thee to eat the passover?"

Briefly, the day upon which the paschal lamb was slain was the 14th of the month Nisan. The night following the passover feast was eaten. This day following was the first day of the feast of unleavened bread evidently. Now if, in fulfilment of the type, Christ was slain on the 14th, or the day before the feast of unleavened bread, how could he have a conversation with his disciples on the first day of the feast of unleavened bread if the feast occurred on the 15th?

I wish to thank the brethren who have so kindly written me or sent me material upon the subject. I find great enjoyment in searching out the hidden beauties of God's Word. I find that by occupying my mind thus I have less time to subject my mind to evil thoughts.

S. J. LISDAY.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

HOPES are like sponges—they wipe out good resolutions.

LOVE'S secret is to be always doing things for God, and not to mind because they are such little ones. Holiness does not consist of doing uncommon things, but in doing whatsoever we do to the glory of God.

SOME one has said: "If all unkind and unjust words were arrows, like needles and pins; and if, instead of piercing the ear and then the heart, they flew against the bodies of those to whom they were directed, the children in some queen's families would be like pin-cushions stuck completely full of sharp and painful weapons."

IT is a happy thought of George S. Merriam that when our own burden is heaviest, even, we can always lighten some other burden. And if at times we cannot seem to see God; it is still possible to show God: because it is through the love and kindness of the heart that the divine reality comes home to men." Paul appears to warrant this when he says it pleased God, who separated him from birth, and called him by his favor, to reveal his Son in him, that he might preach him among the nations.

"MAN'S heart is like a mill-stone, for ever swiftly at work, grinding its grist of thought and feeling, and purpose. And like a mill-stone, the heart will grind itself if it has nothing else to grind. So many men and women long for a life lifted above the need of work, a paradise of idleness! But there is nothing that keeps us so hale and hearty and in such full possession of our strength and the joy of living, as a steady round of duty and solid work that we must dispose of, and for which we feel fit. God pity the vacant lives."

"CAMPING down close to the edges of a sin from which one has just escaped, is dangerous work. A person in such a position is like one who, upon finding himself in the running current of a river which is rising, swollen by heavy rains, struggles desperately until he reaches its banks, and there settles himself in false security. In the morning, the waters of the freshet are booming about him, and he flies to the meadow, a little higher. But the floods are out, and they rise and rise, faster than he can run, and the man, who by fleeing at once to the mountains when he came up from the river, would have been saved, by tarrying upon the lowlands, perishes." Reader, take warning,—get as far away from the edges of a sin as you can.

"I KNOW," says Ellen Thoreycroft Fowler, that if a man breaks the laws of nature he will be punished to the uttermost, for there is no forgiveness in nature. I know that if a man breaks the laws of society he will find neither remission nor mercy, for there is no forgiveness in society. But I believe that if a man breaks the laws of God his transgression can be taken away as though it had never been, for there is forgiveness with thee that thou mayest be praised." The same writer says:—"If only the women who have sufficient wit to say nasty things, had just so much more wit as would prevent them from saying the same, the world would be a pleasanter place, and the men who have married stupid wives would have less cause for congratulation than they have at present."

"HIM that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God." Rev. iii. 12. "In whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit." Eph. ii. 22. Slowly and surely the material is being prepared for that temple. We have been quarried, but we are yet in the "rough;" the squaring and shaping, and dressing must continuously go on or we will fit no place in that vast and glorious structure. This preparatory work belongs to us,—it is not done for us, except so far as divine means are provided for overcoming,—but we must use the means or we shall not overcome, and will not become pillars in that temple to, if we could get a view, and keep in sight the temple which overcomers will form a part, it would make us patient under the dressing process.

"Salvation"

According to the best of our recollection the words addressed to the woman at the well, "Salvation is of the Jews," mean little more to Gentile religionists than that Jesus, who offered himself without spot to God, as a sacrifice in our behalf, belonged to that nation. We want to point out to our readers from the utterances of Israel's prophets, God's pre-arranged purpose concerning his land and people as regards the consummation. We trust that all who read these lines will realize that all the utterances of the prophets and holy men of old "who spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit," converge in the CHRIST; that he is the great center of attraction in for, and by his people. It is brought out in the very first announcement of God's mercy to sinful men, as the destroyer of the serpent, or sin and all its consequences: "The serpent's seed shall bruise Messiah's heel, but finally Messiah shall prevail and crush the serpent's head. He is also held up to view as the blesser of nations. Psa. lxxii. 17. He is also spoken of as the Shilo to whom will be the gathering of the people, and as the Shepherd, the Stone of Israel." Gen. xlix. 45. He is to gather the dispersed of Israel into their own land; and the good Shepherd is to lead his flock "by the green pastures, and the still waters." His is to be the

ALL GOD'S WORKINGS

THE STONE TO BE LAID

IN ZION, on which a glorious temple shall be built, that will be proof against every power that may attempt to raze its foundations. It will be a house composed of immortal stones, in which God shall dwell by his Spirit for ever. It is the purpose of God to establish his kingdom for ever under a Son of David. In the second Psalm it is testified—"why do the heathen (nations) rage, and the people imagine a vain thing? The kings of the earth set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together against the Lord, and saying, Let us break their bands asunder and cast away their cords from us." The apostle Peter applies the above part of the prediction in this passage to Jesus in the past. He says, speaking to God, "Who by the mouth of thy servant David hast said, why did the heathen rage, and the people imagine vain things? The kings of the earth stood up, and the rulers were gathered together against the Lord and against his Christ. For of a truth against thy holy child Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, both Herod and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles (Romans) and the people of Israel, were gathered together." Acts iv. 25-30. The vain thing the people imagined was,

TO DESTROY FOR EVER

Jesus of Nazareth, because they hated him and would not receive him as their king. It was a vain act,—Jehovah had brought him into existence for the purpose of making him King over all the earth. "Therefore," the Spirit adds, "He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh; the Lord shall hold them in derision....Yet, (notwithstanding the combination referred to against him) have I set my King upon my

HOLY HILL OF ZION."

The 72nd Psalm shows that what for many centuries was denied them will be brought to the people—PEACE. Immortal rulers of God's choice will be at the helm of affairs in that great empire that will bring about that most desirable change; for Isaiah says "Behold a king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment. Indeed it is on account of the righteous character Jesus evolved while on trial that he is to have the distinguished honor of

RULING THE WORLD.

See proof in Psa. xlv., "Thy kingdom is a right sceptre. Thou lovest righteousness and hatest wickedness, therefore God, thy God hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows." In the 72nd Psalm he is exhibited as the great worker in the strength of his Father; and is styled David's Son, and v. 8 says he shall have dominion from sea to sea, from the river unto the ends of the earth,—all kings fall down before him,—all nations shall serve him." The kingdom preached by the clergy is nothing like that. It plainly testifies that it is where there will be rivers and seas, and, moreover, where there are nations to bow to him. Is. ix. shows that the government of Jehovah's kingdom is to rest upon his [illegible] and that he shall be the Prince of Peace upon the throne of David. No such king has ever yet sat upon David's throne. But Luke i. 30-32 shows that God hundreds of years later had neither changed his purpose or forgotten his promises—and hence it will be as were all the promises relating to his first advent. Turn to Matt. xix. 28 and see if the Lord Jesus did not endorse the truth as herein set forth. Turn to Acts i. and learn HOW he comes to take possession of his kingdom. It is in like manner as he ascended. He has never yet come in that manner since the men in white uttered the words, or else the resurrection of the dead in Christ would have taken place. David is dead and buried says the Apostle, and every member of the Body of Christ, except the few now living, are dead, and must be raised to life, because they are to sit with Christ on his throne. Rev. iii. 21. It is at that time when "the many that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake,—the time when judgment is given to the saints of the Most High, and this honor is shared by all his saints, as says the prophet Daniel. The time when justice long denied his people,—justice will even be done to his enemies, for the sceptre swayed will be a righteous one—justice and judgment are the foundation of his throne. "Unto Shiloh shall the gathering of the people (twelve tribes) be." They will need to be gathered for they are scattered among all nations and trodden under foot of all the Gentiles on account of their sin. He that scattered them has pledged his word that he will gather them. Isa. xi. 10-16; xxxv. 10. Without their gathering the promises to Abraham cannot be fulfilled. Space forbids the introduction of more testimony at this time,—we trust enough has been referred to for our present purpose, viz., to show the

TO BE ON EARTH

FULFILLED TO THE LETTER,

END GOD HAD IN VIEW

in making choice of Abraham's race above all the nations of the earth, and of choosing the land of Palestine as his own. On this land he has determined to train and educate a peculiar people through whom he will show forth his glory. May the Deliverer soon come and turn away ungodliness from Jacob, and make Jerusalem a praise in all the earth, we pray. May readers and writer be so approved of the Lord as that we may all be evangels of peace and righteousness till the whole earth reverberate with Jehovah's praise! Amen.

The Wisdom of Saloomoon. Chap. 1.

1. May ye have loved righteousness, ye who judge the earth; may ye have been thoughtful with goodness concerning the Lord, and in singleness of heart may ye have sought him.

2. Because he is being found by those who do not presumptuously try him, and he manifesteth himself unto those who do not distrust him.

3. For crooked reasonings separate from God, and the ability that is of approved value convicteth those wanting in good sense.

4. Because wisdom will not enter into a soul that is devising evil, nor will it take up its abode in a body that is mortgaged to sin.

5. For a holy spirit of chastening instruction fleeth deceit, and standeth up and away from thoughts that are devoid of understanding, and would be reproved should iniquity come nigh.

6. For wisdom is a man-loving spirit and will not hold guiltless blasphemy from his lips; because God is a witness to his secret thoughts and a truthful bishop of his heart and a hearer of his tongue.

7. Because the Lord's spirit hath filled the inhabited, and that which containeth all things hath a comprehension of articulate sound.

8. Therefore no one who uttereth wrong things can be ignored, nor will right when she convicteth pass him by.

9. For there will be a searching examination of the slanderous accusations of an irreverent one (primarily Satan meant) and a hearing of his words will come unto the Lord for a reproof of his acts of transgression;

10. Because a zealous ear is listening to them all and a confused sound of murmuring is not being hid.

11. Be on your guard then against unprofitable murmuring and be sparing of adverse talk; because a secret [illegible] does not go its way in vain, and a mouth that speaketh adverse lies is taking away a soul.

12. Do not be envious of death in an error of your life, nor drag destruction upon you with the works of your hands.

13. Because God did not cause death, nor doth he delight in the loss of the living.

14. For he generated all things to be and the generic process of the cosmos are salvation processes, and there is no medicament in them for destruction, nor is there a royalty of Hades (the grave) upon the earth.

15. For righteousness is deathless (immortal) but irreverent ones with hands and words have invoked it (or him death); having accounted him a friend, they have melted him away, and they have made a covenant with him because they are worthy to be of that allotment.

COMMENT.

"The Wisdom of Saloomoon" like so many other portions of "the priestly writings" which were originally a part of "the Bible" so called and were included in the original Scriptural canon of the Israelites, was first made apocryphal by an apostate Catholic church, but was accepted as canonical by the early Christian church. Even the later Catholic church has restored it and it is a part of the Douay Version. The Protestant church, however, with all its scholarship and enlightenment still adheres to the apostate canonical errors which it inherited and in its later "higher criticism" as it calls its many modern bold and bald assumptions, it "has gone on from bad to worse" as Paul predicted it would, and is attempting to discredit what Peter terms "the more sure prophetic word" by discrediting its authorship, even to say nothing of its substance.

Viewed from the literary standpoint merely this book is a chef d'œuvre and worthy to be compared only with the Book of Job and other portions of the oracular Word; and containing as it does the only copy of the famous prayer of Saloomoon which was so acceptable to God and well accredited in other Scripture, this fact alone should commend it to Christians who believe in prayer and especially this sort of prayer; and modern socialogists cannot do better than acquaint themselves thoroughly with what it has to say about law and judicial procedure. Believers in natural immortality too will do well to scan its pages carefully. The translations moreover of this book hitherto have been unscholarly, inadequate and singularly prejudiced. For these reasons the present translator hopes to interest at least a large number of readers.

CHAS. GARDNER.

The Kingdom of God, What is it? No. 2.

The unconditional promises made to the fathers, compared with the teaching of the prophets, show very clearly, that the order of their fulfilment was to be progressive, and as the Christ was the testator of God's will, it was necessary, as shown by Paul Heb. ix. 15, 17, that his death should take place, in order that the aforesaid promises, or will might begin to come into effect, and there is no warrant for the claim, that the coming to pass of these promises, in their proper order, should be delayed 2000 years or more, after the death of the testator.

In the days of the Christ's first advent, the fulfilment of these many great and precious promises, were presented as being at hand, about to take place, and that in their proper order, in precept and parable, having a threefold aspect.

First, as a kingdom having a small beginning, developing into a great kingdom or world power, agreeably with the promise, "a nation and a company of nations."

Second, The Christ and his followers were said to be heirs of God, joint-heirs with Christ of this great kingdom.

Third, a kingdom which the Christ with his faithful ones would possess or inherit at his coming in great glory.

Unless the seed has been blasted and God's plan of salvation frustrated, which we do not believe possible, the kingdom which was then spoken of comparatively as a grain of mustard, which when grown is the greatest among herbs, must ere this have grown into a great kingdom, if not the greatest among kingdoms, so that the birds of the air lodge in its branches, those birds which devoured the good seed which fell by the wayside, and should manifest characteristics both good and bad, wheat and tares, a world power, as it was in the days of the kingdom of God, when Saul and David and Solomon reigned over Israel. Characteristics which it evidently maintains until the Christ's return in glory, when it is said he shall take out of it all things that offend, and them which do iniquity.

With these Scriptures before us, it seems as gross an error to maintain that the kingdom of God does not exist, as it is to claim that the kingdom of Christ, or government of Christ does exist.

Daniel looking forward prophetically to the second advent of Christ, says, "I saw in the night visions, and behold one like the Son of Man, came in the clouds of heaven, and came to the ancient of days, and they brought him near before him, and there was given him dominion, glory and a kingdom." The kingdom once as a grain of mustard comparatively, is now great possessing dominion and glory. Continuing we learn that the kingdom and dominion and greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High. This kingdom, glory and dominion is undoubtedly that kingdom which John refers to Rev. xi. 15, "And the kingdom (not kingdoms) of this world (now a great world power) became the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ. The kingdom which the Christ taught as being at hand, now grown to immense proportions, possessing the gates of its enemies, and encircling the earth with its dominion as plainly taught by the Christ in the parable of the "Wheat and tares, the mustard seed tree, the leaven hid in three measures of meal, etc. The natural progeny of the woman clothed with the sun, having the moon under her feet, and a crown of twelve stars upon her head. Rev. xii. 1, "Who fled into the wilderness," the "field Babylon." Micah iv. 10, "There shalt thou be delivered, there the Lord shall redeem thee from the hand of thine enemies" agreeably with the promises to Abraham, Gen. xxii 17, "That in blessing I will bless thee and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore, and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies. At the birth of John the Baptist, "Zecharias being filled with the Holy Ghost, prophesied, saying, Blessed be the Lord God of Israel for he hath visited and redeemed his people, to perform the mercy promised to our fathers and to remember his holy covenant, the oath which he sware to our father Abraham." The time had now come for the performance of the promises made to father Abraham, when the Christ returns and in great glory, the glory of the Father, and takes possession of this great kingdom, and multitudinous people, the promise to the fathers shall find full and complete fruition, a king shall reign in righteousness and execute righteous judgment, and that upon the throne of David and his kingdom to order and establish it with judgment and with justice even for ever more.

If the kingdom of God does not exist at his return, there can be no kingdom to order and establish with judgment and justice, nor for the Christ and his followers to possess, concerning which they are now said to be heirs, and it is absurd to speak of being heirs to or taking possession of that which does not exist. Neither can there be a throne for the Christ to occupy, called the throne of his glory. Matt. xxv. The throne of Yehova on which it is said, "Solomon sat instead of his father, neither can there be a regeneration (not re-creation) of that kingdom. The Christ realizing the end from the beginning when the kingdom once as the "smallest of all seeds; as a small stone cut without hands from the mountain" would become a great nation possessing glory and dominion assures his apostles, Matt. xix. 28, In the regeneration (of the kingdom) when the Son of Man shall sit on the throne of his glory, ye shall sit on twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel.

THOSE to whom we have sent letters telling about your accounts have not all made response as yet. Brother or Sister, we urge you to be sure and not neglect this matter longer. We want to pay our obligations—this is the reason why we ask you to give us what is due at once. If we could satisfy those we are under obligation to any other way we would not ask you, but as it is the only way we know of, we must hear from you to enable us to do so. We trust all will see the necessity of this and act NOW.

WHEN YOUR TIME IS OUT PLEASE RENEW.

Harvest Work Needed.

I presume no reader will take objections to the statement that rebaptized heart work is very much needed amid the trials and perplexities incident to the close of this Gentile age. But, beloved in the Lord, are you personally willing to co-operate? Is your heart burdened for the salvation of sinners, who are perishing because they know not what they must do to be saved? Are you willing to offer yourself upon the altar as a living sacrifice that the perishing may be rescued? If you are, then I am willing to join hands with you, that we may together "throw out the life line," that the perishing may be rescued.

For many years through the channel of the pen and printing press, I have published glad tidings, God has blessed both me and the work. I still intend to continue this work, but I now desire to add the living voice to the pen, and come in personal contact with my auditors. Now this can be done only through your personal sacrifice and co-operation. Are you willing to do it?

My purpose is, if you co-operate, to take a trip throughout the United States and the Dominion of of Canada, proclaiming the gospel of the kingdom to the perishing, and do what little I can in assisting to encourage, strengthen and build up those who have already become obedient to the faith. I can do this only by your aid. Are you willing to share the work?

Now, if any individual or congregation would like to have me hold a series of meetings in your neighborhood, in any place between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, and the Dominion of Canada, please write and say so, as soon as convenient. My purpose in desiring to receive all calls at once is that I may arrange the trip with appointments lying nearest to each other, in order that traveling expenses may be saved, in going from place to place. When I find I am nearing your place, by having the appointment in advance, I can then write and make definite appointments as to time.

If you would desire a visit from me when near your neighborhood, please write at once and say so. Address 420 North Willow Avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Ill.

Brethren of the Northwestern Conference:

It has pleased the brethren to again select me as your evangelist. I see the importance of devoting the entire year to the work in order to reach all localities where evangelizing should be done. The States of Oregon and Washington embrace a large territory of labor. I expect to begin the work of holding a series of meetings near Astoria early in August and wish to have all that shall want my labor during the coming year to open correspondence with me at an early date so we may determine plan and time of work. Kings and Priests at Last.

Angel voices sweetly singing
Echo through the blue dome ringing,
News of wondrous gladness bringing;
Ah! 'tis heaven at last.

On the jasper threshold standing,
Like a pilgrim safely landing,
See the strange, bright scene expanding;
Ah! we're home at last.

What a country! what a glory!
Far beyond the brightest story
Of the ages old and hoary:
Splendor bright at last.

Gone the vanity and folly
Come the dark and melancholy,
Come the joyous and the holy;
Peace and joy at last.

Christ himself the living splendor,
Christ the sunlight mild and tender;
Praises to the Lamb we render;
Victory's song at last.

Now at length the veil is rended,
Now the pilgrimage is ended,
And the saints their thrones ascended—
All their sorrows past.

Broken death's dread bands that bound us,
Life and victory all around us,
Christ the King himself hath crowned us
Kings and priests at last.

An Answer.

A brother requests that some one show how to harmonize Matt. xii. 40-42; xxiv. 37-39; Luke xvii. 26-30, with the idea of mercy for the nations, and a growth and expansion of God's kingdom when set up and established on the earth.

If some one does not furnish something better, I submit the following:

Beginning with Matt. xxiv. 37-39, there is no reference made in those three verses, or in the comparison drawn in them, to God's dealing with the nations after the second coming of Christ; but the whole drift of the discourse from the 3rd verse to the end of the chapter, is devoted to the answer to the question: When shall these things be, and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world? and after giving a detailed catalogue of events down to the time just previous to the second advent, and verifying the statement as immutable, he proceeds in verse 36, with the statement: "But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, but my Father only." Then in the 37th verse comes the comparison, "But as the days of Noah were, so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be." But the next two verses locate the thing compared as previous to the second coming of Christ, and shows the ignorance that will exist in the world at that time, concerning the time of his advent; "For as in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking.....so shall the coming of the Son of Man be." Then concludes with the admonition, "Watch, therefore; for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come."

The same subject was being treated in the 17th of Luke, 26-30, namely: the days before the second coming of Christ, compared with those previous to the flood and those prior to the destruction of Sodom; but the comparison goes no farther. And if we attempt to include God's subsequent dealing with the nations, we at once become entangled in the meshes of inconsistency for the same parity of reasoning that would necessitate the destruction of all mankind but the righteous would also designate the means of destruction, which in the case of the flood was water, but in the case of the Sodomites fire; thus instituting a plain contradiction, which shows us that we cannot understandingly carry the comparison beyond the appearing of Christ. And besides the contradiction that would come from the different agents of destruction, by turning to Gen. ix. 11, we learn that God made a covenant with Noah, saying, "Neither shall all flesh be cut off any more by the waters of a flood; neither shall there any more be a flood to destroy the earth."

So we perceive that there is no relation existing between the comparison made in Luke xvii. 27-30, and the judgment of the nations subsequent to the coming of Christ.

But the parable of the tares of the field over-reaches the coming of the Lord into the "day of the Lord," the judgment age. The sending forth of angels by the Son of Man, may be after he comes for his saints, and the gathering out of his kingdom all things that offend and them which do iniquity, belongs to the cleaning process after he comes, preparatory to the rulership of the nations by the saints, Rev. ii. 26, 27, but is by no means the entire destruction of the three different [illegible]

1st, the great mass of mankind, "the common people," who are naturally well disposed, and good citizens, but who are deceived and made infidel by the spurious morals of a second class who pervert the Scriptures and teach lies, scandalizing the Deity and disputing God's Word; denominated by the Savior, Skandalon, Greek, R. V. things that offend, Diaglott, Seducers, Matt. xiii. 41, and the third class, them which do iniquity, are seemingly natural outlaws as described by 2 Peter ii. 10. These two last classes being gathered out of his kingdom leave the mass of mankind, as the left of the nations, see Zech. xiv. 16, who will worship the King, the Lord of Hosts when they receive the light of the righteous when they shine forth as the Sun in the kingdom of their Father. Matt. xiii. 43. As the residue of men, Acts xv. 17, who might seek after the Lord when he has returned and built up the tabernacle of David, bound the dragon that he shall deceive the nations no more till the thousand years are finished, Rev. xx. and established in his kingdom, first as a "mustard seed" over the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, known as Judah, see Zech. xii. 7, then the ten tribes, or Israel, Jer. xxiii. 6, afterward expanding through the 1000 years reign; for "his empire shall be multiplied and there shall be no end of peace. Isa. ix. 7, (Douay Version) and "he must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet" 1 Cor. xv. 25, until all the nations are subdued and the knowledge of the glory of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea."

Further proof of probation in the age to come is found in the 2nd Psalm after the prediction "Yet have I set my King upon my holy hill of Zion," verse 6, the heathen nations are given him in the eighth verse, his mission described in the 9th verse, and "the decree" is declared in the 10-12 verses, "Be wise now therefore, Oh ye kings: be instructed ye judges of the earth" with the promise, "Blessed are all they that put their trust in him." Again, "But in the last days it shall come to pass, that the mountain of the house of the Lord shall be established in the top of the mountains, and it shall be exalted above the hills; and people shall flow unto it. And many nations shall come and say, Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways; and we will walk in his paths; for the law shall go forth of Zion, and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem, and he shall judge among many people, and rebuke strong nations afar off; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks; nations shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. But they shall sit every man under his vine and fig tree; and none shall make them afraid; for the mouth of the Lord of Hosts hath spoken it." Micah iv. 1-4.

There is to be no deception during the thousand years reign, for the dragon has been bound that he should deceive the nations no more till the thousand years be fulfilled, Rev. xx. 2, but the nations are to receive instruction in righteousness and justice, and equity will be the order of the day, and when the thousand years are finished the final test of loyalty will be instituted for "Satan shall be loosed out of his prison and shall go out to deceive the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Magog, to gather them together to battle; the number of whom is as the sand of the sea," and Malachi's burning day closes the scene for "they went up on the breadth of the earth, and compassed the camp of the saints about, and the beloved city; and fire came down from God out of heaven and devoured them." Rev. xx. 7-9.

In love of the truth.

J. M. Fyfe.

[Men may fix up in their minds just what God will have done in the future age, and how he will do it; and after all is gone over the conclusions are so very indefinite, and we really know so little about the plans of God in the next dispensation, that it is well to go slow, and rather stick to what is yet to be done in this age—do the work set out for the present—and trust the Father to arrange the future all right.—Ed.]

Does it Make Any Difference What We Believe?

Does it make any difference what we believe? We hear it said on every hand, that, if we believe Christ died to save us all, and love every body, seeking to live peaceable lives, without getting angry, it does not make any difference what we believed in regard to the doctrines of the Bible. While this is a high standard, and many churches would be the better if their members lived up to it, still there is something more to Christian life than this.

We read in 2 Tim. iii. 16: "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." So we see that to be perfect and thoroughly furnished, and able to enter into every good work, we must take the whole of the Scripture and "study to show ourselves approved unto God, workmen that need not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth."

While some who have just started in the way, and are, as it were, but babes, are not able to enter into the deepest things of God, yet they are told to "desire the sincere milk of the Word, that they may grow thereby." And just as we feed babes, first on milk and then on strong meat, so God would feed his children by giving them an understanding of his Word. It is just as necessary that a child of God, if he would grow, be fed this spiritual food as it is that we take food to give us physical life. We read in 1 Pet. iii. 15: "Sanctify the Lord God in your hearts: and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear."

How many there are who do not know what their hope is, and others who do not know the "reason" for their's. And how many times, when there are sermons preached on the promise made to Abraham, on the resurrection and Christ's second coming, and on the judgment, we hear it said: "Oh, I am not interested in those things; I do not think it makes any difference what we believe about those things. If we only live as near right as we can I think the Lord will save us any way."

I heard a preacher say a few days ago that he did not care to know any thing about the reward we are to receive hereafter, as he was satisfied with what he received here, and knew God would take care of the rest. But if we do as God tells us in his Word, we shall "earnestly contend for the faith once delivered unto the saints;" and if we really love Jesus we shall want to know about his coming—whether the signs that tell us he is near have been fulfilled or not; and we shall want to find out all we can about the home he has prepared for us, and all the promises he has made to his children.

If one we love goes away we are very anxious to find out when we may expect his return, and as the time draws near we make great preparations to receive him. Shall we do less for Jesus? I think if we really love Jesus we want to learn more and more about him and all his wonderful plans for his children. He is our heavenly Bridegroom, and is soon coming to take his bride, which will be made up of the children who will say: "Lo, this is our God, we have waited for him." Let us search the Scriptures, remembering the promise: "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him." Jas. i. 5.—Emma L. Barnes in Herald of Life.

Getting the Worst.

A boy came to the door of a lady's house and asked if she did not wish some berries, for he had been out all day gathering them.

"Yes," said the lady, "I will take them." So she took the basket and stepped into the house, the boy remaining outside, whistling to some canary birds hanging in their cages on the porch.

"Why don't you come in and see that I measure your berries right?" said the lady; "how do you know but I may cheat you?"

"I am not afraid," said the boy, "for you would get the worst of it."

"Get the worst of it?" said the lady; "what do you mean by that?"

"Why, ma'am," said the boy, "I should only lose my berries, and you would make yourself a thief. Don't [illegible] would be [illegible] worse [illegible]

The boy was right. He who steals, or does anything wrong or mean just to gain a few pence or a few shillings, burdens himself with a sin which is worse than all the gain. Let this be borne in mind; the one who does wrong to another always gets the worst of it.

Evidence.

"For the life was manifested, and we have seen it." 1 John i. 2.

Every faithful Christian life is an evidence of Christianity, and the great need of the world is this kind of evidence. As "the life was manifested" in Christ, and seen, so it should be manifested in his people, and as we go forth the life of Christ should be made manifest in our mortal bodies. This can never be while the self-life rules. If we would be filled with Christ, we must be emptied of self.

We must become living illustrations of our preaching and teaching. There can be no influence for righteousness where men teach one thing, and live another. Neither can there be Christian influence unless the teaching and living is according to Christ.

May the Lord so lead his dear people that each one may be able to say, with Paul, "I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me."—C. F. Ladd.

Well Said.

I'll have nothing of this religion of gush, and mush, and slush, and tush, that counts any faith as good as any other faith, if only it is honestly believed. I believe that fruit depends upon root, that duty is founded in doctrine, and the men who achieve are the men who believe.—Dr. Parker.

"It is the love of self that destroys our peace. While self is alive, we stand ready continually to guard it from mortification and insult; but when we are dead, our life is hid with Christ in God, we shall not take neglects or slights to heart. We shall be deaf to reproach, and blind to scorn and insult. Love suffereth long, and is kind; love envieth not; love vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not its own, is not provoked, taketh not account of evil; rejoiceth not in unrighteousness, but rejoiceth with the truth; beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things. Love never faileth."

Obituary.

Araminta Elizabeth Fullenger Gidding was born in Middleburg, Pa., Aug. 19, 1874. On May 21, 1895 she was united in marriage to Howard Gidding of Lanark, Ill. After marriage they moved to Chicago. About March 1, 1902, in failing health she returned to the home of her parents at Lanark, Ill., where she died on June 23, aged 27 years, 10 months and four days.

'Minta was a fond wife and mother, a true Christian woman. At the age of 13 she dedicated her life to God. To know her was to respect and love her. She leaves one child, Donald, to miss a mother's love and a mother's care. To the husband and son the home is dark and silent, yet they look forward to the time when the dead in Christ shall live again, and where there will be no more death. Words of comforts were spoken to her many friends and relatives by the writer, from 1 Cor. xv. 49, assuring them that although we bear the image of the first Adam now, yet we shall bear the image of the second Adam by and by. Although we live upon the natural plain in a state of mortality and die now, yet we shall at the resurrection live upon the spiritual plain and be clothed with the mantle of immortality. Our sister is waiting till that change shall come. What a blessed hope is this—based upon the promise of God, that the dead shall rise. Well may we sing, even in our sadness and tears.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep;
A calm and undisturbed repose,
Unbroken by the last of foes."

But the trump of God will wake the dead.

A. J. Eychaner.

James H. Moses was born in Lima, N. Y., Feb. 24, 1824. Died at Byron Center, Mich., June 20, 1902, age 78 years, 3 months and 28 days. Married Lois Havens at North East, Pa., June 23, 1846, and by this union there were born to them ten children, William P; George E; James W; Lois A; Albert L; Ada E; Eva C; Wells L; Alma C; Wilber S. His wife and four children preceded him. He died at the home of his eldest son, Wm. P. Moses, and the funeral services were conducted by Elder Robert Gordon, Congregational minister, at the deceased former home, Somersett Centre, Mich. Text was taken from Isaiah xxxv. 10. Songs were, "Nearer My God to Thee;" "Go Bury Thy Sorrow;" "We Shall Sleep but Not Forever."

Illinois Conference Program.

The Fifth Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus, will be held at Oregon, Ill., Aug. 27 to 31, 1902.

Following is an outline of the different sessions, each one of which will be opened by singing, prayer and reading of Scripture.

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 27.

7:30 p m Sermon, A. H. Zilmer, "The Call to God's Kingdom and glory." Rev. v. 10.

THURSDAY, AUG. 28.

10:00 a m Formal opening of Conference, appointment of committees.

10:30 a m Outline study of Revelation continued from last Conference conducted by the President.

It is suggested that every one who proposes attending the conference familiarize themselves with the procession of symbols given from chapters 6 to 17, so they can ask questions.

Outline of the study—Review of the first ten chapters, which were gone over at last conference.

New lesson, Chapter 10. The angel and the book. Symbols—The angel, his personal characteristics, attitude, voice, little book in his hands, eating of the book and consequences, oath of the angel, seven thunders, John to again prophesy to all peoples.

The meaning—Let students read up in advance of the lesson on the origin and history of the Teutonic and Anglo Saxon peoples.

Chapter 11—The angel's measuring rod and things measured; angel's two witnesses, forty and two months, a lesson in prophetic numbers; a study of the symbols employed in conjunction with the two witnesses.

Meaning—Who or what are the witnesses. Study carefully the effects of the restoration of the Bible to the church, its translation into the common every day language of the people and its wide distribution on the church and on the world's moral and material progress.

The seventh trumpet, the kingdom of God, the resurrection and rewarding of the faithful.

Part second.—The seven signs or wonders. This part of the natural division of the symbols introducing a new series begins with chap. xi. 19.

Symbols, the temple, ark, lightning, voices, thunder and earthquakes.

Chap. xii. Symbols, the glorious woman, her characteristics and appearance. The great red dragon, his attitude and characteristics; points of identification, his color, seven heads and ten horns, the man child, the war between Michael and the dragon, defeat and casting out on earth of the dragon, triumph of God's people, the flight of the woman, pursuing floods, help of the earth.

Meaning—Read the history of the church from the first to third centuries to the time of Constantine, especially the character and attitude toward the church of Pagan Rome.

Chap. xiii. The sea monster, points of identification, wounded and healed head, close relation to and similarity to the dragon, blasphemy, its meaning.

The application—Read Church and Roman history, Gibbon's Rise and Fall of the Roman Empire preferred, from Constantine to Charlemagne. Two horned beast and the image of the first beast, its characteristics and points of identification, relation with the first beast, rehabilitation of first beast, miracles, worship, mark in fore head and hands, 666 the mystic number of his name.

Application.—Read history of the Latin and Greek churches and their intimate relation with the revived Roman empire as rehabilitated by the Pope and Charlemagne.

Chap. xvii. This should be studied in connection with the last, giving as it does in another form symbols representing these same two formidable powers designated as the beast and his image. Characteristics and points of identification, symbols, seven heads of the image, ten horns of the dragon and first beast and of the image, ten horns of Daniel's fourth beast, these horns uprooted by the stout blasphemous horn.

Chap. xiv. Symbols, the ram on Mt. Zion and the singing multitude, the 144,000, the gospel angel, Babylon and its doom. Fire and brimstone. The blessed dead. The great harvest.

Chap. xv. The seven last plagues. The multitude on the sea of glass. The seven vials of wrath.

The time allotted to this study will probably be consumed before reaching this point, but if not, the study will be continued to the closing scenes of this great vision of the ages, culminating the study with the closing scene, the great triumph of the righteous and righteousness.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

Poetry.

Hastening Judgment.

Time's sun is fast setting, its twilight is nigh;
Its even'ng is pulling in cloud o'er the sky;
Its shadows are stretching in ominous gloom,
Its midnight approaches—the midnight of doom.

Then hasten, sinner, hasten, there is mercy for thee,
And wrath is preparing—flee, linger not, flee!

Rides forth the fierce tempest on the wing of the cloud,
The moon of the night-hour is lurid and loud,
The mountains are heaving, the forests are bowed,
The ocean is surging, earth gathers its shroud,
The vision is nearing, the Judge and the throne,
The voice of the angel proclaims, "It is done."
On the whirl of the tempest its Ruler shall come,
And the blaze of his glory flash out from its gloom.

With clouds he is coming! His people shall sing,
With gladness they hail him Redeemer and King.
The iron rod wielding, the rod of his ire
He cometh to kindle earth's last fateful fire!

The Church of God, Scholls, Oregon:

Loved ones in Christ Jesus, could I be personally present with you and look into your pleasant, sympathetic faces it would be a pleasure indeed, but to write to you is not so pleasant to me as to talk. My theme shall be, "The Unity of God's people." David expressed this beautiful trait of God's children in words that ought to be framed and hung up in all places where the faithful meet to worship, "Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." It is compared to the fragrant ointment poured upon God's High Priest, and to the dew that descended upon the lofty mountain when God commanded the great blessing—life evermore. And now for a text we will use Eph. iv., Diaglott rendering. After exhorting the church to walk worthy of their high calling by cultivating the Christian graces Paul enjoins upon them to "use all diligence to preserve the unity of the Spirit by the bond of peace," then presents the golden chain composed of seven golden links that were intended to bind in one sweet harmonious band the loved ones in Christ Jesus. But just here let me ask you if you have any among you that use the doleful words, "O we cannot all see alike"? If there be such let them ponder these words sent to the Philippian church.

After Paul had exhorted them to stand fast in the Lord he beseeches them to "be of the same mind in the Lord." And then bids them rejoice always in the Lord with the positive promise that the peace of God should keep their hearts and minds through Christ Jesus. Listen to the words of Peter, "Finally be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another, love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous." Paul to the Roman church commanded them to "be of the same mind one toward another." Peter told his brethren to "arm themselves with the same mind;" and that this would enable them to submit to the will of God. But perhaps some one is ready to ask, "How can we all be of one mind? how can we be so perfectly united?" The rule is given and given so plainly that there is no excuse for not knowing it. Here it is, "Let us walk by the same rule, let us mind the same thing." Phil. iii. 16. Will this keep us straight? Most assuredly and it will effectually banish any little "hobby" that some love so well to ride. Yes, obedience to this rule will leave no time to worry over the destiny of nations that God judged and executed, you will have no time to figure out whether God will secure enough through the apostolic plan of salvation to complete the redemptive scheme, to accomplish his eternal purpose. No, the gospel of the kingdom of God and its attendant requirements will give us all constant employment. But we are told that this course will never advance us, that certain doctrines become stale, that we ought to advance new thoughts. We are commanded to grow in grace (favor) and in the knowledge of the truth, but the popular idea of "advancing" is well illustrated by the Irishman's criticism of erewhile, he declared that "every time that it went forward it surely went backward." Is not this pointedly true of some who once stood firm in the faith, but now are riding some set hobby that has taken the place of the saving truths of the gospel. I think a more pitiable sight would be hard to find than a "religious crank." Webster says a "crank, either imparts or receives motion in machinery," it is a part of the machinery and is really necessary to continue the motion. But not so with the religious crank, he is the whole thing, propelling power, wheels, shafting, work and all. To break this crank has no effect upon the machine. Smash into fragments the religious crank with plain Scripture, and he only runs the faster and makes the more noise.

Now, let us return to the fourth chapter of the Ephesian letter using the Diaglott rendering. Paul's argument in that chapter is designed to show the perfection and completeness of the foundation upon which the child of God is to base his faith. At the 11th verse he gives the elements of this firm foundation of Christian faith and practice. Apostles, prophets, evangelists, shepherds, and teachers. Then at verse 12 the result and purpose of all these teachers fix is expressed in these words, "For the complete qualification of the saints for the work of the service, in order to the building up of the body (church) of the Anointed One," and the grand result of this is stated in the 13th verse, "Till we attain to the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God, to a full grown man, to the measure of the full stature of the Anointed One." Not a condition to be reached in the resurrected state, but now in forming character in full harmony with the law of the Spirit of Life in Christ Jesus. Those who have attained to this exalted position have all submitted to the divine injunction, "Let this mind be in you which was in Christ Jesus." His will has become their will, and each can say "Where he leads I'll follow, follow every day." In that touching earnest prayer of our blessed Master, John xvii., let us note these sweet words touching the unity of God's dear children. "I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one; and that the world may know that thou hast sent me and hast loved them as thou hast loved me."

The writer has recently attended two Conference meetings, one in Michigan, the other in Indiana, where a practical demonstration of the unity of the faith through the bond of love was given, perfect harmony reigned throughout both meetings, as trained soldiers obey the drill master. The workers together with God in these meetings taught the essential truths that pertain to our salvation, and all bore testimony to the fact that a good meeting was enjoyed by all. And now to all who believe on the Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity and in truth let me say in conclusion God has entrusted us with the grandest message ever sent to mortals, let us mutually pledge each other before God that we will faithfully uphold the Word of the kingdom, that we will not shun to declare the counsel of God, that we will sound out the Word of life to the perishing, that we will be loyal to the Master, that the banner of truth shall never by us be trailed in the dust, in the language of the brave, dying Lawrence, "Don't give up the ship." Let us all strive together earnestly for the hope of the gospel. Let us be firm, steadfast, always abounding in the work of the Lord. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen. Yours in the blessed hope.

J. F. WAGONER.

Northwest Conference, Scholls, Oregon:

I have noted with pleasure your meetings from time to time, and I have longed many times to be with you, and help you in your annual meetings. We have a common faith, and hope. True, we differ in many minor opinions, yet in the great principles and doctrines of the Bible we are united.

That man is mortal and that the eternal life of promise comes to us through Jesus the Christ when he shall return; and that his kingdom will finally be set up on earth, giving a right-eous government to earth's inhabitants are primary truths we all recognize.

The Iowa State Conference through one of its officers hereby sends our best wishes and Christian sympathy to the Northwest Conference at Scholls. Our interests are common. We are expecting our King and Redeemer. We are interested in your meeting, and wish you a pleasant time in the ministry and hearing of the Word, and success in all your deliberations for the advancement of the love and cause of Christ. Some of your names are familiar to us, and since we cannot be present with you we want you to feel that we are "present in spirit" and that our prayers ascend in your behalf.

Love one another. Let it be without dissimulation. Be united. If new thoughts spring up, consider them candidly, or as the apostle Paul words the same thought, "Prove all things and hold fast that which is good." We are not all alike and no one man and no one Conference knows all that may be known. So if we should differ when we come together, it is not strange. But love will smoothe up the difference and even "cover a multitude of sins.

There is one thing we ask you to do, viz., appoint some one at the beginning of your meeting, to enroll the name and address of every person who attends; and will you please send us a copy of those names? We feel the need of a little organization of our brethren in all the States for the purpose of reaching them with notices of meetings, and to send them tracts for distribution and papers to read, and we can never be successful until we know each other and where we live. I have been on the Coast twice, and have passed through places where brethren live, but did not know it. The weight of a burdened heart may often be cheered and lightened by a brotherly call and a word of encouragement.

We are living at a time when the spirit of greed—the spirit of mammon is everywhere, and one of the things we must carefully watch is our own hearts. Jesus has said, "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." It is well to call attention often to our conduct in life. What we do affects life fully as much as what we believe.

I see you are to have a communion service. Oh, how we ought to carefully consider this event, and our fitness to partake. We hope all may be imbued with love, peace, confidence and faith in the dear Lord who gave himself for us.

Wishing you again a good and spiritual meeting, knit together in love, looking for the hope of eternal life, I remain your brother in the hope,

A. J. EYCHANER.

To the brethren in Conference assembled, greeting:

This will be my first absence from a Conference meeting since its organization, and now although far away I will be with you in spirit. In my mind I see each familiar face and bring to mind the fellowship and the associations of the past. We cannot too fully appreciate the privilege of meeting with those of like precious faith. Although twenty-five miles distant I appreciate the "little flock" at Oleander and enjoy our mid-monthly meetings. Now, dear brethren, I am in the midst of the apricot drying, and too busy to write much, but let me exhort you to be faithful, and be careful to not allow the things of this world to come between yourself and your God. I see the need of being watchful more than ever in this pleasure-loving and money-loving country. Let us seek to increase our faith, to consecrate ourselves more fully to the cause of Christ, ever remembering that Jesus is soon coming to redeem this groaning creation and to reward the faithful. May you have a profitable meeting and may the Lord be with each one in his Christian walk of life. Pray for me in my new field of labor. May we all meet in God's kingdom to part no more is the prayer of your brother in Christ.

EDWIN E. GROAT.

To the Northwest Conference of the Churches of God, Scholls, Oregon:

The Church of God at Wenatchee sends greeting. Another year has gone, another Conference is at hand: and the Lord still tarries; notwithstanding the signs are thickening on every hand: all pointing to that grand culminating event of the age. Serious questions and problems confront us upon every hand. Our lives while they have fallen in pleasant places, have fallen in grand and moving times. When the secular press take note of and mention these things, it indicates that it is not simply a preachers' scare. I pin a note from the Tribune of Minneapolis, in order to show how that all nature seems to conspire together to cause men's hearts to fail them for fear and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth.

A MONTH OF DISASTERS.

The month of May, 1902, will go down in history as a month of tragedies. It opened with a tornado at Deeca, India, which ruined the crops of a large section of country and caused the death of 416 people. Just one week later came the eruptions on the islands of Martinique and St. Vincent, which destroyed the city of St. Pierre, devastated a large part of both islands and killed 30,000 people. A few days after news was received of the loss of the British India liner Camorta, which carried 650 passengers.

—May 18 a tornado in Texas killed from 50 to 100. The next day from 150 to 300 lives were lost by a mine explosion at Coal Creek, Tennessee. May 23 destructive floods visited the northeastern portion of Iowa, and 134 men were buried in a mine at Fernie, British Columbia. The next day severe and destructive storms swept over portions of Illinois, Nebraska, Missouri and Kansas. These are only the greatest of a series of natural calamities which occurred in the single month of May—a month in which heaven and earth usually seem in tune, and mild, beautiful days may be expected.

The disasters of the five months of the year, 1902, which seemed to reach their culminating point last month, present an appalling record. It is estimated that nature's elemental disturbances—storms, cyclones, earthquakes, volcanic eruptions, floods, avalanches, tidal waves and waterspouts, combined with mine explosions, fires, wrecks at sea, etc., since the beginning of the present year, have destroyed 100,000 lives. That human unrest has kept pace with the unrest of nature is attested by numerous strikes and outbreaks of mob violence."

In view of all this it behooves us to wake up, if we have been asleep, and it awake to redouble our diligence, for the Master is at the door, and he has commanded the porter to watch. Watch ye, therefore. Now, why watch? Who of us that have been on the watchtower that have not noticed the awful apostasy of these latter days—the widespread spirit of doubt and unbelief that has crept into the so-called orthodox churches, and even the Church of God does not seem to escape the old doctrine of the devil, "Ye shall not surely die," (forever), the peace and safety cry, "all will be saved" In contradiction to the plain words of our blessed Master, with reference to life, "Few there be that find it." Luke xiii. 23; Matt. vii. 13, 14. Men seem to grasp and to roll as a sweet morsel under their tongues. Why? Because it is so enticing, so subtle, so dangerous and damning, for it makes our Lord a liar. Oh, how sad our hearts have been made to be compelled to witness the loss of some of the choice of the flock.

The Scriptures foretold these very days, when they declared that, "The spirit speaketh expressly that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils." I Tim. iv. 1. But what is the remedy? A closer walk with God and the dropping of the doctrines and commandments of men in the shape of unsound literature and sticking closer to the text of the Scripture, less speculation and false reasoning, and more of the "thus saith the Lord;" more prayer and less reliance on self, but rely on the Lord; these are the remedies with watchfulness.

May God bless the efforts of the Conference for good, and may his blessing attend each individual participant, and the choice of an evangelist for the coming year is the prayer of the Church. Your humble servant in the Lord.

WALKER PERRINE.

To the Church of God in Oregon, greeting:

I am requested by the brethren to write a short article to be read at the Conference assembled at Scholls. Perhaps just at present there is nothing of more importance to be attended to than organization. We as a people have made but little progress in our work. What is the cause? One of the main reasons is lack of system or order, or next to none. The early church was a well-regulated institution. Paul left Timothy down in Crete to "set things in order." He would not have considered it a part of the church work, if it had not been necessary. There were other human organizations established then as now, and the apostles found it necessary to set the Church of God in good order, and give it a name, which they did, ordaining elders in every church or city, Titus i. 5, and gave command concerning what the bishops, elders, deacons, etc., should be, and what their duties were. Our Conferences are made up of the members of the several churches, how necessary then to have well organized churches, and then a thoroughly organized Conference, with its declaration of principles and constitution, which should be read in open Conference at least once a year, that all may thoroughly understand what we believe, and the Conference board should always know what their evangelists and ministers are preaching. The organized church is the proper guardian of the faith, for says the apostle, "The Church is the pillar and ground of the truth." 1 Tim. iii. 15. It means much to know how to behave ourselves in the "Church of God." The church should have a well defined system of finance. This hap-hazard way of supporting the gospel is very unsatisfactory, as has been proven so often in the past, just do a little when we feel like it, give if we happen to have anything. Is not that almost an insult to the Lord? Even with the law period they gave a tenth, cannot we do as much as that? If we all did that, brethren, there would not be so many empty church treasuries, homes without church paper, churches without pastors, souls without any spiritual life; for there always comes a joy and a blessing when we know we are "going shares" with our dear Father, who gave the command to his people, "Bring your tithes and offerings, and I will pour you out a blessing," etc. Mal. iii. 10. The quicker we as a people learn that Christianity is a business, the more successful we shall be. Every member, young and old, should feel and understand that the Lord expects something at their hands to prove their love and loyalty to his cause. Not only talent but a part of their income, and whatever belongs to the Lord remember should be as promptly and willingly met as a store bill, doctor or blacksmith bill. We are the Lord's stewards, some day he will require of us what belongs to him with usury or interest. Your evangelist leaves his home, wife and babies, all personal interests, and home comforts to tell the good old story to a perishing world. Is he having the proper support? Do you consider the sacrifices he is making and remember his necessities? Or are you happy and comfortable around your own firesides and selfishly forget your duties to him and God's truth. Brethren, do you know there may be many good speakers, pastors, but very few successful evangelists. People are perishing all around you for lack of knowledge. Place your churches and Conferences in as good order as possible, and you will find more means ready, a more ready and willing help from every quarter of the State. Order is heaven's first law, let us fall in line as quickly as possible. All organize with the same name, speak the same things, and receive God's approving smile. Please God and we will be happy and prosperous spiritually. May the good Father direct you in every deliberation during this Conference meeting, be patient with each other, be loving, and the God of all peace be with you is the prayer of two who would love to meet with you at this time.

The Restitution.

The Restitution advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

The Bereans Column.

[Under this heading the society of "Bereans" of Illinois, will supply the copy, and endeavor to fill the space once a month.]

The Annual Conference of Illinois will be held at Oregon, Aug. 27-31. We hope all Bereans will make an effort to be present. Let us have a good attendance this year. Come prepared with plans for next year's work. We need your help in furthering the cause of the Master. A cordial invitation is extended to all young people in this and other States to meet with us. We have prepared the following programme. Please study the topics that you may take part in the services.

Friday, Aug. 29, 7:00 P. M. social meeting. "Searching the Scripture," Acts xvii. 11. Leader Fred Knoodle.

Saturday 9:00 P. M. Business meeting.

7:00 P. M. Social meeting, "Follow thou me." 1 Peter ii. 21. Leader Almeda Mitchell, Lanark.

Sunday 2:00 P. M. Temperance." Leader Leila Whitehead, Chicago. Under this lesson the following topics will be taken up: Wine is a mocker, Jessie Wilson; Proverbs xxiii. 21, 31, 31, Emma Lindsay; The pledge—the effect of signing it, upon myself and my neighbor, Charles Lindsay, Edna Anderson; Am I my brother's keeper? Miss Knodle; Drunkards shall not inherit the kingdom of God. Why not? Charles Anderson, Mary Aslaksen; A clean man, Edwin T. Benner; Present your bodies a living sacrifice, Fred Knodle, Anna Drew; Summary of lesson, Leila Whitehead.

Sunday, June 22nd was a day of great rejoicing for the Chicago church and the Chicago Bereans. Five were led into the waters of baptism, arising to newness of life: Edna Anderson, of Batavia; Anna Suerz, Anna Aslaksen, Emma Aslaksen and Ruth Aslaksen of Chicago. May our dear sisters keep ever before them the image of the Master, whose name they have taken, and may we all meet in the kingdom of God.

But mingled with our joy was a great sorrow for news was brought to us that the beloved wife of Bro. Giddings was dying. They laid her to rest during the week, there to await the summons of her Savior. The heartfelt sympathy of all the Bereans is extended to our brother in his affliction, but we have the comforting thought that all that sleep in Christ shall awake.

We hope to have our pin, the Berean pin, ready by Conference time. They cost about twenty-five cents. Let each Berean come prepared to buy and wear a pin.

If you are anxious about the well-being of some friend and would like to have him see and embrace the truth, subscribe for this paper to be sent to him. It will talk at times and places that you cant. It may make opportunity for you to say a word that will make you friend a joint-heir with the Lord Jesus Christ. It has been done. Why not try it?

The Restitution.

Passing Events In the Light of Prophecy.

We invite the attention of our readers to a remarkable article from the Pall Mall Gazette, and reprinted in Glad Tidings, being assured that every watcher for the morning will take a deep interest in it:—

"In those interesting, but little known rooms of the Palestine Exploration Fund in Conduit Street, London, there is a beautiful scale model of the Holy Land. Spread out beneath one's view, as one might imagine it from some tremendous elevation, its mountains and valleys, its gorges, and ravines, in endless miniature detail afford as much interest to the political as to the Biblical student who is anxious to obtain a more accurate acquaintance with its terrain than is possible from the best chart that was ever designed. Marked by little red squares the geographical and strategical situation of city and stronghold, and town which have figured in its annals, ever so minutely, is brought into vivid and striking relief. One of these days, when the political rivalries which are concentrating themselves upon this theatre of the greatest dramas have reached their destined consummation, it may be that these little frequented quarters of the Palestine Society will attract a more universal attention than hitherto. But to those whose studies or a long sojourn in the near East have revealed some of its inner problems, this eloquent and interesting exhibit of the Society will always make a forcible appeal. It was here that not long ago I encountered one who is a prominent Jewish inhabitant of Jerusalem at the present time. Deeply interested in all that related to the repatriation of his race, he referred with some anxiety to the large development of in the patrimony of Jacob. But his deepest concern was touching the action of Russia, who for many years had pursued a policy of ceaseless if secret energy in the extension of her influence in all parts of the land.

ON HILL OR DALE

"I put it to you," he said, "whether it is nothing more than a singular coincidence that for a long time she has been setting herself to acquire by lease or private contract all those spots which the military genius of former days has marked by stronghold and fortress. "Why," he pursued with increasing vehemence, "does Russia give our people no rest? By torture and oppression she has driven us from our own land, while she advances with determined greed upon the only refuge which in the fulness of time seems to be marked out for the children of

THE CHOSEN SEED.

Her apparent resolve to establish herself as the paramount power in the ancient land of Israel is today the greatest menace to the hopes of every Jew for the future of his race. Palestine, under the quiescent rule of the Turk, had always the appearance of merely waiting for the day of restoration. But in the clutches of a virile despotism like Russia, which has already evinced such desperate hospitality to the chosen people, the fulfilment of these hopes would seem to be indefinitely postponed. "Nevertheless," he continued with pious emphasis, we hold to our faith in the God of our Father that the oppressor shall not greatly triumph. FOR, IT IS WRITTEN IN OUR PROPHETIC BOOKS OF HIM THAT HE SHALL FALL ON THE MOUNTAINS OF ISRAEL. To this promise we cling; and whether all say the day does not draw nigh?"

"Thus the Jew. Now for my own experiences of Russian effort in Palestine, which form an interesting supplement to what has gone before. It was a few years back, when the Greek and Latin Easters coinciding had assembled in Jerusalem a vast concourse of pilgrims from the Greek and Latin communities. The Church of the Holy Sepulchre on Easter day was packed from wall to wall with a frowsy, half-frenzied, half-hysterical multitude, who, for many days of weary journeying, had been eagerly anticipating this moment, when so their priests had taught—is brought from heaven by the Archangel Michael. The lighting of candle or taper at this flame is an assurance of salvation, and to be foremost in securing this passport to Paradise the rival seeds, of which again each member is for the moment an individual competitor, will FIGHT TO THE DEATH.

As the supreme moment neared, the excitement intensified. Suddenly the apparitions of a flame in the darkened shrine was the signal for a furious outburst. All who were not foremost strove to press to the front, reckless of their lives or those about them. Many went to the ground never to rise again, while the placed there to maintain some semblance of order, flinging up the butts of their rifles, brought them down with sickening thuds on heads, necks and shoulders in their efforts to beat back the maddened and fanatical multitude. It was an orgy of superstition, and its explanation was even stranger than its occurrence. The presiding Greek ecclesiastic, an educated and highly intelligent man, was personally known to one of my friends, who afterwards sought him out and asked how such a one as he could lend himself to so fearful imposture. With singular frankness he at once acknowledged it to be what his English friend described it, but declared that its maintenance was involved in such high that it could never be discontinued. "Not only," he averred, "would its abolition strike an irreparable blow at the orthodox church; it would even shake the throne of the Czar. You may find it difficult to credit me," he said, "but such nevertheless is the case." What every son of Russia is taught to cherish as his dearest hope is that one day in this church of the Holy Sepulchre, in the city of the Lord, the Czar of all the Russias shall crown himself king of Jerusalem and the East, whence he will send forth a proclamation to all nations and languages calling for the abolition of armaments and the inauguration of universal peace. It is to foster and maintain this popular superstition in the semi-divine destiny of the White Czar that these Easter pilgrims are promoted and encouraged by the Russian government, and the Orthodox Society of Palestine, which defrays all but a moiety of the expense, so that it is possible for a peasant to proceed from any part of Russia at a private outlay of not more than five pounds. The elaborate vestments and costly ceremonial maintained in the great church at Jerusalem are a constant charge on the Russian royal family, and any diminution of popular fanaticism in this direction would be regarded as nothing short of a political disaster. Russian politics often betray a strong alliance between the severely practical and superstitious. But any one sufficiently familiar with her political and religious propaganda will entertain few doubts as to the ultimate subservience of the sentimental impulse to the purposes of unswerving ambitions. Russians, again, are frequently strangely frank as to their political aims and aspirations, and I shall not easily forget the confident assurance with which the Greek priest at Jerusalem drew the attention of my friend to a throne and footstool placed in close proximity to the shrine where the holy fire had been displayed. These, upon which were carved the Russian eagle and arms, he declared were retained there in waiting for the final day of Russian triumph. Other singular evidences of Russian activity are not wanting. It is well known that the great Russian monastery, occupying a dominant position in Jerusalem is little else than a strong place of arms in disguise, to which munitions of war are constantly brought in small and unobtrusive quantities. A few years back, one of the grand dukes inaugurated with much imposing ceremony a church upon the Mount of Olives, the most notable feature of which is a tower of singular disproportionate elevation. From the summit, however, men say it is possible to signal as far as the Mediterranean. The astonishment which greeted the famous peace manifesto of the Czar is still within our recollection. But few have ever realized the hidden motives which prompted so singular a move by the greatest aggressive power in the world. It reached the ears of Russian statesmen that the Kaiser, with an eye to a highly dramatic coup de theatre, designed during his then approaching visit to the Holy Land to embody in an address from the Mount of Olives this identical message of peace and disarmament. Such usurpation of the destiny of the Czars would have struck a serious blow at the political religion of the Russian people, and had to be checkmated at all costs. Accordingly, the Kaiser was forestalled, and the

POLITICAL CONSIDERATIONS

for a season of perpetual peace and good will until the stage properties of this international farce were relegated to the political lumber-room and the world continued its more practical work of arming to the teeth. "Onward to the golden south," has been the watchword of Russia's politics for many a generation, and as the Russian press never tires of reminding its readers, at no point on her long southern border line, are her aspirations and ambitions concentrated in such force as upon the road which leads southward to the land of promise."

Some faithful watcher for the morning has mailed to us an article written by Wm. E. Curtis and published in Chicago Record-Herald, of July 8, giving a vivid account of the condition of the power which has so long been treading down Jerusalem. That gentleman writes as if thoroughly convinced that the Turkish Crisis is near. If the editor can find room for it, it will enable our readers to see by what process the great God is employing to evaporate the power that stands in the way of the kings from the East, not the Czar of Russia:—

I have just received the following graphic description of affairs in Turkey from an American gentleman who has resided there eighteen years and is familiar with every part of the country. The recent cable dispatches concerning revolutionary uprisings in Macedonia and other parts of Turkey and complications with France make the information unusually timely and interesting. He says:

"The state of the Turkish Empire morally, socially, financially and politically betokens the coming of a night of anguish. In every department of government the amount of shameless iniquity is appalling. Simony and bribery, treachery and extortion, always present but once wont to hide themselves, have lost all shame and fear of rebuke and are hideous in their ramifications. Socially the situation everywhere is dismal. You read of the riot and bloodshed in Albania, in Montenegro, along the frontiers of Bulgaria, and the more recent outrages and bloodshed in Armenia.

"Things are not quite so bad in Syria, though they are on the way to it. During the last four years a certain type of emissaries from Constantinople have sown seeds of bitterness among the Moslems and Christians until their relations to each other are marked with unusual hostility, suspicion and open bloodshed. Even in Beirut, one of the most peaceful and progressive cities in the empire, an active vendetta is in progress, and almost nightly men are murdered. No one is punished. No one's life is safe. It would seem as though the very foundations had fallen out of the social fabric.

"I can give in brief the reasons why this awful state of affairs will continue: First, the corruption of the courts, in which all crimes are condoned for money. The sole ambition of the unpaid officials after the collection of the exhorbitant taxes is to get a hold upon citizens of every degree, and by means of charges false or true extort money from them. I have been living in Syria over eighteen years and have yet to hear the innocence or guilt of a prisoner or criminal dwelt upon. The officials apparently exult in the increase of crime, caring only for the bribes and gifts resulting therefrom, while the wretched people caught seek only for a way by which they can get free from the clutches of these minions of the law. No one ever places any moral weight on the judgments delivered, for in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred they are worse than worthless. I am measuring my words and know whereof I am speaking.

"The second fruitful cause is the centralization of absolute power in Constantinople and the treacherous subversion of every vestige of civil rights ever enjoyed by the people. The present Sultan years ago instituted a policy by which he was to become the absolute master of everything in the empire. The military establishment in its six great departments takes its orders directly from Abdul Hamid. The civil affairs are supposed to be administered through the Wilayats (some thirty-five in all). In former times the chief officials, civil and military, were almost absolute within their departments, and are still so in theory, but in recent years the Sultan has by an invidious system of imperial ukases or edicts filched away every privilege and prerogative of these provincial officials. Constantinople has become a huge auction mart, where every position in the empire is bought and sold for a price.

"Worse than this is the ominous fact that the high provincial officials who once had the power to punish or remove a disobedient or unworthy subordinate are now powerless to effect any reform. When an official falls under their displeasure or judgment the matter must be referred to Constantinople. The delinquent hurries off to the capital and in most cases returns with an imperial rescript in his hand confirming him in his position and enabling him to defy courts and judgments, officials and public opinion. By this process the Sultan has insidiously undermined and completely overthrown the legitimate form of government and replaced it by a set of spies iniquitous and despicable beyond degree. The despotic master and the irresponsible palace clique, which has displaced the real government at Constantinople, have now extended their abominable practices and travesty of injustice to the ends of the empire. As a result the good men are disheartened and leaving the empire by thousands. Every one who even expresses dissatisfaction with the present regime or sighs for reform and change for the better is instantly branded as one of the young Turkish party and treated as a felon. So the empire has fallen into the hands of the worst elements, parasites and sycophants, who are mocking and baffling each other, in every department, while the common people are trampled under foot.

"The third cause of corruption and lawlessness is, if possible, [illegible] Immediately after the massacres in Armenia and Constantinople there were thousands of soldiers and officials whose hands were dyed with innocent human blood and whose pockets and houses were filled with the accursed plunder which they were allowed to take as their reward. Fearing at that time that the powers might seek the punishment of these red-handed murderers, the Sultan began a wholesale shifting of them to all parts of the empire. So that in Syria we have thousands of these brutes who participated in the killing of 100,000 Armenians. No one was ever punished. No one was even rebuked. Europe in her pitiful jealousies failed to exact punishment from anyone. In a little time the Sultan and all his miserable crew came to glory in the colossal crime. But retribution is coming. The Albanians and the Kurds, after such orgies of lawlessness and bloodshed, rapine and plunder, could never be expected to lapse into law-abiding citizens of any empire, and so they are completely out of hand, and at this moment shaking off the last shadow of control from Constantinople, and parts of the empire which were once safe and law-abiding are now preyed upon by treacherous spies and men whose sense of decency and justice was forever blotted out by their awful acts in Armenia. So neither Europe nor the world need express any surprise as the hand of God rolls up the storm clouds of retribution and smites this empire with the awful agonies of the coming night."

We call attention to the different Conference Programmes that are arranged for the meetings next month. There are many good things at each that will be well worth an effort to hear, and we trust that the attendance will be good. There is one thing, however, that is noticeable, and that is the tendency to "liberality" that is manifested at times. A false conception of this term may cause trouble in our Church as in others. Brother Woodward says often, "It is a fine thing to be a Christian." The lines are closely drawn, and in the whole range of gospel teaching and work and duty there is a tightness that admits of no large realm for "liberal thinkers." Rather the reverse is true. While it may be well for strong minds to "investigate" and "discuss"—"look into" and elucidate" many subjects, it is a question for grave consideration just how far this can safely be carried with safety to all. It appears to us far better to keep at our work of preaching the truths of the gospel of the kingdom and the things of the name of Jesus Christ, and so try and hold what members we have, and gain the ear of some others, than to go into all sorts of speculation on various subjects, and in place of settling and establishing the weaker ones, thereby the reverse is the case, and we soon have loss in place of gain by our meetings. A meeting better never be held than that the confidence and faith of even one be shaken by hearing some topic discussed that is a hobby with some one who pushes it hard on the attention of his hearers. When we take into our midst and give a prominent place to an "outsider"—one of some other denomination and faith—and he is given the opportunity to preach his peculiar doctrine, that is foreign to what our Church holds, we should be very certain that we have some of our faith there who can at once present the opposite in such effective manner as to counteract the influence of the false, and so get good, (if it be possible to get good) from the evil. This is written that the innocent may be warned in time, and not be drawn in by designing persons who seek opportunity such as is offered by a camp meeting to further their pernicious doctrines. We trust where such are found that the solid sober element will predominate, and crush out the error and bring to view the truth as it is in Jesus.

As there are five Wednesdays in this month, our next issue will be dated Aug. 6th.

A LETTER from Bro. John Foore of Parsons, Kansas, dated July 20, 1902 wishes us to state in answer to numerous letters he has received, that he will not attend the Kansas-Missouri Conference to be held at Kansas City, Kansas next month. Any one wishing to know the reason can write him for information.

A Liberal Response.

It is but a short time since I announced my intention of making an extended evangelical trip, yet since then, desires for my services have been received from Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Wisconsin, Kansas, Nebraska, Virginia, and other places. Enquiries are made with regard to expenses. My earnest desire is to make the expense as small as possible. I propose to do it in this way. To illustrate: I am called to the State of Ohio. Now between Chicago and Ohio there are quite a number of churches, through Indiana and parts of Michigan which may be reached along the route. Now if the railroad expense along the route was shared by each place I may stop at the expense of the trip to Ohio would be so small at each place that it would not hardly be felt, and if extended into to New York State they would also receive the benefit of united expense. The same may be said of between Chicago, Kansas, Nebraska and other places west. And north up into Wisconsin, and south through the Southern States. I should be pleased to receive response along these various routes. I make no charges for services, but thankfully accept what free will offering each place can afford to make, for the support of my family while I am working in the Master's vineyard.

My heart is cheered by your hearty response, and your kind words, expressions of confidence and good will I receive. I tell you it is my experience, when the blessed hope takes hold upon the heart, it makes the brotherhood love each other, and they are willing to sacrifice something that others may be blessed as well as you are. I have no need to urge you to send in responses along these different routes named. The personal love and interest you have in our coming King, and your love for perishing humanity wont let you withhold a response. I believe they are sure to come. That is the confidence I have in you, and I have no reason to fear a disappointment. I am anticipating much pleasure in meeting you face to face, and we will take sweet counsel together.

W. H. WILSON.

Report of the Association of Believers.

The Association was held in connection with the North West Conference. The business meeting was called to order June 21st, at three o'clock, the President in the chair. After the usual routine of business the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, C. K. Schreiteizer; Secretary, Almira Brooks; Treasurer W. W. Jaquith; Vice President, S. B. Lawrence, Sr.; Evangelist, W. L. Skeels. Secretary reported thirty dollars on hand not handed over to Treasurer. Bro. W. L. Skeels and others made a few remarks, the burden of which was ways and means of getting more workers in the field. Afterwards a motion was made and carried that the Secretary should have power to appoint a finance committee in each church. Below is the report of Evangelist Skeels.

ALMIRA BROOKS, Sec.

EVANGELIST'S REPORT.

During the Conference year beginning June 21, 1901 and ending June 20, 1902, your evangelist did the following work. Sermons preached 90. Number of meetings attended 118. Number of days charged to work 115. Received in donations handed to me directly $151.60. Orders on Association of believers $71.05. Total $222.65. Due for time $172.50. Due for expense $49.55. Total $222.65.

Much more labor and patience seemed necessary to win converts during the last year than in the past years; and although your evangelist has labored as earnestly to win to Christ and to teach the gospel of the kingdom as definitely, many who were ready to acknowledge that it is truth have shown an unwillingness to yield obedience. Four were immersed, of whom two responded during Brother and Sister Woodward's work. The most successful results attended my meetings at Tucoma where some twenty were added to Church; including good talent and much zeal, as three of the additions have talent as public teachers of the gospel, and were formerly ministers. Other communities and churches expressed themselves as encouraged and built up in the faith. Conference should make an effort to have our talent more evenly distributed among the churches as the churches greatly need workers.

Respectfully submitted.

W. L. SKEELS.

Schedule Too Slow.

In a recent interview General Passenger Agent E. A. Ford, of the Pennsylvania Lines, predicted the establishment of 18-hour trains between Chicago and New York. When the time between those points was reduced to 24 hours several years ago, it established a speed record which attracted considerable attention. A further reduction of the time to 20 hours when the Pennsylvania Special was placed in service about a month ago inaugurated a new era in rapid transit, and the experience in handling the 20-hour trains during the past thirty days has demonstrated that 18-hour trains between Chicago and New York are not only a possibility, but that the time can be cut to 16 hours on the Pennsylvania Lines, if necessary. This will be taking one-third off the 24-hour run considered remarkable only a few years ago, which indicates a marvelous development in track construction and motive power, as well as in equipment and the careful and safe handling of high speed trains, all of which are closely studied by the Pennsylvania officials and contribute to the recognized greatness of that system.

Mr. Ford's prediction was no doubt based on his knowledge of the time the Pennsylvania Special can easily make when required to cover delays and keep within its schedule. A few days since this train made the run from Alliance to Pittsburgh, eighty-three and two-tenths miles, in exactly one hour and thirty minutes, an average of fifty-five and three-tenths miles per hour for the entire distance.

The fact that during the run from Alliance to Pittsburgh the train encountered a number of up-grades and slow orders, conditions which would offset any obstacles on other portions of the route, indicates that the Pennsylvania can put on something better than 18-hour trains between Chicago and New York, and keep within the schedule without any particular preparation or effort. It is a common thing for the Pennsylvania Special to glide along at an average speed of a mile a minute. On its recent run from Alliance it made over a mile and a third a minute for quite a distance, and there was no apparent strain on the motive power, while the passengers did not realize the remarkably swift ride they were experiencing, as the train glided along without causing them any discomfort or attracting attention to the fact that they were being carried at an unusually high rate of speed.

Please look over your account and if you owe us we will be thankful if a renewal is sent at once.

Poetry.

Gog.—Ezek xxxviii. and xxxix.

The "King of the North," like Assyria of old
Will come down like a wolf on the sheep in the fold;
The people at rest from the nations made free,
As they peacefully rest by their Galilee.
"The mountains of Israel have been always waste,"
But they "dwell safely" in them, hither come without haste.
He hath promised to "feed them," in green pastures to lie,
In the land of their fathers, the still waters by.

But see, there a host like a dark cloud appears,
"Horse and horsemen" in armor with buckler and spears;
Like the bright flash of lightning, the fire from the gun,
Like the deep boom of thunder, the fight has begun.
Mighty army of nations from North, East, and West,
Bent on evil and spoil of the people at rest—
Dwelling safely in hamlet, and vineyard, and town,
'Till thou like a scourge from the North parts come down.

But thou, Mighty Gog, great in people and race;
The "Lord God with fury come up in his face,"
With power the Almighty foils from earth to shake,
Lofty mountains thrown down and all nature to quake.
Ah! behold what a sight, see that dark gathered host,
The bright shields and gay banners that were their vain boast;
How slight to protect them from hailstones and fire,
For the Lord hath come forth in the pomp of his ire.

Ah! proud Prince! great rollosus! what, now is the fate
Of thy legions, less numerous who find all too late—
That to strive with the Maker of earth, sea, and air,
Is to tempt the destruction all sinners must share.
In the mountains of Israel thy bands are laid low,
"One sixth" only left thee to northland to go,
And the Lord in his mercy and wisdom will show
To the heathen of nations, he reigns now below.

There is a Good Time Coming.

The world has ever dreamed of a good time coming. They cry that there are better days ahead. The world is flooded with schemes and plans of human devising, which they feel assured will bring better days. Multitudes of organizations are formed which center around certain principles, which may seem fair to look at, but will never bear fruit.

But beloved, there is a good time coming which cannot fail in its purpose to "bless all nations." This plan can never fail, because it has its origin in the kind heart of a beneficent Father, who loves as more than tongue can tell. It is his plan to "bless all nations" through his divinely appointed agents—Abraham and his seed.

It would be much more satisfactory if the world was acquainted with this plan, and worked together in harmony with it. This plan can never fail. When I sometimes reflect upon things I feel impatient at being restrained and limited in my field of operations in proclaiming the glad tidings of God's plan to the people. I have at least decided to make an attempt to occupy a larger field. Of course success will largely depend upon the hearty co-operation of the household of faith scattered abroad, in making it possible for me to visit your several localities, and proclaim God's plan concerning the good time coming.

I feel hopeful and encouraged, because I cannot see any reason why your heart is not burdened for the perishing as well as mine, and that you must be as willing to make sacrifices for the good of others as I am. I also believe that you are interested in having the people in your locality know the joyful sound, and feed upon the bread of life.

A brother in Christ has written for me to come to Kansas and visit his locality, although he says he is totally deaf, and cannot hear a word.

The divine plan occupies a much wider scope than any human plan can do. It is his plan to unstop the ears of the deaf, and cause the dumb to sing, the blind to see, the lame to leap, and that the inhabitants shall no more say, I am sick. In the good time coming our deaf brother shall have his hearing restored, and God will further bless him with fulness of joy. God is good. His heart is large enough to fill us with blessings to the fullness of our capacity.

In the midst of life's conflicts, trials and cares, the benign influence of the blessed hope acts as a healing balm. A sight by faith of the glories of the coming age, thrill through and through the heart of the believer with rapturous joy. The glad news greets the ear like music of an angelic sweetness, and the heart in response sings for joy.

The blessed hope may be compared to the glorious orb of day, while a passing cloud may for the time being hide its glory, but the cloud will pass, and it will once more smile upon all nature. It is even so with our glorious hope, and with the poet we respond:

"Hail sacred hope, which tunes our hearts to harmony divine."

Then let us not be dazzled with earthly hopes, plans and aspirations, for they will pass away like a dream of the night, but if we follow the leadings of the "Bright and Morning Star," we shall experience the blessings of the good time coming, and dwell in an age of peace, and a clime without a cloud.

The Foundation Rock.

In Matt. xvi. 15, we have a question by the Master to his disciples, "He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am? And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ the Son of the living God. And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-Jona; for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven. And I say unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church: and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

Now the question for us is what is the Rock here referred to? Is it Peter, or is it the faith confessed by Peter in Jesus as "the Christ, the Son of the living God?"

We believe the Rock is the faith confessed by Peter, and for the following reasons. First because the context, before and after, shows that who Jesus was, not who or what Peter was, was the subject matter of the conversation. And second, because Peter was not enlightened enough to make a good and solid foundation, for in verse 23 of the same chapter the Lord said to Peter, "Get thee behind me, satan; for thou art an offence unto me; for thou savourest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men." We may also mention that poor Peter denied his Master when before Pilate: and that he cursed and swore that he knew not the man. And Paul testifies that he withstood Peter to the face, because he was to be blamed. But the faith confessed by Peter that Jesus was "the Christ, the Son of the living God." This is the impregnable Rock of true Christianity: not that he is the very God; but the Son of God. Hear the decree:—"Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee." Psa. ii. 7. But God has many sons: for Paul testifies that "It became him, for whom are all things, ... in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the Captain of their salvation perfect through suffering." The many sons spoken of were begotten with the Word of truth, James i. 18. But this Captain of the sons of the Deity, is "the only begotten Son of God." That is as revealed to Mary, by the angel which said, "The Holy Spirit shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee; therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God," Luke i. 35. And at his baptism by John in Jordan; the Father by a voice from heaven, said, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased," Matt. iii. 17, and it is written "Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things that he suffered." Heb. v. 8. Where Moses failed when he said, "Shall we bring water out of this rock," here Christ's humility, and honesty of character stands out in its purity; he confessed, "I can of my own self do nothing, it is the Father that doeth the works."

In temptation he did not fall like David, who caused the enemies of the Lord to blaspheme; but this obedient Son when tempted by the devil, so wielded the Sword of the Spirit, that he soon put the adversary to flight, thus coming off victorious over the world, the flesh, and the devil. And because of his obedience, and his spotless character, the Father has given him to have life in himself, and "He that hath the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son hath not life."

Brethren, the knowledge of the riches that is in Christ has spoiled us for the enjoyment of the things of this world, its politics, and the crowning of its kings we have no relish for. We wait for the coronation of the King of kings, who is alive forever more.

We pray, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as in heaven." Soon may it be.

Report.

Editor Restitution:

I send you the report of the North-West Conference of the Church of God held at Schulls, Ore., June 20, 21, and 22, 1902.

We started our meetings on Friday at 8:00 p m. Brother W. L. Skeels preached. Saturday at 11:00 a m preaching by Brother Sylvester Wilkins of Tacoma. 2:30 p m Business meeting, and at 8:00 p m preaching by Brother Wilkins. Sunday 10:00 a m Social Meeting. 11:00 a m Brother Skeels preached. We went from here to the water where one Sister was baptized, after which we had a basket dinner. At 3:00 p m preaching by W. A. Prosser of Schulls, Ore., and at night by Sister C. L. Hicklin, of Corvallis, Ore.

Much good was done for the churches throughout this Conference and for the cause of Christ.

Letters were received from Bros. Edwin Groat; Walker Perrine; Richard Corbaley; A. J. Eychaner; J. F. Wagoner; John Foore and Brother and Sister Woodward.

The Business Meeting was called to order by President P. G. Woolf, of Vancouver, Wash., and was opened by prayer and song. The minutes of last meeting were read and approved. Reading of letters from Brother and Sister Woodward, J. W. Sutton and Richard Corbaly. Then came the election of officers. P. G. Woolf was re-elected President, E. W. Knapp Vice President, W. J. Byham Secretary, and W. W. Jaquith, Treasurer. On motion of W. A. Prosser a committee of three was appointed to draft articles of faith. The committee appointed was W. A. Prosser, Sylvester Wilkins and E. W. Knapp. On motion a committee was appointed to draft some system for a delegate conference. The committee was W. J. Byham, W. L. Skeels, and Samuel Lawrence.

The following resolution was offered and laid over until next conference and the secretary was instructed to have them printed and send one to the different members of our conference.

RESOLUTION.

This Conference believes in and advocates through its preachers, "The restitution of all things which God has spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end, the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations.

The restoration of Israel. The literal resurrection of the dead. The immortalization of the righteous and final destruction of the wicked. Eternal life only through Christ. The Bible as the Word of God, and from its blessed pages we derive our only rule of faith and practice. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins. Pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

MEMBERSHIP.

Any baptized believer of the gospel, in good standing may become a member of this Conference by personal application to the Secretary of this Conference at any annual meeting. The Conference may receive such applicants as members by a majority vote. Every member of this Conference shall have the right to vote upon every question that may come before it.

Resolved:—That we favor a system by which all the churches may be represented by delegates in an equal manner with the members of churches where conferences convene, and that churches be invited to send delegates and provisions be made for rules of action at our next conference if the churches comply with such call.

The Conference voted letters of recommendation to W. A. Prosser, W. L. Skeels, E. E. Groat and Walker Perrine.

Conference voted to have all letters printed in The Restitution.

W. J. Byham, Sec'y.

Dear Restitution:

I am sending you a clipping from a Methodist paper. The article, "Is the end drawing near?" proves that our friends in the several churches are reminded of what the Scripture predicts will take place on the earth as the end of the present era draws near. I told a sick soldier during the Civil War, that the doctor said his end was near. He said, "That is all right comrade, my knapsack is packed." What a blessed state it is which enables us to trust, when the mountains and the seas are uniting their forces for a destruction of life in the most horrible form. It does seem that we are nearing the end of this dispensation. But if as my soldier friend put it—"If our knapsack is packed," we will not be greatly moved, even when the mountains roar. In view of what is now happening upon the earth, is it not strange that the masses pay so little attention to it?

People read where thousands are buried alive in the islands near our own shores, and in the next breath ask, "Which is the best summer resort." We are careful enough about our insurance, taxes and obligations concerning the present time, but things pertaining to the beyond, the after life, we give ourselves little or no concern. Are the people in the churches personally concerned about the signs of the times?

Isaac McCurdy.

IS THE END DRAWING NEAR?

"This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come." Prophecy is ante-dated history. The present time is perilous. Are we on the verge of that sublime but awful day when the end of this present dispensation will come? We need only to look over the current issue of a daily paper to learn that there has never been such a rapid succession of alarming and destructive catastrophes. Volcano after volcano is becoming active. Frequent earthquakes in divers places. Terrific storms and water spouts. Explosions in mines and caves of the earth. All the forces of nature seem to have become suddenly destructive. Lives are destroyed by thousands. Property is wrecked and burned, and washed away at a loss of millions of dollars. Men are restless and dissatisfied. Ambition for wealth and position brings pride and prodigacy, until honor and character have hardly a place in the conduct of men. Murder and suicide often of the most terrible and unprovoked character are of daily occurrence. Labor is ranged against money, and money is used to oppress and impoverish the people. Materialism has sapped the life out of the church until a deadly apathy, like a funeral pall, hangs over everything spiritual. Men have forsaken the church, and the congregations, often perilously small, are composed mostly of women. Greed has supplanted godliness, and riches are more coveted than righteousness.

Are we in the perilous times prophesied by the Apostle? Have we come to that period, which is the prelude to that great event which shall bring men and nations to the judgment bar of God? Surely the pestilence, the famines, the earthquakes, the volcanic eruptions, the storms and hurricanes, the calamities by sea and land, the numberless dead hurried into the presence of God, almost in the wink of an eye, call for serious and thoughtful meditation. Far be it from us to assume the role of prophet. We do not know the day nor hour when the Lord shall come. But the unexpected is happening, and it is the unexpected to which the awful prophesies of the Bible direct our attention.

Notice.

Brethren of the Northwestern Conference:

It has pleased the brethren to again select me as your evangelist. I see the importance of devoting the entire year to the work in order to reach all localities where evangelizing should be done. The States of Oregon and Washington embrace a large territory of labor. I expect to begin the work of holding a series of meetings near Astoria early in August and wish to have all that shall want my labor during the coming year to open correspondence with me at an early date so we may determine plan and time of work. Address Schulls, Oregon.

W. L. Skeels.

The Way to Live.

Be patient. Keep sweet. Do not fret or worry. Do your best and leave results with God. Believe firmly in God, in the fulfilment of his purposes and the march of his providences. God's laws are immutable and work with undeviating regularity. Walk in fellowship with God, and every year you will be a stronger, better, happier and sweeter man. Do not mar your peace or power by needless worry. Live by faith in the Son of God, who loves you and gave himself for you. On some bright tomorrow you will come to anchor under a haven of sapphire and in a harbor of calm, with chimes ringing their welcome from the spires that sentinel the city of God, while from the battlements millions will shout, "Well done!" While God himself will say, "Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."—George B. Vashurgh.

Earnest Work Needed.

I presume no reader will take exceptions to the statement that real earnest heart work is very much needed amid the trials and perplexities incident to the close of this Gentile age. But, beloved in the Lord, are you personally willing to co-operate? Is your heart burdened for the salvation of sinners, who are perishing because they know not what they must do to be saved? Are you willing to offer yourself upon the altar as a living sacrifice that the perishing may be rescued? If you are, then I am willing to join hands with you, that we may together "throw out the life line," that the perishing may be rescued.

For many years through the channel of the pen and printing press, I have published glad tidings, God has blessed both me and the work. I still intend to continue this work, but I now desire to add the living voice to the pen, and come in personal contact with my auditors. Now this can be done only through your personal sacrifice and co-operation. Are you willing to do it?

My purpose is, if you co-operate, to take a trip throughout the United States and the Dominion of of Canada, proclaiming the gospel of the kingdom to the perishing, and do what little I can in assisting to encourage, strengthen and build up those who have already become obedient to the faith. I can do this only by your aid. Are you willing to share the work?

Now, if any individual or congregation would like to have me hold a series of meetings in your neighborhood, in any place between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, and the Dominion of Canada, please write and say so, as soon as convenient. My purpose in desiring to receive all calls at once is that I may arrange the trip with appointments lying nearest to each other, in order that traveling expenses may be saved, in going from place to place. When I find I am nearing your place, by having the appointment in advance, I can then write and make definite appointments as to time.

If you would desire a visit from me when near your neighborhood, please write at once and say so. Address 420 North Willow Avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Ill.

W. H. Wilson.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

The Quiet Hour.

Shut in with God alone,
I spend the quiet hour;
His mercy and His love I own,
And seek his saving power.

Shut in with God alone,
In meditation sweet
My spirit waits before the throne,
Bows down low at Jesus' feet.

Shut in with God alone
I praise his holy name,
Who gave His precious teaching
For all my sin and shame.

Shut in with God alone,
And yet I have no fear,
I rest beneath the cleansing blood,
And perfect love is here.

Can Anything be Settled by an Appeal to the Bible? No. 1.

Again and again I have been told that the Bible is like an old fiddle on which any tune can be played. This assertion is made by men outside the pale of any church. From their standpoint they hear nothing but a jargon of voices, a medley of contradictions. They see Christendom full of conflicting creeds; and hopelessly divided into warring sects. So one class of these spectators of the scene concludes that the Bible is of purely human authorship, and therefore contradictory in itself; and another class of these onlookers while admitting the claim of a divine revelation, judge that the style of the language is so obscure that no two minds, however honest, can understand it alike. It is said and thought that the divided condition of the professed friends of the Book is the occasion, if not the cause, of so much infidelity, practical and theoretical. The men who say the Bible is dark and mysterious, and those who assert its human authorship do not reach these conclusions by honest and persistent study of the book itself; but base their judgment upon what they see outside of it; attributing to it what should be laid to the charge of those who attempt to expound, and reduce its teachings to practice. The sectarian differences in the religious world cannot fairly be deemed sufficient ground for denying the inspired authority of the Book on the one hand; nor on the other for treating it as if it was so mysterious as to defy all effort to arrive at the truth of its contents. Infidels from Voltaire and Paine down to Ingersoll and his admirers are ignorant of what the Bible teaches. Tom Paine, I think it was, said he kept no Bible. No man who carefully studies this book can be an infidel. If it is so obscure in style that no one can understand it, it is no revelation to any one. Such a notion is worse than charging God with foolishness. It is to charge him with lying and with cruelty. To put into the hands of man a book purporting to be a revelation, which upon examination is found sealed against all inquiry is to mock, cruelly mock at man's sorest need. Would the great Creator who implanted in man's mental constitution an ardent longing for a future life and incorruptibility, give such a book to his intelligent creatures; attesting every part of it by miracle as it came from his hand through law-giver, prophets and apostles, and through his Son? Surely not. If these men as independent thinkers, unshackled by priestcraft, and defiant of popular opinion as they seem to be, would set themselves resolutely and honestly to the task of investigating the Scriptures they would soon learn that they are neither contradictory nor so obscure as to thwart effort of strong common sense to arrive at the truth on many topics falling within the scope of their pages. On this discovery of the harmony and clearness of Scripture statements they would reasonably ascribe this wonderful contrariety of religious views on plain points to the interpreters or expounders of the Word, who, having ignored the laws of language, or rejected the literality of Revelation are floundering in the uncertainties of conjecture, thus verifying what Luther charged to the Pope and his bishops in their treatment of the Word. The reformer said "You say it may mean this or it may mean that or something else." It must be that the root of this confusion grows out of the application of a false principle of interpretation. Ask one of these censors of the Word whose high sounding titles are haunted in the face of the world, what this passage means: "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth," and he answers, "Blessed are the meek for they shall be happy." And another answers, "They are now inheriting the earth." Ask one of these expounders what he calls his system of interpretation and he will answer, "The spiritual." But it is not likely that he can explain it to you, wise as he seems to be, so that you can understand and apply it. He speaks of it as a system, it is hardly this. A system is an assemblage of things adjusted into a regular whole, as a system of law, of ethics, or any thing else orderly arranged. They say it is a system of principles or laws applied to the Bible to bring out the meaning which lies hidden beneath the surface of words. Men from Origen down to the present have calling this kind of handling of the Word "a system," but I have never run across it in print. I think the truth of the matter is that it is composed of so few parts that it can not be reduced to a system. One or two principles is all there is of it. The old theologians said that any particular passage of Scripture must be expounded according or agreeably to the analogy of (the) faith. The faith was what was already down in creeds styled orthodox. Nothing was to contradict or be out of harmony with what the fathers held and taught. This is what was meant by the analogy of faith. Now it is plain as anything can be that if the faith as held by the fathers was false in its fundamental doctrines every part of Scripture explained agreeably to these doctrines would be false, and the rule or principle becomes as arbitrary and despotic as it is false. Men should stubbornly refuse to be governed by it. At the present time many writers and preachers are explaining God's Word on the principle of "the fitness of things." This though not identical with the other leads to the same results. Both principles alike play havor with large portions of the Word. The fitness of things gives wider scope and freer range to human reason or fancy if you please, than the other principle which tied men to the faith of the (church) fathers. The modern principle gives free reins to the higher criticism. Here it is made the arbiter to settle the question of inspiration of the Bible as to what portion and proportion and to what degree inspired. This is to be shown by the Polychrome Bible which is under way; edited by Paul Haupt of Germany; and on which, we are informed, many eminent scholars and critics are employed. The Bible settles nothing except the question of morals (and hardly this) if these two principles are appealed to. "The fitness of things" seems more modern than the "The analogy of faith," but the truth is, the former was employed away back when men began to apostatize; when the ante-Nicene fathers began to engraft upon the Christian system their gnosis of the East, and their science (falsely so called—Paul) of the West. Along there before and after the Nicene Council (held in A. D. 325) a whole batch of errors was dumped upon the Christian world: these comprised in a large measure the faith of the fathers to which "The analogy of faith" refers. As these errors acquired age they gathered around them a sacredness which shielded them against the touch of common hands, and stereotyped them for later centuries. Like barristers who refer to the rulings of earlier courts as precedents to settle the case in hand, so later writers and theologians appealed to the decisions of early councils to settle controversies and end disputes.

J. L. WEICE.

Heart Purity.

"Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God." Matt. v. 8.

None but the pure can enter the presence chamber of the King eternal. Under the law, before the high priest could come into the presence of the shekinah he must become ceremonially pure, but the Christ purity must go deeper than this, it must reach the innermost recess of the heart. The pure in heart alone can see God.

The condition of a person's heart is always manifested outwardly. An evil heart is sure to manifest itself by acts which correspond with the corrupt condition of his heart. It is likewise the case with the pure in heart, such an one's beneficent acts are felt in every circle in which they may move. The very atmosphere seems purer by reason of their presence. The pure in heart cannot find a congenial atmosphere in the dismal swamp of pollution. They may be compared to the vine which reaches out and entwines itself about the sturdy oak, and gradually ascends into increasing light, until it reaches the top and drinks in the pure sunshine of heaven.

So likewise the pure in heart finds its affinity for the column of eternity (the Holy Scriptures) to which they cling, and climb to the summit, and eternally bask under its purifying influence. The pure in heart being introduced into the Christ name after hearing the Christ message, delights in the Christ life.

Scriptural heart purity must follow the reception of the Christian message. Listen: "He that hath this hope in him purifieth himself even as he is pure." The Blessed Hope then is a necessary pre-requisite to Scriptural heart purity. Without this you cannot be pure even as he is pure. No one can be pure until purged from past sins.

Oh, how sad it is that so few realize the reality of the blessed hope sustaining to heart purity. Are not those who are acquainted with this grand truth somewhat at fault that they have not been more zealous in conveying this sublime truth to our fellows? Personally, I am determined to be more faithful by God's help, (and your co-operation in making it possible), to show them how they may become Scripturally pure, that they may see God. Efforts at moral purity will fail, unless our past sins are removed as far as the east is from the west. The knowledge of the pardon of past sins, has a marvelous effect upon the mind and life of those who have this assurance. Tell it to your fellows that they may also be blessed as you are. There is a beauty and power in the Christ life. Now you know as well as I do that there is no power for good unless those who preach purity, should themselves be above reproach.

The pure in heart are easily known, they wear a triple stranded girdle, (faith, hope and love) and delight in errands of mercy; vice and vulgarity flee from their presence like the fog before the rising sun. Secure the genuine article—Scriptural heart purity.

W. H. WILSON.

Encouragement for the Michigan Brethren.

Since our return from the west wife and I have each attended the appointment at Millbrook, about seventy-five miles northeast of us, and found them nearly all holding firm to the faith with a splendid interest manifested. Saturday evening at Allen school house, although nearly all were engaged in haying, and having to contend with very treacherous weather, the house was well filled and one good brother remarked, he never saw better attention given. Bro. Lake is doing a noble work at both places of meeting (which are about three miles apart). I hope the time will come not far distant when Bro. Lake will be one of the Lord's public proclaimers of the gospel of the kingdom. What the Lord wants is more workers and less fault finding, and our prayer is that others may follow Bro. Lake's example and go to work with a will. Now brethren, we had a splendid Conference and may that be a starting point for the best year's work we have done in many places. As we separated at the depot the Monday following Conference some said, I am going home to work this year, we can have Bible lessons from house to house, if no more. O how we pray they have not forgotten that good resolution, for God heard them make it. Let us all be doing something this year for the advancement of God's cause. One good feature at Millbrook, we never hear any complaint about paying for their preaching. We are willing to sacrifice with them, and there is no grumbling although nearly all are people of small means. I do hope several more will subscribe for THE RESTITUTION, as it would be so much help to them in learning the one faith. One sermon of Bro. Jobling's, one article from Bro. or Sister Wines, would pay you well for all your money spent. Then consider the talent of Bro. Wilson, the letters from so many faithful ones in Christ Jesus, the satisfaction of knowing where and when the different churches meet for sweet fellowship with each other and communion with the Most High. Brethren save the mites and you will soon have $1.50 for a feast every week for a year.

Yours ever working for the Master.

Did Jesus Eat the Passover?

That the parents of Jesus, Joseph as god-father and Mary, his virgin mother, were law-abiding Israelites we learn at least in Luke ii., beginning with verse 41, where it is stated that they went every year to Jerusalem at the passover feast, fulfilling the days, i. e., remaining the full period. During the first year after his baptism Jesus went to the feast, according to John ii. 13, 23; John vi. 4 mentions the feast during his third year. At the close of his half week of years as prophet or teacher, came his crucial passover of passion or agony in which he conquered the final temptation and endured the cup of atonement.

Did Jesus on this occasion actually eat the passover meal? Matt. xxvi. 17 tells us that towards the beginning of unleavened bread the disciples came to Jesus, saying, "Where wilt thou that we prepare for thee to eat the PASSOVER?" Jesus sent the message, verse 18, "I will keep the passover at thy house with my disciples." The next verse says that they made ready the passover.

Mark xiv. is just as positive and definite. Verse 12 reads, "The first day of unleavened bread, when they killed the passover, his disciples said unto him, Where wilt thou that we go and prepare, that thou mayest eat the passover?" In verse 14 he inquires for the guest-chamber where he might eat the passover with his disciples. In 16 the disciples made ready the passover, he coming in the evening (17) with the twelve to eat it.

Luke xxiii. 1 says, "Now the feast of unleavened bread drew nigh, which is called the passover." In 7 the passover must be killed and 8 says that Peter and John were sent to prepare the passover. Then, according to verse 11, Jesus sent to inquire where he might eat the passover with his disciples. In 13 they made ready the passover and (15) Jesus said, "With desire I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer."

Also John xiii. 1, calls it the feast of the passover.

All this language is too explicit to be easily overturned. Jesus is ever truthful and a sure guide to truth.

A difficulty seems to be experienced in reading John xviii. 28; xix. 14, 31.

It is plain that the crucifixion took place on the preparation day and that this was the day before the sabbath. This sabbath was a special high day, not the ordinary seventh day, but the Sabbath of the passover week. That Jesus should already have eaten the passover and the Jews, scribes, chief priests, pharisees should still have it before them furnishes the dilemma.

To clear the subject we must make a study of the use of terms, the earlier and later meanings of the words passover, feast and days of unleavened bread.

Ex. xii. gives us our earliest lesson. Verse 3 tells us that a lamb was to be taken on the tenth day of the first month to be kept (6) until the fourteenth, when it was to be eaten during the night to commemorate the night of slaughter and salvation in Egypt, verse 12. In addition to this was to be a feast of unleavened bread of seven days more, in the first day of which and the seventh day there was to be a holy convocation, a special sabbath. From the fourteenth to the twenty-first, inclusive, makes eight days, the first being called specifically passover here, and the remaining seven unleavened bread, although this bread was to be eaten also with the passover lamb on the fourteenth.

Lev. xxiii. makes these sabbaths very plain. Read carefully at least verses 5 to 8. Num. ix. teaches further upon the same subject, introducing the second month for passover keeping in certain cases.

Let it be remembered that the evening and the morning, or rather the dark and the light, from set of sun to set of sun, constitute the day and the passover lamb of Nisan 14 was eaten in the night or early part thereof and that the day of preparation was this fourteenth, preparatory to the holy convocation of the fifteenth, the first day of unleavened bread.

Read carefully now Num. xxviii. 16-18, 25; xxxiii. 3.

Deut. xvi. in somewhat different language teaches the same facts. The fourteenth is the passover day. Then six more days of unleavened bread. Then the seventh day a solemn assembly (verse 8). Read also Josh. v. 10, 11; 2 Chron. xxx. 1-18, 21; xxxv. 1; 2 Kings xxiii. 21-23.

Ezra xii. 19, 22 speaks of the passover feast after the captivity and the seven days of unleavened bread.

Ezekiel xlv. shows the tendency to call the whole feast by the name passover, while the fifteenth retained its significance as a special sabbath, as also in the seventh month. See verses 21, 23, 25. This usage continued in New Covenant times, when it was known as passover and feast of unleavened bread synonymously, the fifteenth retaining its force as a special holy day or sabbath and the fourteenth as the day of preparation, in the beginning of which (we might now be tempted to say in the night before which) the passover lamb was eaten. Defilement, however, was avoided in order to be fit for the partaking in the further passover rites and feasts.

The positive statements in the four historical apostolic books preclude all thought that Jesus should have eaten anything but the passover feast, or that he should have eaten an imitation of it at any other time. Without a particle of doubt the Jewish nation kept the feast at the same time. This was, if I may repeat, the night part of the fourteenth of Nisan, i. e. the early part of that day after Jewish terminology or Tuesday night, according to our habit of speech, the fourteenth being Tuesday night and Wednesday day.

In another paper I may speak of this passover eating as the last act of Jesus under the Jewish covenant, of his emphatic lesson of humility in the act of feet-washing, which ignorantly becomes a matter of pride when turned into a formal sacrament, and the introductory or anticipatory lesson of commemorating the Redeemer's sacrifice.

After this, still during the night of the fourteenth, between Tuesday and Wednesday, Jesus went to the Garden, where he was taken into custody and after the feigned trials during the day of this fourteenth, now Wednesday, he was crucified. In a miraculously short period, having overcome to the last and fulfilled all requirements, his breath was taken, his life was permitted to ebb out, by the Father of all love, as well as all power. To his compassionate companion in agony he had been able to give the cheering assurance that when he should come into his kingdom in the great glad day and the restored paradise should be establish over the whole earth, under the whole heavens, former sins would not be weighed, for repentance had won.

Jesus was put into the tomb in the night or early part of the fifteenth, how early or late we know not. This was Wednesday night. He remained in the tomb Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The study of the time of the resurrection of Jesus involves several inquiries, as also the time of his being seen by Mary Magdalene. If Matt. xii. 40 is to be taken to the hour Jesus rose at the same time Saturday evening or night that he was put into the tomb on Wednesday. If "time, times and the dividing of time" was typified by the days of the death of Jesus, he would not have risen until well along toward the morning of the first day of the week.

The term "day" has the scientific definition in today's vocabulary of the twenty-four hours from midnight to midnight but a far more extensive popular use in designating the time from morning light to evening light. So in ancient speech day and night were distinguished, while the former term more technically also designated the time from night to night. Although labor ceased at sunset at the technical beginning of the seventh day, sabbath day seems to have been commonly thought of as the day time.

Mary Magdalene is said (John xx. 1) to have come to the sepulchre the first of the week early, when it was yet dark, when she saw that the stone had been taken away. There seems to be no good ancient authority for any decidedly different thought from this passage. A study of the prepositional force of the Greek in Matt. xxviii. 1 fully sustains the Diglott rendering, "Now after the sabbath, as it was dawning to the first day of the week, Mary of Magdala and the other Mary went (came) to see the tomb." Mark xvi. 1 seems just as plain "And the sabbath being past, Mary of Magdala and that Mary the mother of James and Salome bought aromatics that they might come and anoint him." And very early on the first day of the week, (about sunrise,) they came to the tomb. Luke xxiv. agrees with the same thought.

In conclusion it seems well nigh incontrovertible that Jesus rose on the Jewish first day of the week, with less certainty whether it was in the late hours of the evening or the very early hours of the morning. If the former he was up long before his loved ones saw him, to my mind not at all likely. The early practice was to keep in memory the RISEN LORD on the first day of the week and it seems a blessed practice today.

Be Accurate.

I saw an article in a paper recently in which the writer stated that after Thomas had thrust his hand into the wound in the side of Jesus, there was no blood in his body, yet he was the very Christ.

Now if we will all speak as the oracles of God, we will not say Thomas put his hand into the side of Jesus; neither will we say there was no blood in the body of Jesus after his resurrection. My reason for saying so is that the Bible is silent.

Flesh and blood does not inherit incorruption—could be as easily said. To inherit is to obtain from an ancestor or deceased friend. Now as God gave all things to Christ, and as Adam did not own the world to come, or possess eternal life—for us to possess the world to come and eternal life we must be adopted into a family relation with one who does.

Those who are living when Christ appears will be of flesh, blood and bone and breath. They shall never die, but will be changed. But the Bible no where speaks of man being without blood. Submitted in love.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME II. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, AUGUST 6, 1902. NUMBER 29.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Following in Death's Trail.

James Wylie was born in Erie County New York, Dec. 18, 1825; died at his home near Hibbard, Ind., July 21, 1902. He had been a resident in the immediate vicinity of his death since about 1852. He left a wife and four children, one brother, and two sisters. He was an honorable and well respected citizen of the community where he lived.

William Klingerman was born in Starke Co., Ohio, April 2, 1827. At the age of 22 years he settled in Marshall County, Indiana, where he continued until his death. On the 5th day of April, 1852 he was married to Maria A. Carr. To this union were born two children. He died at his home in Inwood, July 23, 1902, leaving his wife, one son, and one brother. Perhaps there was none other who enjoyed the confidence and esteem of that community more than Brother Klingerman. He united with the Methodist church in 1887, but later became convinced he was in error and united with the Church of God, being baptized May 26, 1901.

Mrs. Eliza Bryan, nee Aldarfer, was born to Mr. and Mrs. John Aldarfer, near Philadelphia, Pa. Dec., 29, 1829. During her childhood her father moved his family to Ohio, where she was married to James Bryan, in Columbiana, Nov. 18, 1852. In 1861, Brother and Sister Bryan moved to Marshall County, Ind., continuing there until separated by her death, at their home in Argos, July 26, 1902. To this union were born eleven children. Many years ago she united with the Church of God at old Pisgah, and on May 28, 1898 changed her membership to the Argos church. At her death she left her lone and feeble companion, six sons, three daughters, forty grandchildren, two great grand children, and one sister.

"By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin." What a terrible entering in that was! Fraught with consequences how heavy and how distant! Harmony, beauty, peace and abundance. Man, bearing his Father's image (Gen. i. 26), given access to the tree of life that his mortal ("dying," margin of Gen. ii. 17,) nature might be sustained in life. What a glorious creation. How complete and how full. Yet in all this fullness and completeness sin, though seemingly unbidden and unheeded, found ample room. And how that entering in of sin disfigured, yes, distorted the whole face of God's created work. As a result the curse with its thorns and thistles covered the bosom of mother earth. And the hearts of all that mother's descendants, even of all those who are "dust" (Gen. iii. 19), have seemed to "bring forth" the same thorn and thistle element and principle. The sustaining tree of life was withholden from man, and he, (unassisted by God because he chose independence when he disregarded God's instructions to him) being now dependent for life solely upon his own strength, died. And what else could he do? For he was a "dying" (Gen. ii. 17, margin) creature, and was without strength" (Rom. v. 6). It was impossible for him to continue long in life under such conditions. Thus came "death by sin" (Rom. v. 12); in consequence of "the law of sin and death" (Rom. viii. 2); death was the "wages of sin" (Rom. vi. 23), and man received his wages, his earnings, just as the law-breaker earns and receives his wages, even the penitentiary. Dead! How utterly dark the place where once the beautiful picture of God's handiwork could be seen by the bright light of heaven. And it becomes darker still, if it be possible for utter darkness to become darker, as we study it more closely. Man having no power in life to provide a way of escape out of death, and in death being completely paralyzed, there is no hope for man in his independence (above noted) but to forever and forever remain in death. Death is the only thing that man could attain unto. He could not even protect, say nothing of developing, life or a life principle. But it is here, in the midst of this darkest darkness that the blessed grace or favor of God is introduced. Says Paul in Rom. vi. 7, "He that is dead is righteously acquitted from sin."—Rotherham's translation. Blessed fact. God did not say in the beginning, that man must remain in death as the wages of sin, but that "thou shalt die." Thus as soon as death interrupts life, so soon has man paid the penalty of sin, acquitted himself in the right, and the only right way. And yet he cannot resume life for he has no power thus to do. But God's first love for man, was it ever converted to hatred when man turned from God? Listen. "God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." To what end? That he might lead "captivity captive." Psa. lxviii. 18; Eph. iv. 8. "That he might be Lord both of the dead and the living." Rom. xiv. 9. That he might bring to life those who through death had acquitted themselves of sin's sentence (1 Cor. xv. 22; Rev. xx. 12, 13; Jno. v. 28). Behold the grace of God. With no righteous claim upon God, because of having turned from him, yet man is the recipient of life from the dead, the result of grace which came by Christ. Jno. i. 17. But stay. Do not jump at conclusions. It is one thing to stand acquitted; quite another thing to be righteous. It is one thing to come forth from prison free from all penalty, yet tending or liable to renewed transgression with consequent penalty; quite another thing to stand free with no liability or tendency to err, and thus no consequent penalty. Thus while all who through death will be "freed (righteously acquitted.—Roth.) from sin," (Rom. vi. 7), only a few will be personally righteous. For "there is none righteous," (Rom. iii. 10), but those who exercise faith in Christ and God have their faith reckoned for righteousness. Rom. iv. 5, 6; xxii. 24. Glorious opportunity. For those who exercise faith, and become buried into Christ's death (Rom. vi. 3, 4,) "have put on Christ" (Gal. iii. 27), and are already reckoned to be "alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord" Rom. vi. 11) a "spiritual body," "incorruptibility," "the immortality," "the crown of life," "an inheritance * * * that fadeth not away." What a glorious end. What joy; what honor. How unspeakably great the love which leads to such an end. As we view the wreckage strewn along death's trail, how pleasing to remember our loved ones gone as having attempted to the end to establish themselves righteous through faith in Jesus Christ our Lord.

Obituary.

Catherine (Bottroff) Evans, daughter of Samuel Bottroff was born in Darke County, Ohio, Aug. 3, 1830; died July 20, 1902, her age being 71 years, 11 months and 17 days. She was married to David D. Evans, June 3, 1856, and to this union were born ten children, seven girls and three boys. Two of the boys and one girl have preceded her to the great unknown and are waiting the summons of the Savior who will gather his elect at his second coming. The funeral services were conducted by A. H. Zilmer. In early life she was a member of the Christian church, but in Aug. 1856, she became a member of the Church of God under the ministry of "Father Lyons," and during her life has lived a consistent, Christian life. She was a patient wife, a loving mother, a good neighbor, and the highest testimony of her excellent character comes from the friends and neighbors among whom she has lived for nearly half a century.

Edmond H. Cross was born May 17, 1833; died July 18, 1902. Aged 69 years, 2 months and 1 day. Was united in marriage with Lovina Tilton, Oct. 14, 1855. To this union there were born three children.

Bro. Cross had been in declining health for some time, but his sudden death come as a severe blow to all. While walking in his yard a mile and a half south of Chana, Illinois, he was stricken down with paralysis. Those teem in which he was held by all was attested by the large concourse of friends who followed through the rain to see him laid away to await the coming of Jesus. It has seldom been the privilege of the writer to hear words of such strong commendation from all classes as were heard on this occasion. Wife and children are heart broken at this sudden bereavement. How weak are words of sympathy at such a time. May God in his infinite love bring all this dear brother's family to see the necessity of obedience to his commandments.

To the Interested Ones.

Sister Chaffee's article of July 2nd demands a reply in order to place the "Ladies' Tithing Society" right before the readers of THE RESTITUTION; and being secretary of said society, perhaps I ought to speak in meeting next. In article referred to Sister Chaffee says, "It is the result of a movement made a year ago to get a place in this city that the gospel might be preached, which had been my prayer for years." If Sister Chaffee had carried out what she was appointed to do her prayer might have been answered. God does not answer when we play on Satan's ground. Truly it was our great desire to sow seeds of truth in the city of Grand Rapids. There was already a city mission and nearly every church there has its own mission work, but in all that great city there was no place where Christ's gospel of the kingdom was heralded. Yes, we were anxious to have at least one little nook where his sacred truths could be taught. Sister Chaffee felt she had been called to do a small work of this kind, and was so sure of its success that the venture was made, and we had strong hopes that through Bible readings, prayer meetings, scattering gospel reading, house to house visitation, and an occasional sermon to pave the way for more thorough work. We had perfect confidence in Sister Chaffee that she would carry out what she was appointed to do. We had no money to waste, but a sum was appropriated for rent of hall, gas, etc., and the little work began. Sister Chaffee worked so faithfully for a time, receiving nothing but free will offerings for her pay. All worked satisfactorily until she declared one day that there must be something done to make the meeting more attractive by inviting other denominations in to preach. I protested against such a course, trying to show her the object of the work was not to tickle people's ears with fables, but to present the Bible truths of the gospel. She insisted on her course being best and said "she was led of the Lord." I consulted with members of the society, also the Conference board, and all but perhaps two people that I talked with, were opposed to their money being used for any purpose but gospel preaching; they did not want to compromise truth with what they knew to be error, so we withdrew [redacted] the work.

Sister Chaffee says in article that she invited ministers of other faiths to preach practical sermons. Our guide Book says, there is but "One Lord, one faith;" and the same inspired writer says, "If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed." I heard one specimen of the practical sermon. Subject "Retribution," proof given was stories and experiences—no Bible proof and very little truth. And I was told when Sister Chaffee mildly rebuked the speaker, the answer was, "Well, Sister Chaffee, you know we must preach to please our hearers." My conscience would not permit me to use Conference money to pay my fare to Grand Rapids to be used in a work where such mixtures were compounded. We did not expect any such thing when Sister Chaffee was appointed to that work, and have been sadly disappointed. If it had been carried on according to gospel plans, we do not doubt but that the Conference would have been glad to have taken it up, and perhaps something could have been accomplished. But as Bro. Underwood so well said, what nonsense to try to keep up separate organizations, rent halls, tents, etc., if this spirit of liberality is right. Why did I and scores of others come out from other churches, if what is taught there is God's truth. Let us go back and have an easier time of it. If it makes no difference what we believe let us go with the popular tide, and when Jesus comes hear him say, Come ye blessed. O no! no! no! he will not say that, but O listen, "In vain do ye worship me teaching for doctrines the commandments of men." "I was hungry and ye gave me no meat, thirsty and ye gave me no drink." O the hungry, thirsty ones for something better than they have ever heard, and perhaps will never hear it, because the trumpet we have used has given an uncertain sound. If the two baptized at the mission understand the gospel they never learned it from the practical talks there, but from the gospel taught them by Sister Chaffee, for she understands the truth, and that is why the mystery still remains, with her understanding of the Bible how she can compromise with error. Knowing her so well we conclude the mistake she is making is of the head and not of the heart. O God open her eyes to see thy way and guide aright.

Submitted in love.

In the Field.

After our meeting at Shaw, Kan., I went to visit the brethren around Middleton, in southern Okla., and held meetings at the school-house.

We have a number of loyal brethren and sisters here whom we hope to see faithful to unpopular truth till the end. Andrew Reed and wife Minnie were baptized. They are from an excellent family in the faith, and will reflect nothing but credit on the cause of truth, and we believe that their love for truth will not wax cold in the midst of abounding iniquity, lukewarmness and spiritual deadness.

From here we came to Sac City, Iowa, to visit old friends and to work for the Iowa Conference Board until Conference time. We have many dear friends here who have encouraged us much in the good work, and who will always remain loyal to the blessed hope of immortality only through Christ, and the soon coming government of David's Son upon the throne of David in Jerusalem.

From here we went to Kalo where we have a few faithful ones, but we regret to say that some who had once received the truth with joy had either become lukewarm or ashamed of unpopular truth—as their absence from our meeting without good excuse proved. I pray that they may not be deceived by the wiles of the devil into sinning away their day of favor, nor beguiled by the serpent who, to save his old falsehood from destruction follows us hissing behind our back—"Soul-sleeper, mud-heaven, gross materialist, baptized by a tramp-preacher, church-destroyer, etc."

We baptized James Price and wife Anna, whom we take pleasure in introducing to the fellowship of the brotherhood. Pray that Brother Price may be strengthened against going back to his tobacco habit, and that they may be loyal to the end.

Announcement.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Indiana will be held at Argos, beginning Friday, Sept. 5th and continue over Sunday. Argos is well located, being on the Nickel Plate road east and west, and the Lake Erie and Western road north and south, making it easy of access to most of the brethren. At this meeting the main business of the year is to be done, and new officers chosen to take charge of affairs. It is therefore of importance to the work that there be a good representation of the different organizations throughout the state. We feel that no urging should be necessary, but that each brother and sister who can ought to make an effort and attend and take part in the deliberations of the business sessions, enjoy the sermons and other meetings and each help to make it a success. Our last meeting at Antioch was one of the best ever held in the state, and there is no reason why this coming gathering should be less pleasant and profitable. It is our intention to try and arrange a programe which will be published in due time. We expect to begin business at the first of the meeting, so it will be vital to the success of the work that you be on hand at the beginning. The Lord's cause needs you each one to do his part. Will you not willingly give the three days to Him? Officers of churches, please see that your organization is represented so the plans for next year may be fully reported to you by your own members.

Married.

On the 22nd day of June the writer immersed Miss Alma Graham, of Troutdale, Oregon. She started in the Christian life in an earnest and intelligent manner. On the 17th of July he officiated in changing her name to Mrs. Bramwall. Although her husband is not a believer he made solemn promises to help her fulfill her Christian duties and that he would inquire into his own obligations. Over forty relatives were present. The social enjoyment at a bountiful feast spread under the beautiful trees on a mountain side can never be surpassed or forgotten.

Earnest Work Needed.

I presume no reader will take exceptions to the statement that real earnest heart work is very much needed amid the trials and perplexities incident to the close of this Gentile age. But, beloved in the Lord, are you personally willing to co-operate? Is your heart burdened for the salvation of sinners, who are perishing because they know not what they must do to be saved? Are you willing to offer your self upon the altar as a living sacrifice that the perishing may be rescued? If you are, then I am willing to join hands with you, that we may together "throw out the life line," that the perishing may be rescued.

For many years through the channel of the pen and printing press, I have published glad tidings, God has blessed both me and the work. I still intend to continue this work, but I now desire to add the living voice to the pen, and come in personal contact with my auditors. Now this can be done only through your personal sacrifice and co-operation. Are you willing to do it?

My purpose is, if you co-operate, to take a trip throughout the United States and the Dominion of of Canada, proclaiming the gospel of the kingdom to the perishing, and do what little I can in assisting to encourage, strengthen and build up those who have already become obedient to the faith. I can do this only by your aid. Are you willing to share the work?

Now, if any individual or congregation would like to have me hold a series of meetings in your neighborhood, in any place between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, and the Dominion of Canada, please write and say so, as soon as convenient. My purpose in desiring to receive all calls at once is that I may arrange the trip with appointments lying nearest to each other, in order that traveling expenses may be saved, in going from place to place. When I find I am nearing your place, by having the appointment in advance, I can then write and make definite appointments as to time.

If you would desire a visit from me when near your neighborhood, please write at once and say so. Address 420 North Willow Avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Ill.

If you were to ask the average man to tell you offhand just what qualities he likes in other men he would probably boggle a good deal over his answer, but he would end by giving you a list of abstract virtues closely resembling the list of "the hundred best books" which is, as a rule, what people feel they ought to enjoy reading rather than the books they do read with pleasure. Rafford Pyke, several of whose clever and discerning essays have been found in The Cosmopolitan during the last year, makes "What Men Like in Men" the subject of an entertaining essay in the August number of that periodical.

Builders unto Music.

Some king of old a temple built, 'tis said,
To sound of music: every stone was laid
Accordant with the harp's or loboe's chime,
And workmen's trowels beat a silver rhyme
Unto the swelling flutes and strings. All day
The slating groups of pd yers sat to play,
And nd day long unwearied builders wrought,
Their rhythmic motions from the music caught.

Fast grew the temple, with a grace unknown,
A beauty ne'er before displayed in stone;
And when 'twas finished, all who saw declared
None in the land could with it be compared.
A timeless glory crowned it—every line
Touched with a strength and harmony divine.

A thousand years passed over it, and still
It stood all perfect on its ancient hill.
No stone displaced, no angle out of true—
The same, yet richer than its builder's knew;
So balanced, perfect in its harmony,
Not even the hills could more established be.

So might we build our lives?—aye, make them whole
With that diviner music of the soul,
Those sweet, calm emotions, loves, that stir
The deepest depths of holy character.
Oh! for such constant music as inspires
The heart that sometimes hears the heavenly choirs!
How we should build, how beautiful and strong,
If love set playing to us all day long!

To the Church of God, of the North-West Conference:

Brethren and Sisters, as you are once more permitted in the providence of God to meet for the purpose of unitedly worshiping God and of devising means for the purpose of sending out an evangelist or evangelists to proclaim the gospel of the kingdom of God, that others may be enlightened as to the purpose of God and the things necessary to be done in order to secure the great prize of eternal life.

We must work together with God in order to secure the desired results.

The signs of the times certainly indicate that what we do must be done speedily, and in order to succeed we must work unitedly. Our faith and works must agree. Our works are what men judge us by: charity must not be left out, as it is the bond of perfection; and let love be without dissimulation. Very much of our influence depends on our conduct.

I hereby acknowledge thanks for the kind invitations I have received to attend the meeting with you. I would be more than pleased to do so, and to once more engage in worship with dear friends, as we have met in years gone by, and to see their faces and hear their friendly voices; but I fear I may never have this pleasure in Gentile times; but I hope to meet you in the kingdom of God, when the redeemed will sing the song of victory. Remember my wife and myself in your devotions. We both join in Christian regards to all, hoping that much good may result from the meeting.

My sight is very poor, I therefore ask you to excuse this short letter. I cannot read the Scriptures, and in preaching have to depend on my memory for quotations which I learned when I could read. I still have some hope of again being able to read.

When mortality is swallowed up of life, what a change will be realized, when there will be no more death, neither sorrow or crying, and no more pain. How thankful we should be that it is possible to reach just such a condition.

May the blessing of God attend you in all your efforts for the welfare in the work you are engaged in is my prayer.

Your Brother in Christ.
RICHARD CORNALEY.

To the Church of God at Scholls, Oregon, greeting:

"For whom he foreknew, he also foreordained to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the first-born among many brethren." Rom. viii. 29.

This doctrine of election and fore-ordination, if understood, would not be renounced or relegated to the background, as our Calvinistic brethren are doing, since it is at the very foundation of free grace, or the glad tidings of great joy that shall be to all people. The "many brethren," among whom the resurrected Christ is "the firstborn from the dead;" and who are to be "conformed to the image of his Son," are the Sons of God; for whose manifestation "the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth," Rom. viii. 17, because the creature itself, Ktisis,—"preach the gospel to every creature—Ktisis, shall also be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God." Read the 8th chapter of Romans, and learn that "not only so, but ourselves also which have the first fruits of the Spirit, (this elect church of the firstborn,) even ourselves, groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit; the redemption of our body; for by hope are we saved; but hope that is seen is not hope; therefore we do with patience wait; for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed."

This elect church, the "body of Christ," "bone of his bone, and flesh of his flesh," Eph. v. 30, is the one elect seed of promise, in whom all families of the earth are to be blessed. hence, until this elect seed is perfected by the redemption of their body, that for which we that have the first-fruits of the Spirit, groan, the groaning creation cannot be delivered. They are waiting for the manifestation of the sons of God.

If Christendom were not blinded by their fractional creeds, which should be consolidated into the "one faith," instead of being renounced, as they are now inclined to do, they could see that there is a revealed plan of redemption by which "God is working all things after the council of his will." Isa. xlvi. 9, 10; Eph. i. 9–11, instead of its being left to a mere strife between him and the devil, as to which shall earn the greater number of souls or still worse, left to a lukewarm church and the devil to determine how many souls shall be eternally damned.

With such a theology, is it a wonder that modern Christianity is sick unto death? Every intelligent man has learned that not a creed of Christendom, be it written or only their interpretation of the New Testament, can endure the light of reason or of intelligent criticism. The poet, Whittier, affirmed that the creed of Christendom could not be reconciled with the announcement made at the birth of Jesus, "Behold, I bring you glad tidings of great joy that shall be to all people." Nor can universal salvation to life eternal, be sustained by Scripture, and yet there is a clearly revealed plan of redemption in which all apparent discrepancies disappear, leaving election, fore-ordination, free grace, universal joy because of the birth of Christ Jesus, and all other Scriptural teaching intact. A plan in which is incorporated every Christian doctrine, a unity of the faith by which all Christians could be consistently united.

No one can read the 8th chapter of Romans, and not see two classes; those having the first-fruits of the Spirit to be delivered from the bondage of corruption by the redemption of their body, and another class, the groaning creation, only waiting for the deliverance of those having the first fruits, when they also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption, nor is it necessary to inform the Christian readers, and hearers, that such redemption means a bodily resurrection. "It (the body,) is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption."

Here is proof, not only that there is to be a church of the firstborn, to have part in the first resurrection, but that after such redemption of their body, another class embracing "the groaning creation," are also to be delivered. That there are to be two classes of the saved, is a statement unfamiliar to the ears of many, even those who claim to be of the one faith. I am aware of this. Nevertheless, there are to be those having part in the first resurrection, who are to reign with Christ on the earth, during the millennium.

These kings and priests who are to reign with Christ, are the overcomers, "he that overcometh shall sit with me in my throne." Rev. iii. 21. "He that overcometh, shall be my son," Rev. xxi. 7. The manifestation of these sons of God, is that for which the groaning creation are waiting. While we who have the firstfruits of the Spirit,—already sons, in embryo, —are groaning and waiting for the adoption, to-wit; the redemption of our body; sown in corruption, raised in incorruption. These overcomers are an elect body, the little flock to whom it is the Father's good pleasure to give the kingdom. They are those he foreknew and did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son. In the resurrection, or redemption of their body they awake in his likeness. "When he appears, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is."

This elect church, the "body of Christ;" instead of being all who are to be saved, are only those promised in Eden, and reiterated in the Abrahamic allegory; the Seed, Christ, and they that are Christ's in whom all families of the earth are to be blessed. Sons of God, who with Christ, "the first-born among many brethren," are to reign on the earth, and for whose manifestation the groaning creation are waiting; because "the creature itself, (Ktisis.) shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption, into the glorious liberty of the children of God." "If children, then heirs of God, joint-heirs with Jesus Christ."

Our good orthodox brethren sing and talk of bearing the cross, and wearing the crown, and yet have no true idea of this Scripture, "And hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth." They have no conception of what the millennial age is designed to accomplish in God's plan of redemption. Indeed, they seem to have forgotten that the millennium or thousand years reign of Christ and the saints on the earth belong to a resurrected race and not to man "in the bondage of corruption." God's dealings with mankind on the earth, are not ended at death, since there is to be a resurrection of the dead, and the resurrection is of two classes; the dead in Christ and those out of Christ. The former are those whom God foreknew, and did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son. As we (the elect church) have borne the image of the first man, of the earth, earthy; so we shall bear the image of the second Man; and these are the sons for the manifestation of which the groaning creation is waiting. the seed, Gal. iii. 16, 29, who are to be on the earth, and in whom all nations are to be blessed.

No one who will read Rom. viii., can fail of seeing two classes who are groaning and waiting for a resurrected body; or that the manifestation of the one is the hope of the other, not its damnation.

It is a mistake to suppose that because God has an elect church, a church of the first-born, to be the kings and priests of his millennial kingdom, that all the rest of mankind are foreordained to be eternally damned. All that the Scripture concerning foreordination affirms or teaches is that certain ones whom beforeknew were elected to be conformed to the image of the glorified or heavenly Christ, and we can know just what and how much that implies. The earthly Christ bore the image of the first Adam, of the earth, earthy. The heavenly Christ, when he comes in his glory, will bear the image of the glorified, heavenly man, the second man Adam, since Christ retains his humanity until his one thousand years reign on earth is finished." The one thousand years being the day God hath appointed in which he will judge the world by that man whom he hath ordained, a glorified man.

His elect church are called his body, "bone of his bone, and flesh of his flesh," and finally, when made one with him, "the Bride, the Lamb's wife," joined to him, made like him, glorified with him, conformed to his image; they are in the resurrection, to reign with him on earth a thousand years, after which, not before, they will enter the Spirit condition; the kingdom that flesh and blood cannot inherit, nor do they reign over mankind as they now are, in the bondage of corruption.

When these sons, for which the groaning creation are waiting, are manifested, they will be resurrected, glorified sons; with bodies fashioned like Christ's glorious body, as seen when they "saw his Majesty in the holy mount; since that transfiguration scene was a vision of the kingdom. That will be the condition of the sons, and the (Ktisis,) the every creature to whom Christ commended the gospel to be preached, Mark xvi. 15, 16, "Shall also be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the sons." Sown in corruption they will be raised in incorruption, a restitution to what man was before he sinned. Thus the reign on earth is over a new-born race. These come forth unto the resurrection of judgment. Ktisis, St. John v. 28, 29, the same word as in Matt. xii. 18, 20, judgment to the Gentiles; quoted from Isa. xlii. 1–4: which read as translated in John: "He shall not fail nor be discouraged till he has set damnation in the earth. Whatever condition is in his heart to bring about in the earth, is that to which the groaning who have done ill, come forth unto, when delivered into the glorious liberty of the sons, and the isles shall not wait for his law;" "for as I live, saith the Lord, All the earth shall be filled with my glory."

God communicates with man in parables and dark sayings, and in no other way, except in giving the letter of the law to Moses; then it was spoken plainly. Num. xii. 8. The letter does not give life; the spirit or real meaning is never on the surface. We must recognize this fact, otherwise we shall fail of coming to a knowledge of the truth. Why did Jesus speak in parables and dark sayings, lest they should be converted? Mark iv. 12. Why is all Scripture given in that way? That seeing they may see and not understand. For the same reason, we answer, that the flaming sword was placed around the tree of life in Eden figure, lest the natural man eat and live forever. Wisdom that cometh from above is the tree of life; "this is life eternal, that they may know Thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." John xvii. 3.

In the plan of regeneration, a second Adam, a wife, and afterward a regenerated world, is the order of the new creation. The wife being an elect body, is made alive before the regeneration of the race can begin, and this elect body, they that are Christ's are made alive at his coming. Hence, if this arrangement is carried out, the tree of life must be guarded from all but the elect Bride; else others would be born out of the line. However, it is not given to them that are without to know the mysteries of the kingdom of God.

JOHN FOORE.

[This idea of Jesus Christ being human until the thousand years reign is finished, lacks proof. We give in this issue an article by Brother Skeels, on "Theories" that we ask all to read.—ED.]

Theories.

We receive letters from brethren scattered throughout the country signed "Yours in Christ," "Yours in the one faith," "Yours in the one hope," "Yours for life." All suggestive of a united cause and purpose. If my brother is in the one faith and the one hope and is seeking for life in and through Christ, I should have charity for him even though he may accept a theory that I may think is unscriptural or absurd, for he is still my brother. At first glance I may think his new theory is destructive of the much desired "unity of the faith," with reflections I may see that he is still holding to the central truths, but having zeal that prompts him to desire "all knowledge" he is making enquiry beyond what is written or has speculatively stepped beyond the bounds of truth.

What is theory? It is usually something that another holds that I reject. While a hobby always belongs to another but never to myself. But we may find a better and less selfish way of defining a theory. What God has promised us in so many words should never be called theory, but theories spring up from theorizing over God's methods of doing what he has promised to do. Illustration of a theory by a theory. God has promised life and immortality through Christ. Life that shall be endless because we shall be immortal. But the theorist begins to theorize over God's method of doing his work. If the Lord has said, "It is raised a spiritual body" the promise should settle the question. But one says, "A judgment of perhaps forty years will pass before immortality can be attained," and another says with equal confidence, "No, it will be a thousand years after Christ comes before we will get the spiritual bodies, and Christ himself has not yet attained to that condition!"

This last theory (I hope last of the series) is only a yearling and received birth from the same party that originated the theory that Christ came in 74, but who now denounces the '74 presence of Christ a heresy and those that now advocate it heretics. This newest of theories that the elder Brother is waiting some 3000 years for his spiritual body, and that the rest of the sons of God shall wait a thousand years after their resurrection; is making some inroads among our brethren. Don't be alarmed. It is only a theory. As they have not given up the one faith and hope of immortality finally, we will try to be patient and show charity. The theory seems to have originated through a wrong interpretation of 1 Tim. vi. 16, "The King of kings and Lord of lords who only hath immortality." Brethren have usually said that the King of kings is the eternal Father. If this is correct they can logically say, "If the Father only has immortality the Son has not received it." I think that the Son is prospective King of kings.

1st, Because he is represented in other evidence as being the King of kings and Lord of lords. Rev. xvii. 14; xix. 16; Isa. xxvi. 13, 14; and Isa. xxv. 6, 9. Although the Father is often spoken of as King, he rules the universe, I believe that King of kings is never applied to him. Christ will be "King of kings" when he becomes "King of saints," "and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years."

2nd, Under the law no one could enter into the most holy place with the high priest; so while our high Priest is in the presence of God as mediator, "No man hath seen or can see him" while "dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto." We cannot say that no man hath approached unto God for "the man Christ Jesus is in his presence and in the presence of his glory."

3rd. The construction of the text when connected with the preceding verse shows that the Son of God is the only one of mankind that has reached immortality, "The appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ.....the King of kings and Lord of lords." Hence we conclude that Christ has already reached the divine, immortal and spiritual or spirit plane and does not wait thousands of years for a spiritual body. We have the assurance that faithful believers will attain to the divine life at the awakening from death and coming of our Life-giver. The Christ, the King of kings, only hath immortality. "Christ the first fruits, afterward they that are Christ's at his coming." "It is sown in corruption, it is raised in incorruption." "It is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body." "We look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ who shall change our vile body that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body;" not a thousand years after but at his appearing, for "when Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall we appear with him in glory." "But we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him." "This mortal shall put on immortality." We do not become immaterial but immortal for "we shall be raised incorruptible." "For we that are in this tabernacle do groan being burdened not for that we would be unclothed but clothed upon that mortality might be swallowed up of life." Let the Savior tell the time and manner when and by which the highest order of life will be reached. "Neither can they die any more for they are equal to the angels and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection." The first resurrection will manifest the sons of God, exalted to the highest plane of existence when they are born from the dead. They will be the children of God because they are the children of the resurrection and as "the angels are ministering spirits" they "will be equal to the angels, neither can they die any more."

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

Notice.

Brethren of the Northwestern Conference:

It has pleased the brethren to again select me as your evangelist. I see the importance of devoting the entire year to the work in order to reach all localities where evangelizing should be done. The States of Oregon and Washington embrace a large territory of labor. I expect to begin the work of holding a series of meetings near Astoria early in August and wish to have all that shall want my labor during the coming year to open correspondence with me at an early date so we may determine plan and time of work. Disappointment.

"Disappointment—His appointment."
Change one letter, then I see
That the thwarting of my purpose
Is God's better choice for me.
His appointment must be blessing,
Though it may come in disguise;
For the end from the beginning
Open to his wisdom lies.

"Disappointment—His appointment."
Where? The Lord's who loves me best,
Understands and knows me fully,
Who my faith and love would test;
For, like loving earthly parent,
He rejoices when He knows
That his child accepts unquestioned
All that from His wisdom flows.

"Disappointment—His appointment."
"No good thing will He withhold."
From denials oft we gather
Treasure of His love untold.
Well He knows each broken purpose
Leads to fuller, deeper trust,
And the end of all His dealings
Proves our God is wise and just.

"Disappointment—His appointment."
Lord, I trust it, then, as such.
Like the clay in hand of potter,
Yielding wholly to thy touch.
All my life's plan in thy moulding,
Not one single choice be mine;
Let me answer, unrepining,
"Father, not my will, but thine."

Original.

What We Believe. No. 10.

The Church of God advocates, among other things to be observed as "prerequisites of the forgiveness of sins," a "hearty belief of the gospel." That such is a very essential matter, is clear from the fact that in Scripture it is the subject of very frequent mention from various avenues of approach. It is a basic principle that "without faith it is impossible to please God." Heb. xi. 6. "Faith" has to do with "things" that are "not seen" but "hoped for," and is "the conviction," the confidence, that those "things" will become a matter of experience and enjoyment. Heb. xi. 1. Such "hope" and "conviction" can only exist where there is a promise; for those who are "strangers from the covenants of promise, have no hope," and are "without God in the world." Eph. ii. 12. Faith is promulgated and imparted to persons "by hearing" (or report), and this is "by the Word of God." Rom. x. 17. Such faith is not an undefined and undefinable abstraction, as the requirement so frequently addressed to "seekers" at the mourner's bench, "only believe," without specifying what is to be believed; but can be clearly stated and submitted to the understanding of persons in plain, Scriptural propositions that mean something, and convey information about God's plan of the ages. According to Paul "There is.....one faith." Eph. iv. 5. This being true, there should be no great difficulty in deciding what it is, especially since there is also but one object of faith—one gospel. Gal. i. 6-9.

The faith, then, that is commended and required as a condition necessary to salvation, is "the faith of the gospel." Phil. i. 27. Since one gospel gives ground for but one faith, what is that gospel? And the answer is at hand, it is "the gospel" which Christ commanded to be preached to every creature, supplemented by the statement, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Mark xvi. 15, 16. It is "this gospel of the kingdom" which Jesus said should be "preached in all the world for a witness to all the nations." Matt. xxiv. 14. It is the same gospel in the promulgation of which he set the pace in Galilee (Matt. iv. 23), and which the disciples, afterward apostles, learned of him. Luke viii. 1. This gospel he sent them to preach, and this they announced. Luke ix. 1, 2, 6. The conversation between the risen Lord and his disciples, in the interim between his resurrection and ascension, concerned "the things pertaining to the kingdom of God." Acts i. 3. This, the seating of the Anointed on David's throne, was also prominent in Peter's discourse on Pentecost. Acts ii. 22-38. Philip's "preaching" at Samaria consisted in "the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ." Acts viii. 5, 12. This the people "believed." At the house of Cornelius Peter gave his full endorsement to "the word which God sent unto the children of Israel..... preaching peace by Jesus Christ," and which "began from Galilee." Acts x. 36-39. At Ephesus Paul "went into the synagogue, and spake boldly for the space of three months reasoning and persuading the things concerning the kingdom of God." And when the opposition of "divers" ones made further labors at the synagogue impossible, he repaired "to the school of one Tyrannus and continued for "the space of two years." Acts xix. 8, 10. He afterward reminded the elders of the Ephesian Church, that he had "gone preaching the kingdom of God, testifying the gospel of the grace of God" among them. Acts xx. 24, 25. To the brethren at Rome he expressed his willingness to "preach the gospel" at that city also (Rom. i. 15); and when opportunity afforded, he was there "testifying the kingdom of God." Later he made arrangements to have persons meet him at his own hired house, and he "received all that came in unto him, preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ, with all confidence." Acts xxviii. 23, 31. Thus we see the character of apostolic preaching in the Acts of the apostles. Who would deny or call in question the statement that the teaching of the early Church not only included, but to a considerable extent consisted of "the things concerning the kingdom of God?" Who can doubt that those who at all credited the work of the apostles, believed the simple message they announced of the kingdom of God to be inherited by the saints at the coming of Christ? Paul lauded the faith of the Thessalonians saying that it was "generally known and acknowledged fact that they had "turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God; and to wait for his Son from heaven." 1 Thes. i. 9, 10. Such was the effect of apostolic preaching on the minds of those persons, which also shows what they had believed. They had been assured, as they also were in Paul's letters to them, of the coming of the Son of God from heaven, and that if they patiently endured persecutions and tribulations, they should be "counted worthy of the kingdom of God," for which (not in which) also they suffered. Thus they would be recompensed for their troubles "when the Lord Jesus should be revealed from heaven." 2 Thes. i. 5-7.

In full view of all this, and vastly more that might be said, we are demanded whether it makes any difference what we believe? We surely can not believe what has not been promised. "The spirit of faith" says, "I have believed, and therefore have I spoken; we also believe, and therefore speak" (2 Cor. iv. 12) the things which we believe. To believe the gospel is to believe what that gospel says or promises. If that promise were that good people, when they die, shall go to heaven, then "the faith of the gospel" would be to credit such statement. If the promise of the gospel to those who love God is a kingdom (Luke xxii. 29, 30; Jas. ii. 5), which shall be, not in heaven, but "under the whole heaven" (Dan. vii. 27), "on the earth" (Rev. v. 10), then the belief of these things, together with becoming action, constitutes that faith. If your faith has no object, and you are not particular as to what you believe, you may believe what you please, and it matters little what it is; but if you are concerned about your salvation, then accept the gospel which God caused to be announced by his Son Jesus Christ, which gospel is on record that men may read, understand, and obey it, and by it be saved. Remember you are dealing with God, who has chosen the gospel as the means of calling men to the glory and kingdom of Jesus Christ. 1 Thes. ii. 12; 2 Thes. ii. 14.

The Church of God holds that this faith is one of the prerequisite conditions for the forgiveness of sins, and means to "stand fast in one spirit, with one mind striving together for the faith of the gospel." Phil. i. 17. He who disbelieves the gospel, discredits God, and tacitly makes him a liar, thereby showing he has no confidence in God's arrangement for his salvation. He rejects Jesus because he rejects the words which were spoken by him (John xii. 47-50), which announce the gospel and are the words of eternal life. John vi. 68. In short, he thus inoperative the very plan inaugurated by God for his salvation. He can not, in that condition, obtain forgiveness of sins.

Reader, you can not afford to treat this matter lightly, for Jesus says, "Whosoever shall be ashamed of me and of my words, of him shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he shall come in his own glory, and in his Father's, and of the holy angels." Luke ix. 26. Paul was "not ashamed of the gospel of Christ," he saw in it the "power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth." Rom. i. 16. Let us see that we are "in the faith" (2 Cor. xiii. 5); then "continue in the faith" (Acts xiv. 22), "keep the faith" (2 Tim. iv. 7), and with all who love the appearing of Jesus Christ we shall receive the crown of righteousness and have an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. 2 Tim. ii. 8; 2 Pet. i. 11.

The Kingdom of God, What Is It? No. 3.

"Verily, verily, I say unto you, except a corn of wheat fall into the ground, and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit." John xii. 24.

"I will overturn, overturn, overturn it, (not destroy) and it shall be no more, until he comes whose right it is, and I will give it him." Ezek. [illegible]

The nature and extent of this overturning are very fully explained, by the prophet Micah, ii. 28. "I will sow her unto me, in the earth." And i. 9, 10, "And it shall come to pass, that in the place where it was said of them, ye are not my people, there it shall be said unto them, ye are the sons of the living God."

That this kingdom of Israel was sown amongst the nations, i. e. "in the earth," that it was overturned, will not be disputed. So much so, was this the case, at the time of the Christ's "first advent," that it had no place amongst the nations of the earth, it was literally buried out of sight, amongst the nations, even as a grain of wheat is buried in "the ground," a condition, evidently absolutely necessary, in order "to bear much fruit," otherwise "it abideth alone."

This, then condition of the kingdom, the Christ explains in parable, was like unto "good seed in his field," the field he explains being the world, seed which would become ripened grain, and eventually be gathered into his barn at the end of the present age.

"Like unto a grain of mustard seed, which a man took, and sowed in his field" eventually to become "a great tree."

"Like unto leaven, which a woman hid in three measures of meal".....a treasure hid in a field, etc.

Plainly demonstrating, beyond a doubt, that the "kingdom of heaven" (which could be none other than the "kingdom of Israel") during the days of the humiliation of Christ, was like unto something hidden, even a hidden treasure, but none the less a kingdom, the "kingdom of heaven."

That the overturning "until he come whose right it is," the sowing "in the earth," the condition of "no more" does not, and cannot possibly mean either destruction or annihilation, is placed beyond all doubt or cavil, and is made equally undisputable, by the same prophet, who declares that, at the same time, in which they shall be "sown in the earth," the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be numbered." Micah i. 10.

Therefore the condition of "no more" can have no reference whatever to their number, but rather to the extinction for the time being, of their paternal name, and recognition as a kingdom, i. e. the kingdom of God, the kingdom of Israel, and that whilst under another name (that of Lo-ammi, Ye are not my people, Micah i. 9) would Jehovah fulfil to them, many great and precious promises made to the fathers to the extent that, in the place where it was said unto them "Ye are not my people" there they would be called "the sons of the living God," all which Zacharias declares, God was at that time about to perform.

It was therefore to them good news, glad tidings, gospel, to learn, that the kingdom of God, which had been so long overturned, until it had lost its identity amongst the nations, was now about to be restored, was "at hand"—had come.

As a grain of wheat in the ground it was now about to spring up, into newness of life, "First the blade, then the ear, then the full corn in the ear," culminating in the coming of the King in all his glory invested with power from on high to take possession thereof, with all his saints, when he will, (at the end of the age) separate the wheat from the tares, and take out of it (the present kingdom of God) all things that offend, and them which do iniquity. That righteousness may cover the earth as the waters cover the sea.

Peter, explaining more fully the redemption spoken of by Zacharias as having come to Israel, where it is said, "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for he hath visited and redeemed his people." Luke i. 68, informs them that they were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold. But with the precious blood of Christ. 1 Peter i. 8 a redemption accomplished by the death of the Christ, irrespective of their faith.

No well informed student of the Scriptures will doubt for a single moment that the redemption to the Israel and people spoken of by Zacharias, and the redemption and those who were redeemed spoken of by Peter, are concerning one and the same people, i. e. the house, a kingdom of of Israel, the seed of Abraham according to the flesh, a condition of things, which many of the Gentiles learned to appreciate in the early days of Christianity, and became one with them, (the house of Israel, to whom the promises were made) thereby obtaining the justification which cometh by faith, and enjoyed the hope of the promised eternal life, with eternal inheritance of the kingdom.

That Paul so understood and so taught, we learn Gal. iv. 4 that "When the fulness of time was come," (that is when the covenant must be ratified by the death of the testator), God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law to redeem those that were under the law.

These words were addressed to those under the law, i. e., the house or kingdom of Israel. The Gentiles were never given the law, hence were never under the law, therefore it could not be said of them that they were redeemed from it.

As already stated, the covenants made with Abraham and the fathers were of none effect or force, until after the death of the testator. Heb. ix. 16. The fulfilment of the promises in their progressive order, had hitherto waited the death of the testator. And now that the Christ had died for their sins according to the Scriptures, blotting out the hand writing of the ordinances, which were against us (the house of Israel) which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross. The hindrance to the fulfilment of these many great and precious promises had been removed, and the kingdom of God and its restoration were next in order.

Such was the glad tidings, which John the Baptist, came preaching in the wilderness of Judea, saying, Repent for the kingdom of heaven is at hand when there went out to him Jerusalem, and all Judea, and all the region round about, and were baptized of him in the Jordan, confessing their sins.

Such was the good news which the Christ, (after John was put in prison), went throughout all Galilee and into every city and village preaching and shewing the same glad tidings of the kingdom, testifying that it was at hand.

Such was the gospel which the apostles went everywhere preaching, called "the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ; glorious truth, precious saving truths, a kingdom which shall eventually cover the earth with righteousness, glad tidings which the church in every age are called upon to sow beside all waters.

The kingdom of God, the kingdom of Israel, although now known by another name, Micah i. 9, are living witnesses to the faithfulness of God, and to the authenticity of the Scriptures. But alas, "Who hath believed our report?" Must it be said of us in this our day, Oh foolish and slow of heart to believe all that is written in the law and the prophets.

Verily, The kingdom of God is within you, that is amongst you, and ye have not observed it. It has come, and that truly without observation, (which cannot be said of the church), and it is here to stay, possessing all the blessings, and characteristics embodied in the unconditional promises made to the fathers, and as illustrated in the parables of the Christ, and that in progressive order. Beginning first as a grain of wheat in the ground at the days of Christ's first advent, continuing in its development agreeably with the promises and prophecies, even unto the present time.

When the Christ comes in all his glory, and the glory of the Father, and all the holy angels with him, with 10,000 of his saints, when every eye shall see him, and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him. He comes in all his splendor and glory, not to receive a kingdom, whose insignificance may be compared to a grain of mustard seed, the smallest of all seeds. No, most assuredly not. That seed like condition of the kingdom, has long years ago become a thing of the past. He comes with his bride, the church (not the kingdom) to receive dominion glory and a kingdom, the extent of which underlies the whole heavens. Dan. vii. 14, 27.

This language cannot possibly be construed to mean a kingdom without glory or dominion, even as a grain of mustard seed, the smallest of all seeds, or as a grain of wheat, or as a small stone from the mountain. On the contrary it is a glorious triumphal entrance with his bride, into the possession of that dominion, glory and kingdom, to which previous thereto, they were but heirs, joint heirs together.

Therefore, we should have no hesitation in preaching "The kingdom of God has come" which is the kingdom of the Christ prospectively, and which will be in his fact, when he comes in all his glory and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit down upon the throne of his glory, and there shall be gathered before him all the nations of the earth. Matt. xxv. 31. Having this glorious triumphal appearance in view, the Laodicean or last stage of the church, are reminded that it is "He that overcometh I will grant to sit with me on my throne, even as I have overcome, and sat down with my Father on his throne." Rev. iii. 21.

The throne and kingdom of the Christ is the glory of the future age. Now it is but prospective, then it will be present and in fact. In no other sense than that of the prospective can be understood the language of Paul Col. i. 13, "He hath delivered us from the power of darkness and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son." Not until there is no more sin, no more death, can it be said truthfully or Scripturally, that we are delivered from the power of darkness, in fact. We learn that he hath abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light. Yet we know that death still reigns. It is abolished, but prospectively, not in fact.

Again, "He that believeth hath everlasting life," but no one, intelligent in the Scriptures, would ever dream of intimating that they now were enjoying the possession of eternal life. If such was really the case, then would they not die, and we know that the grim monster death stalks through every land, causing rivers of tears to flow, and thousands of hearts to ache.

Eternal life is one of the many precious promises, conditional upon faith, which like the abolishing of death, the deliverance from the power of darkness and immortality is brought to light in the gospel. Precious promises which shall find full fruition, when they who have fallen asleep in Christ shall rise first, and we who are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord. 1 Cor iv. 16, 17.

It is at the resurrection of the just, when this mortal shall have put on immortality; when this corruption shall have put on incorruption. Then shall be brought to pass the saying that it is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. 1 Cor. xv. 54. Then shall we in fact be delivered from death, and him that hath the power of death, that is the devil, the power of darkness, simultaneously with our translation into the kingdom of his dear Son.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Earnest Work Needed.

I presume no reader will take exceptions to the statement that real earnest heart work is very much needed amid the trials and perplexities incident to the close of this Gentile age. But, beloved in the Lord, are you personally willing to co-operate? Is your heart burdened for the salvation of sinners, who are perishing because they know not what they must do to be saved? Are you willing to offer your self upon the altar as a living sacrifice that the perishing may be rescued? If you are, then I am willing to join hands with you, that we may together "throw out the life line," that the perishing may be rescued.

For many years through the channel of the pen and printing press, I have published glad tidings, God has blessed both me and the work. I still intend to continue this work, but I now desire to add the living voice to the pen, and come in personal contact with my auditors. Now this can be done only through your personal sacrifice and co-operation. Are you willing to do it?

My purpose is, if you co-operate, to take a trip throughout the United States and the Dominion of of Canada, proclaiming the gospel of the kingdom to the perishing, and do what little I can in assisting to encourage, strengthen and build up those who have already become obedient to the faith. I can do this only by your aid. Are you willing to share the work?

Now, if any individual or congregation would like to have me hold a series of meetings in your neighborhood, in any place between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, and the Dominion of Canada, please write and say so, as soon as convenient. My purpose in desiring to receive all calls at once is that I may arrange the trip with appointments lying nearest to each other, in order that traveling expenses may be saved, in going from place to place. When I find I am nearing your place, by having the appointment in advance, I can then write and make definite appointments as to time.

If you would desire a visit from me when near your neighborhood, please write at once and say so. Address 420 North Willow Avenue, Austin Station, Chicago, Ill.

Do you like to get THE RESTITUTION each week and read the articles and letters it contains? Did you ever think that your brother who sits near you would get a like benefit and enjoyment if he had it also? Get him to subscribe for 1902. It will cost you very little to ask him, and you may be the means of doing him good.

Confidence of God's Children.

Heb. iv. 16, I have selected as the foundation of my remarks this morning. It reads as follows:—"Let us therefore come boldly to the throne of grace, (favor) that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need." In this select group of sons and daughters of the Lord God Almighty, it should not be necessary to remind any one of the contextual argument leading up to our text as a resultant, practical lesson. Every child of God ought to be very familiar with it,—and regard it as of paramount importance. The epistle to the Hebrews is to a great extent, if not altogether, made up of inspired comments on the law and practical lessons and exhortations for those who have accepted Christ as the END OF THE LAW.

Jesus is proved to be the Messiah; then he is proven to be greater than angels, greater than Moses, greater than Aaron and all the high priests; that every sacrifice under it pointed to its sacrifice; that without the shedding of his blood there was no remission of sins; and the vast superiority of the gospel system over the law. The Jews presumed greatly on their ecclesiastical privileges and the splendor of their temple service, and naturally shrank from the simplicity of the Christian worship. They, doubtless, would address the followers of the Nazarene, somewhat after this fashion:—"Ye are entirely destitute of those things without which there can be no religion; we still have all those privileges; return to us, lest you die in that deception." But to such the apostle replies,—"We have a great High Priest, who is passed into the heavens themselves, Jesus, the Son of God. Let us therefore, in view of of our High Priest, hold fast our profession. Apostasy would be infamous under such circumstances! We must not sell out so cheaply as that. Besides, the utmost the law and its typical service can do for us if ever so strictly observed, is done in this life. These shadows cannot save; these types are, in fact now no longer even types. The substance having come there is no use for them. "Therefore let us hold fast our profession We are the house of God, and we have a great High Priest,—not a son of Aaron, but Jesus the Son of God,—Aaron and his successors could only enter the typical holy of holies, and that but once a year, which was only a type of that into which our High Priest has entered—yes, he has passed into the heavens and so our advantages are infinitely greater than those under the law. The lesson drawn from these considerations and facts by the apostle in our text, is exceedingly natural and encouraging,—"Having, therefore,

SUCH A HIGH

Priest now appearing in the very presence of God for us, "Let us come boldly unto the throne of grace." So you see, far from having anything dismal to apprehend we everything to expect and anticipate. God is on his throne of grace, and we have nothing to fear as long as Jesus, our Mediator, appears before him for us; and remember, we have not to watch and wait for the yearly day of atonement. Oh, no; our Mediator is ever at his post, —he ever liveth to make intercession for us. And we read in Romans viii. 26, 27, that the spirit also helpeth our infirmities,—for we know not what we should pray for, as we ought. Mark the word ought—we ought to know what to pray for,—it is fit and proper to know what to pray for; it behooves us to know what to pray for. And this fact leads to another conclusion; viz., that God would not say we ought to know what to pray for, unless he had furnished us with the means of knowing, and so our ignorance witnesses against us. But instead of discarding us for negligence he supplies means for our relief. The Spirit helps our infirmities; the Spirit maketh intercession for us with

INEXPRESSIBLE GROANING.

If we dwell upon this statement long enough to let it permeate the whole heart it will be a grand thing for us. The love and condescension of God for his poor, weak, erring children stands out in bold relief here, beloved; indeed it almost seems too much,—yes, almost too much, but thus it is written. These words are true and faithful. I bespeak for this passage—Rom. viii. 26, 27 a careful and prayerful consideration by all,—but I want to add another word or two. What of this Spirit that intercedes for us with such intensity? What is it,—or who is it? Have we after all made a mistake in discarding what is popularly held to be the third person in the Trinity? Oh, no! Our text and its context shows plainly who our intercessor is; and if any one be perplexed with the employment of the word spirit in connection with that great High Priest, —let me give you the testimony that seems to have been given 1900 years ago for us to use, to silence the apostate advocates of in these last days. It is found in 2 Cor. iii. 17, for it says, "Now the Lord is that Spirit; and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty." But am I quite sure that the Lord Jesus is the Lord who is said to be that Spirit? Yes; quite sure of it, because we are distinctly told that this mediatorial work is his work,—and (2) that there is only one Mediator. This same apostle in 1 Cor. xv. 45, says that "the first man Adam was made a living soul, the last Adam was made a quickening Spirit." I am afraid that we do not fully realize this special work of the Lord, the Spirit in this direction; and if that be so, can we be in the most receptive frame of mind for such assistance?

IS IT GOD'S PLAN

to bestow what we neither ask for, nor expect? I sincerely hope we may be all so benefitted by the Word of the Spirit this morning that we shall devote more attention to this matter, and I conceive that the way to begin is to remember that we OUGHT to know what to pray for. The Word is fully competent to inform us what to pray for; and it is this fact that makes it our duty to know. And it makes it our duty to know the loving kindness of our Father in heaven appear, oh, so great, when, notwithstanding our own culpability by neglecting his divine instruction,—yes; notwithstanding all this, he graciously gives us special spiritual help to pray aright,—if at heart we love God, and are the called according to his purpose. I beg of you all not to dismiss this part of the subject without a thorough examination.

Turning to our text we find many important considerations. 1st, it is addressed to members of Christ's Body, and to no others, certainly. They who have a great High Priest, who need help, and need it often. Some have trials in their family, some poverty in their circumstances,—afflictions in their persons or relatives,—and a great fight of faith with and every weak believer is proffered assistance all along the line. There God is on the throne,—but it is a family throne of favor, the place of mercy, —the place where pardon is dispensed to the penitent, healing to the backslider, succor to the tempted, and suitable help for every necessity of his children. Mercy is one thing every one needs; and every one is invited to come boldly, that is, after such an invitation we should approach the throne with confidence, only this can demonstrate our faith,—proves that we TAKE GOD AT HIS WORD.

While it is true that he must be enquired of, it is also true that this requirement is for man's benefit, not God's. It positively is not necessary first to conciliate the Almighty before he will pardon. The language of this Scripture forbids any such idea. The invitation we are considering

COMES FROM GOD,—

he says to poor fallible mortals, come to the throne of grace, come and obtain mercy. Here is mercy for the taking. All things are ready. Mercy is just what we need, but it is not altogether said in reference to sin, it is OPPOSED TO MERIT.

What is given without an equivalent, is given in mercy. No sinner can have any merit—why even the hierarchy of heaven live on God's bounty. Every created being is a dependent being, that can neither deserve his own being, nor merit its continuance. The use of all his powers belongs to God—they are his property. Oh what different persons we would be if we always realized what I have just said. Bearing in mind that it is Paul inviting his brethren to come with him to the throne where God dispenses favors to his children, we see that the act of coming implies a consciousness of necessity—something is a wanting. It implies a conviction of God's goodness; confidence that he will do just what he promises; and it implies earnestness suitable to the danger of the situation. And then we are to come to the throne for a particular purpose, —to find favor, not something we have a claim to, or merit; and the way the apostle puts it shows that he who goes to God intelligently and earnestly is sure to find what he seeks to find.

THE THRONE OF GRACE

is the place to find grace, the only place to find favor—it is useless to seek it elsewhere. But the manner of approach is also prescribed for us. We are invited to come boldly. There are many definitions of boldness which cannot apply here. There is nothing approaching to rashness here, or overfamiliarity, no daring or vanity is encouraged here,—but the simple confidence of a child in its parent,—liberty of speech or address,—we may fairly assume to be the sense intended, because we are invited to come; and because we come in the name with which the Father is well pleased,—and; as in eastern countries no one can approach a superior without a suitable gift, we after a similar manner approach the Majesty of God—the gift being

THE LAMB WITHOUT SPOT.

Convinced of the worth and dignity of this gift the officer approaches with confidence and has liberty of speech, that is the liberty to supplicate and praise. Boldness in the common acceptation is excluded; but the humblest saint knows he has an intercessor who will introduce him, and plead his case, and can use his name. I would here call attention to the universality of the invitation, and the boundless resources of our Father. In the present life we are frequently in danger, necessity and tribulation. Dangers from which we cannot by our strength or wisdom escape; necessities against which no prudence can provide; and tribulations through which it would be impossible to pass without

DIVINE HELP.

But the infinite resources of our God and Father are more than equal to every emergency. The God in whom we trust cannot be taken at a disadvantage; he is able, willing, and anxious to help in time of need,—that is, for timely assistance; or as the Diglott translation reads, "We should therefore approach with confidence to the throne of favor for seasonable help." The learned say, though, that while the original word is properly rendered assistance, help, support,—it at the same time implies assistance afforded in consequence of the earnest cry of a person in distress; as the word signifies making one think of the tremendous efforts of a fire company to reach the place where the cry of alarm came from; showing by the Spirit's selection of terms how ready to help or eager to succor our heavenly Father is. The words, "Time of need" deserve more than a passing notice. They contain no sanction for the habit of brooding over some possible ill tomorrow. We are not to cry today; that we may be helped at some indefinite future. We must call for mercy for sin when we need it; we must ask assistance when we need it. This is part of our boldness or confidence. But, although we are forbidden to heap the trials of tomorrow, upon those of today, we constantly need divine assistance to overcome evil,—to properly perform duties devolving upon us. And, in addition to this, we often need for sudden trials. We may be subjected to violent temptations, distressing losses, sudden calls for extraordinary exertions,—or to perform duties to which we are not accustomed, or to instances of self-abnegation for which we are ill prepared; but our text seems to cover all these emergencies. It seems to assure us that the help will be as sudden as the call,—and as powerful as the case is arduous, and therefore there is no necessity of failing in a time of trouble, and indeed no possibility of failing in a cloudy and dark day if we heed the heavenly directions and accept the divine assistance offered. And eternity alone will be able to tell what damage is sustained by neglecting them, and the obtained by attending to them. It was very recently that I spoke to you of the hardening process that sets in through the deceitfulness of sin, and I tell you we must keep our consciences tender, or else we will not feel the constant need of divine help, and then of course we will not care to keep up the supply by coming for it, and the result will be that the flesh in which dwells no good thing will flatter itself that it is every way competent to take direction of itself; but the last end of such is far worse than the first. Not to further extend these expository remarks, let us note some of the practical lessons for us here. 1st, the flesh so wars against the Spirit that imperfections mark all our steps. Even if we do not always take cognizance of our mistakes, we must remember that God looks upon us with purer eyes: he can see them. This points to another lesson, if we were not justified by faith, we would be for ever numbered with the unjust. Still another lesson: although we be justified by faith and have peace with God today we would be unjust again tomorrow, but for the gracious provision made for us in the throne for dispensing favors to disobedient children,—the throne where help is obtained for the needy at all times,—yes, this is where his erring little ones because he knows their frames and remembers they are dust,—that is, he does it, yes; he does it if they confess and forsake their evil and thus prove their hearts to be right and forgive those who trespass against them. This is an absolute condition of forgiveness. Thirdly, the lesson is

SPECIAL ASSISTANCE

AN OBJECT LESSON.

He not only provides a way by which we can maintain a justified standing before God, and publishes the fact that we may avail ourselves of it, but he sends an urgent message to us, inviting us to come, and to come boldly, —confidently, expectantly, to the place where he condescends to meet men in the person of his adorable Son our great High Priest. Brothers and sisters, when a God of such infinite love cannot allow any to have access to him except through another, it should show how sin is in his sight. It is only when Jesus has become our sin-covering that he will hear us. Let us try to realize it here and now,—even when justified by faith, as yet we cannot approach God in our own name. O, beloved, does the infinite pains taken to enable us to receive all the help necessary to share God's great salvation draw you towards him this morning? Does it lift you up when you think of Jesus passing into the heavens as the great High Priest over [illegible] took with him all the sympathies he manifested on earth. Oh, he is the same kind, gentle, condescending, generous, faithful friend now as he was then. Let us all contemplate once more the divine endeavor to keep us by his powerful Word of promise—in such a condition that we shall at last receive from him the plaudit, "Well done." But I want to say to the

WEARY AND DISCOURAGED ONES,

"Cast thy burden upon the Lord,—he is touched with the feelings of your infirmities. He was tempted just as you are, and never once yielded to it. He knows all about weariness, weakness, pain and grief by actual experience. He was familiar with all kinds of suffering. He endured poverty, and scorn, and fatigue, and torture. He struggled under infirmity, and passed whole nights in prayer. But perhaps no single expression so completely identifies his capacity for sympathy as that recorded on the prophetic page ages before he was born,

"THE MAN OF SORROWS, and acquainted with grief." Yes, weary and distressed one, remember Jesus,—let the thought of his compassionate nature encourage you to struggle and pray on. His love cannot change, he knows all the peculiarities of you, case,—he not only knows all—he feels all, and will succor all if they come. No human conception can grasp the depths of his love. If you realize that you are as much the object of his tender care, as if there were no others to care for,—he will be a supplicant at the throne of grace for you, and having cast your burdens upon the Lord you will be able to say with joy unspeakable and full of glory, even now,

"THE LORD IS MY SHEPHERD,

I shall not want." And if there be one before me this morning who has not yet taken the steps which entitle one to the exalted privileges of let me affectionately say to such that the way is clear this morning—with outstretched arms the good Shepherd invites you to his fold. Yes; the gate stands wide open this morning, and the same Jesus is saying, "Come unto me all ye who are weary of sin, and I will relieve. If you are not weary of that load it is useless to come. If not weary enough to unload, I trust that you may soon realize the loathsomeness of sin as well as its weight, and so be constrained to say,

GOD'S ADOPTED CHILDREN,

OH, LAMB OF GOD,

I come, I come. We verily believe the Lord is at hand to come,—only about three months ago I showed how surely and rapidly the various lines of prophecy were converging; but wonderful changes have taken place since then,—and every move upon the world's great chess board goes to show that we surely have read the outlines of God's purpose in the earth from the prophetic Word. Jesus will execute his long foretold programme on time,—and those who would share the royalty of King Jesus must take oath to his administration without delay. When he rises up the door into the kingdom closes. May all be wise and consider the latter end. Amen.

Corea Defies the Czar.

Under the above heading we find in the Chicago Tribune the following correspondence from St. Petersburg. It will be of interest to all who are on the lookout for news concerning the antagonism between Russia and England. We give the article in detail:

"Russia's waning prestige in Corea is the subject of an article in the Novoe Vremya, by M. Syromiatnikoff, an expert in the eastern question. He begins by quoting the following from a Corean newspaper:

"The English and Japanese minister and Councilor Kato of the Corean court have come to an agreement. In important questions of internal administration and foreign affairs England and Japan will support Corea in the maintenance of her independence, and Corea obligates herself to develop her marine and army in due measure. In case Corea needs a foreign loan she may place it only in Japan, England, or America. Foreigners cannot enter the Corean service. Immediate measures must be taken to defend Corean territory, and protest must be made against the enterprises of other powers which appear to interfere with the defense of Corea."

M. Syromiatnikoff comments as follows:

"Every one who follows oriental affairs is aware that every step of Russia since the Chinese war has met with ever increasing opposition in Corea." —The [illegible] quoted in the beginning now gives legal form to the actual supremacy of Japan and England in Corea, which began with the Anglo-Japanese alliance.

In detail it is related how the nomination of Japanese Kato as councilor of the court on Feb. 17 of this year met with the protest of the Russian minister who informed the Corean ministry of foreign affairs that if a Japanese subject was named councilor of the court Russia would demand the appointment of M. Alexieff as councilor of the ministry of finances.

In spite of all, however, the appointment of Kato was proceeded with.

On Feb. 15 the Russian minister informed the Corean foreign office that, as Japan had been given the right to lay telegraphic cables along the Corean coasts, Russia desired the consent of Corea to the union of their telegraphic lines at Gensan. Corea refused and sent forces to destroy the lines already constructed across the frontier.

The Russian minister then notified the Corean government that an attempt to interrupt the continuation of the telegraph line from Vladivostok to Gensan would be deemed an inimical act and would be followed by unfriendly relations between the two governments. Nevertheless Russia again yielded and proposed another route from Seoul to a junction with the Russian line to Pekin.

At the same period Corea bought $100,000 worth of ordnance, and an English artillerist was sent to instruct the Corean gunners.

"The greatest danger for Russia," says this writer, "would be for England and Japan to establish a naval station in the south of Corea which would cut Vladivostok off from Port Arthur."

He fears the agreement of 1900 forbidding any such station would not prevent some British company under cover of commercial rights from building docks, cannon, foundries, etc.

This long series of checks has, it is admitted, seriously diminished in prestige, which was so high in 1898. The remedy, says M. Syromiatnikoff, lies in closer commercial relations, more consulates and Russian banks, calls of Russian steamers at Corean ports, and support of the Chinese, who are now handicapped by adverse financial and steamer connections. He also recommends more frequent display of the Russian war flag in Corean waters. The concluding words are:

"We have learned, it would seem, enough. In any event, the Japanese have not got such good descriptions of Corea nor such excellent maps of Corea as we possess."

Speaking of the trouble in Eastern Galicia the Vienna Neue Freie Presse says: "The average mortality from famine for several years past, aggregated 50,000. Laborers' wages range from 8 to 10 cents a day and women from 4 to 8 cents a day. The peasants rarely taste bread and exist chiefly on a soup the principal ingredients of which are water and herbs. In Galicia the laborers are striking for an increase in wages of 6 cents a day for men and 3 cents a day for women to double that amount. There have been many conflicts between the striking peasants and the military. In one encounter between the strikers and the military thirteen persons were killed and 110 wounded and in another case 200 persons were killed or wounded. Advices were received from Lemberg, Galicia, last night to the effect that the strike showed signs of coming to an end, compromises having been reached in several districts, and the military authorities having quelled the disturbances in others.

Regarding the work of Dr. Herzl and the Zionist movement the following dispatch will be of interest to our readers who are watching to see what will be done. "The Sultan has refused to grant important concessions to Jews who desire to settle in Palestine. Dr. Theodore Herzl, founder of the Zionist movement and head of the Palestine association, and Dr. Wolffson, president of the Jewish colonial trust, have returned here from Constantinople. They report that their conferences with representatives of the sultan with reference to the proposed settlement of Zionists in Palestine have been without result. In reply to Dr. Herzl's written statements on the subject the sultan expressed sympathy with the Jews in their purposes and named certain concessions which he would grant. These, however, did not meet the requirements of the Zionists. Dr. Herzl says he still has hopes of being able to convince the porte of the beneficial results which would come from the settlement of Jews in Palestine.

We have recently written and sent out to those owing us many [illegible] with the view of getting money from those who should renew, that we may pay our bills. It is absolutely necessary that we hear from each one we have addressed. It is of vital importance to us and you as well that prompt attention be given. Let each one who received a letter make immediate response, and any one whose time is out, but was missed in writing, please see that your subscription is paid without delay. Where mistakes have been made, kindly let us know, and we will be pleased to make the correction. We wish to give no offense by letting you know how your account stands, and our only excuse for writing is our necessity. Please look at your letter kindly, and reply at once. We urge haste because our case is so urgent.

Notice of the Nebraska Conference is given this week. Brethren, heed these calls, and go and give your strength toward making them profitable gatherings.

Poetry.

The Master's Questions.

Have ye looked for sheep in the desert,
For those who have missed their way?
Have you trodden the lonely highway,
The foul and the darksome street?
It may be ye'd see in the gloaming
The print of my wounded feet.

Have ye folded home to your bosom
The trembling neglected lamb,
And taught to the little lost one
The sound of the Shepherd's name?
Have ye searched for the poor and needy,
With no clothing, no home, no bread?
The Son of Man was among them—
He had nowhere to lay his head.

Have ye carried the living water
To the parched and thirsty soul?
Have ye said to the sick and wounded,
"Christ Jesus maketh thee whole?"
Have ye told my fainting children
Of the strength of the Father's hand?
Have ye guided the tottering footsteps
To the shore of the "golden land?"

Have ye stood by the sad and weary
To smooth the pillow of death,
To comfort the sorrow stricken,
And strengthen the feeble faith?
And have ye felt, when the glory
Has streamed through the open door,
And lifted across the shadows,
That there I had been before?

Have you wept with the broken-hearted
In their agony of woe?—
Ye might hear me whispering beside you
"'Tis the pathway I often go!"
My brethren, my friend, my disciples,
Can ye dare to follow me?
Then, wherever the Master dwelleth,
There shall thy servant be!

Can Anything be Settled by an Appeal to the Bible? No. 2.

Believing it to be a revelation touching the most momentous question that ever has, or ever can engage the attention of the human mind, I must say, yes. But the appeal must be made directly to the Scriptures themselves without reference to "the faith of the fathers" or "the fitness of things." "The faith of the fathers" may be wrong—indeed is wrong; and therefore, to expound the Bible in harmony with this, is to utterly miss the truth.

Several hundred years before the Christian era, Socrates and Plato, leaders of thought in their day, taught the doctrine of the immateriality and immortality of the human soul. The doctrine, though far from having been universally adopted by the Greek philosophic sects that afterward arose, found adherents in Greece and Rome and the far East. After the days of the apostles when there was no inspired man like Paul to guard the faith, errors began to creep into the church, and corrupt the simple and harmonious system of truth handed out by inspired apostles and prophets. It was not long until the doctrine of the immortality of the soul came in through the introduction of men into the church, who held this notion, and who like Origen believed the Bible could be made to harmonize with Plato; and that many passages found in the inspired volume lent undoubted support to the doctrine in question; that without Plato's notion as a key these Scriptures could not be explained. The parable of the rich man and Lazarus; Christ's answer to the thief's request; Paul's desire to depart and be with Christ, absent from the body and present with the Lord, and others of this class of texts were thought to fairly yield a meaning in perfect agreement with Plato. It mattered not to these expounders of the Word as to what became of plain and positive statements. It is not difficult to see that the adoption of so arbitrary a mode of handling the Scriptures could but result in the perversion of nearly all inspired truth. To interpret the plain passages by an inference unfairly drawn from an obscure passage is to violate the rules of sound criticism. No one would think of doing this with any purely human composition, from the fact that to do so would be to set aside the laws of language, thereby rendering it a hopeless task to ascertain the meaning of an author. It is in place to here quote the universally acknowledged rule of interpretation as given by the "judicious Hooker." He said, "I hold it for a most infallible rule in exposition of sacred Scripture that, when a literal construction will stand, the farthest from the letter is commonly the worst. There is nothing more dangerous than this licentious and deluding art, which changes the meaning of words, as alchemy doth or would do the substance of metals, making of anything what it pleases, and bringing in the end all truth to nothing." He who looses sight of this common sense rule will find himself in the fog the moment he starts out; and at sea without chart or compass to drift hither and thither. A theory that ignores the laws of language and plays loose with the meaning of words will bring all truth to nothing. In the light of Hooker's rule, which is but saying in the light of a common sense and every day applied rule we must believe Gen. ii. 7 as it reads: "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul." No one is able to give a valid reason why it should not be understood according to its grammatical sense. We would naturally expect a plain statement here. God is giving a direct and detailed statement or history of creation; of which man's creation forms a very important part. We have not here an incidental allusion to the facts, but a composition properly historical, and consecutively arranged; and bearing upon the face of it the design to acquaint man with facts which he ought to know, and especially the fact of his own creation.

Again we would naturally understand the language of Gen. ii. 7 to be sufficiently comprehensive as to state the whole truth on the point of man's creation, as to his composition and the means employed to make him a living soul. There is no room for the expositor to step in and make additions to this language as if inspiration failed to grasp and give us the whole truth on the point. Any attempt to do so is to call in question the wisdom, the veracity and the purpose of God.

Surely the question of man's nature is here settled beyond any reasonable doubt; and later Scriptures confirm what these opening chapters so clearly teach. The appeal to the Bible on this point is not in vain. It is not the old fiddle men have imagined it to be. No inference is to be arrayed against the plain statements of the Scriptures; nor can this be done without bringing this truth to nothing. Obscure passages are to be explained in the light of the plain passages, is a rule which men who are bound to fall in the pit choose to reverse. With this fundamental doctrine of man's nature many other doctrines harmonize. The coming of the Lord and the resurrection of the dead in the light of it gather about them an importance they can never have from the popular standpoint.

His Beloved Sleeps.

Died at his late residence in Lebanon, Ill., on Thursday, July 24, 1902, at 2:30 A. M. William Townsend, aged 77 years, 1 month and 9 days.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer, at the Presbyterian church, on Saturday afternoon, July 26, 1902, at 2 o'clock P. M., and he was buried at College Hill cemetery. He leaves a widow and five daughters and an aged brother to mourn his loss.

Brother Townsend came to a knowledge of the glad tidings of the coming kingdom principally through reading THE RESTITUTION, and the books and tracts advertized therein, and there being no brethren connected with the Church of God within reach, he was baptized by a Christian church minister.

He grew very strong in the faith, and on his death bed requested that no preacher of Platonic philosophy be allowed to conduct funeral services over him. He had formed an attachment for the writer, on account of my articles published in THE RESTITUTION, and his family promised him that they would endeavor to secure my services for that occasion.

On Saturday afternoon a large and respectable audience gathered in the Presbyterian church, which was addressed by the writer on topics relating to the gospel of the kingdom which was so precious to our aged brother's heart. The audience paid respectful attention. After the service the procession moved to College Hill Cemetery, where the last marks of respect were paid to our sleeping brother. We then left him to await the second coming of Jesus and the first resurrection which will be the resurrection of the blessed and holy ones. Awaiting that glad hour, he will sleep in Jesus. Above his resting place is spread the great dome of heaven, in which stars like diamonds show forth their beauty and reflect the power and glory of the Creator in whom he trusted. In the leafy bowers of College Hill, beneath which he rests, the feathery songsters will flirt and pour forth their notes of melody, and flowers enshrouding his lonely home, will exhale their fragrance, and show forth their beauty, while the sleeper in Jesus rests, and the bow of hope spans the chasm between the vale of tears and the evergreen shore.

How beautifully the poet expresses the sleep of the just, which is applicable to our brother.

"The winds breathe low; the yellow leaf
Scarce whispers from the tree,
So gently flows the parting breath
When good men cease to be.
How beautiful on all the hills
The crimson light is shed;
'Tis like the peace the Christian gives
To mourners round his bed.
How mildly on the wandering cloud,
The sunset beam is cast;
So sweet the memory left behind,
When loved ones breathe their last.
And lo, above the dews of night,
The star of hope appears;
So faith ignites up the mourner's heart
Whose eyes are dim with tears.
Night falls, but soon the morning light
Its glories shall restore;
And thus the eyes that sleep in death,
Shall wake to close no more."

During my further sojourn with the family, I expounded the way of the Lord more perfectly. On Sunday evening the widow and one daughter decided to put on Christ in baptism. On Monday morning the family, myself and some neighbors, went to Silver Leaf Creek, where I buried these dear people with Christ in baptism. May God bless them.

I am also anxious that the remaining members of the family should likewise put on Christ. Dear ones, there is no peace like the sweet rest we have in Jesus, in the consciousness of sins forgiven by obedience to the faith. May God impress upon you to think very seriously about this matter.

On Tuesday morning I bid farewell to the family, feeling grateful to them for the kind hospitality I received at their hands, and many efforts made to minister to my comfort.

"A little while to keep the oil from failing,
A little while faith's flickering lamp to trim;
And then the Bridegroom's coming footsteps hailing,
We'll haste to meet him with the Bridal hymn."

W. H. Wilson.

"The Rest That Remaineth for the People of God."

"They (the Israelites) could not enter into his rest because of unbelief."

Paul, addressing his brethren says, "Let us therefore fear, lest a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it. For unto us was the gospel preached as well as unto them; but the word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it." Heb. iii. 18; iv. 1-2.

In the context of this passage the apostle had been speaking of Moses and Christ, the former as a faithful servant in another's house; and the latter as a Son over his own house; whose house the believers in the things spoken of the land are, "if they hold fast the confidence and rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end."

He then introduces the case of the fourth generation as a warning of the fatal consequences of letting go the hope of the promise. He quotes from a Scripture written in the fourteenth generation, in which the Holy Spirit repeats the sentence upon them, and upon all like them, who harden their hearts, saying, "They shall not enter into my rest." Psa. xcv. 7.

What rest is here spoken of? The peaceable possession and enjoyment of the land so highly commended by Caleb. They did not enter in, but were turned back towards the Red Sea, and wandered in the wilderness for forty years until the carcasses of all the rebels above twenty years old fell to their lowest estate. But the fifth generation obtained the rest under Joshua when they possessed the land. No, says the apostle, they did not; "for if Joshua had given them rest, then would God not have spoken afterward of another day."

The rest which Joshua gave the nation was only transitory. When he and his associates of the fifth generation died, the nations which God had not driven out, were as thorns in their sides which gave them but little rest in after years. "There remaineth then," saith he, "a rest for the people of God;" even Canaan, in the age to come, under Shiloh, the Prince of Peace, whose "rest shall be glorious," and undisturbed by war's alarms.

Now this rest under Shiloh was preached unto them. The possession under which Joshua was the first step to the full accomplishment of the covenant. Had the nation continued to obey the Lord's voice, and to keep the covenant, and when Christ came received him as King on the proclamation of the gospel, they would doubtless have been in Canaan until now; and he might have come here this, and be now reigning in Jerusalem, King of the Jews and Lord of the nations. But had this been the case, we Gentiles would have no part in the kingdom. We might attain unto eternal life at the end of the reign; but in the glory of the kingdom, and in the administration of its affairs, as heirs of the world with Abraham and his seed, we should have had no part; for it was the unbelief of the forty-second generation of Israel that became the riches of the Gentiles.

The fourth generation "could not enter in because of unbelief." Neither can we unless we believe what they rejected: for the same gospel that was preached to them, was preached by the apostles to the forty-second generation:.....God's rest in Canaan—by which is not meant that all his saints will be living there, though all that abide there will be a righteous people: the things which belong to Canaan will overspread the world; and where there are nations to be governed there will be saints to rule—but this rest is the great theme of the gospel whether preached by Moses, by Jesus, or by the apostles. The rest and the kingdom are but different terms, though substantially the same. They will both be of Canaan, and are both the subject of the promise made of God to Abraham and his seed forever.—Selected by Mrs. C. W. Russell.

Dear ones of like precious faith:

On Saturday July 26th Bro. Zilmer came to Hillsburg church according to appointment, and on Sunday morning the little band came up from Sheridan and with them a young gentleman and his wife, and we are glad now to introduce this young gentleman as Bro. McCory of Brazil, Ind., for on Sunday morning he came forward and in the afternoon Bro. Zilmer immersed him into the all saving name of Jesus Christ. After the services Sunday night the little band with father and Brother Zilmer returned to Sheridan, where Bro. Zilmer preached three nights; had a pleasant and we trust a profitable meeting. My husband and I were permitted to attend the meeting Monday night held at Sister Truby's. Next meeting day (4th Sunday in Aug.) we hope to meet dear Bro. Wagoner, who has promised to preach for us during Bro. Zilmer's absence.

Obituary.

Died, Clara the dear little daughter of Arthur J. and Lydia Chaplin; she was born Aug. 1, 1901, and died Aug. 1, 1902. All that care and loving friends could do was done to withstay the hand of that cruel enemy death. But he gained the victory and after ten days of terrible suffering with inflamation of bowels and congestion of the brain, the little darling passed away. Funeral services were conducted at the house by Bros. Miller and Williams. Masses of beautiful flowers, the tribute of dear ones, surrounded and covered her little casket. And at the close of services rested on her little resting place. So she rests in the Geude Springs cemetery beside her little sister Marie, and the home is so lonely without her sweet face, and in vain we listen for the patter of baby feet, and to feel the clasp of baby arms. But she will come again from the land of the enemy.

Lydia Chaplin.

Died July 19, 1902, of cholera infantum, Byron, aged two years, two months and a few days, the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Barnet. Words of comfort were spoken by my father J. S. Hatch.

Announcement.

The Seventeenth Annual Conference of the Church of God, in the State of Nebraska will be held D. V. at St. Paul, Nebraska, beginning September 5th and convening till the 14th inclusive. Some very able speakers are expected to be present. The brethren and sisters of St. Paul will kindly care for all sisters and brothers who will attend, so it will not be necessary to take bedding. Brethren and sisters, in this time of turmoil and conflict we need your presence to encourage one another and your help with the meetings. We must have a good attendance to obtain success. Many weak and weary ones may faint by the wayside while if only encouraged by your presence and word of comfort they may find strength to hold fast to the truth and be found worthy of an intrance into the kingdom of God; so each and every brother and sister please make an extraordinary effort to attend and make this meeting an exceptionally successful one.

Your Sister,
Emma Elton, Sec.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Indiana will be held at Argos, beginning Friday, Sept. 5th and continue over Sunday. Argos is well located, being on the Nickel Plate road east and west, and the Lake Erie and Western road north and south, making it easy of access to most of the brethren. At this meeting the main business of the year is to be done, and new officers chosen to take charge of affairs. It is therefore of importance to the work that there be a good representation of the different organizations throughout the state. We feel that no urging should be necessary, but that each brother and sister who can ought to make an effort and attend and take part in the deliberations of the business sessions, enjoy the sermons and other meetings and each help to make it a success. Our last meeting at Antioch was one of the best ever held in the state, and there is no reason why this coming gathering should be less pleasant and profitable. It is our intention to try and arrange a programe which will be published in due time. We expect to begin business at the first of the meeting so it will be vital to the success of the work that you be on hand at the beginning. The Lord's cause needs you each one to do his part. Will you not willingly give the three days to Him? Officers of churches, please see that your organization is represented so the plans for next year may be fully reported to you by your own members.

A. R. Underwood, Pres.
Mrs. R. C. Railsback, Sec.

Symbols, the temple, ark, lightning, voices, thunder and earthquakes.

Chap. xii. Symbols, the glorious woman, her characteristics and appearance. The great red dragon, his attitude and characteristics; points of identification, his color, seven heads and ten horns, the man child, the war between Michael and the dragon, defeat and casting out on earth of the dragon, triumph of God's people, the flight of the woman, pursuing floods, help of the earth.

Meaning—Read the history of the church from the first to third centuries to the time of Constantine, especially the character and attitude toward the church of Pagan Rome.

Chap. xiii. The sea monster, points of identification, wounded and healed head, close relation to and similarity to the dragon, blasphemy, its meaning.

The application—Read Church and Roman history, Gibbon's Rise and Fall of the Roman Empire preferred, from Constantine to Charlemagne. Two horned beast and the image of the first beast, its characteristics and points of identification, relation with the first beast, rehabiliation of first beast, miracles, worship, mark in fore head and hands, 666 the mystic number of his name.

Application.—Read history of the Latin and Greek churches and their intimate relation with the revived Roman empire as rehabilitated by the Pope and Charlemagne.

Chap. xvii. This should be studied in connection with the last, giving as it does in another form symbols representing these same two formidable powers designated as the beast and his image. Characteristics and points of identification, symbols, seven heads of the image, ten horns of the dragon and first beast and of the image, ten horns of Daniel's fourth beast, these horns uprooted by the stout blasphemous horn.

Chap. xiv. Symbols, the ram on Mt. Zion and the singing multitude, the 144,000, the gospel angel, Babylon and its doom. Fire and brimstone. The blessed dead. The great harvest.

Chap. xv. The seven last plagues. The multitude on the sea of glass. The seven vials of wrath.

The time slotted to this study will probably be consumed before reaching this point, but if not, the study will be continued to the closing scenes of this great vision of the ages, outlining the mighty drama of earth, with the closing scene, the final triumph of the righteous and righteousness.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

Brethren of the Northwestern Conference:

It has pleased the brethren to again select me as your evangelist. I see the importance of devoting the entire year to the work in order to reach all localities where evangelizing should be done. The States of Oregon and Washington embrace a large territory of labor. I expect to begin the work of holding a series of meetings near Astoria early in August and wish to have all that shall want my labor during the coming year to open correspondence with me at an early date so we may determine plan and time of work. Secret of a Happy Day.

Just to let thy Father do
What he will;
Just to know that he is true,
And be still.
Just to follow hour by hour
As he leadeth;
Just to draw the moment's power
As it needeth;
Just to trust him, this is all;
Then the day will surely be Peaceful, whatsoe'er befall,
Bright and blessed, calm and free.

Just to leave in his dear hand
Little things,
All we cannot understand,
All that stings.
Just to let him take the care
Sorely pressing,
Finding all we let him bear
Changed to blessing.
This is all; and yet the way
Marked by him who loves the best,
Secret of a happy day,
Secret of his promised rest.

What We Believe. No 11

Notwithstanding the charge sometimes laid against us of omitting to preach repentance, conversion, etc., the Church of God advocates repentance as one of the "prerequisites of the forgiveness of sins." The fact that we do not practice the so-called "altar services," in vogue in modern "revivals," by no means proves that we do not believe in repentance. I dare say that none insist more earnestly than our public speakers do, on a thorough repentance. There is not a truth or doctrine set forth in the Word of God which has not its place and should not, in its proper place, be enforced. This also applies to the subject of repentance. But while we thoroughly believe in repentance as set forth in the Bible, we do not believe that what is by many termed repentance, is such. We hold that an act so essential to the forgiveness of sins, should be understandingly and properly performed. I will lay down as a basis of what I shall further say in this article, that repentance, as other acts to be performed in obedience to God's requirements, is a matter of the intellect, and properly consists of a change of thought, mind or purpose. In the Emphatic Diaglott the original word metanoia is given as "reformation." Considered by itself, to repent means "to change one's mind," as the following example will show. God would not lead the children of Israel, while on the way from Egypt to Canaan, through the land of the Philistines, "lest peradventure the people repent when they see war." Ex. xiii. 17.

If the Israelites "repented," they would change their minds about going to Canaan, and as a result of this, would go back "to Egypt." Another example is the parable of Jesus of the man who had two sons, who said to one of these, "Son, go work today in my vineyard." The son said, "I will not." But "afterward he repented, and went." When this young man "repented," what did he do? He changed his mind, took a second thought, and having done this, he "went" according to his father's wish. Matt. xxi. 28, 29. In Heb. vii. 21 we read, "The Lord sware and will not repent, Thou (Christ) art a priest forever according to the order of Melchizedeck." If the Lord will not repent of this announcement, he will not change his mind; he will neither divest Christ of this honor, nor install any other in his place. His purpose concerning the priesthood of Christ is unchangeable. These examples show the use and meaning of the word repent. The attentive reader has noticed long before this that the command to "repent" is addressed to sinners. They are called upon to change their minds and reform their lives. Repentance and remission of sins are frequently mentioned together, as for instance, "That repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem." Luke xxiv. 47. "Repent and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, so that the times of refreshing may come from the presence of the Lord." Acts iii. 19. From these citations it is clear that without repentance remission of sins is impossible and out of the question. Man is a sinner, and as such he can not please God. "They that are in the flesh," doing the things dictated by "the mind of the flesh," "can not please God." Rom. viii. 6-8. In order to please God, man must "cease to do evil, learn to do well." Isa. i. 16, 17. "The unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God.....Neither fornicators, nor idolators, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God." 1 Cor. vi. 9, 10. These things must not be practiced by those who desire to inherit God's kingdom. "He that stole, let him steal no more. Lie not one to another. Keep yourselves from idols;" repent, change your mind, turn away from sin, turn unto God; in short, reform your manner of thought and action. "Christ suffered for sins, the Just for the unjust, that he might bring (lead, introduce) us to God." 1 Pet. iii. 18. But of this we may be assured, that without the breaking off of sinful habits, and proper efforts generally, on our part, the "bringing" here mentioned will not be accomplished. In this process "the Just One" brings us out of sinful thoughts and ways into the path of virtue, so that we retrace our steps and get back "unto God"—Godward. Repentance is at the beginning of this process.

A popular error is that repentance consists of sorrow. According to the Scriptures "godly sorrow worketh (produces, results in) repentance" (2 Cor. vii. 10); the latter grows out of such sorrow. Even Paul "did repent" when certain sinful practices of persons in the Corinthian Church were brought to his notice. (v. 8). [illegible] he not, when he "repented," change his mind about those persons? He had thought they were doing well in their religious life, and when this rumor came to him, which he had no reason to doubt, he "repented," changed his mind concerning them, and wrote them a letter. This was Paul's repentance. This letter made them "sorry after a godly manner," a "sorrow to repentance," which "wrought" a full clearing of themselves in the matter in question. 2 Cor. vii. 11. This was their repentance. Sorrow because of sin is a very vital element, but it must not stop there. There must be "works meet for repentance." Acts xxvi. 20. The Scriptural motive for repentance is not to be sought in the preaching of hell fire torments as is done at "revivals" where the sinner is "shaken over the pit," and filled with fear until he breaks out in agonizing cries to God, what for he hardly knows. In Scripture "the goodness of God leadeth to repentance." Rom. ii. 4. But has not God threatened to punish the wicked if they do not turn from their evil ways? Most certainly; but "the goodness of God" devised and offered to poor, sinful humanity a way of escape from sin and its results. Life, eternal life in an endless kingdom, is offered to sinful mortals on condition that they turn from their sins to God and do God's will. Then, if the sinner "despises the richness of his (God's) goodness and forbearance and longsuffering, and after his hardness and impenitent heart treasures up to himself wrath unto the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God," he shall receive according to his works. Rom. ii. 4-6; i. 32.

While sin is "unto death," this being universally applicable; repentance is "unto life." This latter was the verdict of the hitherto rather exclusive brethren at Jerusalem to whom Peter related that God had given to the Gentiles "the like gift" (the Holy Spirit), as to them of the circumcision. "Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life." Acts xi. 1-18. The "life" which is the object of repentance, is the (zoe) life which Jesus will give to true believers at the last day when he raises his sleeping ones from the dead or changes the living from mortal to immortal (John vi. 40), so that they may "never die." John xi. 26. Sin is an abhorrence to God: it tends to corruption, and is opposed to this life; but where, through repentance, there is a cessation of the practice of sin, there is this much progress toward this life. Let these first steps be followed by a life of faith and godliness, and life, eternal life, will be the result.

Can Anything be Settled by an Appeal to the Bible? No. 3.

It is commonly believed that heaven is to be the eternal dwelling place of the redeemed: that to this blissful abode they pass at death in what is styled the disembodied state, or naked soul condition: that at the last day the soul is brought back, the body is raised from the dead and the two are reunited and ascend to the former dwelling place of the soul. It may be well to state here that many at the present time—and the number is increasing—reject the doctrine of the future resurrection of the body, and have substituted for this a resurrection of the soul or spirit out of the body at the moment of what they call death. All that hold the former theory might consistently abandon it and embrace the latter theory, since the material body can be of no advantage to an immortal soul; for alike, priest and poet have spoken disparagingly of the body, calling it a weight, encumbrance and a clog; and by way of contrast have spoken of the soul as having been "disencumbered—freed from the shackles that bound it;" that "it mounts and soars and sings;" "quits this mournful vale and soars to worlds on high." I will not at this point examine the second theory but will ask in reference to the first or popular theory, Can this tune be sung [illegible] the old [illegible]? It can not. It has been tried numberless times since the apostasy introduced Plato's notion into the church, but discord and not harmony has been the constant result. "Heaven is my home" has been sung by many a tuneful heart down the corridors of time, but the Bible does not respond with the faintest echo. Jesus and his great ancestor David taught a very different doctrine. "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth" (Matt. v. 5) stands as an important article in the creed of the infallible Teacher who spake as never man spake. How can it be true that heaven is the eternal home of the righteous, in the light of this and texts of like plain import? To believe a thing in the absence of proof is unreasonable; but, what must we think of men who believe a thing against proof of the most cogent kind—believe it in the face of the many times repeated statements and promises of Holy Writ? Heaven never was promised to man; the earth was. "The heaven even the heavens are the Lord's, but the earth hath he given to the children of men." Psa. cxv. 16. The earth is man's native place. To Abraham and his seed after him, God promised the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession. Gen. xvii. 8. This promise cannot be construed into meaning no more than a temporary occupation of the land under the law between the time of the entrance of the tribes and the final dispersion of Judah by the Romans. This utterly fails to satisfy the terms of the covenant, which includes Abraham to whom the promise was directly addressed. The possession of the land was stipulated to be everlasting; which would sound very absurd applied to a brief sojourn of Abraham's descendants in a small portion of the territory promised. The inheritance under the law was conditioned upon obedience to its numerous requirements. In case the people hearkened not unto the voice of the Lord and do all his commandments and statutes a long list of curses was to fall upon them until they should perish from off the land. The promise of the inheritance was given four hundred and thirty years before the law. This latter cannot disannul the former. The law ceased to be of binding force "after the faith came," but the promise remains pending a fulfilment in the glorious future when Abraham, who during his life of pilgrimage received not enough of the land to set his foot on (Acts vii. 5) will inherit it agreeably to the terms of the covenant, and on the ground of his faith. Rom. iv. 13. On the condition of faith (not faith alone) in Christ "the promise is sure to all the seed, not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham, who is the father of us all." 16 v. It will be sure also to Israel as a nation when Christ the one seed, and chief heir comes out of Zion, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob. Rom. xi. 26. Such is the plainly revealed purpose of God in regard to the eternal dwelling place of the righteous. This will not agree with the faith of the fathers; nor square with "the fitness of things," when this is but the perverted judgment of man.

The opening pages of the Bible reveals the fact of the earth admirably fitted up for man in his sinless condition and as lord over anima te nature. These same pages bear witness to his fall or first fatal transgression; the penalty pronounced against him for this act of disobedience; and records the sorrowful fact that even the ground was cursed for his sake, that henceforth it should yield thorns and thistles; that in the sweat of his brow he was to eat his bread until he should return unto the ground. How man has toiled, groaned and sweat to win the bread which nature often yields so grudgingly. Millions of the race have died of starvation and millions more have eked out a wretched existence of toil and poverty, and gladly welcomed death and the grave as the end of lives burdened with a curse from beginning to close. The closing pages of Revelation portrays another picture in broad contrast with that of the past and present. The seer of Patmos says, "There shall be no more curse." Rev. xxii. 3. All that this word meant back when sin and death were introduced into our world is gone. Seen in distant prospect we feel a glad foretaste of the joy to be ours when we reach the point when the vision passes into fact before our eyes. John and Isaiah both speak of that condition of things as a new heaven and a new earth in contrast with the first heaven and the first earth which were passed away. Taking all that is disclosed to us in the Word and vision of the prophets who can reasonably object to what is here presented as the truth? Who ever does goes in the face of the oft repeated statements of God's Word. Inference must be arrayed against these and truth be brought to nought. God designed this earth for man's abode and his original purpose was never changed. The fall of man and the entrance of sin furnish no ground for such a change.

The Wisdom of Salomoon. Chap. 2.

1. For reasoning in a way that is not upright they have said to themselves, our lifetime is a little one and full of sorrow, and there is no healing in man's end, and the return from the grave hath not been known.

2. Because we were begotten without our own volition, and after this we shall be as though we had not been; because the breath in our nostrils is a smoke and speech is a scintillation in the movement of our heart.

3. Which when quenched the body will go away as cinerary ashes, and the spirit will have been dissipated like empty air.

4. And our name will have been ignored in time, and no one will remember our deeds; and our life time will pass by like the trace of a cloud, and like a mist pierced through by the active rays of a sun, and weighed down by its heat, will have been scattered.

5. For our life-time is the passing of a shadow and there is no return from our end; because it hath been sealed up and no one doth return.

6. Come hither then and let us lavishly spend the good things that be, and use the creation with haste as in youth.

7. Let us sate ourselves with wine of much perfected value and with odors of myhr, and let not a flower of the nir pass us by.

8. Let us crown ourselves with rose buds before they be withered.

9. Let no one of us be regardless of our haughty prerogative; everywhere let us leave behind us symbols of our rejoicing, because this is our portion and this our allotment.

10. Let us oppress the needy justified one, let us not be sparing of widows, nor respect the long-time gray hair of our elder.

11. But let our strength be our law of righteousness, for weakness is proved to be unprofitable.

12. Let us lie in wait for the justified one, because he is worse than useless to us, and is in the way of our deeds, and reproaches us for our sins against law, and rebuketh our sins for our chastening instruction.

13. He declareth that he hath an acquaintance with God, and nameth himself a child of the Lord.

14. He hath become unto us a reproof of our reflective thoughts; he is a burden to us even when looked at.

15. Because his way of life is gaged by a law different from the rest of folks, and his path hath been changed.

16. We have been accounted refuse by him. And he refrained from our ways as from unclean ways. He accounteth blessed-happy the last experiences of the justified, and boasteth of God as a Father.

17. Let us see whether his words are true and let us prove them in his departure.

18. For if a justified one is a Son of God he will intervene for him, and deliver him out of the hand of those who withstand him.

19. With haughty pride and torture (lit. the pure metal test or touch-stone test) he [illegible] him that we may know his gentleness and test the value of his forbearance from evil.

20. To a disgraceful death let us condemn him by civil process; for it will be a visitation from his words.

21. They have reasoned in this wise and have been led astray. For their evil hath blinded them.

22. And they have not comprehended God's mysteries; nor have they hoped for the wages of holiness; nor have they judged them to be a gift of honor for blameless souls.

23. Because God generated (instituted generic laws to produce) mankind for incorruption and made (causal creation) him an image of his own intrinsic nature.

24. And death entered into the cosmos through the envy of a false accuser (Diabolos) and those who are of that allotted portion try him.

COMMENT.

Is this chapter history and biography before the event—in a word prophecy or not? It certainly was written and published ages before the event and was a part of the canonical Scripture of the Israelite, and was made apochriphal by an apostate Christian church. Shall it be reinstated is the question of interest and moment to the Christian truth-lover of today. A recent republication of the authorized Catholic Douay Ver. under the auspices of Cardinal Gibbons reincorporates this book, but with the usual ecclesiastical expurgation and bias. It would be well for the readers to get a copy and compare same with this translation as it appears.

The philosophical conclusions drawn here in this chapter seem wonderfully familiar to the student of modern sociology and the selfish pleasure-seeker and fortune-worshiper of the world is apparently reasoning from the same premises and drawing the same practical conclusions today. Gnostics they called themselves then, or "knowers." Agnostics they style themselves now or "Don't-knowers," and they are the same wild beasts that Paul fought with at Epheus. If there is any truth in prophecy moreover, they will be more in evidence as we near the last "of these last days" which close this long age of eclectic dispensation.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LI. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, AUGUST 20, 1902. NUMBER 31.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Short Sermons. No. 29.

Thoughts, words and deeds—these three things are the index of our heart and mind, and go a long ways in making up the sum total of our real worth. If the heart is pure and clean, then our thoughts, words and deeds will reveal the fact. For out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. If the good Lord and his Son, our Savior, fills a good place in our heart and affections, then our thoughts, words and deeds will be along that line. While on the other hand if our affections run out after carnal things, then our thoughts, words and deeds will give us away. Or if our heart or mind is set on the things of this world then our thoughts and words will tell it all. If we set our affections on any thing earthly or carnal, then our joys and pleasures are deceptive and of short duration. And the worst of all is, they are misleading and will cause us to pass away as a vapor. The Master knowing these things has wisely and kindly warned and advised his friends at this point, telling them what to do, and what not to do. Now if we be a child of God by faith, and worthy of the name, we will be obedient and be blessed, but if our heart is stubborn and we take our own course, then we shall be cursed, and calamity, calamity, awaits us as sure as it did our fore parents in paradise. Wisdom cries out after us to draw near to the fountain of light and love, and drink freely and fill our minds to overflowing with the pure words and will of God our heavenly Father and his dear Son, so that we can only relish and find enjoyment in contemplating the great fountain of life, light and love which passeth understanding. Then our thoughts words and deeds will naturally come in line and be pure and divine. Cleanse your hands, ye sinners, and purify your hearts, ye double-minded. Cleanse first that which is within the cup and platter. Tune the heart for heavenly music, and love and relish no other kind, then it will be no hard task to train our bodies, minds, thoughts, words and actions, and bring them into subjection to heaven's will. Never mind if the world thinks you odd and counts you out, they also had a poor opinion of the Master. And if we are what we profess, the world knows us not, why seek to please it? The Master did not, and it knew him not.

T. E. ADAMS.

It is an easy thing to sing, "All I have I give to Jesus, it belongs to him," but the singing is hollow mockery when we spend more in one year for chewing gum or soda water than we give in five years to the evangelization of the heathen world. We often sing: "I love thy church, O God:" and then pay more for the trimming of a hat or the decorations of a "social function" than we contribute to the Church in a twelve month. We sing, "My Jesus, I love thee," and drop a nickel in the collection basket, reserving the fifty cents for the purchase of a ticket to the Monday matinee or lecture. What does Jesus think? "God so loved the world that he gave," What?—The best he had. We can measure God's love by his gift. Suppose he were to measure ours by the same standard!

OH, what a witness God's Book will be against the slothful, the wilfully ignorant and unbelieving. They shun the light because they love darkness; and they love darkness because of their own evil deeds.

A SHORT letter from Sister Woodward says that the Millbrook, Mich. Church rejoices that another young brother, Fred Cummings, has been added to their number, having been baptized by Brother W. The same letter says that they both expect to attend the Conference at Argos, over the first Sunday in September, so with this addition to those who have already promised to attend, the Indiana brethren are assured of a feast indeed that none should miss.

READER, we entreat you to examine your present life. Ask yourself if it affords any evidence that the Judge will be warranted in saying to you, "Well done, good and faithful servant?" Any thing in your aims, wishes, pursuits and endeavors which evidence the existence of that kind of life which results from being begotten of God, and sanctified through his truth. Solemnly we remind you of the unavailing pleadings of those who will desire to be recognized as friends of Jesus: "Lord, Lord, open to us."

"IN order to keep the course of cheerfulness, two shoals are to be shunned; a troubled spirit on the one hand, and a merry one on the other. The former prevails when affliction has not the support of a vigorous faith; the latter indulged by those who allow cheerfulness to degenerate into mirth. For each of these excesses the Apostle has appointed a distinct and effectual remedy. For the one, prayer, and for the other, psalmody. "Is any afflicted? Let him pray. Is any merry? Let him sing psalms."

MAKE a note of it, the Greek word Semnotes in 1 Tim. ii. 2 means gravity, venerableness, and not honesty, as rendered in the common version; and

The Greek word semnos rendered honest in Phil. iv. 8 of the common translation, means venerable, grave.

The Greek word euschemonos in Romans xiii. 13 honestly, means decently, becomingly, and the original of honestly in 1 Thes. iv. 12.

WE have recently written and sent out to those owing us many letters with the view of getting money from those who should renew, that we may pay our bills. It is absolutely necessary that we hear from each one we have addressed. It is of vital importance to us and you as well that prompt attention be given. Let each one who received a letter make immediate response, and any one whose time is out, but was missed in writing, please see that your subscription is paid without delay. Where mistakes have been made, kindly let us know, and we will be pleased to make the correction. We wish to give no offense by letting you know how your account stands, and our only excuse for writing is our necessity. Please look at your letter kindly, and reply at once. We urge haste because our case is so urgent.

Christ's.

This subject is not likely to become popular in the present order of things for it is just as true now as when Paul indited the words, that ALL seek their own, not the things which are Jesus Christ's. Phil. ii. 21.

All men, including even the bulk of professing Christians, are seeking their own interests. Very few concern themselves about the things which are Christ's.

What is such Christianity worth? Truly they have a name, that they live, and are dead.

The faithful loving servant is looking after the things that belong to [illegible] interested in his welfare.

Men's own things are temporal, but Christ's are eternal.

Let us seek the things that are Christ's. If it is the first time, you will be surprised at the result.

Let us seek Christ's estate first. It is the prevailing idea that this is in heaven. It is generally thought that the majority of Christ's things are there. This is a great mistake. Heaven is God's throne and dwelling place. Christ's estate is land—not sky—the land of Canaan.

God said to Abraham, on his arrival in the land of Canaan: "Unto thy seed will I give this land." And this seed is Christ. Gen. xii. 7; Gal. iii. 16. Hence God, in speaking of the land of Judah, in Isa. viii. 8, calls it,

"THY LAND, O IMMANUEL."

So that if you seek the things that are Christ's, you seek a country—a better country than can now be found upon the planet earth, because flesh and blood claim it. It will be a heavenly country when Christ takes possession of it. Heb. xi. 14, 15, 16.

Such seekers are now strangers and pilgrims.

Will Christ possess the land of Canaan as it is now, or void? No, the kingdom of God, so long prayed for, will then come and be established upon it, for it is Christ's.

The whole house and kingdom of Israel over which David reigned, God, in speaking to him, calls my kingdom, thy kingdom, and his (Christ's) kingdom. 2 Sam. vii. 12, 16; 1 Chron. xvii. 14. Therefore the twelve tribes of Israel must be regathered, and united into one kingdom again upon the mountains of Israel, before Christ can inherit the kingdom and reign over them in Mount Zion from henceforth even forever. "And thou O tower of the flock, the stronghold of the daughter of Zion, unto thee shall it come, even the first dominion; the kingdom shall come to the daughters of Jerusalem." Ezek. xxxvii. 21, 22; Micah iv. 7, 8.

If you seek the things that are Christ's, you seek first the kingdom of God (Matt. vi. 33), and like Abraham, a city designed and built by God, the capital of it. "For here we have no continuing city, but we seek one to come—Christ's—Jerusalem, the city of the great King, a praise in the earth. Heb. xiii. 14; Matt. v. 35; Isa. lxii. 7: The city of the Lord, the Zion of the Holy One of Israel, the perfection, the joy of the whole earth. Isa. lx. 14; Psa. xlviii. 2.

If you seek the things that are Christ's, you look for the restoration of David's throne in Jerusalem: for it has been overturned until he come whose right it is, Christ, and the Lord God shall give it him. Ezek. xxi. 27. Jerusalem will then be the throne of the Lord. Jer. iii. 17.

The natural subjects of this glorious kingdom are the Jewish race, they are Christ's subjects, and his kinsmen according to the flesh.

But is the Holy Land all the territory that belongs to Christ? No; that is only the Edenic Garden of Christ's dominion. He is the heir of the world, and the uttermost parts of the earth are his possession. Rom. iv. 13; Psa. ii. 2.

Will the nations continue upon it as they are now, or will they be demolished and their territory made a great park for Christ and his friends to roam in at their pleasure? No; the nations will be humbled, broken, and their purified remains incorporated into the empire of Israel. It will then be said: "The kingdoms of this world are become our Lord's and his Christ's and he shall reign for the ages of the ages;" and he shall reign from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth; all kings shall fall down before him; all nations shall serve him. Rev. xi. 15; Psa. lxxii. 8, 11.

Israel is Christ's battle-axe and weapons of war, by which he will subjugate the nations; and the house of Judah is his goodly horse in the battle. Jer. li. 20; Zech. x. 3.

Is this a substantial, durable inheritance? Yes; for the earth abideth for ever; and it is Christ's for ever. Eccl. i. 4; Dan. vii. 14. "The kingdom is an everlasting kingdom." Jer. xxx. 11; Dan. vii. 27.

The city also will be a continuing one. Is. xxxiii. 20 says, "Look upon Zion, the city of our solemnities; thine eyes shall see Jerusalem a quiet habitation, a tabernacle that shall not be taken down," etc.

Is there anything else to seek? Yes; Christ's house. It is referred to in Heb. iii. 5, 6. It is a permanent house—God's building, founded upon the rock Jesus Christ, and the gates of the grave shall not prevail against it. 1 Cor. iii. 9; Matt. xvi. 18.

The bodies of this house are the members of Christ, 1 Cor. vi. 15—Christ's flesh and bones. Eph. v. 30, 31. Hence Jesus speaking to his disciples says a cup of water to drink in my name.....shall not lose its reward. Mark ix. 14.

If after reflecting upon these things you desire to become Christ's, then you must obey the command of Christ's apostle. Rom. xiii. 14. "Put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ and make not provision for the flesh to fulfil the lusts thereof."

If you wish to know how to comply with this injunction, Paul tells you, you must be buried with Christ in baptism. Col. iii. 12. "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." Gal. iii. 27.

In rendering this obedience you put off the old man with his deeds—the body of sin derived from Adam, and put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him, even God. All such are one in Christ Jesus. And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise of all the glorious possessions and unsearchable riches, which we have but faintly delineated.

Be sure to not overlook the little word if. If ye be Christ's all things are yours.

Selected.

The Greatest Problem In the Twentieth Century.

I think that the greatest problem of the present century is how to keep alive, in the hearts of the vast mass of men nominally Christian, a deep and effectual faith in those doctrines of the Christian religion to which they still give a nominal adherence. There is perhaps less of open and ostentatious infidelity in these days than there was in the days of Charles II., or earlier years of the eighteenth century; but, on the other hand, though unbelief is, as a rule, more reticent, all serious observers see grave reasons to fear that there is a far more widely spread spirit of doubt, and even of positive unbelief, than there has ever been among men who have never professedly abandoned allegiance to the religion of their fathers. What is the cause of the apparent spread of this spirit of uncertain, and even of openly avowed agnosticism? Among various causes which might be mentioned, I think that we may specify three.

1. One of these is the vast enlargement of the horizon of human knowledge, which might seem, at first sight, to have revolutionized man's conceptions of his relations to the material universe.

2. Another influence which has, unconsciously or otherwise, shaken the faith of some, is the revolt against the scholastic rigidity and positiveness of the theological technicalities which it was once considered heretical not to accept.

3. A third reason for some weakening of the ancient confidence in dogmas once universally accepted without question, is the changed view as to the inspiration and absolute infallibility of every word, or, as Dean Burgon added, with foolish and meaningless vehemence, of every syllable and letter of the Bible.

That the causes which I have partially indicated are really at work, that, in consequence, the faith of multitudes has been weakened, will be evident from a glance at the utterances of one or two skeptical writers. They invariably take a most despairing view of life. "Life," sang the Italian poet, "is bitterness and vexation; there is no other life and the world is mire. I am stirred by a cold shudder as I search through the unblessed and terrible secret of life. What is the worth of life? Solely to despise it." Of the deplorable pessimism of Byron I will not speak; but the acknowledged coryphæus of modern atheistic pessimism is Schopenhauer. He deliberately taught his disciples to hate and despise women, and to acquire an accurate and connected view of the utter despicability of mankind. To such writers God is a tradition of the nursery; love has no meaning but lust; virtue is only a form of selfishness; this is the worst of all possible worlds; every human being is bad and base; and annihilation is the only possible remedy for a race supremely and irrevocably evil. To Voltaire, again, it seemed true to say that "the people are a mixture of bears and monkeys," that we "may lie like the devil," and that "as flies are born to be eaten by spiders, so men are born to be eaten up by sorrows." Do we not see in such sentiments a proof that the extinction of all faith in Christianity tends inevitably to dark, dangerous, mean and selfish views of all human life?

To me, then, it seems that the greatest problem of the present century is by what means we are to deepen, or reawaken, that deep and true faith in Christ as the Savior and Teacher of the world, which undoubtedly has lost its hold in many hearts. This should be the work of all true Christians, but most of all the strenuous endeavor of the clergy, who are specially set apart and consecrated for this purpose.

All Christians who are in earnest must show, alike by their arguments and by the whole tenor of their lives, that neither the advance of scientific knowledge nor the conclusions of the higher criticism, nor any modifications of a purely scholastic theology, necessitate the slightest change in the eternal and fundamental beliefs of any who accept Christ as their Lord and King, and who live in the conviction that this age, as the German poet sang, is "the age of the Holy Ghost." Christ himself taught us that it was expedient for us that he should go away, and that by the indwelling of his promised Spirit we are, or may be, nearer to him now than if, like Peter, we could clasp him by the hand, or like the beloved John could lay our head upon his breast. If all who profess and call themselves Christians would but try to realize this truth—the truth that the Spirit himself beareth witness with our spirit that we are children of God—the millennium would begin in this twentieth century.—Frederick W. Farrar, D. D. in Christian Work.

Two Doors.

"Behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it." Rev. iii. 8.

"Behold, I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear my voice and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me." Rev. iii. 20.

It is evident that these two passages do not refer to the same door, for one is an open door over which God alone has control; the other is a closed door over which man alone has control. Christ has set the one door open. He stands at the other knocking, and asking that it be opened.

In the beginning there were no barriers between God and man, nor between man and eternal life. But the first pair, deceived by Satan, disobeyed God's command [illegible] of the forbidden fruit. By [illegible] himself a barrier between himself and God. If man ever regains the unhampered communion of Eden, he must open again by repentance and willing obedience the door closed by the sin of wilful disobedience.

When man's door was closed, God closed his door. Eternal life in happiness is the greatest blessing God could bestow. Eternal life in misery would be the greatest curse the devil could devise. That man might not bring upon himself such awful calamity, God drove him from the garden. Love closed the gates of Eden. "And the Lord God said, Behold the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil; and now, lest he put forth his hand and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live forever; therefore the Lord God sent him forth from the garden of Eden."

Man had no immortality when he left the garden; otherwise the reason assigned for his repulsion would be absolutely meaningless. He has never gained immortality since, for God "placed at the east of the garden of Eden, cherubims, and a flaming sword which turned every way to keep the way of the tree of life;" and past that flaming sword no man has ever gone. The question of natural or conditional immortality, seen in the light of its origin, is resolved into the question, did Satan or God speak the truth? God told man he should surely die. Such a statement could truthfully be made only to a being capable of dying, and therefore not naturally immortal. Satan said man should not surely die. He led the entire existing race to adopt the natural immortality doctrine. But did Adam and Eve manifest such wisdom and correctness in their course of action as will warrant us in accepting their opinion as infallible? If we search the Scriptures we shall find immortality brought to light, not as an inherent attribute of man, but as a gift to be obtained through Jesus. "He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life." 1 John v. 12. There is no immortality here; and none hereafter away from Christ.

Death, then, is the barrier God raised in man's path. He shut the door of the grave between him and eternal life. It needs no argument to prove that mere human power will find this barrier impassable. No man could open that door. Man dies and passes out of existence. If he shall gain life beyond the grave, it can be only through a resurrection, a re-living of the dead.

Though God closed his door last, he was the first to open the way again. The first promise of a Savior was given immediately after the expulsion from Eden. And in due time Jesus came. He died, he was buried. After three days he rose again, and by his death and resurrection he opened again the door God closed when he exiled man from the tree of life. Hear him: "I am he that liveth, and was dead; and behold, I am alive forevermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death." Rev. i. 18. "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life which is in the midst of the paradise of God." Rev. ii. 7. The barrier of death has been removed; for "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.

God's door is open, and no man can shut it, but its opening will benefit us little, unless we also clear away the barriers we have raised. God's abundant blessings are in store for all, but he cannot bestow them through closed doors; he will not force them upon us. We must open the door of our heart and let the Savior in.

Jesus has done his part. He waits for us to do ours. He does not wait carelessly or even passively. He stands at the door and knocks, pleading with us to open unto him, and promising if we will, to come in and abide with us. His entrance means salvation from sin, strength, joy, peace here, and endless life hereafter. Beloved, open wide the door. Nothing stands between you and God but your own will. "The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth us from all sin," and "Whosoever will, may come and partake of the water of life freely." Open the door of your heart before the day of mercy shall be ended, and let the Savior in.—Alice M. Goodwin in Crisis.

Obituary.

Calvin Beagle departed this life about one o'clock on the morning of July 20, 1902, at the age of 90 years, 9 months and 5 days.

Mr. Beagle was born in Cayuga County, New York, October 21, 1811. He was the son of Stephen and Elizabeth Beagle. At the age of five years his parents moved to Steuben county, New York. He was married November 22, 1837, to Miss Isabelle Walker. To this union were born four children, Perry, John, Luther and Sarah E. Beagle, all of whom are living except the daughter. In 1888 he left the State of New York and moved to Indiana, settling near Pierceton, Kosciusko county. In 1848 he moved to Plain township, where he became a successful farmer. On Jan. 9, 1900, death visited his home and took from him the wife of his youth. July 5, 1900, he was united in marriage to Mrs. Elizabeth Coyle, who has since been to him a faithful wife, tenderly caring for his every want so far as possible. He has also had the special care and attention of his son, John Beagle, who has carefully looked after the temporal needs of his aged father. Mr. Beagle was a good citizen and a man possessed of excellent moral qualities. He was also a firm believer in Christ as his Savior. His sickness was of short duration. On Wednesday morning of the 23d, while writing, he was stricken with a serious stroke of paralysis, and on Friday night, about 1 o'clock he departed this life. Thus has passed from our midst another of our aged citizens; a man respected and honored by all, because of his age and his moral qualities. He leaves a wife, three sons, several grand-children and many neighbors and friends to mourn his departure. The funeral services were conducted in the Oswego Baptist church at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon of July 27, by the pastor, D. B. Rockard, after which the remains were taken to the Oswego cemetery and tenderly laid away.

The above was taken from the Warsaw Indianian of Aug. 7. All who attended the June Conference at Antioch will remember our aged brother as he was there for what he said was his farewell visit among his brethren. Way back in the 40's the Church of God at Oswego, Ind., was organized. Bro. Beagle was one of its first members, and by death and removal it has ceased to exist. Only one—Sister E. Willard of Haddonfield, N. J.—is left of that early band of pioneer disciples of the Lord Jesus. Their labor is ended, and they rest waiting the angel's call to life eternal. May the morning soon dawn, and they with the living faithful ones meet their Lord, and even remain with him.

For Our Children.

Little Brown Wren.

Little brown wren in the mulberry tree,
Singing thy song of witchery,
Happy art thou as a bird can be,
Little brown wren in the mulberry tree.

Little brown wren with thy children four,
Great possessions thou hast in store,
Nothing on earth to wish for more,
Little brown wren with thy children four.

Fearless art thou when the thunders roll,
Though thy house is set on a limber pole;
Thy nest, but twigs from the orchard stole,
Fearless art thou when the thunders roll.

O heart of mine, when the storms go by,
Look up to God, with a trusting eye;
Like the wren be calm 'neath a clouded sky,
O heart of mine, when the storms go by.

AUSTIN WISER.

JUST LIKE A GIRL.

"Isn't that just like a girl?" and the fond mother smiled indulgently as her daughter, rosy and smiling, came in from school, tossed her muff on a chair, deposited her books on top of the piano, carelessly dropped one glove on the floor, then, after kissing her mother, and saluting others in the room, lightly ran up-stairs to her own chamber. Yes, such ways may be very pretty and engaging now, but how will they appear after becoming fixed habits of character? Simple heedlessness in a young girl, in the care of her person and possessions, develops into slovenliness with advancing years; and of all disagreeable sights one of the most unpleasant is a middle aged or elderly woman who is not neat. The girl who tumbles up the contents of her bureau drawers and leaves things scattered about for others to pick up, will surely make an untidy housekeeper, when she has no mother to pick up after her. Her habits will be an annoyance to her husband, if he be a lover of order and system, and as a guest she will always be dreaded in homes differently conducted from her own. The disorderly girl will make a disorderly woman: and as cares increase and strength fails, she will be likely to be not only disorderly but slatternly. Think of this future, mothers, and insist upon your children, boys as well as girls, being neat and orderly, even if they carry the virtue to the point of fussiness. Better this, than going to the opposite extreme in these matters.

ONE OF BISMARK'S.

Once when Bismarck was a cavalry officer he was standing with some other officers on a bridge over a [illegible]. As he was about to give an order [illegible] groom, Hildebrand, rode one of the horses to water close by the bridge. Suddenly the horse lost footing, and Hildebrand, clinging to the animal, disappeared with it in the water. Before the other officers could collect their senses Bismarck had cast off his uniform and had thrown himself in the lake to save his servant. By good fortune he seized him and brought him safe to land in an unconscious condition. The next day the little town that had witnessed the brave rescue was in great commotion. They petitioned the superintendent, who obtained for the young officer the medallion "for rescue from danger." And on great occasions the well known Prussian safety medal was seen beside the proudest stars in Christendom on the breast of the famous creator of united Germany. Bismarck, it is said, was prouder of his first medal than of all the rest put together. One day in the plentitude of his power a noble minister approached the premier and asked him the meaning of this modest decoration. He at once replied: "I am in the habit sometimes of saving life."

SHALL THE HEATHEN SURPASS US?

Among the things that Christians may learn from heathen people, is self-denial or self-restraint. The Japanese have a god which they call the "great bright god of self-restraint." Those who worship this god keep a kannin-bako (self-restraint box) for the reception of the first-fruits and other percentages, to be offered to the god and distributed among the needy.

One of them thus describes their method of doing: "As to percentages, this is our mode of proceeding: If I would buy a dollar garment, I manage by self-restraint and economy to get it for eighty cents, and the remaining twenty cents I drop into the self-restraint box; or if I would give a five-dollar feast to my friends, I exercise self-restraint and economy and give it for four dollars, dropping the remaining dollar into the box; or if I determine to build a house that shall cost one hundred dollars, I exercise self restraint and economy and build it for eighty, putting the remaining twenty dollars into the box as an offering to Kannin Daimiya-jin-San."

The Hardest Time of All.

There are days of deepest sorrow
In the season of our life,
There are wild despairing moments,
There are hours of mental strife,
There are hours of stony anguish,
When the tears refuse to fall,
But the waiting time, my brothers,
Is the hardest time of all.

Youth and love are oft impatient,
Seeking things beyond their reach,
And the heart grows sick with hoping
Ere it learns what life can teach.
For before the fruit is gathered
We must see the blossoms fall,
And the waiting time, my brothers,
Is the hardest time of all.

Yet at last we learn the lesson,
That God knoweth what is best,
And a silent resignation
Makes the spirit calm and blest;
For perchance a day is coming
For the changes of our fate,
When our hearts will thank him meekly
That he taught us how to wait.

Encouragement.

Jesus said, "Ye are the salt of the earth: but if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be salted? It is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out, and to be trodden under foot of men." Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid." Matt. v. 13, 14.

"Salt is good; but if the salt have lost his saltness, wherewith will ye season it? Have salt in yourselves, and have peace one with another." Mark ix. 50.

"Salt is good: but if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be seasoned? It is neither fit for the land, nor yet for the dunghill; but men cast it out. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear." Luke xiv. 34, 35.

"Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven," Matt. v. 16.

"In him (God) was life; and the life was the light of men." John i. 4; see verse 9; also John v. 35.

The Psalmist said, "The entrance of thy words giveth light; it giveth understanding unto the simple." Psa. cxix. 130.

"The light of the righteous rejoiceth; but the lamp of the wicked shall be put out." Prov. xiii. 19.

"The people which sat in darkness saw great light; and to them which sat in the region and shadow of death light is sprung up." Matt. iv. 16.

Salt is used for seasoning and preservation. The proportion of salt to the food seasoned by it is comparatively small, and needs to be evenly distributed therein to accomplish the purpose for which it is used. To be of use, the salt must be pure.

Light is used to dispel darkness. The lights in a city need to be so located through the city that they may give light to all the inhabitants thereof. Light, to be most effective must be bright and clear, and not clouded or obscured by smoke.

The object of this article is to encourage brethren and sisters of like precious faith who are dispersed through the world,—one, two or three in a place,—away from the larger bodies of the Church of God, myself included. It would be a pleasure to us to be where we could attend the meetings with those of like faith; but we are isolated and lonely in trying to hold up the light of God's Word to those who, apparently, are dull of hearing; yet we have reason to be thankful to God, who has accounted us worthy to be the "salt of the earth," and "the light of the world."

If all the members of the Church of God were located in one place, they would be like a burning mountain, giving light to a very small portion of the inhabitants of the earth. Evidently it has been arranged by divine power, so as to have witnesses for God in all parts of the world in this gospel age.

Without a sufficient amount of salt, some kinds of food would spoil. Without the light and influence of God's people in sufficient numbers and power to check the spread of sin and degradation, the world would become so wicked, so corrupt, that God would find it necessary to destroy it. The eight souls who were saved in the ark were insufficient to save the antidiluvian world, so the Lord destroyed it with a flood. Lot and his family were not able to save Sodom and other cities of the plain. They were destroyed for lack of ten righteous.

Because Jerusalem rejected the light and killed the Prince of life and persecuted the few righteous ones and became corrupt, from the laity all the way up to the priesthood; the Lord permitted the Romans to lay siege to and destroy the city. But God did not destroy the righteous with the unrighteous. Noah and his family were saved in the ark. The angels of the Lord led Lot and his family out of Sodom. Jesus gave his disciples a sign by observing which, they need not suffer in the destruction of Jerusalem; he said to them, "When ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh. Then let them which are in Judea flee to the mountains; and let them which are in the midst of it depart out; and let not them that are in the country enter thereinto. For these be the days of vengeance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled."

History records the fact that the disciples observed the sign and fled. The Lord has been long-suffering towards the present world, and raised up a few true and faithful witnesses for himself and sent them abroad in the earth,—one here and another there to give the true light of life, so that those who desire the light may have it, and those who choose the darkness shall be without excuse in the great day of the Lord. May we be true to our calling, living soberly, righteously and godly in this present age, waiting and watching for the coming of our Lord, while we faithfully occupy till he comes.

Evolution.

Do I believe in evolution? Well, not much. He referred me to the butterfly and some other things, when I reminded him that in many other things besides the butterfly there was more than one step in its perfect development. Horned cattle as a rule do not get their horns at birth, nor babies their teeth. "And you might add," said he, "neither did the man get his immortal soul put in him until ages after he was created. This is what we mean by evolution The man was the finest animal of all creation, and was only an animal until the Creator in harmony with the laws of evolution furnished him with an immortal soul." This man was just from college, where his father has been paying out his hard earned money that his boy might have an education for time and eternity. It is to be hoped he knows more in other things than in evolution.

I asked my young friend if his teacher believed the account of creation we find in God's Word. "Oh yes, he is one of our leading churchmen." Then tell your professor that I have a Bible and that there is no account in it where man ever obtained an immortal soul by evolution, or otherwise so far. Tell him that I say the Bible has nothing whatever to say about immortal souls passed out to man in this life. "Well, but it expresses the same thought—truth; in words equally forcible. The "never dying soul" stands for immortal soul and that expression is all over the Bible." No, my friend, there is no such expression in the Bible as never dying soul. On the contrary we read in the Bible, "The soul that sinneth it shall die." It is marvelous how very ignorant church people are about what is written in the Scriptures. I mean Protestants. In the race for first place by the different denominations Rome will certainly win if we persist in ignoring the study of God's Word.

Knowledge of God's Word enables us to detect the spurious from the genuine, and prevents us from being duped. The Philippine friar could never have obtained the best holdings in that country for his prayers, if the people had known God's Word. A system that makes the clergy rich and the people poor is not the Christian system. Was it Paul that said, "As poor yet making many rich?" It seems the friars make themselves rich and the people poor.

Yes, I believe in the evolution wrought in the individual, which follows the acceptance of God's grace and truth. His grace delivers us from all our enemies, including the wily priest that would take our homes and balance in bank for prayer, which has no value when a price is put on it like as I do for my services as a painter.

Did Jesus Eat the Passover?

This seems to be a strange question to ask in view of what Matthew, Mark and Luke tell us. They all tell us something about it, and they tell it in plain terms. But what does John say about it? John does not say anything about Jesus or any one else eating the Passover. He tells us about several things that took place before the Passover and some things that took place afterwards, but it was left for Matthew, Mark and Luke to tell us about that particular event.

According to their testimony he did eat the Passover in the city of Jerusalem in an upper room with his disciples and thus fulfilled the law. At the conclusion of the feast he took bread and broke it and gave it to them, and said, "This is my body." He took the cup also and gave it to them and said, "This is my blood."

Here we have the death of the Savior set forth symbolically or emblematically. Here we have his broken body and shed blood handed over to his disciples in these emblems. Here the law pertaining to the Passover ended. Here the type met the Antitype. Here the shadow met the substance. From this time on the law pertaining to the Passover was a dead letter.

It matters not if the Jews ate the Passover afterwards. It availed them nothing, (it is not said that they did eat it). It is a wrong idea to suppose that Jesus died at the exact time of the killing of the Pascal lamb. The law required the lamb to be killed on the 14th of the month in the evening at the going down of the sun and was to be eaten the following evening of which the fifteenth began. The Savior ate it with his disciples on the fifteenth of the month and died about three o'clock in the afternoon of the same day. Several hours after the law had expired and three hours before the Jews are supposed to have killed the lamb.

But then John tells us that the Savior was crucified on the preparation day, how about that? If the Jews ate the Passover that year they ate it on the sixteenth of the month instead of the fifteenth which would bring their preparation day on the fifteenth according to their count. The very day the Savior was crucified according to John's testimony, so there is no discord here. Now if there is anything cloudy about this I have failed to see it, and would be glad if some one would clear it up.

Faithfully submitted.

[It occurs to us that about all the Scripture on this question has been given, and both sides fairly presented. To discuss it to the end of time would not serve in the least to turn a single sinner from the error of his ways for a single hour. Unless some one has something entirely new—some new evidence—it would be well, in my judgment, to write on some other subject for a few months.—Ed.]

Kingdom Restitution.

In your paper of July 16th there is an article entitled, "The kingdom of God, what is it." First we may decide what a kingdom is or what constitutes a kingdom. We find that all kingdoms have, first a king, second assistant rulers, third a capitol, fourth territory. Now we look over the earth for a kingdom of God, but where is it, it simply does not exist. Now let us enquire what the prophet said about it. Ezek. xxix. 26, 26, 27, (read the 8 verses) the 27 says, "I will overturn, overturn, overturn it, the kingdom of Israel, God's kingdom, and it shall be no more until he come whose right it is, and I will give it him; now it is generally admitted that Christ is the heir, and he now is acting as high priest in the holiest of holies, and not asking. At the present time he is in the position representing the nobleman gone into a far country to receive a kingdom and return. Now read 1 Cor. the 50th verse says, "Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God." Men must be made immortal first (as the future king now is) before he can inherit the kingdom. See also 2 Tim. iv. 1, "I charge thee therefore before God and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead, at his appearing and his kingdom." Now this shows that the appearing and kingdom are at one and the same time, and we know that the appearing or second coming is at the end of the present age, and at the commencement of the future age or kingdom of God. Read also the 2nd and 7th chapters of Daniel. Dan. ii. 44 reads, "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms and it shall stand forever." Now this is very plain language. It is admitted by all that the smiting of the image is at the end of Gentile times, and that is the time of Christ's appearing and kingdom.

Now if his kingdom was in the world before his coming he could not set it up at his coming, and after it is set up then will be the time to gather out all things that offend and do iniquity. Now in the first place we see that being high priest and not king. Then the assistant rulers are asleep in their graves, and will not be raised till he comes, and the capital Jerusalem is under Turkish rule And the territory occupied by the image or nations of the world.

Read the second Psalm, verse 8 says, "Ask of me and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance and the uttermost part of the earth for thy possession. Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron and dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel, that is the time when his kingdom will be set up.

J. E. Howarth.

In closing L. C. Thomas' article in The Restitution of July 2, he asks the question, Who are the daughters of the Mother of Harlots? This subject has occupied my attention very closely since I commenced my correspondence with Mr. Dye; published in The Restitution of March 5. It seems to me that Mr. Gladstone, the historian, has made this subject very clear and very prominent, showing that the doctrine of the immortality of the soul was first legalized by a bull of Pope Leo X. in 1513, by condemning and reprobating all who should declare the soul to be mortal. Here, then, is the beginning of the legality of that abominable doctrine, which constitutes the Roman Catholic church to be the Mother of Harlots. But the daughters, who are they? It seems to me that all who believe in the immortality of the soul are daughters of that Mother. And this subject is made very plain in Rev. xiv. 4, "These are they which were not defiled with women for they are virgins." It seems that a defilement may emanate from a plurality of sources; evidently proving that a defilement may come from any and all sources by whom that abominable doctrine is believed. The doctrine is a libel upon the veracity of our blessed Savior for he said, "No man hath ascended up to heaven." Also to his disciples he said,—"Whither I go, ye cannot come." Peter also said —"David is not ascended into the heavens." But men in these days are so lustful for happiness that they are willing to cast aside the Savior's teaching and have invented a plan of salvation of their own. But Paul in 2 Tim. iv. 3, 4 warns us against the teachers of the present day. He says, "For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lust shall they heap to themselves teachers having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." Paul evidently saw the time when the doctrine of the immortality of the soul would supercede the plain teaching of the gospel through a resurrection of the dead and warned us against it. But men do not seem to realize that the sleep of the dead is a sleep of entire unconsciousness. Even Abraham, when he awakes will not know that he has been unconscious at all, so of all others. O the wisdom displayed in the glorious plan of salvation. Who can contemplate it without emotions of reverence for the Author?

But the doctrine of the immortality of the soul has taken such a firm hold upon Christians of the present day, that some of our brightest lights really believe they shall not die at all. T. De Witt Talmage in a printed sermon in the Christian Herald said, "We all know we shall live for ever; death cannot kill us." D. L. Moody, the great evangelist said, "Some day you will read in the papers that D. L. Moody of East Northfield is dead. Don't you believe a word of it. At that moment I shall be more alive than I am now."

Annual Conferences.

The Seventeenth Annual Conference of the Church of God, in the State of Nebraska will be held D. V. at St. Paul, Nebraska, beginning September 5th and convening till the 14th inclusive. Some very able speakers are expected to be present. The brethren and sisters of St. Paul will kindly care for all sisters and brothers who will attend, so it will not be necessary to take bedding. Brethren and sisters, in this time of turmoil and conflict we need your presence to encourage one another and your help with the meetings. We must have a good attendance to obtain success. Many weak and weary ones may faint by the wayside while if only encouraged by your presence and word of comfort they may find strength to hold fast to the truth and be found worthy of an intrance into the kingdom of God; so each and every brother and sister please make an extraordinary effort to attend and make this meeting an exceptionally successful one.

Your Sister.

Emma Elton, Sec.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Indiana will be held at Argos, beginning Friday, Sept. 5th and continue over Sunday. Argos is well located, being on the Nickel Plate road east and west, and the Lake Erie and Western road north and south, making it easy of access to most of the brethren. At this meeting the main business of the year is to be done, and new officers chosen to take charge of affairs. It is therefore of importance to the work that there be a good representation of the different organizations throughout the state. We feel that no urging should be necessary, but that each brother and sister who can ought to make an effort and attend and take part in the deliberations of the business sessions, enjoy the sermons and other meetings and each help to make it a success. Our last meeting at Antioch was one of the best ever held in the state, and there is no reason why this coming gathering should be less pleasant and profitable. It is our intention to try and arrange a programe which will be published in due time. We expect to begin business at the first of the meeting, so it will be vital to the success of the work that you be on hand at the beginning. The Lord's cause needs you each one to do his part. Will you not willingly give the three days to Him? Officers of churches, please see that your organization is represented so the plans for next year may be fully reported to you by your own members.

Mrs. R. C. Railsback, Sec.

The fourteenth annual session of the Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus, in Iowa, will be held at Waterloo, Iowa, beginning Friday, Aug. 15, and continuing over Sunday Aug. 24, occupying its beautiful camp ground situated in the Cedar River Park, which is reached in a few minutes ride on the street cars, from all railroad depots in the City.

Board will be furnished all, at a very low rate, at the dining hall—not exceeding ten cents for each meal.

We expect several preaching brethren from abroad, whose names will appear later. Come and enjoy this Conference with us. Matters of importance need your attention. Come, let us reason together, and not forsake the assembling of ourselves together, and so much the more, as we see the day approaching.

We hope for a large attendence this year. Begin at once to prepare for the meeting, and make a special effort to attend the beginning, so that a reduced rate may be assured, as it will save a large amount in railroad fare to the brethren, and will increase the attendance.

Brethren let us awake—the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.

Full particulars as to reduced rates and so on will appear later.

The 14th Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Iowa will be held at Waterloo, Iowa, Aug. 15th to 24th inclusive. Rates of one and one-third fare for the round trip have been granted on certificate plan providing we get one hundred to attend by rail. It is therefore very important each one should make a special effort to attend. Going tickets must be purchased on Aug. 16th to 22nd, inclusive. Be sure to get a certificate with each ticket purchased. Take the Cedar River Park Street car at Waterloo. A baggageman will be on hand to take your baggage. Be sure he has a badge on his hat reading "Conference baggageman," otherwise bring your checks to the tent.

The corporation board will meet on Aug. 19th, 1902, to transact such business as may come before it. Brethren, it remains with you to make this meeting a decided success. Be sure to attend as you will be helping every brother and sister in the State in a financial way. We expect A. H. Zilmer of Indiana, J. W. Wilson of Chicago, W. L. Crowe of Neb., S. J. Lindsay of Illinois, and others to preach the Word.

O. J. Allard, Pres.

Present Danger.

There is danger that we should substitute a busy activity in the Lord's work for a personal communion with the Lord, that we should have all the forms of truth while experiencing little of its power. How is it in your church? Is the prayer-meeting well attended? and is it a place of power? Is there a good attendance at the missionary meeting? and are the hearts of the members stirred with the genuine missionary spirit? What is the influence of the church in the community? Would it be missed if its membership should be wholly scattered? Are we Christians? or are we mere formalists? "Thou therefore which teachest another, teachest thou not thyself? thou that preachest a man should not steal, dost thou steal?.....Thou that makest thy boast of the law, through breaking the law dishonorest thou God?" Many are being deceived. They rest quietly because their names are on the church book, while they are not written in heaven. Their lives do not testify that self has been conquered, and that they are seeking first the kingdom of God and his righteousness. Their time and strength are spent in advancing their own interests. And yet they are constantly saying, "The temple of the Lord, the temple of the Lord, the temple of the Lord are these." What will arouse every self-deceived one to a sense of the true situation? The crisis is fast hastening on. Soon it will be too late. Awake! Arise! Be filled with the Spirit.—Review and Herald.

Illinois Conference Program.

The Fifth Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus, will be held at Oregon, Ill., Aug. 27 to 31, 1902.

Following is an outline of the different sessions, each one of which will be opened by singing, prayer and reading of Scripture.

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 27.

7:30 p m Sermon, A. H. Zilmer, "The Call to God's Kingdom and glory." Rev. v. 10.

THURSDAY, AUG. 28.

10:00 a m Formal opening of Conference, appointment of committees.

10:30 a m Outline study of Revelation continued from last Conference conducted by the President.

It is suggested that every one who proposes attending the conference familiarize themselves with the procession of symbols given from chapters 5 to 17, so they can ask questions.

Outline of the study—Review of the first ten chapters, which were gone over at last conference.

New lesson, Chapter 10. The angel and the book. Symbols—The angel, his personal characteristics, attitude, voice, little book in his hands, eating of the book and consequences, oath of the angel, seven thunders, John to again prophesy to all peoples.

The meaning—Let students read up in advance of the lesson on the origin and history of the Tutonic and Anglo Saxon peoples.

Chapter 11—The angel's measuring rod and things measured; angel's two witnesses, forty and two months, a lesson in prophetic numbers; a study of the symbols employed in conjunction with the two witnesses.

Meaning—Who or what are the witnesses. Study carefully the effects of the restoration of the Bible to the church, its translation into the common every day language of the people and its wide distribution on the church and on the world's moral and material progress.

The seventh trumpet, the kingdom of God, the resurrection and rewarding of the saints.

Part second.—The seven signs or wonders. This part of the natural division of the symbols introducing a new series begins with chap. xi. 19.

Symbols, the temple, ark, lightning, voices, thunder and earthquakes.

Chap. xii. Symbols, the glorious woman, her characteristics and appearance. The great red dragon, his attitude and characteristics; points of identification, his color, seven heads and ten horns, the man child, the war between Michael and the dragon, defeat and casting out on earth of the dragon, triumph of God's people, the flight of the woman, pursuing floods, help of the earth.

Meaning—Read the history of the church from the first to third centuries to the time of Constantine, especially the character and attitude toward the church of Pagan Rome.

Chap. xiii. The sea monster, points of identification, wounded and healed head, close relation to and similarity to the dragon, blasphemy. Its meaning.

The application—Read Church and Roman history, Gibbon's Rise and Fall of the Roman Empire preferred, from Constantine to Charlemagne. Two horned beast and the image of the first beast, its characteristics and points of identification, relation with the first beast, rehabiliation of first beast, miracles, worship, mark in fore head and hands, 666 the mystic number of his name.

Application.—Read history of the Latin and Greek churches and their intimate relation with the revived Roman empire as rehabiliated by the Pope and Charlemagne.

Chap. xvii. This should be studied in connection with the last, giving as it does in another form symbols representing these same two formidable powers designated as the beast and his image. Characteristics and points of identification, symbols, seven heads of the image, ten horns of the dragon and first beast and of the image, ten horns of Daniel's fourth beast, these horns uprooted by the stout blasphemous horn.

Chap. xiv. Symbols, the ram on Mt. Zion and the singing multitude, the 144,000, the gospel angel, Babylon and its doom. Fire and brimstone. The blessed dead. The great harvest.

Chap. xv. The seven last plagues. The multitude on the sea of glass. The seven vials of wrath.

The time alotted to this study will probably be consumed before reaching this point, but if not, the study will be continued to the closing scenes of this great vision of the ages, out-

[illegible] of earth, with [illegible] the final triumph of the righteous and righteousness.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

With Nature.

Almighty Father! such the lesson is
That in these cool and venerable woods,
From today; and firmer in my breast,
By every syllable, these truths are fixed,
That thou art the Beginning and the End
Of all this glorious work, and that thy love
Pervades the universe and that thy smile
Seeketh all hearts, to win them; and that thou
In every glorious thing we love beheld,
Declarest and revealest thyself to be The Majesty Supreme—Heaven and God.

What We Believe. No. 12.

We have seen in former papers that "a hearty belief of the gospel" and "repentance" constitute two of the essential elements as "prerequisites of the forgiveness of sins." But a third is mentioned in our statement of belief—viz: "Immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." Perhaps a word on the term "prerequisite" is in order. This is from pre, meaning before, and require, to demand, to ask; hence prerequisite, something previously required. "Forgiveness of sins" is the end desired; "belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ," are "prerequisites," things required before "forgiveness of sins" can be obtained. This the Church of God believes and teaches. But bear in mind; these "requirements," though insisted upon by the Church of God, do not originate with that body. The Church has no authority to make rules or regulations for either its members or those desiring to become such. We insist upon the observance of these things because commanded and authorized by our Lord Jesus Christ, and any rule or requirement of which he is not the Author can not be considered as having any binding force. If he, speaking God's words, and in behalf of God, requires men to believe the gospel, as announced by himself, repent of their sins, and be immersed in his name, in order to the forgiveness of sins, the Church is obliged to accept and insist upon the observance of these requirements. It has no right to either omit or substitute something else in place of what has been divinely commanded.

It is admitted that faith of some kind, and repentance, whatever that may be, are necessary to the remission of sins. But it is not so generally admitted that baptism is essential to the obtainment of pardon, notwithstanding Jesus said, "He that believeth (the gospel) and is baptized, shall be saved" (Mark xvi. 16), and Peter on Pentecost, when he was asked what to do, said, "Repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, every one of you." Acts ii. 37, 38. That baptism pertains to, and has something to do with, salvation, is evident from the statement, "He that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved." And the apostles and early Christians so understood the matter. True, we know of many who have either not been baptized at all, or else have substituted something else for baptism, who yet claim to be Christians. The writer has in mind especially one who frequently said, in testimony meetings, that he had been "serving the Lord" for forty years, who had never been baptized. If it is possible for men to be "Christians" and "serve the Lord" many years or a life time without baptism, it is certainly an incontrovertible fact that the Lord betrayed a woful lack of wisdom when he commanded that believers of the gospel should be baptized in order to be saved; and it is further a fact that the apostles were laboring under the same disadvantage, for they manifestly understood him to mean that men needed to be baptized in order to salvation, and proceeded upon this understanding. Peter said to the anxious and inquiring thousands on Pentecost, "Repent and be baptized for the remission of sins." But it has been suggested, Might not the apostle have meant to say, "Be baptized because your sins have been forgiven?" Let us see. If this was the motive of their baptism, what would it do for them? Would it be an evidence that their sins were forgiven? Not so, for in this case baptism follows forgiveness, and they would need to be conscious of such forgiveness before being baptized. Moreover, if baptized because their sins were forgiven, they would also be required to "repent" because of forgiveness of sins. For the conjunction "and" binds repentance and baptism together, placing the one on the same side of remission of sins as the other. If therefore repentance is "For the remission of sins," so is baptism; hence there can be no remission of sins until God's requirements are fully met. But it is objected, "What will you do with so many good people who have not been baptized and yet are Christians? Are they still sinners because they have not been baptized?" To this it needs to be said, What are you going to do with God and his requirements? Can any one rightfully claim to be a Christian who either ignores or rejects God's means of salvation? What are we that we should dictate terms of pardon, or imagine we have been pardoned if we have not complied with the conditions of pardon? Besides, we are called upon to "obey the gospel," and to announce "the obedience of the faith" (Rom. i. 5) to others, and only to those rendering such obedience "from the heart" (Rom. vi. 17) can we say that Jesus will be to them the Author of eternal salvation. Heb. v. 9. If obedience is absolutely required, and baptism is an element of such obedience, I ask, How can any one hope to be saved who is not baptized? There is, as the Editor of this paper recently pointed out, a tendency in our day to be what is styled "liberal," which amounts to this: "You admit that I am right, and I will admit that you are right. Let us lay aside such little matters as faith, repentance, and baptism. You are right that baptism is essential, and I am equally right that it is immaterial. Let us be liberal." If "liberality" or that indefinable thing now-a-days so much in evidence—"charity"—were the only consideration upon which this whole matter hinges, then we could well afford to throw the entire gospel arrangement, with its conditions and obligations, overboard and set up a standard of our own; but this matter has not been submitted to poor, erring mortals to decide by a majority vote. There is One "with whom we have to do" (Heb. iv. 13) who has taken great pains and provided ample means to fully inform us as to his intentions, so that we need not grope in darkness, need not guess what might be the proper thing to do, and then hope it may come out right at last. The existing confusion lies in the religious teaching of the day. The "clergy," with some exceptions, seek to quiet the minds of the people on this subject by saying that baptism is "not essential," and even when admitting that it sustains some kind of relation to the question of salvation, they tell their people that it matters not how they are baptized, as if they could be baptized any number of ways. When it is said, "The priest shall take of the log of oil, and pour it into his own left hand; and the priest shall dip his right finger in the oil that is in his left hand, and shall sprinkle of the oil with his finger seven times before the Lord" (Lev. xiv. 15, 16), no one, including the "clergy," has any doubt as to what those persons were to do. Three different words were used to convey so many different ideas. In the LXX. they are cheo, baptizo, and rhaino respectively. It would not make good sense to use them interchangeably. And this pertains to a transaction which was, of itself, of comparatively little importance. Yet such care was exercised to supply the proper word lest there should be a misunderstanding. Can we, in view of this, say or assume that when directions were given as to an act relating to the salvation of men and women, the matter had been so vaguely and indefinitely stated that the preference, notion, whim, or caprice of unenlightened persons could decide as to what ought to be done? When directions were given to an Israelitish priest to pour oil into his own left hand, he knew what that meant; when he was told to dip his right finger in the oil, he knew better than to sprinkle oil on his finger, and when told to sprinkle, he sprinkled. But as to the word "dip." Really, how did it look when the man dipped his finger in the oil? Was not the oil in his left hand, and did he not lower his finger until it was in the oil? This will be freely granted. Now, if a command were given to dip (baptizo, to dip) a man, would not reason tell us that the man, like the finger, must be lowered, let or put down, until he is in the water? And since such a command has been given with reference to man, is it not the proper thing to baptize (dip) the man in the water, instead of putting the water on the man, either by pouring or sprinkling? It is a fact, not generally known, that in every instance in the New Testament where a preposition is used connecting water with baptism, it is the word in, thus, "I indeed baptize you in (instead of with) water." It is the same as when it is said that John baptized "in the river of Jordan." Mark i. 5. It would be just as proper to say he baptized with the river of Jordan, as to say baptized with water. It was done in Jordan, in the water. Rotherham renders baptize into English by "immerse," and the Emphatic Diaglott by "dip." These are only a few of the many reasons why the Church of God advocates "immersion in the name of Jesus Christ."

The Firm Foundation.

The first question which should always be uppermost in the minds of people when some doctrine is presented for our consideration, is: Upon what kind of a foundation does it rest? It matters little as to how symetrical the theory may be should it have a faulty foundation. The most elaborate structure erected upon a defective foundation, will most surely come to naught. Jesus said, the wise man built upon the rock, but the fool upon sand, and when the rain and the winds beat upon it, there was nothing left but a disastrous ruin. Even so, faith is the base of hope, and if your faith is not well founded, your hope will never be realized.

Upon what kind of a foundation is your hope for eternity built? Does it rest upon a faith of serpentine origin, proclaimed by pagans, and accepted by the Roman apostasy and her harlot daughters? or has it an origin in the great Jehovah, as announced to Abraham and his seed? Which is it? The first rests upon a sand foundation, and the last upon solid rock. The rock foundation will abide through time and eternity. It is this: "Thy Seed shall possess the gate of his enemies, and in thy Seed shall all the nations of the earth (not heaven) be blessed."

This declaration lies at the base of all true gospel faith. Any declaration of faith which is otherwise based is spurious. By this test alone it is easy to determine which is true, and which is false.

The first item in the above declaration is: "Thy Seed shall possess the gate of his enemies." The enemies to which the Seed of Abraham gives attention, with a view of utter extermination, is "sin" and "death." Death, the most unrelenting foe, directs its shafts against all mankind. But after all, death is but the effect of "sin" as the cause.

See James i. 15, "Sin bringeth forth death."

1 Cor. xv. 56: "The sting of death is sin."

Rom. vi. 23: "The wages of sin is death."

It cannot be successfully controverted but what the power death is vested in sin, and if sin can be exterminated, death, as its effect, must of necessity cease. Therefore sin is the enemy which the Seed of Abraham, must assail, and possess its gate. When this is taken, all other enemies are of minor importance, and can be quickly conquered. Sin, therefore, is the devil, foe, or great adversary, in which lies the power of producing death.

Now, by what method does the Seed of Abraham propose to destroy that in which lies the power of death? For answer, see Heb. ii. 14: "Forasmuch then as the children are taken of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same, that through death he might destroy him (sin personified) that had the power of death, (sin) that is the devil," or adversary of us all.

The same thought is in Heb. ix. 26: "He put away sin (the devil) by the sacrifice of himself." We can conceive of sin being put away through the atonement, but we can never understand how a supernatural omnipresent personal devil can physically be put to death, by the sacrificial offering of Jesus for sin.

In due time the Seed of Abraham will possess the gate of his most assiduous enemies—sin and death.

He will also possess the gate of his political enemies, even those that would not that he should reign over them, and which enter into combines to destroy his "bands," and cast away his "cords." They are advised to kiss the Son lest they perish from the way when his wrath is kindled but a little. "He shall put down all rule, and all authority and power. For he must reign until he hath put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy which shall be destroyed is death." 1 Cor. xv. 24-26. At this time he will become a complete victor. "Thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies," and it will be fulfilled in every detail.

The second point in our foundation rock is: "In thy seed shall all nations of the earth be blessed." This comprehends the blessing of the nations of the earth, that are upon the earth, and not some imaginary immortal immaterial souls, that have neither body nor parts, and is not substance, does not possess any weight, or occupy space. Such a soul has no real existence; and surely that which does not occupy space, cannot be localized, although tradition says they dwell in heaven. But the Bible says, "No man hath ascended up to heaven."

There is no such foolishness as the above in the Bible foundation. "In thy seed all nations of the earth shall be blessed." When the enemies we call sin and death are destroyed, who can possibly estimate the blessings the inhabitants of the earth will then experience? Sin now is the terrible blight, the source of every ill which afflicts humanity. Under its curse the whole creation groans and travails in pain; not only they, but the sons of God also groan, anxiously waiting for the coming of the Son of God. The time hasteneth on when "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; (why?) for the former things are passed away." The "former things" will only have "passed away," when Abraham's seed shall possess the gate of his enemies, and not before.

In the matter of blessing all nations Jesus proposes to share this work with all who become united to him by faith and obedience. Paul in Gal. iii. 26-29, says: "If ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise. Heirs of God, and joint heirs with Jesus Christ." Rom. viii. 17. These joint heirs will have entered into a relationship by which they have become separated from all past sins. Hence sin has lost its dominion over them. They will rise from the dead, shouting victory over death and the grave, in advance of the time when the last "enemy shall be destroyed." In their case the sin devil cannot exercise its "power of death." The "sting" was extracted when they parted company with their sins. When that was accomplished, they were called "the body of Christ," even "members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones. 1 Cor. xii. 27; Eph. v. 30. So close in their union to the Lord, that in figure they are thus counted as "members of his body, his flesh, and his bones."

In order that the Seed of Abraham may "possess the gate of his enemies," and finally "bless all nations," there must first be a "new creation" started, with the second Adam as its federal head. That new creation will be entirely divorced from sin. Sin ruined the first creation, but in the second creation sin will never enter. Every member of this new creation must first be "born again," born from the dead.

See Rev. iii. 14: "These things saith the faithful and true witness, the beginning of the creation of God." Compare this with Col. i. 18: "Who is the beginning, the first born from the dead." He is also called "the first born among many brethren." Rom. viii. 29.

In Hebrews we have the first fruits of the new creation completed, he says: "Ye are come unto Mount Zion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly, and church of the first-born." More properly "the congregation of first borns."

This is all in advance of the completion of the blessing, when the "last enemy" shall be destroyed.

The promise that the Seed of Abraham shall "possess the gate of his enemies," etc., is based upon a carefully arranged plan to bring it to pass, as you have already seen.

1. Sin and death are enemies which must first be conquered, before the blessing can come.

2. That which has the power of death must first be destroyed, before death can cease.

3. The method employed is, that "through death he might destroy him that had the power of death." "He put away sin by the sacrifice of himself."

4. The offering being made, he (the Seed of Abraham) takes his place as the "beginning of the creation of God," "the first born from the dead."

5. By his obedience, he constitutes others also "the seed of Abraham," and "joint heirs" with himself.

6. He takes away the sins of his "joint heirs," and clears them from under the dominion of sin; hence death cannot hold them.

7. They rise from the dead, shouting victory over death and the grave. They then take their places as the first fruits of the new creation, being the congregation of the first born.

8. The new creation from this point will grow and extend. "Behold, I make all things new." "New heavens and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness." "There shall be no more curse." "And yet God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, (because sin is destroyed) neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, (because) the former things are passed away."

All this blessedness will be experienced right here, just where "the former things" used to be, and not in some far off clime beyond the skies, whose inhabitants have never experienced those things; but right here where the groans, sorrow, crying and pain and death, have been the bitter and sad experience of teeming millions of its inhabitants.

Dear reader, is this plan in your system of theology? if not, then you need to seriously question the foundation upon which your faith rests. The Bible says there is but one faith and hope, and you had better investigate, and you may discover that your faith rests upon nothing but a sand bank, in place of the solid bed-rock of truth. A fictitious faith cannot benefit you, but will in the end prove a most serious and sad disappointment. Look well to your foundation.

W. H. WILSON.

Short, Gentle Criticisms.

In a late number of Our Hope the editor and one of his contributors makes a dash at future probation, which is entitled to a friendly criticism. A reader states his query in a very concise manner and asks, "If this be true, does it not give future probation a clear sweep?" The editor hesitates a moment, and then goes after the question in good shape. And while we admire his kind spirit, we think he is mistaken. His argument hangs principally upon a bad translation of Rev. xxi. 24. And by correcting this, his points all vanish away like fog before the sun light. This passage when stript of its superfluity, reads, "And the nations will walk by means of its light." There is no such a thing as "saved nations." The saved will be selected or taken out of the nations, but the nations remain as such. The redeemed will sing.....for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign on the earth. If mortal men and nations are all gone out off, what need of kings and priests? Will the saved ones rule over each other, or over the nations left from which they were redeemed? Kings and priests indicate mercy for mortals. The saved out of all nations will be safe in the holy city. While those who hear and reform will have right to the tree of life, while the leaves of the tree will be for the healing of the nations—for medicine, or for bruises and sores. Marg. See Ezek. xlvii. 12. In that day there shall be a fountain opened for sin and for uncleanness. This is after Christ comes. See xii., xiii. and xiv. of Zech. From the force of the evidence we feel constrained to believe that the Spirit and the bride say come, after Christ comes. Now Bro. M. L. will you stand up and take your medicine? On the next page in the same paper we find an effort made to prove that "David's" tabernacle" has been raised up in the past. The evident design is to try to head off all future probation. Let us try the argument a little, if it breaks like sand, let it go. The position and the argument looks very cloudy to me. The writer quotes from Amos ix. 11, 12, and tries hard to make it fit to the first advent of Christ. Why not let the prophet help us to locate this prophecy? He says, "In that day will I raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen." And to know what day the prophet had in mind we must go back a little and see what goes before. The 8th verse foretells the overthrow and dispersion of the sinful kingdom of Israel, which was its third and final overturn, and was fulfilled A. D. 70. This is what the prophet Ezekiel foretold. See xxi. 25, and will remain in this condition until he comes whose right it is, and the Lord God who will give it to him. And the angel tells Mary when this will be done. See Lu. i. 31-38. Thus we find "that day" when David's tabernacle shall be raised up yet in the future. Peter and James both agree with this idea. Peter claims that he had been selected to preach to the Gentiles. While James agrees and tells the object—to take out a people for his name, which is the object and work of the commission and of this age. And with this idea, and this work the prophets agree, as it is written, "after these things I will return; and I will rebuild that tabernacle of David that has fallen down; and I will rebuild its ruins, and will establish it; in order that the remainder of men may seek the Lord." James is very pointed and positive that this rebuilding of David's tabernacle is after this people for his name is taken out of the Gentiles, and also after the Lord returns. And it will not begin to fit any where else. James had worked this problem out for us, and given us the keys in the words, "After these things I will return and rebuild that fallen down tabernacle of David." While if for any cause our eyes are holden so that we fail to catch on to his words, and know not how to use his keys, of course it is our misfortune. We have looked over citations and proof time and again, and utterly fail to find in them one word about David's tabernacle, you must have given us the wrong book. True we find the word tabernacle in your citations, but it is God's tabernacle which has never fallen down and hence needs no rebuilding. This is not the tabernacle of David—the one under consideration. You must be barking up the wrong tree, my brother.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME I. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, AUGUST 27, 1902. NUMBER 32.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

COMMENTING on the closing of the religious schools in France a correspondent to the Chicago Tribune says:

"Without doubt had Parliament been in session a dangerous disturbance might have broken out in France and the cabinet overturned as a result of the demonstration over the closing of the schools of the religious orders. As it is, the safety of the cabinet is unquestioned, and Premier Combes is at leisure to take such measures as he chooses to restore order. Both the Pope and the nuncs have remained pointedly silent during the conflict, which is another striking illustration of Leo XIII.'s desire to keep in peace with the government of the republic.

Public opinion nevertheless has obtained one important concession, which is, that at least the sisters in charge of hospitals and other purely charitable institutions will be allowed to remain unmolested for the present. No doubt when things have calmed down a little, many of the schools will be allowed to reopen, although it seems as if eventually the long talked of separation of the church and state must become a reality.

What the government particularly desires to do is to satisfy the Socialists, who are always crying for the suppression of the religious orders, and to see just how far measures could be taken against the latter.

Prophecy Concerning Jews.

Our Brother J. O. Woodruff of Elizabeth, N. J., sends us the following clipped from a paper published there concerning some sermons preached by W. L. Pettingill. The item says:—

The subject of the day was "Jehovah's Covenant People, Israel." In the morning the preacher spoke on "Fulfilled Prophecy Concerning the Jews." He gave a comprehensive summary of Old Testament predictions already fulfilled concerning the people of Israel, the land of Palestine, the city of Jerusalem, and the Messiah-King.

Addressing himself to any Jews who might be in the audience he said: "My Jewish friends, you say you are looking for your Messiah. I am also looking for him and expecting him every day. But, you, when your Messiah comes, you will find that he is the prophet of Nazareth, Jesus. He it is who is the Lion of the Tribe of Judah. Your own Hebrew Scriptures demand not only a glorious Sovereign who shall occupy the throne of David in Jerusalem, but also a suffering and crucified Savior. All the prophecies of your own prophets which concern his suffering have been fulfilled in every jot and tittle by Jesus the Nazarene, and there remain only the prophecies of his glorious reign to be fulfilled. These will all be likewise fulfilled at his second coming, which may take place at any moment."

In the evening Mr. Pettingill took up the subject of "Unfulfilled Prophecy Concerning Israel." He showed from the Scripture that the Jews must be regathered to Palestine and possess that land "from the river of Egypt, or the Nile, to the great river, the river Euphrates," a tract of territory 600 by 700 miles in extent; also, that they are to be reunited under one King; that they are to be nationally converted to Jesus Christ in connection with his second coming. Speaking of the land, he pointed out the unique position of Palestine and showed that it is to be the centre of the millennial earth, politically and commercially. As to the city, Jerusalem, it is yet to be "the praise of the whole earth," and the capitol of the universal empire when "the Lord shall be King over the whole earth." In conclusion he brought forth an array of unfulfilled predictions which demanded the return of Jesus to the earth for their fulfilment.

London has a New Prophet.

Under the above heading we find in the Chicago Tribune of Aug. 24, the following dispatch from London:—

"There appears today in the most expensive column of London's newspapers of the biggest circulations one of the most curious advertisements ever published. It consists of a long prophecy, occupying two and a half columns, and describing a series of momentous events which are to occur between 1906 and 1929, and which will culminate with the second coming of Christ and the beginning of the millenium.

The prophet is an individual who describes himself as "the Rev. M. Baxter of London," and his screed is another of those elaborate deductions from figures and signs in the books of Daniel and Revelation.

He declares that what was formerly Cæsar's empire will be divided between 1906 and 1917 into ten kingdoms, including France extended to the Rhine, taking in Great Britain, without Ireland and India, Spain, Austria, Greece, Turkey, Syria, Egypt, and the Balkans. These ten kingdoms will form a Latin confederacy, which will be leagued against Germany and Russia.

The prophet says that a lot of terrible things will happen in the ensuing ten years. Poor America does not figure in the awful chronicle, presumably because she finds no place in biblical history.

Passing Events in the Light of Prophecy.

We are indebted to Glad Tidings for the following summary of passing events that we deem to be of interest to the household:—

Reuter's correspondent at Constantinople reports that the secret service is abnormally active at present. Indeed a reign of terror might almost be said to prevail as far as natives, and more especially Moslems are concerned. There is an air of suspicion everywhere. Intercourse with foreigners is forbidden. In any other country in Europe the restrictions imposed upon the people would cause an explosion of popular feeling, but in Constantinople no one dares utter a word of protest.

The Budget of the Ottoman Empire sets forth the necessity of obtaining an advance of between two and three millions. An application has been made to the Imperial Ottoman Bank for an advance.

According to Reuter's correspondent the Russian Embassy at Constantinople has presented a note to the Porte, claiming £930,000 (Turkish) as payment of interest on the indemnity for the losses sustained by Russian subjects during the Russo Turkish war. Telegraphing later, the correspondent states that the Porte completely repudiates Russia's claim. Russia seems to apply the screw at the most opportune moment.

The Daily Chronicle correspondent at Constantinople states that the news from Albania is disquieting, and the agitation is taking a very serious turn. In some places in northern Albania the inhabitants have driven away the Turkish officials, and have telegraphed to the palace that they do not want a Turkish administration. The situation is exceedingly grave.

As to Russia, it appears that there is great uneasiness in certain provinces. In Ekaterinoslav there have been great disturbances. A large number of workmen broke into several factories and completely sacked them, smashing the machinery and appliances. At the same time the peasants in the neighborhood attacked the houses and farms of landed proprietors, looting or destroying everything that fell into their hands. The authorities had to call out troops, who restored order after firing on the rioters, many of whom were killed and wounded. The whole of the lower classes throughout the greater part of southern Russia are in a state of ferment.

That the authorities are apprehensive of further trouble is evident from the fact of their having issued a secret Rescript to the police officials of the government of Saratoff. The Rescript impresses upon the officials the importance of watching the peasant movement, and the necessity of employing the most extreme measures at the first signs of disturbances. Theological students and Sunday school masters must especially be watched.

Clearly every effort is made to stifle any attempts at freedom of thought or action. It is impossible not to sympathize with the desire of the Russian people for some measure of freedom, although one cannot approve of the means they are employing to further their objects. When one looks across the continent and sees the oppression of the people in the different countries the prayer must arise in the heart of every servant of God for the time to come when God by his Anointed will judge the people righteously, and govern the nations upon earth. Psa. lxvii. 4.

The Annual Meeting of the Anglo-Jewish Association was lately held. The chairman in his address gave a survey of the condition of the Jews. He said the outlook was one of great gloom, anxiety and pain, "and the new century was not opening well for them." Commenting upon the address, the Jewish Chronicle says: "A more appalling and lamentable utterance has rarely come from a public platform. The dawn of the twentieth century finds the terrible 'Judenschmorz' not only still proceeding, but growing in acuteness and agony—as if the Jews have not left long centuries of torture and misery behind them.' When is their long night of sorrow and suffering to be at an end?

The report on trade and commerce of Palestine for the year 1901 by the British Consul in Jerusalem has been issued. It states that the trade of Palestine during the past year may be said to have been in a fairly prosperous condition. There was a considerable increase in both imports and exports. The return of shipping at the port of Jaffa shows an increase both in the number of vessels and tonnage compared with the previous year. One of the staple trades appears to be the exportation of oranges. The number of boxes shipped in 1901 amounted to 861,450 compared with 250,000 during the previous year. In the way of public works, the most noteworthy undertaking during the year 1901 was that for supplying Jerusalem with water. The supply is, however, still far from adequate for the requirements of a city the size of Jerusalem.

The country has ample resources for a large population. May the time soon come when the people so long "scattered and peeled" will find it a haven of rest, every man sitting under his own vine and fig tree, and none make them afraid.

In 1896 Dr. Herzl published a pamphlet entitled, "A Jewish State" which led up to the establishment of the Zionist movement. A paragraph in that pamphlet read as follows:—

"The Jewish question exists wherever Jews live in perceptible numbers. Where it does not exist it is carried by Jews in the course of their migrations. We naturally move to those places where we are not persecuted, and there our presence produces persecution. This is the case in every country, and will remain so, even in those most highly civilized, France itself being no exception, till the Jewish question find a solution on a political basis. The unfortunate Jews are now carrying anti-Semitism into England: they have already introduced it into America."

Since the publication of that pamphlet an Alien Immigration commission has been appointed, and Dr. Herzl has been giving his testimony before it. Among other things he said he "regretted to say that the state of Jewry is worse today than it was seven years ago when I published that pamphlet. If I may without presumption say so, I foresaw that the Jewish difficulty would arise in this country.

Continuing, he said, "The fact that there is now for the first time since Cromwell a perceptible number of our people in England, is the true cause of this commission being called together. But I think it right to say that it seems to me that the mere establishment of this commission has created a difficulty, in itself no small one. For, as the result, the commission must either recommend restrictive legislation or not. If the former, and its recommendations are given effect to by Parliament, then England will break away from the great principle of free asylum to the oppressed, which hitherto has been its glory, although the endeavor to keep out the poor oppressed Jews cannot, I believe, be successful."

Dr. Herzl told the commission that things were becoming worse and worse with the Jews every day, and pointed to Roumania as a very present instance of the method by which the Jews were forced from their homes—even after serving in the army there they are still aliens in the land of their birth. Continuing, he said: "In mediæval German, the word "Elend" means both misery and exile, and the two have ever been synonymous for the Jew. So you must not imagine that the Jew has rushed from the land of his birth immediately conditions were made unfavorable for him, and that you in England have got to the end of the question. I read the evidence tendered to the commission by Mr. Llewellyn Smith, in which he stated that as many as 58,000 Jews migrated to the United States last year. The numbers are to me appalling, because I can form an estimate of the misery and the wrong that has driven these people forth from the places in which they were born, always remembering that the self-imposed sentence of exile is not with the Jew as with those of other nationalities, for a term of years,—with the Jew it is a life sentence.

Proceeding he said he thought the remedy suggested, viz., to induce the Jews in the east end of London to leave and settle in other parts of England, a most short-sighted means of meeting the trouble, because wherever a considerable number would settle there trouble would begin again. The only solution he can see is the one he foreshadowed in his pamphlet seven years ago—the recognition of the Jews as a people, and the finding by them of a legally recognized home, to which Jews in those parts of the world in which they are oppressed, would naturally migrate, for they would arrive there as citizens just because they are Jews and not aliens. This would mean the diverting of the stream of emigration from England and the United States, where so soon as they form a perceptible they become a trouble and a burden, to a land where the true interest would be served by accommodating as many as possible. The Jews of eastern Europe cannot stay there,—where are they to go? If you find they are not wanted here then some place must be found for them. These problems will not arise if a home be found for them which will be legally recognized as Jewish..... So far as Jews are concerned, I have no hesitation in saying that the solution is practicable and feasable, and is the one above all others which they would welcome, and which would obtain the most earnest co-operation of those whose hopeless misery is the cause of the troubles with which they and you are confronted."

We know for certain they are to find their way back to their fathers, but how it is to be brought about we do not yet see. Neither do we know how much longer they may have to pass under the rod before the way is made clear. Things do not seem so favorable for an arrangement with the Sultan as they were a short time ago,—and we see no way, but believe, and hope on that the cloud may soon pass over, so that the conditions laid down may be evolved,—and the Deliverer soon come to Zion and turn away ungodliness from Jacob. We think the solution suggested by the leader of the Zionist movement to be a wise one from a human point of view,—and we have thought a Divine hand was directing it, and would use it to accomplish his revealed purpose. We are confident we are rushing on to the end of the age; and the last news from the far east—respecting Japan, Corea and England together with the opening of the great Siberian railroad contributes to this conclusion.

The Bereans Column.

[Under this heading the society of "Bereans" of Illinois, will supply the copy, and endeavor to fill the space once a month.]

To the Illinois Bereans:

At our Conference last year it was decided that we should see what we could do toward maintaining a column in THE RESTITUTION for one year. Our year is nearing its close and it is for you to decide, dear Bereans, whether you wish the effort continued through another year. Have you benefited by it? Those of you who have contributed towards its support have grown, that we know. How about you who have enjoyed it but have done nothing to help it along? Have you grown also? We hope so. I suppose you are saying to yourselves that the committee did not ask you to write. If so, we would suggest an improvement for the work during the coming year. Do not wait to be asked. Be so filled with zeal and love for the work, that at any time you will feel at liberty to write your article and send your contribution, so helping along. We can assure you that the committee will find no fault when the articles come in so fast that we hardly find room for them. What a welcome surprise that would be. Now that our year of service is ended, the committee would like to thank you for your ready response to our requests for material. We hope you will serve your next committee as faithfully. We wish also, in the name of all the Illinois Bereans, to thank the Editor of this paper for the space he has allowed us this year, and trust that if the favor is asked for another year that he will grant it. Hoping that you will come to Conference so full of ideas that you cannot possibly hold them in.

We remain sincerely.
YOUR COMMITTEE.

Dear Bereans:

Again it is our pleasure to write for the Berean column of THE RESTITUTION. Indeed it is a pleasure. Paul in Galatians says in the sixth chapter and ninth verse. "And let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap if we faint not." And if we do the will of the Master he will strengthen us on our way. Paul in travelling through the lands endured very hard trials, but through them all he never thought of giving up in despair. His persecutions and hardships only drew him closer to God. In 2 Tim. iv. 6-9, he said, "For I am now ready to be offered and the time of my departure is at hand, I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." It takes perseverance to accomplish great tasks. If we are not able to do great deeds for our Master, the small deeds will be received by him and we will be rewarded according to our works. We belong to God and have no right to resist his commands. If he forsakes us we have no hope left for us. Therefore we should aim to please him; for he blesses and prospers all those who serve him. We ought to show our love for him in all our actions. The day is coming when each one of us must stand in the presence of our Creator and render our accounts, and if we are not prepared, why not prepare now.

LOVE.

"Love worketh no ill to his neighbor; therefore love is the fulfilling of the law." Rom. xiii. 10. If we have love in our hearts we will wish no man ill and whatever we want done unto us we will do unto them. Those who have love endure all things, they are not envious, proud nor ill thinkers. God loved us and he gave his only begotten Son for us and we ought also to love one another. If we love God we will do our very best to keep his commandments, and if we do this we have love not only for God but for all his creatures.

ANNA ASLAKSEN.

"Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth." God said in Psa. xxv. 13, his soul shall inherit the earth. He also said in Psa. xxxvii. 9, 11, 22, "For evil-doers shall be cut off, but those that wait upon the Lord shall inherit the earth." But the meek shall inherit the earth. And shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace, for such as be blessed of him shall inherit the earth, and they that be cursed of him shall be cut off. May we all live true and upright lives so as to inherit the earth with the meek.

Brethren of the Northwestern Conference:

It has pleased the brethren to again select me as your evangelist. I see the importance of devoting the entire year to the work in order to reach all localities where evangelizing should be done. The States of Oregon and Washington embrace a large territory of labor. I expect to begin the work of holding a series of meetings near Astoria early in August and wish to have all that shall want my labor during the coming year to open correspondence with me at an early date so we may determine plan and time of work. Address Scholls, Oregon.

Love is Life.

"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul and with all thy mind." This is the first and great commandment. Love is life. It is the fulfilling of the law of our being. Only as we worthily love do we truly live; only when we love with a perfect affection that which is perfectly worthy of our affection, do we attain unto the supreme good of life. Concerning these truths there has been no dispute and all that is deepest in man has affirmed them with unhesitating faith. And therefore the first great commandment of the law has almost the force of a first truth of reason. Men have always been ready to join in the confession, "I need to love some one with heart and soul and mind; I ought to love God, the Infinitely Good, with all my heart and soul and mind."

But when you have denied to God a conscious personality, what have you done with these deepest sentiments of the human nature out of which our highest morality springs? You have cut them up by the roots, or trampled them under your feet. You cannot, if you try, love with all your heart and soul and mind any being that cannot love you with heart and soul and mind. Personality in God is the correlate of morality in man. The word personality is one over which men quibble, but the thing is precious. A god that cannot love us is a god that we cannot love.—Sunday Afternoon.

Big Business in Bibles.

Trade in Bibles is reported to be active and steadily increasing. The American Bible Society issued 1,500,000 Bibles last year, and the British and Foreign Bible Society 5,000,000. Many other concerns publish Bibles and sell great numbers of them. The Philippines consumed 10,700 of the American Bible Society's Bibles during our first year there, and 58,000 during the second year. Translations of the Bible are now being made into five Filipino dialects. It has already been published in three other dialects by the British Society, so that it will soon be out in eight varieties of Filipino language. Nearly half a million Bibles went into China last year in spite of the effect of the Boxer outbreak, which for the time being, cut down the demand one-half.

It seems odd that the Mormon Bible is not oftener met with. Few persons not Mormons have read it, and it is rarely seen in private libraries or book-stores.—Harper's Weekly.

Married.

Brother Nim D. Titchenal and Sister Myrtle Patterson of Wenatchee, Washington, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony at the residence of the bride's parents, Brother and Sister H. W. Patterson, at 9 o'clock p. m. on the 14th day of August 1902, by Elder Richard Corbaley, of Waterville, Washington.

There were about forty relatives and friends present. There were quite a number of beautiful and useful presents given to the highly esteemed bride and bridegroom, which taken of respect was duly appreciated by them.

Brother and Sister Titchenal will reside in their beautiful home adjoining the town of Wenatchee, as soon as their dwelling-house is completed, which is now well under way.

As Brother and Sister Titchenal have both been engaged in preaching the gospel, and as in union there is strength, we fondly hope that their usefulness will be increased.

The Church of God, at Wenatchee and Waterville congratulate them in their happy union in this life and hope to meet them in the kingdom of God.

Your Brother, in the blessed hope.
RICHARD CORBALEY.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is represented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Poetry.

After All.

Grief is strong, but joy is stronger;
Night is long, but day is longer;
When life's riddle solves and clears,
And the angels in our ears
Whisper the sweet answer low—
Answer full of love and blessing—
How the wonderment will grow
At the blindness of our guessing,
All the hard things we recall
Made so easy—after all!

Earth is sweet, but heaven is sweeter;
Love complete, but faith completer;
Close beside our wond'ring ways,
Through dark nights and weary ways,
Stand the angels with bright eyes;
And the shadow of the cross
Falls upon and sanctifies
All our pain and all our loss;
Though we stumble, though we fall,
God is helping—after all.

Sigh, then, soul, but sing in sighing,
To the happier things replying;
Dry the tears that dim thy eyes;
Give glad thoughts for life and being;
Time is but the little entry
To eternity's large dwelling,
And the angel guards keep sentry,
Urging, guiding, half compelling.
Till, the puzzling way quite past,
Thou shalt enter in at last.

The Apocalypse.

There are no long stretches of time unillumined by prophetic light. Prophecy is most emphatically what Peter styles it, "A light that shineth in a dark place." 2 Pet. i. 19. Such it has been to the church, and will continue to be until the day dawn. Its rays have penetrated the darkest ages of human history. Its beams have been thrown athwart the times of the Gentiles. All along the course of the centuries its statements have been passing into historical facts, thus verifying the language of Peter that "prophecy came not in old time by the will of man; but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit." It is true that its style is sometimes obscure; abounding in figures of speech characteristic of Eastern ancient literature. Some of the prophecies are given under symbol, which to the superficial thinker would appear like hiding instead of revealing the mind of Jehovah. The prophecies of Daniel and John more than all others abound in symbols. It is through these, in the main, that their revelations are made. The language employed is descriptive of the symbol. To get at the meaning we must study the symbol as it is set before us on the inspired page.

Dropping this introduction I come to my theme, the Apocalypse. Is this last book of the Bible a prophecy covering the centuries from John's day down to the blessed era of the consumation of God's plan? Is it a continuous prophecy some of the visions of which found their accomplishment in the bloody histories of past centuries? Or has the pen of Inspiration omitted to notice what the secular historian has so graphically described as the worst of all times? Surely the terrible drama enacted from the beginning of the seventh century down to the French revolution was sufficiently important to deserve a place in these inspired pages. If not would the revealing spirit deign to notice three and a half years which some expositors have allotted as the period in which the power of evil headed up in an individual Antichrist is to run its course and meet its doom? It seems to me that a power of evil with but three and a half years for development and a like period for its diabolical reign could not possibly exhaust the meaning of these marvelous visions. The time is too short for the fitting of an individual man for such a mission of sin and crime as John has here portrayed under appropriate symbols. There is before us on the pages of secular and ecclesiastical history a monstrous system of evil, styled by some historians the "masterpiece of Satan" and worthy of his Majesty's skill, that has for long and weary centuries been represented by a succession of men in office who arrogated to themselves supreme power and universal dominion. This system so represented filled the world with its bitter fruits; nor has it yet ceased to be a source of evil; though in a measure shorn of its power. Here is a big thing. It had ample time to unfold its prodigious proportions. It was not a thing of mushroom growth but had time to strike its roots deep in a soil of ignorance and superstition. In the height of its glory it was before the world long enough to be seen and felt, and measured, and compared with both Old and New Testament predictions. It filled the pages of history and filled the description of the prophets; and why look for a future short-lived individual anti-christ? Why break the chain of prophecy and skip so many centuries filled as we know they were with the deeds and words and pretensions of a monstrous religious tyranny under the name of Christianity, but anti-christian in everything? Why adopt the system of prophetic interpretation put forth by two Romanists, Ribera and Bellarmine, the one a Jesuit priest, oath-bound to do any and everything for the interest of the apostate church; the other a Cardinal equally concerned about the question as to whether the Papal succession was the beast, the antichrist, the Man of sin and the boastful horn; and which question the reformers were, at that time, answering in a way to make the Pope feel very uneasy? Why say Rome was right and the reformers were wrong? The mainspring of the Reformation, which gave political and religious freedom to Europe and the Bible in the living languages to the common people, was that the beast, with a "mouth speaking great things and blasphemies," was Rome under its Papal head or form of government. The interpretation put forth by Ribera and Bellarmine in the 16th century was Rome's reply to the reformers. It was Rome's judgment to screen herself from the well merited doom which these same prophecies announce in connection with the character so graphically described. I now call attention to one proof of the fact that John's prophecy is continuous. In Rev. xvii. 9, the prophet explains that "seven heads are seven mountains on which the woman sitteth." Rome was built on seven hills (mountains). There are frequent references to this fact in history. While it is true that the seven hilled city is the "see" or seat of this harlot church, her dominion is wider than the city limits for she is represented as "seated upon many waters." ver. 1. This is explained to mean "peoples and multitudes and nations and tongues." A beast figures very largely in this symbology or imagery. To this scarlet colored beast the woman is closely related—close as the rider to the horse. This beast is described as having seven heads and ten horns which identify it with Rome after its division into ten kingdoms. A beast in symbolic prophecy denotes a civil or secular government. Read the 7th chapter of Daniel where you will find it divinely explained. The seven heads mean something more than the seven mountains; so in the further explanation in v. 10, it is said, There are seven kings; five are fallen, and one is, and the other (the seventh) is not yet come, and when he cometh, he must continue a short space (of time). These kings or heads follow each other in the order of time. At the close of the first century or John's day five of the seven, in the series, had passed away; the sixth was in existence, and the seventh was still future. These heads or kings pertain to Rome, the thing symbolized by the beast. Following each other in succession Rome had had prior to John's day, or time of the sixth head, five forms of government. Livy and Tacitus enumerate, 1st kings, 2nd consuls, 3rd decemvirs; 4th dictators, 5th military tribunes. These five dynasties or forms of government had successively ruled the Roman empire, and had passed away. Then John says, "one is." What is that? The emperors in their primitive or early official character, having on their heads, not the diadem or badge of imperial sovereignty, but the stephanos, the badge of the general of the armies. What then, is the seventh? For a long time this was the difficulty that perplexed the students of prophecy. It was left for Mr. Elliot to solve by the light of secular history this gordian knot. While the rulers of Rome continued to be called emperors down to the time of Augustus, the last to rule from the seven hilled city; yet when Diocletian came to the throne a mighty change was introduced. Gibbon says of this ruler that "he assumed the diadem and introduced a new ceremonial; this was a new form of government." Gibbon further says, Diocletian may be called the founder of a new empire. This seventh head or new empire was wounded to death. In John xiii. 3, he says, "I saw one of his heads as it were wounded to death; and his deadly wound was healed, and all the world wondered after the beast or Rome revived. When this seventh head died by the sword of Christian and Goth, when no longer an emperor styled Augustus reigned at or on the throne of the Cæsars, the great city seemed deserted. Augustine Stenchus says, "The empire having been overthrown, unless God had raised up the pontificate Rome would have become uninhabitable." Blondus writes: "The princes of the world now adore and worship as perpetual dictators the successors not of Cæsar, but of the fisherman Peter; that is, the supreme pontiff, the substitute for the emperor." So Rome lived in this eighth head or form of government, the last, and of which it is said it "goeth into perdition" or destruction. Here we have the whole time filled from the founding of Rome till its destruction—without a break or gap. The fact that John goes back of his own time gives us a key to the vision, furnishing us with what had already in his day passed into history, reflecting its light upon things yet to follow. The fact of the continuity of this prophecy finds a parallel in Daniel. Both are largely symbolic; both use measures of time, and both furnish us with some divinely interpreted visions. So in studying these books we are not wholly at sea without chart or compass or log line; and unable to take our bearings. They speak to all who hold these books in hand in a universal language. The church of today ought to study them, each in the light of the other—both in the light of history.

Plan of Trip.

As far as I can see at present, it is my intention to commence my tour of the United States and Canada, with the Illinois Conference on Aug. 27th, and from there go to the Nebraska State Conference, at St. Paul, and then visit such churches in Nebraska as desire my services, and from there go to Minnesota, and from Minnesota to Wisconsin, and from Wisconsin visit the churches in the Western part of Illinois. After this I commence my Eastern trip with Indiana, Ohio, New York, Canada, Pennsylvania and Virginia. My appointments in the Southern States and California, Oregon and Washington I reserve for the winter season. I would ask all those on the Pacific coast who have not already made appointments and would like to have my services the coming winter to notify me as soon as possible. Should there be still others along these eastern, western and southern routes, who would like to have my services, they may still make application and my family will forward them to me at the points where I may be holding services.

Obituary.

George Franklin Spaulding was born Oct. 18, 1821, and died Aug. 16, 1902. He was born in the State of Vermont, but when but 8 years of age his parents moved to Ohio, where he grew to manhood. In 1849 he came to Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind. In 1851 he married Louisa Goldsberry, and to them were born a son and daughter, the son dying in infancy, and the daughter became the wife of J. W. Wolford of Plymouth, but died some seven years since, leaving two sons and two daughters.

Bro. Spaulding's wife having died, in 1856 he married Mrs. Rebecca Crum-Metcalf, to whom were born four girls, three of whom died when young, and one still living, and married to Garret Jarrell.

Brother Spaulding united with the Church of God over twenty years ago, and remained a consistent Christian to the end of his long life. He continued to reside in Marshall County until in April, 1900, on account of old age he and his wife went to Marion, Ind., where they lived till in August of the same year, when they went to Buchanan, Mich., where he died, leaving a wife, one daughter, seven grand children and many relatives and friends to mourn him.

He was brought to Plymouth, and a funeral service was held at the church by Bro. F. L. Austin, after which he was buried at Oak Hill cemetery, there to await the summons of the angel of the Lord at the time appointed of God to call the sleeping ones to life eternal. The quiet unassuming life of our dead Brother speaks to us after he is at rest, and we can with profit study his character, and emulate his example as we journey the road he has traveled.

May the kind Father sustain the aged wife, and comfort her remaining days, and bless each of the family that is left to mourn for him.

Fell asleep in Jesus July 31, 1902, Bro. Julius B. Anderson, a resident of Dixon, Ill. for more than fifty years. His was only confined to his bed a little over a week, but for fifteen years he has been a patient sufferer from an eruptive disease of the face. Bro. Anderson was born in Huntingdon, Pa., in 1816, was united in marriage to Elizabeth Lloyd in 1845, came to Dixon in 1850, where he worked as a mill wright. To the writer their home was for many years at different times a shelter and a place of endearment and my hope is for a place near them in that blessed company that shall one day be gathered into the presence of Jesus and his beloved. Sister Anderson accepted and obeyed the gospel a few months before her husband did. In speaking of the time when Bro. Julius was converted in the Baptist church she said, "We women wore boots that night to get through the snow drifts." In this church our brother was a faithful member until he heard the truth in Jesus, and his logical mind, his reverent respect for the Word of God led him after patient, careful study to yield himself a devoted servant of Jesus by being re-immersed into Christ, an ardent follower and one of the closest students of the Word I have ever known. That dear home on the corner, how many times my youthful footsteps have crossed its threshold to seek a place by the side of one whom I always found reading the Bible and ready with the clearest and most Scriptural teaching. Yes, a sound mind was there, but a beautiful humility led him to lose sight of self. He loved to see Jesus and his words shine. We younger members of the church at that time always loved to hear Uncle Julius talk because he appealed very tenderly to our hearts. When our brother decided to leave the Baptist church he frankly invited the pastor and a number of the leading members to bring their Bibles and have a kindly reasoning together, but no one responded. In our little meetings he loved to read and talk of those precious old doctrines of the kingdom, the resurrection, return of Israel, our loving Savior and our heavenly Father, those precious themes that seem dearer and sweeter the nearer we get to the end of life's journey. When my dear mother died he said to me with uplifted hand to enforce my attention, "Why, what did Jesus say to Martha?" "Thy brother shall rise again;" and this very passage was dwelt upon by our Brother Lindsay of Oregon, who preached a grand sermon on the resurrection to the large company assembled. Dear band of believers at Dixon, another beloved of our number sleeps among the many. You who are left seem doubly dear to us now. May we all abide in his love. Bro. Anderson leaves to mourn his loss besides his wife, a daughter, Sister Ford, and several grandchildren.

With love,

ALICE J. KERR.

On Sunday, Aug. 17, 1902, at 3 o'clock A. M. in Oakland, Cal., Dr. Nettie Shattuck, formerly of Minnesota. Sister Shattuck is known to many RESTITUTION readers, having traveled over all parts of the country in her profession, and has always taken delight in Christian work. For some time past she has been a sufferer from an internal tumor, and has taken treatment, but without apparent benefit. She formed many acquaintances in this section of country. Services were conducted by the writer on Wednesday, a number of friends being present, and her remains were interred in the beautiful cemetery of Oakland.

THOMAS WILSON.

Laura Frazer Owens was born in Washington, Mason County, Kentucky, July 8, 1842. Was married to J. O. B. McDougle, Nov. 1, 1862. To this union were born two daughters, Mrs. Kate Schwerdman and Francis O. Tedford, both of whom died several years ago. She with her husband moved to Remington, Ind., in 1873, where she resided until her death, Aug. 16, 1902, aged 60 years, 1 month and 8 days. She leaves to mourn her loss a loving and much beloved husband, and one granddaughter in the immediate home, and three sisters and one brother, living without the State. She became a member of the Church of God of the Abrahamic faith some twenty-five years ago, ever and always after living a faithful life devoted to the service of her Lord and Master. She was held in high esteem, not only by the church, but by a large circle of acquaintance in the community where she lived, for her conscientious integrity of purpose and spotless purity of life. The funeral services were held in the Christian church at Remington, Aug. 18th. After which she was interred in the cemetery at Logansport, in quiet sleep till the morning dawn.

D. T. HALSTEAD.

Our dear and beloved Brother, Almon Dwight was born Aug. 23rd, 1814, at Aurora, Cayuga Co., N. Y. Died Sunday night, June 15, 1902, in Pullman, Ill., aged 87 years, 9 months and 22 days. An esteemed friend and Brother, Mr. C. W. Sherwood, called on him Sunday 2:00 p. m. He was cheerful and enjoyed the visit much, and remarked about the beautiful, glorious sunset as he left him, (a beautiful remark in his own case.) He was found dead in bed, and apparently died without a struggle.

He leaves two nephews and their families in Chicago. Also an only son of which little is known except that he held a responsible position under the government at Washington, but with all his worldly attainments he has shown a lack of wisdom from on high, and by man, no civil respect, in ignoring a parent, an honorable member of society, and a child of the Most High. May he yet have his eyes opened to see himself as he is seen, and yet find favor in him and that blessed parent, and may they and we meet in the soon coming resurrection.

Brother Dwight was an expert worker in wood, and worked in various cities in the east and west, at the furniture trade. About the year 1850 he was delegated by the Missionary Board of the M. E. Church to go to Jerusalem in Palestine, in the interest of the Jews to start an Industrial School, which he did, he made looms and all machinery for making cloth, yarn, etc., and then taught how to use them. Was there four and a half years, and then returned to the U. S., to get redress for the wrongs and injustice done him by the then American Consul, a Mr. Smith, who was interested with him in the manufacture of Olive Wood goods. After the establishment of the Industrial School he intended to return to that country, but as he received no remuneration and the changes here as well as there, all conspired to the delay, and although he received no recompense the Consul was called home in disgrace and soon died. Our brother became proficient in the Arabic language, and conversed with that people at the World's Fair with great pleasure to both. On his return to this country he stopped in Paris and worked in furniture with profit and credit to himself as well as his employer. Being of an observing mind it gave him a fund of knowledge which many would not have obtained. Our brother worked at the pattern-maker trade in and near Chicago the past thirty-five years or more, and the last twenty were with the Pullman Co., and he worked up to the day of his death. He was generous to a fault, and his means were mostly spent in charity, and to many unworthily. He was a valiant defender of the Bible truths that we as a people hold so dear. Years ago we attended the Old Green St. Church when Elder Grant preached there. He had not put on the All-saving name until about five years ago, when Bro. W. H. Wilson baptised him, this gave him joy and peace of mind. He was not a worldly man in any sense, never knew him to vote; that was the world's business, not his, and belonging to secret societies was a thing with him most detestable. Bundles of tares only. Many of the clergy join them, so is the calamity the greater. Of late years he has been very deaf and could hear no preaching, this caused him to be a well versed Bible student, of which very few were his equal; yet, withal, he was most humble, and was as nothing in the sight of his Maker. His Book, the account therein, will be a clean one. May reader and writer so live that we may pass in that great and notable day of the Lord, the Judgment.

Announcement.

The Seventeenth Annual Conference of the Church of God, in the State of Nebraska will be held D. V. at St. Paul, Nebraska, beginning September 5th and convening till the 14th inclusive. Some very able speakers are expected to be present. The brethren and sisters of St. Paul will kindly care for all sisters and brothers who will attend, so it will not be necessary to take bedding. Brethren and sisters, in this time of turmoil and conflict we need your presence to encourage one another and your help with the meetings. We must have a good attendance to obtain success. Many weak and weary ones may faint by the wayside while if only encouraged by your presence and word of comfort they may find strength to hold fast to the truth and be found worthy of an intrance into the kingdom of God; so each and every brother and sister please make an extraordinary effort to attend and make this meeting an exceptionally successful one.

Your Sister.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Indiana will be held at Argos, beginning Friday, Sept. 5th and continue over Sunday. Argos is well located, being on the Nickel Plate road east and west, and the Lake Erie and Western road north and south, making it easy of access to most of the brethren. At this meeting the main business of the year is to be done, and new officers chosen to take charge of affairs. It is therefore of importance to the work that there be a good representation of the different organizations throughout the state. We feel that no urging should be necessary, but that each brother and sister who can ought to make an effort and attend and take part in the deliberations of the business sessions, enjoy the sermons and other meetings and each help to make it a success. Our last meeting at Antioch was one of the best ever held in the state, and there is no reason why this coming gathering should be less pleasant and profitable. It is our intention to try and arrange a programe which will be published in due time. We expect to begin business at the first of the meeting, so it will be vital to the success of the work that you be on hand at the beginning. The Lord's cause needs you each one to do his part. Will you not willingly give the three days to Him? Officers of churches, please see that your organization is represented so the plans for next year may be fully reported to you by your own members.

THURSDAY, AUG. 28.

10:00 a m Formal opening of Conference, appointment of committees.

10:30 a m Outline study of Revelation continued from last Conference conducted by the President.

It is suggested that every one who proposes attending the conference familiarize themselves with the procession of symbols given from chapters 6 to 17, so they can ask questions.

Outline of the study—Review of the first ten chapters, which were gone over at last conference.

New lesson, Chapter 10. The angel and the book. Symbols—The angel, his personal characteristics, attitude, voice, little book in his hands, eating of the book and consequences, oath of the angel, seven thunders, John to again prophesy to all peoples.

The meaning—Let students read up in advance of the lesson on the origin and history of the Tutonic and Anglo Saxon peoples.

Chapter 11—The angel's measuring rod and things measured; angel's two witnesses, forty and two months, a lesson in prophetic numbers; a study of the symbols employed in conjunction with the two witnesses.

Meaning—Who or what are the witnesses. Study carefully the effects of the restoration of the Bible to the church, its translation into the common every day language of the people and its wide distribution on the church and on the world's moral and material progress.

The seventh trumpet, the kingdom of God, the resurrection and rewarding of the faithful.

Part second.—The seven signs or wonders. This part of the natural division of the symbols introducing a new series begins with chap. xi. 19.

Symbols, the temple, ark, lightning, voices, thunder and earthquakes.

Chap. xii. Symbols, the glorious woman, her characteristics and appearance. The great red dragon, his attitude and characteristics; points of identification, his color, seven heads and ten horns, the man child, the war between Michael and the dragon, defeat and casting out on earth of the dragon, triumph of God's people, the flight of the woman, pursuing floods, help of the earth.

Meaning—Read the history of the church from the first to third centuries to the time of Constantine, especially the character and attitude toward the church of Pagan Rome.

Chap. xiii. The sea monster, points of identification, wounded and healed head, close relation to and similarity to the dragon, blasphemy, its meaning.

The application—Read Church and Roman history, Gibbon's Rise and Fall of the Roman Empire preferred, from Constantine to Charlemagne. Two horned beast and the image of the first beast, its characteristics and points of identification, relation with the first beast, rehabilitation of first beast, miracles, worship, mark in fore head and hands, 666 the mystic number of his name.

Application.—Read history of the Latin and Greek churches and their intimate relation with the revived Roman empire as rehabilitated by the Pope and Charlemagne.

Chap. xvii. This should be studied in connection with the last, giving as it does in another form symbols representing these same two formidable powers designated as the beast and his image. Characteristics and points of identification, symbols, seven heads of the image, ten horns of the dragon and first beast and of the image, ten horns of Daniel's fourth beast, these horns uprooted by the stout blasphemous horn.

Chap. xiv. Symbols, the ram on Mt. Zion and the singing multitude, the 144,000, the gospel angel, Babylon and its doom. Fire and brimstone. The blessed dead. The great harvest.

Chap. xv. The seven last plagues. The multitude on the sea of glass. The seven vials of wrath.

The time allotted to this study will probably be consumed before reaching this point, but if not, the study will be continued to the closing scenes of this great vision of the ages, outlining the mighty drama of earth, with the closing scene, the final triumph of the righteous and righteousness.
